HERE'S a big virile story by the author of "While Satan Sleeps," and like that, a powerful story of regeneration.

Holt is at his best in this, and he is supported by a distinguished cast including Eva Novak, Bert Woodruff, J. P. Lockney and Robert Dudley.

Do They Use Them?

An average of 5000 cuts and mats are used by exhibitors on every Paramount Picture. To be in such demand, these press book advertisements must produce results.

Many theatres, large and small, use them exclusively. Others adapt them to local needs. They are prepared for exhibitors by a staff of specialists—a staff that no theatre in the world could afford to hire.

You get their services, Paramount pays their salaries.

The advertisements on this and on the two preceding pages are made from the 4-column press book cuts.

The story has primal power: it is built upon a law which wrenches apart a mother and her boy.

The situations are high-tension: the man who gains custody of the boy fights against returning him to a mother he deems unworthy.

The drama has impact: it is the harder for the man to resist the widow's entreaties for her boy when he realizes he loves her.

"Best Picture of the Year"

If there are any medals laying around waiting to be awarded to "best pictures of the year," let the gentlemen of the jury step right up front and pick a few on this one. There will be none to dispute the verdict.

"Broken Chains" is the best picture Goldwyn has released this year and this company has offered the industry a goodly quota of really great productions. It is the climax of Allen Holubar's career as a director and a director's facton. It presents the gifted Colleen Moore in one of the most remarkable bits of character portraiture the screen has ever seen. It brings back Ernest Torrence, who was on everybody's lips following his appearance in "Tol'able David" and who in this picture sends shivers up and down the spinal column with his villainy. We fail to recall few roles that equal his interpretation of Boyan Boone. It introduces Malcolm McGregor as a new star of filmland and shows him in a series of fistic combats with Boone that are the acme of realism. It is a picture that carries more suspense throughout its entire length than a dozen ordinary productions. It's nothing less than a living, breathing thing that seems to spring right off the screen. Its dramatic moments will thrill you as you have never been thrilled before. Its love theme will strum at the heart strings.

Most folks know that this is the scenario that won the first prize in the Chicago Daily News contest. And be it said right here that Mr. Holubar has done justice to the story. It's a prize photoplay as well as a prize scenario. The feature has been given an appropriate setting, many of the exteriors being gems of scenic grandeur. The plot starts with a bang. We are shown, in a realistic holdup scene, that our hero is a coward. Then we are transported into the wide-open places of the west and shown the primitive passions of men at full play. It should meet with world-wide approval and the plaudits of those who have been demanding bigger and better pictures. It's the victory of the screen!

The Woman Who Fooled Herself

SPECIAL CAST IN THE WOMAN WHO FOOLED HERSELF
(ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS)

Here is a fine production in every sense of the word. Excellent acting, beautiful sets, an interesting story, told against picturesque background makes it a feature meriting every consideration. Many exploitation angles and will live up to everything said for it. Directed by Charles A. Logue and Robert Ellis. Six parts.

"The Woman Who Fooled Herself" is one of the best pictures presented by Associated Exhibitors for some time. With Miss Allison and Robert Ellis in featured parts supported by such players as Frank Currier, Robert Schable, Louis Dean and Rafael Arcos, interpretation of the first order is given a story that is interest-absorbing and pleasing from start to finish. Miss Allison does unusually fine work in an exacting role.

It is a picture that is probably best described as being "rich" in all its phases. The photography is above reproach, and scenes on sea and in tropical country where much of the action takes place are elaborative and beautiful. From New York to Porto Rico the scenes shift, unfolding the tale of a pretty chorus girl on a mission for unscrupulous capitalists who are about to inherit the wealth of a southern family.

The action is fast throughout and the production combines virtually every angle that assures audience appeal of a high-class photodrama.

Briefly the story tells of a young actress, "broke" and out of work who accepts a commission to bring strife between a wealthy old Porto Rican and his grandson in order that her employers may obtain control of certain properties. She goes to Porto Rico and following a series of events is taken into the household of the old man and his son. She learns to like both, but her employers force her to bring about the break between the boy and his grandfather. She obtains the option on the boy's land but later her love for him proves too strong and she returns it.

MR. LOGUE AND MR. ELLIS

Will stand up anywhere under any conditions. It's a picture you won't go wrong in playing. Variety, Nov. 17th, 1922.

WOMAN WHO FOOLED HERSELF

This is the first of a series of Edward A. McManus productions being made in Porto Rico. Because of the locale of production the first story which Charles A. Logue developed is laid in New York and Central America. As author and director Logue has done a worthwhile job. The picture has May Allison and Robert Ellis as the featured players of a good cast. The subject is one that will stand up anywhere under any conditions and it is strong enough to be given more than a single day run. As a matter of fact, it could well have stood up with some of the pre-release productions that are getting the Broadway showings in the big houses.

In photography and action it is far and away ahead of the general run of pictures that play the Loew houses without first having had a pre-release showing. And in story there is nothing than the average motion picture fan could ask for that isn't in the picture. Possibly a slight comedy relief might have been added to the other good qualities.

Miss Allison has a corking role as the showgirl out of work, who lends herself to a Central American trip as a star dancer for one of the big cayas to share the grandchild of a wealthy old Spanish rancher, so he will sell his interest in the estate to a large American exporting combination. Robert Ellis plays the young man who is to be the victim of her wiles, the thread of the story hinges on the fact that the man she is supposed to vamp to his ruin, with the result that after he has signed away his share of the land she wins back the papers for him and time to prevent the company taking over the lands.

Frank Currier plays the venerable and excitable old Spaniard to perfection, and the two heavies of the cast are done by Robert Schable and Lewis Dean, both of whom give finished performances.

Miss Allison looked decidedly pretty on the screen and showed to great advantage in the dancing scenes, she at least stepping when it was necessary to do so. Among the emotional portions of the story she was equally at ease and handled herself properly.

From a production standpoint; the picture looks as though considerable money had been spent on it, there being two or three rather big scenes that stand out. It is a picture that you won't go wrong in playing.

"Pathe’s peerless, fearless Pearl," in her new dynamic house-filling Patheserial, the climax of her illustrious serial career

Produced and directed by Geo. B. Seitz

Written by Geo. B. Seitz and Bertram Millhauser
The country is hungry for this new Pearl White Patheserial.

Grandma and the kids, and all the family in between, devotedly followed Pearl White's past Patheserials, while the flood of admission money made music in the tills of ten thousand box-offices.

They are waiting for "Plunder."
Superlative box-office satisfaction to any exhibitor, anywhere.

The most successful serial star the business has ever seen in a production offering unparalleled opportunities for profits.

In star, story, cast, direction and production the Patheserial supreme.
FOR five dazzling years Pearl White made Patheserial history.

She made her fame and achieved her popularity as a Patheserial star. The public wants her as such a star. Now, after an extended stay abroad, she returns to star in her greatest Patheserial.

Hundreds of exhibitors got their start on the road to independence by playing her in Patheserials. They still talk of the amazing profits they made.

The same brilliant and unapproachable combination of star, authors and director that created the never-to-be-forgotten "House of Hate" has made in "Plunder" a serial better than any of the past, for it is thoroughly modern, thoroughly censor-proof.

The unbeatable combination, then, has made the unbeatable Patheserial.

What Is the Desired Relationship Between the Independent Producer and the Independent Distributor?

"Is the Producer merely a source of supply and a means of production, or is he a necessary accomplice to a mutually successful business?"

"It must, of necessity, be our undivided object, through the rendering of a perfectly continued advertising, exploitation and distributing service to foster the relationship between ourselves and the state right buyers throughout the country to that point where they will say—"

"The Independent Pictures Corporation is a necessary adjunct to ourselves—we need not alone their product but their service."

B. W. R.

The above is not a slogan but our creed and in offering to the state right buyers the opportunity of doing business with us, we do so with the intent that such business relationship once established will continue.

NICK CARTER SERIES

We offer to state right buyers and independent exhibitors a new series of twelve subjects in two reels each of the famous mystery detective story exploits of Nick Carter. Productions mounted a la special features with a cast of Broadway and picture favorites. They are of that rare species known as first run two reeler.

FAVORITE STAR SERIES

Twelve subjects in two reels each revived because of the fact that the stars who appear in them owe their present reputation to these very attractions.

Lillian Gish,
Harry Carey,
Blanche Sweet,
Henry Walthall,
Mac Marsh,
Lionel Barrymore.

appear in these productions directed by David W. Griffith.

These are the only re-issued productions we will handle and we have bought them for state right distribution only because of their box office drawing power.

"THE DEVIL'S PARTNER"

A five reel feature production produced by Caryl S. Fleming with Norman Shearer, Edward S. Rosenman, Charles E. DeLancy, Henry Sedley and Stanley Walpole in the cast.

A Canadian north woods story of gripping intensity and human appeal.

"THE VALLEY OF LOST SOULS"

Adapted from the story by "Mr. X." directed by Caryl S. Fleming with Muriel Kingston, Edward Rosenman, Annie Hamilton and Victor Southerland.

Here is a production dealing with the superstition of simple folks of the woodland country. A five reel production.

We will shortly announce a series of twelve super-features now in course of production. This ambitious program of 1923 releases should spell prosperity to all state right exchanges and exhibitors dealing with them.

CHARLES C. BURR PRODUCTIONS are built in the belief that there is no substitute for quality.

Somewhat more than two years ago this organization began with the making of a two reel comedy series.

Slowly, steadily, its production grew, the staff responsible for the various pictures being increased by careful selection and thorough training.

"Entertainment always—but quality first" has been the principle upon which this growth progressed.

In features, in comedies, in cartoons, in scenic pictures, that slogan reveals itself.

Independently made pictures should be quality pictures. We believe no producing organization puts more of its sense of responsibility to exhibitor and public upon the screen.

A few brief facts about

“LOVE’S OLD SWEET SONG”

A title which has had ceaseless publicity for generations

It is more than a title.

It is a picture with all the sweet charm and pathos of the famous song which inspired it. The theme of the famous old song, a favorite in American homes for years, runs throughout.

Oscar Lund, who has directed 93 other screen productions, considers its theme the most beautiful foundation for the strongest story he has yet filmed.

The cast includes Louis Wolheim, star of the unique and much-discussed stage hit, “The Hairy Ape”; Donald Gallagher, now scoring heavily on Broadway in “So This is London”; Helen Lowell and Helen Weir.

“LOVE’S OLD SWEET SONG” is a romantic melodrama, unusual enough in title, theme and treatment to meet the good showman’s desire:

to get them in, and to please them after they are in.

Omar, the Tentmaker—First National

A SERIES of murals, done in the manner of Maxfield Parrish, come true. The rare brilliance of the orient blended with the more sombre shadings of real life. Pathos, unadulterated romance, and a story that will grip and hold any audience.

This would sound like over extravagant praise. But in reality there is much that could be said of Richard Walton Tully's second picture. Guy Bates Post is the star of the production, but—though as the old Omar his interpretation touches the high places—Virginia Browne Faire tender and yet fiery. She is gentle springtime in a rose garden—patient old age in a stone-flagged kitchen. Her emotions are as varied, and as beautiful, as the changing colors of a prism.

The plot is, in a truly historical sense, a chronicle of the life of Omar Khayyam—poet and astrologer. It tells of his trials and disappointments and of his final triumph over despair. Almost a tragedy, it is. But there are woe touches of finely drawn humor—for people were human, even in the Persia of a thousand years ago.

The cast, to the smallest detail, is quite worthy of an unusual play. It includes Patay Ruth Miller as the little Shirleen, Maurice Flynn (the erstwhile "Lefty" of Yale football fame) as the Christian, Noah Berry as the Shah of Shahs, and such fine actors as Walter Long, Nigel de Brulleire, and Boris Karloff in minor parts.

Due credit should be given to the camera man, or whoever it is that takes credit for the use of soft focus in the early garden scenes. There is a misty loveliness about them that would make the picture worth while, even if the rest of it were not so utterly satisfactory. It's for every-

Rembusch Writes

Mr. Frank J. Rembusch of Indiana has been and, under certain conditions, might continue to be a valuable force in furthering the aims and aspirations of the organized exhibitors.

Recently he launched what appeared to be an intelligent offensive on the music tax matter. He seemed to have taken hold in a determined manner of a problem which the exhibitors would like to see disposed of and he seemed to be in a fair way of contributing a service — whether successful or not — that would be appreciated.

In the midst of this comfortable position, last week, he broke from his moorings and went on a mental rampage in the form of a letter addressed to Mr. Will H. Hays. This letter is very long and very silly. It suggests a very bad soap-box orator at his worst. It is, of course, a rash bid for publicity and a rather hazy idea of "starting something."

Mr. Rembusch might be reminded that the exhibitors of America, and the film business generally, have had enough noise and loud talking and that if his repertory is limited to these he is not wanted.

A "Plot" Detective

Just why a unit of the exhibitors' organization should have the proprietor of a dance hall as one of its officers is a circumstance that we do not quite understand. However, that is probably, strictly speaking, the business of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Mr. J. B. Dielhka, its secretary and treasurer and proprietor of a Chicago dance hall.

The question came to us as we read certain assertions of Mr. Dielhka in a recent issue of a pamphlet which boasts of Mr. Dielhka's editorship. After reading Mr. Dielhka's comments we felt that while he may be a very competent dance hall manager, his casual attentions to the film business are not particularly constructive.

Mr. Dielhka has brought across the water with him the old world failing of seeing a "plot" wherever he looks. The pre-war Russian who saw a nihilist behind every tree would have been a congenial companion to him. His favorite "sinister intrigue" at this time is that Mr. Will H. Hays is really not doing anything of the things that we all know he has been doing but, rather, that his whole endeavor is to limit production and increase prices.

The danger with a person like Mr. Dielhka is that occasionally something he says is liable to be given credence by someone unacquainted with the source.

The Artist Suffers

An interesting situation which the unique nature of the motion picture makes possible is to be found in the unsuccessful attempt of Mr. Douglas Fairbanks to prevent the reconstruction for present use of pictures which he appeared in many years ago.

The complaint of the artist is reasonable and understandable. He is opposed to having his early, novice efforts thrown at his public of today; like a successful author, for instance, who would not like to have his beginner's efforts mistaken for or compared with the product of his mature genius.

Despite the merit of Mr. Fairbanks contention it is not surprising that notwithstanding a technicality on his side the court held against him because there is a property interest represented in the old films which the courts must uphold.

Reid

Aggrieved wives and mothers-in-law of errant film stars should refrain from telling their troubles to newspaper reporters. Perhaps Mr. Hays, realizing the necessity from the recent occurrencen, will establish a trouble-receiving bureau for this purpose.
Mr. Laemmle Says—

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—When interviewed concerning the new Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Corporation, would not commit himself as to the probable success of the venture.

Pressed for his ideas on the situation, he said:

"Such combinations never would be necessary if all producers and distributors patterned themselves after the Universal. This company has always dealt with the exhibitor on a live and let live basis. By reason of our immense studio facilities, we are able to make first-class pictures at an economical cost. This enables us to sell them to the exhibitor so he can still make money with them."

Amendment for Free Screen in Missouri Loses

(Jefferson CIty, Mo., Dec. 19.—Missouri hopes for a constitutional amendment to provide free screen in Missouri were abandoned, and press reports indicate that the amendment was defeated in the legislature last week. The Missouri legislature had earlier rejected a similar amendment, and the defeat of this amendment was seen as a setback for the free-speech movement in the state. Missouri has long been noted for its strict censorship laws, which have been criticized by many as an infringement on freedom of expression.

Clergy Move to Close Richmond, Ind., Houses

(Richmond, Ind., Dec. 19.—Petitions asking for the closure of the Richmond pictures have been delivered to the Rich- mond Board of Health. The move was initiated by a group of local clergy, who are concerned about the low quality of the films being shown. They believe that the movies are contributing to moral decay in the community.

Negotiates for Studio?

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—J. W. Glenister, president of a New York publishing house, who has been known in the motion picture business, has acted in an advisory capacity to the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation, which is negotiating for Federal studios. He declines to comment on the negotiations, but it is believed that the negotiations are for a studio which he has in mind.

To Open Drive in St. Louis

(St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 19.—An organization of the $6,000,000 Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation organized in Chicago last week by officers and members of the Motion Picture Owners of America is expected to arrive in St. Louis soon. The purpose of the organization is to interest local theatre men in the new enterprise.

Harding Sees Great Possibilities
In Screen as Educator

President Writes Will H. Hays Assurance of Cooperation
Of Federal Department of Education

(Washington Bureau, Exhibitors Herald)

WASHINGTON, D.C., December 19.—President Harding, despite the many national problems facing him for solution, has given thought to the motion picture and its possibilities as an educational and recreational institution. His ideas, together with approval of the steps taken by the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors to cooperate with the National Education Association, are embodied in a letter to President Will H. Hays of the M. P. P. D. A.

In expressing his satisfaction with the progress of the Hays movement, President Harding pledges the cooperation of the federal department of education, adding that "I am mindful of the efforts being made by you and your associates for the general betterment of pictures, work which is a distinct contribution to the general good."

After explaining his lack of technical information about motion pictures, the president says: * * *

"Inequitably, for the purpose of merely imparting information, the most effective approach to the mind is through the medium of believing. Much of what we study rather mechanically and zestfully in youth, and therefore, rather futilely, might be made dramatically interesting if we could see it. Imagine how thrilling the study of geography would be if it meant actually touring the world, seeing countries, cities and peoples, and having the essential facts about them explained by qualified persons with the gift of being truly interesting!"

"Then imagine how inevitable would be the combination of studies in history and geography, under such a plan. From my earliest thrillings of the primary geography and the elements of history it has seemed to me that geography and history could not be taught properly in separate compartments. They naturally and inevitably belong to each other. Neither can be studied and assimilated properly without the other."

"It seems to me that the screen could be made an effective medium for illuminating our studies in history and geography. Next to studying geography by seeing the world, its people and its institutions, would be studying it with the aid of the moving picture. Next to studying history by the procedure of living through its epochs, its areas and its periods, would be that of seeing its acts and evolutions presented before our eyes."

"Let me hasten to say that I have no formula for effecting a co-ordination of the printed page and the picture screen, in the process of education. I have some general ideas, however."

The president then enters a discussion of a number of books, especially those of an historical nature, which he has read and enjoyed and which, he believes, are reduced by a big enough genius of the movies to accomplish this and to make it an extremely useful work. He mentioned specifically, Wells' "Outline of History," Van Loon's "Story of Mankind," "Henry Esmond," "The Cloister on the Heath," "In the Days of Poor Richard," and others. Commenting on the latter book, he writes: * * *

"Now it seems to me such a book, not lavishly reproduced on the screen, but used rather as inspiration and general theme, might be made the basis of a most inspiring and illuminating treatment, for educational purposes, of the revolutionary period."

He states that he would by no means confine the study of history, geography and like courses to motion pictures, but would merely utilize the screen to illuminate studies and make them fascinating. In conclusion, he says:

"If I have thus far confined myself to the possibilities of the screen in the study of geography and history, it is not because I doubt its usefulness in other directions."

Harry Redmond Plans
$750,000 Theatre at East St. Louis, Mo.

(ST. LOUIS, MO., Dec. 19.—Harry Redmond, owner of the Majestic theatre, and several prominent East St. Louis business men, has, under consideration plans for the erection of a combination theatre and projection house on the Majestic site to cost upward: of $750,000. Eventually a new theatre will go up on the site. Just when will depend on the cost of construction, etc. Tentative plans call for a 2,200 seat house with a parquet and balcony. A five story building to house a 1,200-seat theatre, seven stores and forty-eight apartments will be erected on Delmer boulevard near Limit avenue. The structure will cost $400,000."

Ohio Bars Love Triangle

(COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 19.—A new adjustment in the policies of the state motion picture censors, to the end that lovelmaking scenes, involving the love triangle and other illicit love affairs, will be banned from motion picture productions in Ohio in the future, has been announced by Director of Education Vernon Riegel. Legitimate love-making scenes that do not border on licentiousness will not be banned, however, Mr. Riegel stated.)

 Alleged Embezzler Not With Hammons’ Firm

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—In view of recent newspaper publicity given a Norman E. Cameron, supposed to have been president of an Educational Films Corporation, and alleged to have embezzled $15,000, E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has issued the following statement in order that any possible confusion may be avoided:

"I never heard of this Norman E. Cameron, nor has he ever had any connection with any of our companies or subsidiary companies. It is possible, as stated in some of these newspaper clippings, that he organized an Educational Films Company but I never heard either of him or his company before."
The Cohen Distributing Proposal

By MARTIN J. QUIGLE Y

THE FORMATION of the Theatre Owners Distributing corporation, as announced last week by Mr. Sydney S. Cohen and his associates, is a development of signal importance.

Whether it is what Mr. Cohen and his fellows represent it to be or whether it is something else—it is still a matter that requires, and is entitled to, thorough consideration and frank discussion.

This publication, in its customary manner, meets the development as an important trade issue—which it certainly has become—and, fortunately, our policy saves us from the ignoble position, quite common in this business, of waiting "to see which way the cat is going to jump" before undertaking even a preliminary analysis of the proposition for the benefit of our exhibitors.

The Theatre Owners Distributing corporation may be a thoroughly legitimate and above-board effort of a group of exhibitors, with hope of profit for themselves and those who join with them, to establish an independent system of distribution. This would mean a straight-away, commercial enterprise, daring in its conception, yet not without many valid and encouraging precedents.

IT IS FREELY admitted, even by veteran distributors themselves, that the existing system and the existing channels of distribution are not without a multitude of faults and that on the entire problem of motion picture marketing there is great room for constructive development.

Because of this situation it cannot be denied that there is an opportunity and, under certain conditions perhaps a great future, for a distributing system which would be owned by thousands of exhibitors and operated for their benefit and the benefit of independent producers who, at this time, almost without exception, are not entirely satisfied with what they have been able to realize out of existing channels of distribution.

If the Theatre Owners Distributing corporation had issued from other sources than Mr. Cohen and those he has assembled about him it would have been possible to drop consideration of the development here and rest simply on the hope that the real opportunity which exists would be realized to the fullest for the benefit of both exhibitors and independent producers.

But our familiarity with Mr. Cohen's record and with the records of many of his associates who have stood for the Cohen code and who are now identified with the new proposition compels us to give heed to other aspects of the development.

THE THEATRE OWNERS Distributing corporation is not and can never be a legitimate activity of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America—the association that stands for the organized exhibitors of the country. For the exhibitors' association to join in a commercial, direct profit-making enterprise would be a suicidal step. It would risk everything that has been gained in a long uphill fight in an extremely hazardous undertaking which, even if successful, could not half compensate for what would be lost through a deflection from the proper activities of the association.

The connection of Mr. Cohen and the group of men whom he has placed in important positions in the exhibitors' association with the proposition suggests that it may be more a political than a commercial undertaking. Out of the five men already named for the board of directors of the new corporation we do not discover a single person who is experienced in motion picture distribution. With reference to financing, it appears that all the money required—$5,000,000—is to be sought from the exhibitors. Altogether, it appears that Mr. Cohen and his associates have gotten nothing for the new enterprise and are contributing nothing to it except their political influence—which is one thing, if the proposition is to be successful, that it can do very nicely without.

Mr. Cohen knows very well that with the next national convention he is done for as an exhibitor leader. If, however, he were to arrange the next convention somewhat as he did the past one in Washington, so that it could only do as he wished, he knows that the association for sometime to come would be done for.

Hence, there arises the question of whether the Theatre Owners Distributing corporation is not an effort of Mr. Cohen and his associates to perpetuate themselves in position and authority among the exhibitors of America.

If this is the case the enterprise should fail

and will fail because a proposition so conceived cannot collect the necessary $5,000,000 from the exhibitors of the country.

 IF MR. COHEN and his associates cannot prove beyond question that this is not a political undertaking, that it is not intended to involve the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and that, through it, they are not seeking to create a political machine, we warn theatre owners to beware.

If, on the other hand, they can successfully demonstrate that they are endeavoring to build a legitimate commercial organization which shall depend upon service to its customers and profit to its owners and that it will be totally divorced from certainly-disastrous political manipulation, then it may be considered by the individual exhibitor for what it is worth to him, just like any other business proposition that is proposed to him.

Maurice Chase Named General Manager for Universal in Europe

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Universal has appointed Maurice A. Chase, who has been Eastern Division sales manager for the company during the past twelve months, to be general manager for Universal in Continental Europe. Mr. Chase will leave for abroad in December and will be in charge of the English and French branches of the company and its European exchanges. His territory will embrace all European countries except the British Isles.

Mr. Chase will visit each of the fifty Universal exchanges on the Continent.

He has been with Universal almost five years, first as a salesman in the New York exchange, then as a special representative in New England, next as the general manager’s representative throughout the United States, then in the Orient, and finally as exchange manager and division sales manager in various sections. He has made his headquarters in Buffalo during the last two years.

Try to Hasten Return Of Films by Theatres

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 19.—The Albany Film Board of Trade has started a crusade against exhibitors who are holding over film and causing annoyance and inconvenience to other exhibitors. A letter has just gone out calling attention of exhibitors to the practice and asking everyone to ship film on time.

In some instances exhibitors have laid the blame on the express company.

Bill Before House to Cut Tax On Admissions Of Less Than 25 Cents

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 19.—Amendment of the revenue law so as to exempt from the admission tax after January 1, 1923, all admissions of 25 cents or less than 25 cents is provided for in a bill introduced in Congress by Representative MacGregor of New York.

The measure was introduced, declared the Congressman, primarily for the benefit of the motion picture industry, which he believes should be assisted in every way possible. The educational argument included the fact that it is the amusement of the bulk of the people.

Trade Body Hits Film Distributor

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 19.—The Federal Trade Commission has issued a formal complaint against Signet Films, Inc., New York, charging the company with having purchased a negative of an old photoplay and thereafter distributing prints of the material with a title different from that ordinarily used, but with such advertising material as to lead exhibitors and the public to believe that it was a new film.

Patrons Make Orderly Exit at Theatre Fire

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 19.—What might have developed into a tragedy was prevented by the old fashioned school fire drill Thursday when the Circle theatre, a Kansas City neighborhood house, caught fire. Scores of persons were in the house when a fire in the basement was discovered just after the second nightly show had started. The fire started from an oil furnace, which ignited some waste paper. Attendents were instructed to quickly open the side exits while Manager D. J. Steele calmly walked upon the platform and said: "I am sorry, folks, but we will have to stop the show. We requested to use the side and rear exits in leaving the house. There is imminent danger, but do not be alarmed."

The fire alarm was extinguished and the loss was estimated at $8,000, including damage to another building adjoining.

Vitagraph Abolishes Deposit, Demands Definite Play Date

Action Taken, Says President Smith, Because 97 Per Cent of Exhibitors Are Responsible; Payment Required to Postpone Date

WASHINGTON, DEC. 19.—Declaring that "fully 97 per cent of the exhibitors today are thoroughly responsible," Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, announces that his company, beginning with the new year, will abolish the deposit system.

In making his statement, Mr. Smith declared that Vitagraph would demand a definite deposit on every contract. Under the new policy exhibitors must make full payment for each picture contracted for seven days prior to play date.

Must Pay Full Amount Before Postponing Date

A feature of the plan is the clause which makes it imperative that the full amount due on a contract be paid seven days prior to the original play date so that the exhibitor desire to postpone presentation of the picture.

Mr. Smith states that the action of Vitagraph is not retroactive and that no deposits already received for existing contracts will be refunded, but that every dollar of deposits so received will be applied strictly according to the terms of the contracts as they read at the time the contracts were made.

The producer says that Vitagraph will expect and demand the same fair treatment on the part of the exhibitor as the exhibitor receives from Vitagraph.

Times Have Changed

In explaining this very important change in the methods of dealing with the exhibitor, Mr. Smith says that ten years or more ago, when in the majority of cases the exhibitor represented only a small theatre with a few hundred seats and under a short lease, it was deemed necessary to require a substantial advance payment, not to be in the hands of the producer or distributor for use, but in order to insure dealing with the great majority of exhibitors and he holds that the great majority of exhibitors are responsible.

Will Enforce Contracts

Vitagraph, however, intends to enforce its contracts with such exhibitors who are not thoroughly reliable, by requiring them to live up to the letter of their contracts. To carry out the plan of enforcing the same treatment from the exhibitor that Vitagraph gives him, the exhibitor will be compelled to meet his obligations and pay the full amount due under all contracts regardless of whether or not the pictures are played. The delinquents will be brought to terms.

Already many delinquent exhibitors have learned that a breach of contract demand means merely the loss of a deposit, he points out, referring to the judgment recently secured by Vitagraph against one theatre for more than $8,000.

This was a case where the theatre management, it was alleged, attempted arbitrarily to ignore a contract. The court held that Vitagraph had sufficient cause to give judgment in the full amount although the theatre never played the pictures. All other exhibitors who have breached their contracts with Vitagraph will have the same issue to meet.

Optimistic Over Plan

In making the announcement, President Smith expresses the hope that it will not be necessary to bring suit against many exhibitors to induce them to meet their obligations and pay the full amount under any contracts they have signed previous to the new arrangement.

But, he says, the industry has reached that point where it is absolutely necessary for every exhibitor to thoroughly understand and know that every contract signed must be honored.

Mr. Smith is exceedingly optimistic over the non-deposit method of booking. He predicts that by the close of 1923 there will be no necessity of bringing suit against any exhibitor to force him to meet the terms of the contracts he has signed, because the rapid elimination of irresponsible exhibitors has convinced him that it will not be long before the theatre will be in the hands of a thoroughly reliable exhibitor.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 19.—The first census ever taken of motion picture production in this country shows that 127 establishments were engaged in the business on a large scale in 1921, with a total value of production of $77,397,000. The difficulty of placing a market value on finished pictures was a great obstacle to the speedy conclusion of the survey, according to officials of the census bureau, which did the work, and the value of products reported is to a great extent the cost of production, although some establishments reported an estimated value based on rentals received or on the value of similar pictures previously disposed of.

The greater part of the producing activity, of course, was in California, where sixty-eight establishments, more than 50 per cent of the total, reported 61.3 per cent of the total production. The other establishments were scattered throughout the country, New York reporting twenty, New Jersey thirteen; Illinois, eight; Pennsylvania, five; Michigan and Minnesota, three each; Ohio, two, and Indiana, Iowa, Oregon, Rhode Island and Washington, one each.

For the purposes of the census the business was split into two groups, and eighty-three establishments were classified as producers of motion pictures and forty-four as producers of projection films (positive). The latter classification included the development of exposed films and other laboratory work. The majority of producers confined themselves exclusively to production, their laboratory work being done by independent companies, or, in the case of some of the larger concerns, in separate plants of their own.

The cost of materials reported by the producers included amounts paid for unexposed film; for building materials for scenery, etc.; wardrobe, purchased or rented; expenses for locations, light and storm effects, titles and inserts, scenarios, stories, etc. The film producing establishments reported as materials negative stocks, positive raw film, developing chemicals, dyes, artists' materials, miscellaneous supplies, containers, etc. A few establishments did both kinds of work, though the motion picture work was limited to short scenic subjects, educational, advertising and business films.

Although in 1919, no census of production was made, statistics were collected in regard to the reproduction or printing from negatives which showed that fifty establishments reported products valued at $31,778,000. These figures could not be used for comparison with the activities of the industry last year.

The report shows that, based upon a theoretical demand requiring full running time, the output of the industry last year was approximately 65 per cent of maximum.

As a result of the 1921 inquiry, a census of motion picture production will be taken every two years hereafter, in connection with the biennial census of manufacturers.

Children Guests at "Robin Hood" Show School With Best Attendance Is Rewarded—Form Big Parade to Theatre (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Hundreds of children received a reward for faithful attendance at school when, as guests of a New York newspaper, they witnessed a special showing of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Lyric theatre. The presentation was arranged by Pete Smith, exploitation man for the Fairbanks picture, in conjunction with the New York Globe.

Line Ties Up Traffic

Starting at Madison Square the children formed a huge parade proceeding up Broadway to 42nd and thence to the theatre. At 24th street the procession tied up traffic and drew the attention of thousands of people.

Three boy scouts carried a large sign which read: "New York Public School Pupils are going to see Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood at the Lyric theatre as guests of the Globe."

At the theatre the boy scouts acted as ushers. "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung and following this George J. Ryan, president of the board of education spoke to the children. He was followed by Col. Robert M. Watkins, operating manager of the U. S. Shipping Board who talked on loyalty to the flag.

Read Wire from Doug

A telegram from Douglas Fairbanks was read which said in part: "No matter how difficult life may seem always be true to yourself and loyal to your friends and you are sure to succeed. Hard work is what wins and laughter is the salve that heals all heart bruises and disappointments. I am with you in spirit today while you see me on the screen."

Lloyd-Rogers Films in Run Over Loew Circuit

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—An unusual bood was made for the Loew circuit of theatres whereby the three reel Pathé production "Fruits of Faith" starring Will Rogers will play over the Loew circuit of theatres, with George J. Ryan and Lloyd's "Dr. Jack." The combination will open at the Rialto theatre the week of December 31, following which the Loew houses will plug the Rogers program uninterrupted for 110 days.

The two pictures and the stars are declared to be about perfect foils for each other.
Music Tax Must Be Fought In Congress or the Courts

"Herald" Herewith Presents Survey of Situation Facing Exhibitors Conducted by Its Own Washington Bureau

EDITOR'S NOTE: The "music tax" is one of the vital problems facing the theatre owner. Various exhibitor leaders, possibly from political motives, have shown activity recently in regard to it. In the meantime, exhibitors in all parts of the country have been catching at straws in an effort to dodge paying the tax and in many cases have landed in court and are threatened with heavy penalties.

To clarify the situation, the HERALD instructed its Washington correspondent to investigate and forward a complete report. His message follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 19.—It is not likely that the department of justice will take any action which will draw the government into the fight between the national association of Motion Picture Theatre Owners and the American Society of Authors, Composers & Publishers.

Headed by Sydney S. Cohen, a delegation from the theatre owners association recently visited the department of justice and the federal trade commission to lay before officials charges that the "music tax" which theatres are now required to pay on copyrighted music was not legally imposed by the copyright law and that, by its actions in this and other respects, the authors and composers organization had laid itself open to provocation of the laws against monopoly and restraint of trade.

Courts Handling Issue

The delegation conferred at the department of justice with Judge Lovitt, assistant to the attorney general, who pointed out that the courts now are taking care of the copyright question and that there appeared to be no cause for federal intervention. Their charges of restraint of trade, however, were to be taken under consideration and, if it was felt that the situation warranted it, the department would proceed with a more detailed investigation.

The theatre men made similar representation of a number of the federal trade commission but officials of that organization are reluctant to divulge what transpired at such meetings and refused to comment upon the matter. It is understood from outside sources, however, that the case presented did not of itself impress the commission as necessitating immediate action.

Legislation is Required

It is the general opinion in Washington that the copyright law is sufficiently strong and that the action of the courts in regard to the "music tax" adequately deals with the matter. If any relief is to be had, it has been pointed out, congress is the body to afford it through legislation to amend the copyright law. At the time of their visit to Washington the theatre men did not file any formal complaints.

Rembusch Fined $1 for Operating on Sabbath

MARTINSVILLE, IND., Dec. 19.—A jury in the Morgan circuit court returned a verdict of guilty today in the case of Frank J. Rembusch, owner of the Grace theatre, who was accused of operating the theatre on Sunday. Mr. Rembusch was fined $1. Frank Jewell, manager, was acquitted on the same charge.

Mr. Rembusch owns a number of theatres in Indiana including the Ohio at Indianapolis. He contested the case on the theory that the theatre on Sunday afternoon afforded an opportunity for mental rest and also that it was a dissimulator of news. Rembusch was represented by J. E. Sedwick, and E. F. Branch, lieutenant-governor.

Vote on Sunday Shows

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 19.—While advocates of Sunday shows won out a few days ago in Ballston Spa, N. Y., at a referendum, there is evidence that the matter will again be threshed out in the spring elections. At that time the village board will seek re-election.

Hays Agent Marries

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 19.—Jack S. Connelly, Washington representative of Will H. Hays' organization was married at Rockville, Maryland, to Miss Lucile Marie Maule.

They put over a mean one on Claudio Saunders at Denver when the exhibits of Paramount's division of exploitation stopped over there on his way back from the coast.

Just as he stepped off the train and was greeting his Denver exploiter, Rick Ricketson, up stepped a policeman flanked by a couple of juvenile offenders.

"Are you Claudio Saunders?" inquired the copper. On being answered in the affirmative, the officer said:

"Well, I've got a Federal warrant for you. You gotta come along with me."

Explanations were unavailing. Saunders was bundled into a patrol wagon, carted to headquarters and placed incommunicado in a cell. After a time he was taken before the chief of police and put through the third degree, at the end of which he agreed to confess to anything they wanted him to if it would secure his release. Finally the chief pronounced this sentence:

"You are hereby sentenced to visit Denver oftener than once in every two years, and in consideration of your promise to do so you are given your liberty."

And it is said that Saunders promised not only this but also to rely on Kid Volstead and buy for everyone in sight if they would show him where.

And it is also a matter of record that they stayed. • • •

More than a thousand people attended the annual Goldwyn dance on the Hotel Astor roof last Thursday night. In addition to dancing, there was an entertainment, including some of the most popular acts on Broadway. A number of prominent motion picture stars were present, including: Betty Blythe, Montagu Love, Lila Lee, Al Roseo, John Willerton, Gertrude Astor, Florence Dixie, Wesley Barry, Harry Morey, Johanie Hues and Juanita Hansen. Representatives from the daily newspapers, trade papers and motion picture magazines attended the ball as did exhibitors and others, from most of the producing and distributing companies. Among those seen during the evening were: Nate Ascher, T. H. Magnafeld, Felix Feist, J. R. Grainger, S. E. Berman, Ned Hay, Nels Grandlund, Gabriel Hess, Erich Schay, W. F. Rodgers, J. E. Flynn, Eugene Mollen, Howard B. Hubbell, L. J. Sam, John R. Murphy, L. Abrams, C. H. Potter, Tom Wiley and J. Gordon.

E. O. Van Pelt, for the past two years director of exploitation and manager of the foreign department of the Producers Security Corporation, last week severed his connection with that company. Mr. Van Pelt was in San Francisco for a conference, had been in Los Angeles, where he was in charge of advertising and publicity for the company's film "The Son of the Sheik," and was also in charge of advertising and publicity for the company's film "The Son of the Sheik." Mr. Van Pelt was in Los Angeles for the purpose of appearing at the Variety Club of America. He was in charge of advertising and publicity for the company's film "The Son of the Sheik." Charles McCarthy, director of publicity for Famous Players-Lasky, was down at Washington last week, where he showed Tommy Meighan's newest picture to the convention of governors of the industry.

On his return he stopped off the train at Washington for a few minutes, and bumped into Jack Connolly.

"Where are you headed for in this part of the country?" asked Connolly.

"Back Home and Broke," replied McCarthy.

"If you need some money I can let you have some," said Connolly.

"What did you ask me?" quizzed McCarthy.

Connolly repeated his first question.

"Oh, I thought you asked me what picture I had down in this part of the country," said the Paramount man. "I'm down here with Meighan's picture 'Back Home and Broke.'"

Hugo Riesenfeld will again be Santa Claus to more than eight hundred children during the holiday week at the Rivoli Theatre, where he will present special programs for the little folks during the forenoons. This has grown to be an annual event for the children in the orphanages and city institutions. The holidays for the children are arranged through the co-operation of the Department of Public Welfare and the United Hebrew Charities.

The Selwyn theatre is being equipped with the "Television" which Bon Lone, who is writing the advertising, says is "Binocularly stereoscopic cinematography."

That bird must have used a monkey wrench to get his adjectives lined up.

R. W. Baremore, for the past several years on the staff of the Morning Telegraph, has resigned, and yesterday installed himself in the offices of C. C. Burr, where he is in charge of advertising and publicity for the various film interests of that producer.

The new Burr advertising and publicity staff will pay particular attention to aiding the exhibitor in putting over the wide variety of films distributed by the Burr enterprises. Mr. Baremore's long and varied experience in handling motion picture news, publicity and exploitation, makes his entry into the Burr organization a propitious connection for all concerned.

Associated with Mr. Baremore is Boone Mancall, another with more long experience.

While sporadic attempts have been made to use the radio for publicity purposes, the first attempt of the First National is to make it a regular daily feature. From station WBN, located at Ridgefield, L. I., which has a thousand mile radius on a 580 meter wave length, daily chats are being broadcasted by stars under the First National banner.

Over at the First National offices they give Horace Judice credit for the idea.

Sam Palmer, one of the important factors of Famous Players-Lasky publicity staff, is back on the job again after a tough siege of grip which laid him up for a week.

There is still a lot of guessing being done as to which director will be given the job of making "Ben Hur" for Goldwyn pictures. Von Stroheim was one of the latest guesses but Goldwyn officials say this is all wrong.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, has gone to the coast on a thirty-day trip for the purpose of discussing producing plans for the coming season.

J. M. Naulty, formerly with Famous Players, has joined the fast growing organization of Arthur Friend, and is now studio manager for Distinctive Pictures.

John M. Stahl left last week for the coast, where he will resume production for Louis B. Mayer.

John S. Sparco.

TOM TERRISS is the latest American director who has gone to England to break the jinx that has seemingly camped on the trail of American producers abroad; and according to journalistic reports the omens are favorable.

For one thing Tom has every auspice in his favor. He is English by birth, knows the country by heart and is familiar with the temperaments of English players. His father was the late William Terriss, a famous Adelphi actor; and the picture Tom is now making is the famous Drury Lane melodrama, "The Harbor Lights," by George R. Sims, which was first produced by William Terriss and marked one of the high spots in a memorable stage career.

For his leading man he has Tom Moore and a supporting cast that includes Isabel Elsom, Mary Orke, Annette Benson, Percy Stading, Gilbert Gowland, Gerald McCarthy and A. B. Imeson.

H. M. S. Courageous is being loaned Mr. Terriss by the British admiral for the filming of scenes around Portsmouth harbor.

"The Harbor Lights" is Tom's first abroad but it will be followed by four more, to constitute a series, for which he is now under contract.

Production in England is the latest step in Tom's career that began with a series of Tom Terriss productions at Vitagraph including "The Heart of Maryland," "Trumpton Island" and "Dead Men Tell No Tales." Later he directed several pictures for Cosmopolitan: "Boom-bang Bill" and "Find the Woman."—J. S. S.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Dec. 19.—Pleading guilty to a charge of promoting a fake motion picture company, Irvin A. Whitman and his son, Vincent, were sentenced to terms in the Eastern penitentiary by Judge Davis. The case involved sale of stock in a corporation known as "Animated Studio of America."
Laemmle Labels First Runs "Pure Bunk" and a Menace

Universal President Orders Exchanges to Deny All Exhibitors Bookings on "Leather Pushers" Until Each Film Has Been Viewed

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, December 19.—President Carl Laemmle of Universal Pictures Corporation, in two statements just issued and directed at the exhibitors of the country, raps the present first run system of presentation, declaring it to be "pure bunk and a great menace to the industry," and further denounces the practice of exhibitors booking their programs before viewing them.

The Universal chief in voicing his disapproval of the first run system declares that nearly every first run house is controlled and that the purpose of control is "to exploit pictures there so you will book them."

Plans to Experiment with New Feature Series

In an effort to find a solution for the "blind buying" of programs, President Laemmle will make a test of the new "Leather Pusher" series, orders having been issued to all exchanges that no bookings shall be taken on any of the series until "the prospective purchaser has seen the entire six."

President Laemmle also offers his "book before you book" plan as a solution of the first run method, declaring that the latter misleads "you into booking pictures that you should not book."

"You are making the mistake of your life if you are booking your pictures according to the first run situation:"

"You are making the mistake of your life if you are booking your pictures according to the first run situation:"

Carl Laemmle

"It Meant Something Once"

"In the great majority of cases nowadays, the quality of a picture has precious little to do with the case. If a company produces a picture and the same company owns or controls theatres, it is going to run that picture in those theatres for the sake of the impression it will make upon you."

"There was a time when first run houses were really owned by individuals, that the first run meant something. In those days, if the man who owned the theatre and made his living out of it picked out a picture to exhibit, it was a safe bet for you to follow his lead and book the same picture.

"Today, in most cases, first run does not mean first run, but simply means first exploitation."

Has "Handful of Theatres"

"I know what I'm talking about, because the same has tried out the scheme of controlling a handful of theatres in order to exploit pictures."

The only place where Universal pictures were frozen out of first runs because competitors controlled all the good houses in the area. The only place where Universal will ever own or control a theatre is in such cities as that! Heaven knows, we want to stick to the producing and distributing end of the business and never compete with our own customers, but in a few cities we have been driven into the theatre end of the business in self-defense.

"Therefore, I am speaking as an exhibitor as well as a producer when I tell you that in all except a mighty few instances first runs are bunk. They are the greatest menace to the business and they are a double menace to you, because they do not only compete with you but they mislead you into booking pictures that you should not book."

In explanation of his new policy of "book before you book," President Laemmle says:

Shows Importance of Plan

"I have taken a radical step, and I realize how far-reaching it may be. But if it serves to bring to the attention of exhibitors the impracticability of seeing the pictures they buy, before they sign up for them, I will be vindicated."

"I don't mean that I don't want you to attend a film revolution in the distributing end of the industry. Neither do I expect a country-wide demand that every picture be screened for every exhibitor."

"I know only too well that there are many exhibitors who find it inconvenient and sometimes almost impossible to screen the pictures they buy. No two exhibitors are surrounded with the same conditions. But I do know that in a majority of the cases, the exhibitor could preview his probable bookings for a month or so in advance and assure himself that he was getting value received."

"Many exhibitors who today are signing up for big blocks of pictures, some of which are not even on paper, and who mortgage the future of their theatre for a mess of pottage in the shape of some alleged 'super' production, could 'shop' for their screen and buy only what they know will be box office hits, if they but took the trouble to do so, and took the stand that they were determined to do so."

Customer and Producer Protected

"As the producer and distributor of the new Leather Pusher series, I consider that it is my right to request that each man, who wants to buy this series, should see it first. I do not feel that this is in any way an imposition on the exhibitor."

Laemmle Reorganizes Studio Staff in East; Prepares for Big Year

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—A reorganization in the technical force of Whitman Bennett studios at Yonkers has been made by Mr. Bennett. Many of the persons formerly connected with the Fifty-sixth street studio of Famous Players in the past, are now at the Bennett plant.

At present the staff includes Elsa Lopez as art director, Jack Striker, technical editor, and William Klein, head of the paint department. W. O. Hurst has been assigned to certain work in connection with Pyramid Pictures, his detail having been taken over by Mr. Ellis.

The busiest Spring in many years is anticipated by Mr. Bennett. At present the third series of Betty Blair's productions is under way. During the past twelve months the studio has only seen three weeks of idleness, he declares.

Stereoscopic Device To Be Introduced at New York Playhouse

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—An electrical invention called the "Television" is to be introduced as a theatrical attraction at the Selwyn theatre, New York, on December 25. It is described as an instrument attached to each orchestra chair and is synchronized with the screen to project moving pictures. The invention is the creation of Laurens Hammond, a young Cornell University graduate.

Every seat in the Selwyn theatre will be equipped with the "Television" instrument. The first production to be seen by means of the invention will be a comedy called "M. A. R. S.," in which Grant Mitchell will have the principal part. Following the opening on December 25, the "Television" performance will be given twice daily.

Trailers to Be Issued On All Hodkinson Film For Exhibitor Preview

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Beginning with the feature, "Hearts' Haven," W. W. Hodkinson Corporation will issue trailers for all pictures which is sent to the branches. In place of sending a print to the theatre for pre-viewing this reel is taken by the salesmen direct to the theatre and screened for the exhibitor.

The reel shows the salient points affording the exhibitor an opportunity of gauging the worth of the feature in a short space of time. This sales reel is to be a regular part of every feature attraction issued by Hodkinson.

"Suzanna" at Mission

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Mack Bennett's production "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand will have its premiere at the Mission theatre, elaborate preparations for which are already under way.
Fox Offers New Series of Six Specials for New Year

Demand on Part of Exhibitors Prompts Greater Activity in Production, Declares Company

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces a new series of specials for the season of 1922-23, preparation of these pictures having been prompted by the demands made by hundreds of exhibitors, states the company. These features supplement the original program of specials for the current season.

In announcing the new series, the company says:

"A large proportion of the important exhibitors in America have already contracted for and played the original set of pictures and are now ready for the additional releases. It is in compliance with this overwhelming demand that Fox Film Corporation has decided to release at this time six special features announced for distribution early in 1923. "Exhibitors who have already played the entire or greater portion of the first series, which included 'The Fast Mail,' 'Silver Wings,' with Mary Carr, 'Monte Cristo,' 'A Fool There Was,' 'Nero,' 'My Friend the Devil,' 'Who Are My Parents?' and 'Lights of New York,' have been insistent in their demands that the Fox company does not hold back the specials hinted at in their former announcements, but release these special pictures for immediate play dates now while the season is good.

"The Village Blacksmith,' which is a 1923 melodrama directed by Jack Ford, is based upon the famous poem by Henry W. Longfellow. This recently completed a month's run at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, New York.

"It is replete with thrills and vibrant action. William Walling scores heavily in the role of the Blacksmith and has given to the screen a character long honored in the poetry of America. The exceptional cast selected for this Fox special includes Bessie Love, Virginia Valli, David Butler, George Hackathorne, Gordon Griffith, Tully Marshall and Ralph Yeasley.

"'A Friendly Husband,' the feature length comedy starring Lupino Lane, is the second of the series. It was directed by Jack Blazley, and is without doubt one of the funniest comedy specials ever offered the exhibitor.

"'Paradise Road' is the third on the announced list. It is an adaptation of the widely-read novel, 'The Crucified Cup,' by Florence Livingston Bingham.

For the first time, Mary Carr, who is featured in "’A Friendly Husband," which is entirely different from the "mother" story which has made her famous, the character of a woman who possesses the rare quality of always seeing the bright things in life and doing all within her power to help others is that of Tappelfiel, ‘Penny’ of the book. Mrs. Carr does her work nobly. The picture is thoroughly endowed with thrills, mystery and melodrama.

The exterior scenes were all shot in an exceptionally picturesque section of the Coast, and many of the vistas are on a par with the best of scenes. Henry B. Walthall and Ruth Clifford are the 'lead' in a brilliant cast of characters which contains such personalities as Alma Benet, Walter Emmeron, Frederick Sullivan, Novel McGregor, Michael Dark and Gus Saville.

"The fifth of the announced series is "’The Net", from the story by Maravene Thompson and adaptation by Scholl. J. Gordon Edwards, who directed 'Nero' and 'The Shepherd King,' will direct the super-special. In the cast are Barbara Castleton, Albert Roscoe, Raymond Bloomer, Alma Benet and a long list of well-known actors.

"Does It Pay?" is the sixth of the new list and boasts one of the most prominent casts in pictures. It is a comedy-drama of modern life and possesses a story that will hold the interest of the most jaded of motion picture fans. Hope Hampton heads the cast, among which are the names of T. Haines, Mary Thurman, Florence Short and Peggy Shaw, the famous Follies girl."

‘Picture Monopoly’

By Hays Associates

In an open letter to President Will H. Hays of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Mr. Rebusch, circuit owner of Indiana, declares that with the producers organized and the exhibitors "dis-organized," the members of the Hays organization are "dominating prices and trade conditions and really functioning as a highly organized picture monopoly." As such, he adds, "we must object to your organization and must make every effort to protect ourselves.

Mr. Rebusch writes that he believes if President Hays were aware of conditions he would use every means to correct them, but "It seems to me that you have no desire to work a hardship on the theatre owner through the fact that we are un-organized.

In his letter, Mr. Rebusch protests against high rentals, the report system and block sales.

W. T. Blair, Victory theatre, Poteau, Okla., sent Christmas greetings to his patrons in this form, the original measuring 14 by 10 inches, printed in red on heavy white cardboard.
Upon this Holiday occasion, with the New Year dawning just ahead, the staff of the Exhibitors Herald conveys to the people of the motion picture industry its earnest wishes for happiness, success and prosperity and reaffirms its allegiance to those principles and policies which shall make for a greater and still greater industry.
It's a dog-gone lively Christmas when Santa Claus pays his annual respects to the Ben Turpin household. Ben says he hopes he never gets too old and decrepit to hang up his (or somebody else's) stocking. After watching his many antics on the screen you might ask, "What's age to a comedian?" Some of the Mack Sennett star's comedies which you have laughed at are, "Step Forward," "Love & Doughnuts" and "Bright Eyes." These comedy subjects are distributed through Associated First National.

Somebody's going to have a merry Christmas. Helene Chadwick is seeing to that. Miss Chadwick, a featured player in Goldwyn productions, appears in "Brothers Under the Skin," one of that company's current attractions which has had its New York premiere.

A gift for each of the kiddies. The youngsters have the time of their life in the newest Carter DeHaven comedy, "Xmas." This picture, an especially timely subject for the Yuletide period, is being distributed by Film Booking Offices.

Al St. John, star comedian for Fox, does a little pinch hitting for Santa Claus on Christmas.

Viora Daniels, Educational-Chr istie comedies, finds Xmas merry and cold in mountains.

Reginald Denny never scored a better knockout in Universal's "Leather Pushers" than he did Christmas when he showed his little daughter, Barbara, her Christmas tree and presents.

Christmas scene in Warner Brothers "Heroes of the Street," starring Wesley Barry.
"You can't get away until you buy these Christmas seals," says Virginia Brown Faire to Maurice Tourneur. And her word was law. Mr. Tourneur's newest production, "Lorna Doone," distributed by First National, is meeting with unusual success.

Shirley Mason, petite Fox star, tacks up her Christmas greeting where the world may see it. The star's latest attraction under the Fox Film Corporation banner is "Shirley of the Circus," heralded as one of Miss Mason's best.

"It was the night before Christmas —" Half of the fun of Christmas is decorating the tree for some younger, thinks Gertrude Olmsted, Universal player.

Work must wait until they have read the latest news. In the picture, Director Mal St. Clair of F. B. O.'s "Fighting Blood" series, and Clara Horton.

Loaded down after an afternoon of Christmas shopping. Claire Windsor is one of the featured players in Rupert Hughes-Goldwyn picture, "Souls for Sale."
Edward Bowes and Abraham Lehr, Goldwyn vice-presidents, witness June Mathis signing contract as editorial director of company.

President E. W. Hammons of Educational visits Lloyd Hamilton and his leading woman, Ruth Hiatt, at the United Studios.

A striking scene from Gloria Swanson's new vehicle, "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," which has just been published through Famous Players-Lasky exchanges.

Dorothy Devore, featured player in Christie comedies, which are distributed through Educational exchanges, wishes her many friends in the industry a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. And our reply to the clever player is: "Same to you."

Mae Busch in the costume she wears in her portrayal of Glory Quayle in the screen version of "The Christian," which Goldwyn has produced for distribution at an early date.

Katherine MacDonald has a few pet youngsters whom she never forgets when Christmas comes around. The one little fellow in the picture looks happy enough. Miss MacDonald's pictures are produced by B. P. Schulberg for distribution by First National.

Marguerite De La Motte and Myrtle Stedman, stars in Fred Niblo's "The Famous Mrs. Fair," paste Christmas seals on every page of the script to bring good luck in every scene of this forthcoming Maver-Metro attraction.
Jake Stein, owner of Palace and Columbia theatres at Cleveland, O.

Felix Greenberg, general manager of the Orpheum theatre at Peoria, Ill.

Messrs. Bingham and Cohen, owners of the Colonial theatre at Indianapolis, Ind. Mr. Bingham is prominent in the activities of the national exhibitor league.

O. K. Reddington is to remodel his Central theatre at Laporte, Indiana.

Herbert D. McNally, treasurer-general manager Robinson Theatres, Peoria.

Members of the executive committee of First National are tendered a banquet by Gore Brothers, Sol Lesser and Adolph Ramish during the recent visit of the distribution officials to the Coast. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Schwabhe, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Richards, Jr., Mr. Saenger of New Orleans, Watterson R. Rothacker, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Rosenberg, B. P. Schulberg, Al Lichtman, Sam Katz, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coogan, Jackie Coogan, Harry D. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Abe H. Blank, Colleen Moore, John Emmett McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Moe Mark, Louis B. Mayer, Harry T. Nolan, Richard Rowland. Banquet was held at Hillcrest Country Club. Photo by M. F. Weaver.

Al St. John, Fox comedy star, believes in doing his Christmas giving early. While on location recently, he visited an orphan asylum and while there assembled the children about him and presented each with a bright silver dollar.

Personification of the Christmas spirit. Helen Lynch, here surrounded by everything that smacks of the Yuletide, is one of the attractions of the Louis B. Mayer picture, "The Dangerous Age," which is being distributed by Associated First National.
Claire Windsor, Goldwyn player, hopes some day to have long hair, but, oh, how slow it grows.

Cullen Landis, Goldwyn player, gives you his impression of Santa Claus. Wouldn't children have the time of their lives if they could get to that hobby horse and all those packages scattered at the base of the tree?

Arthur Trimble is featured in two reel productions which will be distributed by the Anchor Company.

When Marcus Loew, president of Metro, and Richard Rowland, general manager of Associated First National, were on the Coast looking after theatre and production activities, they were tendered a banquet by Louis B. Mayer, whose production of "The Famous Mrs. Fair" will go through Metro. Other of Mr. Mayer's product has been going through First National.
Leave it to policemen to give their bit to Salvation Army at Christmas time. This is a scene from the Warner Brothers attraction, "Heroes of the Street," starring Wesley Barry.

A scene from "The Night Before Christmas," which was produced by Bray for the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau for distribution through the exchanges of W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. This picture should give the children a happy matinee and evening entertainment.

Jane Novak as Mrs. Santa Claus and Snowy Baker as St. Nicholas himself. The two players are appearing in Chester Bennett productions which are being distributed by Film Booking Offices.

How would you like on Christmas to find this big stocking filled with a doll as pretty as Shirley Mason, Fox star? Shirley says everybody's stocking should be this big and filled just as full on Christmas.
They called him "The Master." He is admired and envied by the world at large, cordially disliked by those who know him casually—and loved by those who know him well.

In his work he is a beneficent tyrant. Under his autocratic rule the stuff they make actors of is hammered, shaped, polished, and refined, eventually being alchemized into idols of the screen. About the studio he is the court of last resort, the undisputed captain of the ship. What he says goes—and that's all there's to it. Fame and fortune come at his beckoning to those he appoints, yet a full-fledged star of his making is reduced to rank oblivion for a single lapse from doing just what the Master expects, and when he expects it.

But, quite in the natural order, it was not ever thus. The Master found few soft spots and fewer helping hands in his long, uphill struggle for recognition.

In the first place, he allowed himself to fall into motion picture work, not because he wanted to but—well, one must eat. In those early days he despised the flickering photographs a lot. Their pretense maddened him and their cruelty sickened him; but he went on...

Yes, he had had other hopes but now he must hide them away with his ideals of other days, just as he felt he must hide himself away from his friends of other days—now that he had become a motion picture director.

But a turning point came for him, just as it does for most of us, and his was a sharp one indeed.

After days and days of distracting tediousness and monotony, days when his soul rebelled against the cheapness, the tawdryness and the futility of it all; days when he was ready to drop from sheer physical exhaustion, the result of ceaselessly drilling men and women, boys and girls, whom he knew were not really actors and whom, he was quite sure, never would be, a most extraordinary thing happened.

He had been laboring on desperately and at times hopelessly with the crude and deficient facilities of the pioneers. He thought it was indeed a cruel turn of fate that compelled him night after night to sit in a small, poorly ventilated projection room and have flung back at him from the screen the "rushes" that had been ground out during the day. He might at least, he felt, be spared the mental ignominy and physical discomfiture of viewing, foot by foot, these puny efforts, these outrages against art, drama and good taste in which fate compelled him to be an accomplice during the day. The thought repeatedly flashed through his mind of a murderer being brought back to the scene of his crime. And night after night he would slink from the projection room, like a criminal dodging away from the environ of his sinister deed. Then came the turning point...

It seems that there had been taking place a transformation in what the camera had been recording which had wholly escaped the director for the very reason that while he was striving doggedly to accomplish something worthwhile his innate prejudice against the whole business of the flickering photographs blinded him to a realization that day by day he was mastering a new and wonderful method of thought transmission and dramatic expression which needed only a skilled manipulator to yield up a real art which, being phrased in the universal language of pictures, would enthral the whole world.

On the night of the great turning point the stuffy and darkened projection room was still except for the monotonous clicking, grinding and rattling of a wobbly projection machine. Suddenly there was a sharp, yet half-repressed, cry. The director leaped to his feet and his rickety chair clattered noisily over backwards.

"Look, look—did you see that...?"

"Well, what is it?"
he cried. "That's the stuff we want, that's the stuff we want," he repeated.

He was trembling as if he had received a great fright, although he had really only wakened from a prejudiced stupor to realize that by means of the almost omnipotent motion picture he had succeeded in fixing real paths, real sentiment and real art upon the screen. Somewhat unnerved by the shrill sound of his voice, he blinked through the darkness, waiting for someone to speak. But there was no answering voice. He was alone in the room, as the hum and click of the projector ceased, followed by much noisy jumbling about of film cans, he dropped into a chair, limp from the shock of his new discovery.

For many minutes, perhaps hours, he sat there staring into the darkness and beyond to the screen which had upon it only a faint streak of light beaming through a transom from a hall lamp.

As he gazed upon that screen it was transformed brilliantly. Enkindled by his imagination, there appeared there in motion views of marvelous splendor, dramatic scenes of pulsating realism and fairy-like views of touching sentiment—a quality and kind of thing that the then makers of motion pictures had not even dreamed of. He resurrected there upon that screen, the long-dead splendors of Babylon, the picturesqueness of an English countryside, peopled by actors engaged in portraying a great drama—and all of this was brought back as things of living realism to be seen and understood by the people of the day. He saw mankind awakened to the horrors of war more forcibly than it had ever been before; he saw love scenes made plain to all in only the way that the language of Shakespeare had previously been able to bring up for the scholarly alone; he saw history, ancient, medieval and modern reenacted understandingly for all. Altogether, his imagination fixed upon that shabby curtain what the motion picture was to be and was to do.

With his mind a maddened chaos, the scene of tumultuous imaginings, he arose mechanically and feeling his way around chairs and along the wall, he staggered into the hallway. Continuing, he went into his tiny office which adjoined a rather pretentious room of the producer and in a trance-like manner put on his hat and overcoat. As he reached the street he commenced to walk briskly toward his hotel amid the quiet solemnity of a great city just before dawn.

In the days immediately following the nocturnal revelation of the artistic possibilities of the motion picture the director worked feverishly, throwing every atom of his mental and physical being into the task of achieving with these pictures in motion what he now knew to be possible.

Unlike every predecessor among the arts, the motion picture did not receive its first recognition from the intelligentsia, from those persons who customarily keep abreast of all developments which seem to point to a widening and improving of the mental scope and power of mankind. The first patrons of motion pictures were not patricians, swathed in cloth of gold, but rather the utter dregs of the great cities, clothed in tattered garments, who held out enough from their supper money to be able to drag themselves from the unfriendly chill of the streets to the warmth and comparative comfort of a rickety chair in a nickelodeon.

Hence, there was no overnight recognition awaiting this artist as has so often been the case with writers, painters, musicians and others; he was forced to struggle on month by month and year by year, breaking upwards through one strata of society after another, finally compelling the high and mighty to drop their disdain toward motion pictures, which was born only of ignorance, misunderstanding and an idea that these attractions of the nickelodeon should, and doubtless would, remain just where they started—as questionable adjuncts of shooting galleries and penny arcades.

But even such barriers as these could not long stay the progress of this great new force, so dynamic, so influential and so far-reaching. The world soon bowed before it—and saluted its master. With each new picture greater than its predecessor and everyone of them carried to the furthestmost ends of the civilized world, bringing inspiration, new ideals and necessary diversion to countless millions, the Master soon became an international figure. Stage artists of fame sought opportunities to work under his direction; the greatest living authors hoped to have their works immortalized for the masses through the Master's pictures; famous artists competed for the privilege of decorating his settings and celebrated musicians wrote scores for his productions. Statesmen and diplomats counselled with him because of his unparalleled influence over the thoughts and aspirations of the people. His niche in the hall of fame was secure!

Despite all this we found him late one October afternoon in the study hall of his studios which ramble over many acres of one of the hillsides that border the town of Hollywood, despondently and dejectedly complaining and bemoaning what, to my very great surprise, he called the failure of his work.

The unquestionable fame which he acknowledged was his he declared to be but a mockery of what he had hoped for. "Nothing but a hollow plaudit of the froth of society," he said. The pretensions of the business and its people he abhorred. He, too, feared, was rapidly sailing toward the port of lost ideals.

"The picture ship is captained by a crew of maniacs," he snapped out as I exhibited surprise at his assertions. "What have we done, what have I done, with this marvellous instrument that has been intrusted to us? We have amused the people a little and, perhaps, we have made millions but I tell you it has been a damn bad bargain.

"With opportunities to really make the world a better place to live in, we have been satisfied if we got only a few handclaps, some money and we have let it go at that. Where have we, where have I, championed the finer things in life at the expense of a profit? Tell me, are we making a stuff that reaches to the hearts of the people, that takes those hearts and enkindles them with a better love of their fellows? Are our pictures messengers of goodwill on earth? Do they lend a hand in knitting father and son, mother and daughter, husband and wife closer together? Are they doing anything to make mankind a happier family, outside of, perhaps, giving it a little mental relaxation and rest from its customary worries?"

"I'll answer," he continued brusquely, "no, no, no—we have failed utterly in our opportunity. Many a verse of poetry and many a short story, scribbled off by some half-starved writer in a chilly garret, has accomplished better and finer things than all the pictures. With our audiences of millions we only thrill and amuse them although there rests in the power of the motion picture over which we preside the ability to transform the hearts of the world, to drive intolerance and prejudice back to hell, to inspire the youth of today with the knowledge of the wonderful heritage which is his, to lead husband and wife safely over the stony places of life by dignifying and idealizing marriage and, well—you know the rest . . ."
A strange mood, we thought, but obviously a sincere one. There was no doubt of the Master's discouragement, not only his speech but his manner proved this.

As the chill of the California evening commenced to permeate the study hall, an elaborately liveried servant kindled a log fire in a huge Gothic fireplace at one end of the room. The director sat slouched down in a divan facing the fire and the brightly blazing logs cast dancing shadows on his head of curly white hair. The care-lined features of his countenance were given a ghostly radiance by the flickering blazes. Although his was a name triumphant with the world, as he sat there he appeared as a figure of utter despondency.

An awkward silence followed his outburst. He moved as if about to resume his tirade but instead turned, picked up a cigarette from a taborette at the side of the divan and continuing to look into the fire, he held a lighted match to the cigarette. As he flecked the burnt match into the fireplace a telephone bell jingled and he reached for the instrument.

"Tell him I won't see him," he snapped sharply into the transmitter.

Turning, he commenced speaking again. "I'm going to chuck it all," he said. "I'm tired, sick and discouraged. I've made my last picture. The world may call it a success but I know too well that all I have done is to receive only a momentary applause and will shortly be forgotten about.

"Just to think," he was speaking slowly and bitterly, "after the years I've spent making these pictures, and the millions, too, I cannot point to a single human being and say, 'Here's a heart I've ennobled, here's a man or woman I've made happier, here's a life I've saved from despair and set on the road to contentment and happiness.'"

There was a scuffling of feet just outside the door. In a moment the door opened and a figure hurtled through, obviously having pulled away from two beruffled office attaches.

"We were running a picture of yours, 'Wandering Home.'"

The Master was annoyed visibly but sought to ignore the unwelcomed stranger.

The persistent visitor was a man approaching the twilight of life. Slightly bent but with a firm step and assured manner, as if he were being awaited by the director, he walked to the end of the room and stood with his back to the fireplace.

"Tell these men," he said in an authoritative voice, jerking his head toward the two office men who had followed him into the room with the obvious intention of removing him, since they had failed to bar his entrance, "that I have something to say to you and that we will not need them."

The Master looked up quizzically, saying, "Well, what is it?" With this the clerks withdrew.

"I've been an exhibitor for eighteen years," the stranger commenced. "I guess I've run every picture you ever made. But that's not what I'm here to tell you . . . " He paused abruptly, passed a handkerchief over his forehead and continued, "I've given up my theatre; in fact, gave it to my operator. He's a fine lad and I don't need it any more—since my partner died . . . ."

The speaker's strange sincerity and stranger manner obviously intrigued the interest of the director who was now listening intently.

"My partner," the old exhibitor began again, "she was my wife. I laid her away last month and I placed her by her side—but I'm getting ahead of my story . . . ."

"You'll have to pardon me if I wander a bit. I rehearsed this story to tell you many times but now that I'm here my head is in a jumble."

"I want to take you back to a Christmas Eve, away back in the days of the one-reelers. My partner and I had been struggling hard as we all had to do in those days. I had had a harness store and when the pictures started to come along Rhoda and me decided to have the front knocked out and we started a picture show.

"I ran the machine and she took tickets until the people were in and then she played the piano—and she played beautifully, too. Pretty soon our baby came but he did not stay long. We were broken-hearted. Then came the Christmas Eve, a Saturday night, and we were running a picture of yours, 'Wandering Home'—you probably don't remember it but God bless you for making that picture! It was the story of a couple like ourselves who had lost their baby. We both saw the picture during the show and after the picture Rhoda came to me and said, 'Daddy, let's run that film again, after the people go.' We did run it, she and I sitting there with old Bob, who helped us clean up, grinding the machine. Hand in hand we sat there and cried and cried but afterwards there was a smile through our tears. That scene where a title says, 'And a little baby reunited them'—oh, you must remember it—"

"Well, we never sent that film back. We wrote the exchange and bought the copy. And many, many times Rhodas and me would run that picture after the people had gone and we would sit there hand in hand, learning from that picture that in just a little while we would both be reunited with our little fellow. Sometimes we quarreled, just as all married people do. Then night would come and we'd run that picture and time after time it would lighten our sorrowing hearts, bringing us closer together."

"That's about all there's to it, only I come here because I promised her I would some day tell you what that little picture meant to us. It was just one of those old one reelers but it made the difference between despondency and hope for Rhoda and me."

The old man sank into the divan, sobbing softly. The Master seemed transfixed, his hands clenched before him and his eyes peering steadily into the fire.

"Do-I—remember-that-old-one-reeler . . . " the director was speaking slowly and evenly as if to reassure himself. "Why, that night, all alone in the projection room, do I remember it, my God! . . . ."

Finally standing up the director went to the old man, placed his arm tenderly about his shoulder and together they walked out into the steely moonlight of California.

Following at a respectful distance I heard the Master call to his secretary, "Tell Regan to send over that new continuity. We'll start shooting Monday."

Opinions of Theatre Owners

"Herald" Readers Join in Lively and Interesting Discussion on Pictures, Distribution, the Public and the Immediate Needs of the Industry—Present Many Views on Topics of General Interest to Trade

Exhibiting is the intermediary branch of the motion picture industry. The exhibitor stands between the public, the deciding factor in the progress of the industry, and the other branches of the business, particularly those of producing and distributing. Because of his position, the theatre owner is given a hearing on questions affecting the entire trade. Around his opinions are formulated many policies directing the operation of other branches.

The industry at the present time is confronted by a number of problems of vital concern, the solution of which probably will rest upon the composite views of the entire trade—producers, distributors, exhibitors, etc. That the trade may know the exhibitor's stand on a number of these questions, the following opinions are published:

What Was the Greatest Picture in 1922 and Why?

Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy" because it got more money, according to cost of production, and actually pleased more people.—J. L. DAVIS, Grand theatre, New York.

"Manslaughter".—J. S. LATIMER, Merit theatre, Hartford, Ark.

"Strongheart" was as good a picture as I played—because it was the character of plays that suit us. All of so much interest.—W. E. EDGETT, Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.

"Where Is My Wandering Boy?"—CLIFFORD I., WILES, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Universal's "The Storm." It was capably directed, had an easy to follow story; had some most remarkable natural settings and scenery; had the advance propaganda of a most successful stage success, not only in the big cities but the smaller towns, and got money almost wherever shown.—BEN L. MORRIS, Temple theatre, Bollaure, O.

"The Storm." Universal appeal, melodramatic, well acted and produced with no "dragged in elaboration."—E. D. KIELMANN, Grand theatre, Topeka, Kan.

"Smilin' Through." A story that has great audience appeal. Holds box office record for me in three houses.—J. B. STINE, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

"The Storm" for box office.—J. J. BURKITT, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.

"Manslaughter," with "The Old Homestead," a close second, for being the best picture that this house has run in 1922. We take issue with no one regarding which is the best picture, we are judging from the comment and satisfaction that was expressed by the audiences, as they left the theatre, also both these pictures built up in attendance as the run continued, this with the advertising being lessened after the first day. Why? "Manslaughter" had action, conveyed a lesson against the ever prevalent danger of too much speed, audacity; "The Old Homestead" has been done when the law has been broken, the direction of the picture was near perfect and the principles popular. Meighan has a real box office and an increase in sales of this production. Leatrice Joy has ability and a peculiar appeal in this picture, not beauty alone, but actual ability.—ARTHUR H. HANCOCK, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

I take it that this inquiry has to do with the returns at the box office and not upon information furnished by some off-tongued film hound, or upon the blab sent broadcast by some publicity vender. If I am right in my assumption, "Way Down East" easily wins first place.—WILLIAM E. TRAGSDORF, Trag's theatre, Neillsville, Wis.

"The Sheik." Love, that's what they want anywhere and action with some stars doesn't have to be big.—J. TEACHER, Star theatre, Exposition, Ill.

Haven't been in a position to run big pictures, on account of the cost. Have been running program pictures, all of which were very good with a few exceptions.—HERMAN SALMON, JR., Cassna Park movies, Cissna Park, III.

"Manslaughter," without question. Because of its terrific lesson to the speed of the idle rich, and the thought that a money picture would be punished in particular cases.—WALTER CODDINGTON, Home theatre, Kantou, Ill.

"The Sheik" from a financial standpoint, not that we made any money on it, but think we would have if it had not rained first night and as we were only showing two nights we only got one night on it you might say. For good clean picture "The Price of the Cup" beats all of them.—BRITTON & LUNDGREN, Melba theatre, Alexis, III.

"Smilin' Through" was the best picture I showed this fall with "The Storm" second. I haven't seen all pictures released, so cannot say as to the best. "Smilin' Through" pleased me a little better than "The Storm," although close. "Smilin' Through" had charm which held everyone's attention from low brow to high brow.—BERT NORTON, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.

"Grandma's Boy"—good box office. Please all and good clean moral.—EDWARDS & CASE, Opera House, Paw Paw, III.

"One Exciting Night"—D. W. Griffith production. Because it has everything a picture should have and then some.—HERMAN MEYER, Niles Center theatre, Niles Center, Ill.

"The Storm" was the best in my estimation.—A. B. HIRD, Opera House, Arlington, La.

"The Sheik:" Because it brought capacity crowds without any exceptional advertising campaign and pleased a large percentage of those in attendance.—J. C. POWELL, Loew's theatre, Wellington, O.

Both from a box office standpoint, and the way it pleased our patrons, "Manslaughter" stood out as the biggest picture of 1922. The reason it was the biggest is that the picture contained practically all of the pre-requisites that go to make up a perfect picture, and in just the right amount—heart interest, cast, thrills, comedy, action, photography and direction.—ROSS D. ROGERS, Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

"The Storm" from box office and entertainment standpoint of Zendra from production.—R. G. WILLIAMS, Majestic theatre, Streator, III.

Greatest drama was in my opinion "Over the Hill."—Greatest comedy was in my opinion "Grandpa's Boy." They got the joke.—ELMER E. GAILEY, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Nebr.

"I cannot judge the greatest picture of '22, but of those I have run, would say "Ten Nights"—as its drawing power is unusual and pleased over 100 per cent of all classes.—E. J. MILLION, Cozy theatre, Hazelwood, Ind.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Big travel, wonderfully directed war scenes, introduces Yanks hence patriotism.—PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salamon, Ind.

I personally think that the greatest picture we ran in 1922 was "The Silent Call" because it attracted the largest business and we had more comments on it than any other individual picture we have run. It pleased our patrons and that is what we want to do.—C. H. POWERS, Strand theatre, Dunsnuir, Cal.

This is a hard question to answer as there have been a number of excellent productions that had a story worth while. All sermons are not delivered from a pulpit today.—MR. & MRS. C. L. GERMAN, Royal theatre, Bonner Springs, Kan.

"Smilin' Through," in our estimation, stands out as the masterpiece of 1922. Perfect photography, marvelous acting, and above all, the beautiful theme which is likened to the fragrant odor of crushed roses, places this wonderful picture in a class by itself.—D. G. ROLLMAN, Catalina theatre, Catalina, Iowa.

Played this year—1st. "Forever" (commerically a failure). "Manslaughter" for both box office value and delivering the goods as an "audience picture." 2nd. "The Old Homestead" for appeal to all classes and "Grandma's Boy" as the premier box office "bet" that caused the most advertising.-—STERLING THEATRE, Greeley, Colo.

"Over the Hill," because it reaches a good moral. —G. HELD, Sterling theatre, Paitment, N. D.

"Over the Hill" because it was a good picture from every standpoint and cost very little to make. The exhibitor and the public were "held up" however on this picture.—CHARLES J. LAW, New Palace theatre, Pana, III.

"The Storm"—because it's clean, because it doesn't depend entirely upon a star who is apt to "go wrong" and because it can't be exploited cheaply and will please small town audiences—the most critical there are. —M. L. GUIER, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.

"Over the Hill." It had comedy, heart interest and I would say everything to make a good picture.—GEORGE HAKE, Lyric theatre, Belmont, La.

The greatest farce comedy we have shown in 1922 is "Reported Missing." It has all the elements of a great picture—action, comedy, which provokes laughter throughout and a good plot.—H. G. SWEET, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.

"The Storm."—What every neighborhood likes is in this picture.—ELD M. STEWART, My theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

From an artistic standpoint, production and acting I consider Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through" first, "Orphans of the Storm" third,—Storm.—J. G. STURDIVANT, Hoyburn theatre, Evansville, III.

"Smilin' Through." A picture that got under the skin. A picture that convinced that this material life is only the beginning of real life. A picture without a flaw as to staging, costume and acting. The greatest picture that Norma Talmadge ever appeared in. We doubt if she will ever duplicate it.—J. M. & B. B. GARDNER, Arc theatre, Delphi, Ind.

From our limited number of showings, this would be difficult to answer. Considering only the pictures we have shown, I would rank "Tantalus David" as the greatest on account of its perfect balance of heart interest, drama and humor, its simplicity of story, the perfection of the cast and the comments of our patrons.—I. O. O. F. THEATRE, Grand Gorge, N. Y.

"The Silent Call." Because it got more money for money spent on it. Exhibitors are after money and not glory. Who cares about expensive sets and stars and directors when they do not get money.—C. R. SULLIVAN, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

It would be easy to state which made the most money, but quite impossible to mention one as the best as there were many fine pictures this year.—W. A. DIETZ, Garfield theatre, Ithaca, N. Y.

"The Old Homestead," because it appeals to all classes and ages.—CHARLES PETERSON, Windsor theatre, North main street, Hampton, Iowa.

The picture appealed to me most was "McDougald," a number of others I did not see.—W. M. REEVES, A-Mus-U theatre, England, Ark.

The greatest picture I have run this year was "About Face," as far as my number of tickets on it. The biggest drawing picture I ran this year was "The Sheik."—S. A. BERGER, Star theatre, Public Square, Paterson, N. J.

The "Sheik" because our box office showed more money than any other picture we played.—GEORGE J. KRESS, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

The greatest picture I played during 1922 was played the first of the year, and that was "Black Beauty," by Vitagraph, Inc. Story good, interesting, and clean. Good acting. Please and entertained all age groups. old and young.—J. H. J. MEE-HAN, Orpheum theatre, Muncie, Ind.

"Over the Hill," universal appeal, censor proof.—E. O. FORD, Broadway theatre, Brooklyn, la.

Sonny," starring Richard Barthelmess.

The mother love type. "The Storm," Universal—the Northwoods type. "Smiling Through," in its type; "Shadown," in its type; "Sure Fire Plot," in its type. These are so many beside some of its own type that one cannot say this or that one is the best.—H. J. LONGAKER, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.

Have not seen them all, so cannot say.

ARTHUR W. WILLET, Empire theatre, Milan, Ind.

I don't know.—LINDO THEATRE, Freeport, Ill.

From an audience standpoint I would say, "They all have their spot."

"The Four Horsemen" was a more costly and higher class production, but it missed with some of its patrons.—F. E. SABIN, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.

Either "Tol'able David," or "Smiling Through." Both of these had good stories, good acting, or you might say, good story, good acting.—C. F. KRIEGBAUM, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.

"Orphans of the Storm" because Mr. Griffith's masterful direction in missing any details. His only thought above all was production.—J. B. STINE, Wonderland theatre, St. Louis, Mo.

Honesty, both of the production sources and of the exhibitors. Further, prices are needed that will allow of the running of good pictures while the picture is at its best, complete, after the big town showings. Absolute cleanliness of productions, both feature and comedy; clean up the stars with their light treatments. These papers are now carrying articles pertaining to this subject that hurt country town business.—ARTHUR E. HANCOCK, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

Distributors to quit the gaping process of doing business. Missrepresentation on the part of salesmen should be stopped. Rural districts are still way below normal and will be for two more years at least, regardless of weather conditions. Independent producers praise a picture to the sky, put four prices on it and expect us to bite.—L. J. BURKITT, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.

More light comedy pictures. People want to laugh. Exhibitors also know the war. But please, no "greatest need." These things are pretty nearly always individual, and what one city wants another has no use for. —ARTHUR H. MARIS, Temple theatre, Belleair, Ohio.

A general reduction in price on film to the smaller town theatres.—HERMAN WAX, Niles Center theatre, Niles Center, Ill.

Less rental prices. Film companies hold their rental prices in face of the fact that everyone is running lower prices.—A. B. BIRD, Opera House, Arlington, Iowa.

Distributors on the order of "The Storm," "Manslaughter," "Grandma's Boy," "Smiling Through," etc., that give good wholesome entertainment of the highest order, continued healthful, constructive publicity; elimination of sale of pictures for entertainment purposes to schools and colleges in competition with picture houses; abolish of censorship.
boards.—W. J. POWELL, Lonet theatre, Wellington, Ohio.

Better stories for pictures. Less quality in press books and more in the production.—E. J. MILHON, Cozy theatre, Hazelwood, Ind.

Lower rentals on pictures; advertising, war tax, and house rent, because we little boys down town here in the little towns all about gobbled up. We almost think there is no chance.—J. W. BOAT-WRIGHT, Atchison, Kan.

Pay stars less money and give us pictures at a price we can afford to pay.—CLIFFORD L. WILES, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Good pictures at lowest cost to the exhibitor. Fewer super-specials—that those a small town exhibitor can't touch. Patrons see them advertised to the sky limit in the city papers and wonder why these pictures are not shown in their hometown theatre.—MRS. A. HALL, Dupo theatre, Dupo, Ill.

Elimination of "black selling" methods that compel the exhibitor to kill his business with mediocre productions. (2) Rentals for really good pictures that are out of the question for any theatre except the big first run houses. (3) Lack of common business honesty in dealings between distributor and exhibitor. Example: Many prominent exchanges sell a big picture at a high rental and then deliberately ship a box of junk.—E. E. SPURGE, Lyric theatre, Goodland, Kan.

The elimination of cheap pictures. Meaning not in price, but in construction. The more close relationship of the producer and exhibitor. The elimination of the curse of auctioneering off productions and the commercial slaying of the crooked salesman.—WALTER CODDINGTON, Home theatre, Rantoul, Ill.

Treat the legitimate owners of theatres in a business way and not like a lot of dead beats. No other business on earth does business that way. Down with deposits.—J. M. EDGE, Lyric theatre, Earville, Ill.

The greatest need of the motion picture industry today is to regain, or rather to secure, the proper respect and opinion of the American people. This can be gained only by creating a businesslike confidence between the exhibitor and the producer. As long as each distrusts the other, the public will never consider our business as a legitimate and permanent one.—ROSS D. ROGERS, Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

Cutting down cost of film, especially in rural districts. The rural exhibitor has not made expenses the last two years. Ano abolition of war tax.—HERMAN SALMON, J.R., Cissna Park Movies, Cissna Park, Ill.

Lower rental by all means. People have not so much money to spend. They better off a week to the big theatre and pay a big price than to go three or four times in a small one.—J. TEACHER, Star theatre, Evanston, Ill.

Eliminate suggestive Shakespeare and let the pictures tell a human story.—J. S. LATTI-MER, Merit theatre, Hartford, Ark.

Cooperation between the producer and exhibitor, and abolition of the tremendous cost of selling and distribution of film.—R. C. WILLIAMS, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.

Clean pictures, nothing in the nude, as is shown in F. B. O. picture, "Heedless Moths." Although this may be classed as art, it doesn't get very far in medium-sized towns, and is a sure source of bringing on more censorship. Let's cut it. In regards to rentals, they should be lower, as we are paying nearly as much on these as we did in the good old days.—ELMER E. GAILE, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.

Recognition of small exhibitor. To build up more houses in small towns and stimulate more fans.—PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

There is nothing the matter with the pictures. We have not the money to spend to attend picture shows. I know absolutely this is the reason our business has fallen off.—H. G. STETTMUND, J.R., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.

Sane, sensible advertising by both producer and exhibitor. Worthless pictures have been boosted until the exhibitor has no confidence in the producer's advertising and the public has no confidence in exhibitor's advertising.—I. L. DAVIS, Grand theatre, New Castle Ind.

The greatest need of the business today is better pictures, also stronger cooperation between producers and exchange managers. Let's live and let live.—MR. & MRS. C. L. GERMAN, Royal theatre, Bonner Springs, Kan.

Eliminate the liars and the bunk.—REX THEATRE, Virden, Ill.

Constructive efforts on the part of producers and distributors that would tend to eliminate discrimination unfavorable to small exhibitors as regards rentals.—V. G. BOLLMAN, Castalia theatre, Castalia, Iowa.

Bigger and better pictures—more cooperation between distributors and exhibitors—more confidence in each other—less "bunking."—H. G. SWEET, Royal theatre, Royal Center, Ind.

Omit producing and booking combinations. It is my private opinion nearly all producers are thoroughly combined in a way and exhibitors are mobilizing their purchasing power.—C. R. SULLIVAN, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

Less of the theatrical and what is called by many "the bull" in pictures (for example, "The Young Rajah" and "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow"). Back to normality, back to pictures with heart interest and the home.—STERLING THEATRE, Amarillo, Tex.

Consistent prices for rentals so that the exhibitor can also be consistent at the box office. Pictures should be sold at box office value, but instead are sold in most cases hundred percent over the real value.—W. S. ODELL, Strand theatre, Ithaca, N. Y.

Cannot answer.—C. H. POWERS, Strand theatre, Sacramento Avenue, Dunsmuir, Cal.

Clean pictures. The public wants them.—F. G. HELD, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Minn.

The cutting down of big features to 6 or 7 reels instead of 8 to 12. Also lower film rentals.—R. HENRI, and let the pictures tell a human story.—J. S. LATTIMER, Merit theatre, Hartford, Ark.

Cooperation between the producer and exhibitor, and abolition of the tremendous cost of selling and distribution of film.—R. C. WILLIAMS, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.

Public more critical. Not particular, but they want their meat well done.—E. D. KEILMAN, Grand theatre, Topeka, Kan.

Yes. Lost interest to a considerable degree. Funds are not spared. Disgusted over star exposures through the press. Had the religious class interested and looking up to the movies until scandals broke loose.—L. J. BURKITT, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.

The public, through the many movie magazines, has been educated to pictures. They know what they are looking for and what they want. They do not "go to the movies" any more—they go to see a certain picture or a certain star—usually the star.—A. C. MORRIS, Temple theatre, Belleville, O.

Yes, mediocre productions are bound to lose money. The public is choosing to a greater extent what pictures they will pay their money for. To hold them will take good pictures with logical stories. The day is fast with us when a producer can throw together five reels and expect it to get popular support.—ARTHUR E. HANCOCK, Columbia theatre, Columbia, City, Ind.

In a small town there is only a small percentage of patrons who can be classed as regulars. You must look to support your theatre. If a fellow had to depend on the many who only come once in a blue moon, and then to the specials, he would starve to death.—WILLIAM A. GINGSFORD, Traga theatre, Neillsville, Wis.

Yes, I think people as a whole prefer something in the comedy line where they can get a good laugh rather than be bored with some old job stuff and long drawn out affair. BRITTON LUNDGREEN, Melba theatre, Alexia, Ill.

A radical change has taken place in the quality of films produced during the past year, in my opinion. A year ago some of the church-going and better class of people would say, "I am afraid of the general character of the pictures presented. Elimination of profane words in sub-titles, fewer de-bauched and cabaret scenes, lesser crook pictures and sex productions. Also the effect of salutary publicity by Will Rogers and others. These, I believe, are responsible for the change.—W. J. POWELL, Lonet theatre, Wellington, K.

My patrons are stronger for plays based on books read than they were, and are not as partial to stars.—E. J. MILHON, Cozy theatre, Hazeland, Ind.

Decidedly—public seems to be looking for other kind of entertainment, due to being compelled to pay admission so high that movies are no longer the poor man's amusement.—A. B. BIRD, Opera House, Arlington, Iowa.

Ordinary program pictures do not interest the shopping patron who is on the lookout for big pictures which have both star and story value.—CHARLES H. RYAN, Garfield theatre, Chicago, Ill.

The public demand clean, moral stuff. The day of slap and vamp stuff is over. The clean plays, devoid of suggestive staging, are the ones the public want.—C. F. KING, Grand theatre, El Paso, Ill.

Yes. The public is far more critical than hereofore. It used to be that any picture was right if it only furnished amusement, but they want good stories and good stars now.—ANDREW & JOHNSON, New home, Kansas, and others.

In small towns. Are not spending as much and are waiting for bigger and better pictures. Are sick of so many inferior, padded, so-called features.—A. J. INKS, Crystal theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

It has changed, and a decided change, inasmuch as the patrons of the picture theatre look to a very large extent to the movies to criticize instead of enjoying the efforts of the producer and cast. Another thing they look for are public resents and that is advanced admission prices at the box office for which will result in decreasing expenses for express.—I. O. F. THE- ATE, Grand Gorge, N. Y.

To my knowledge is: Good comedy- dramas, young, pretty stars; catchy titles and foreign stars are successful.—WALTER GERRTH. Eagle theatre, Westville, Ill.

A uniform contract with a uniform can- cellation clause.—M. L. GIER, Aud- torium theatre, Slater, Mo.

Cheaper film. Small towns can't pay prices, which causes people to go to larger towns.—W. A. HILLHOUSE, Lyric thea- tre, Glasco, Kan.

Business methods between the exhibitor and distributor and producers. Instead of cutting lengths—GEORGE HAKE, Lyric theatre, Belmond, Iowa.

Lower film rentals, cutting out of the admission tax and music tax. Some ex- changers who will not cut the films some are not. Good prints of pictures at all times for the small exhibitor. Ex- change managers who will back up their salesman's written-in promises on con- tracts.—J. M. & B. B. GARDNER, Arc theatre, Delphi, Ind.

Sell pictures on their merit, pay accord- ingly to their drawing power. Let the ex- change and exhibitor be more truthful as to what pictures are doing and not each one always trying to grip the other.—ELDO M. STEWART, My theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

The greatest need today is to spend some money to advertise, as it pays to advertise. If a good story is seen, a good feature, let them know about it.—S. A. BERGER, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.

A picture, new prints, and at rea- sonable rentals. Many producers are still grudging out the same old type of story. People are growing tired of pictures to some extent, and it will take stories with a new twist to renew interest. One of the greatest mistakes made in the motion picture industry is the over-rating of pictures and over-advertising them to the public. As a result, many are not fooled, but their patrons are, and they are tired of being hoodwinked. Sand- bagging exhibitors by forcing them to take uncertain films and if the exhibitor one good one is also a poor policy.—H. J. LONGAKER, Howard theatre, Al- eman, Min.

Better pictures. More reasonable prices of rental. Exchanges to give more atten- tion to inspecting department, seeing that prints are put in a physical condition to run through machines. Exchanges to pay re- turn express. The big stars should be made to share their salaries with the exhibitor who booked them.—JOHN MEEHAN, Orpheum theatre, Muncie, Ind.

Fewer and better stories. They have started doing this very thing. More power to SABIN. Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.

Something to stop the hounding that the industry is subject to from reformers of various sorts.—AR- THUR W. WILLYM, Empire thea- tre, Milan, Ind.

Less film rental.—LINDO THEATRE, Freeport, Ill.

Lower film rentals. Small town exhib- itors have about them in a past two year or more.—E. O. FORD, Broadway theatre, Brooklyn, Iowa.

I consider one of the greatest of the need that the small exhibitors to give their patrons the better class of pictures. Giving the ex- hibitor the option of signing up for one or a series of features.—WILLIAM D. WEBB, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.

Good pictures are very bad.—J. GOLDMAN, City theatre, West Hoboken, N. J.

Something different in pictures that will create a demand to go to the theatres. Lower film rentals, better cooperation be- tween exchanges and theatres.—A. H. DODGE, Palace theatre, Capac, Mich.

Fair play and everything above board.—F. F. FLIMP, Fremont theatre- atre, Boston, Mass.

Cheaper rental of films.—C. F. KRIEGEBBA. Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.

Fewer distributing companies, more efficient, help, and a greater knowledge of show requirements outside of first runs.—DICK CHARLES, Bowman & Charles Theatre Circuit, Vader, Wash.

Same old story—fewer and better. There is also too much publicity of the industry, good, and bad.—JAMES CLAYTON, Strand theatre, West Frankfort, Ill.

A more systematic way of buying. Be- cause the small exhibitor should not pay these high prices for films, especially in this part of the state.—F. S. DONA- THAN, Crystal theatre, Booneville, Ark.

Business men to take the place of "chair warmers," positions occupied by relatives, in most cases, without any knowledge or ability.—WILLIAM C. SMALLY, Small- ley theatre, Corinth, Miss.

Real stories, well produced in every way with the best of casts. Many poor pictures are produced to form a piece of M. McMinn, Capital theatre, Superior, Wis.

Standardization. That is credit rating for all theatres. Also reduction in prices of Standard pictures. Standard pictures given in a given town so that the exhib- itor would know when he had been quoted a certain price. —E. CORRINGTON, Clinetia theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Less bull in advertising, fewer $100,000 pictures sold on exhibition values of a mil- lion or more, the eradication of the stock- broker, old clothing men and their breed from the business. This would mean econ- omy, better and cheaper pictures, lower admission prices, a theater patron- ized by people who are regulars out of all of them instead of having to call a family meeting every time they want to go to the movies.—FRANK FOR- REST, Forrest's theatre, Boonville, Ind.
any so-called special attraction.—W. H. BRENNER, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.

They demand the best and the small town exhibitor, in order to comply, is simply working for the producing concerns, and if conditions do not change soon there will be only small exhibitors.—H. E. MEYER, Niles Centre theatre, Niles, Ill.

Yes. Many of the old patrons have ceased to attend because of price, then cause lack of blood and thunder, serials, etc. However, new patrons readily took their place. Many have formed opinion that movie stars are immoral.—KARL B. GAST, Argonne theatre, Akron, Ind.

Has not changed.—H. G. STETT-MUND, JR., Odon theatre, Chandler, Okla.

Yes. They want bigger and better pictures.—PHIL RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Public is more discriminating than formerly, paying little attention to stars, but more to pictures and admission price.—BERT NORTON, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.

Business about 60 per cent of normal. People don't seem to have the loose change in their pockets.—CLIFFORD L. WILES, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Yes, it has changed. Instead of simply “going to a movie,” as in other days, they choose the production they wish to see. They're more authorizing shows as often as formerly, not because they like pictures less, but because dollars are harder to acquire.—J. B. STINE, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

No.—S. E. PIRTE, Orpheum theatre, Jerseyville, Ill.

Want good pictures, but are not as keen for them as they were.—EZRA RHODEN, La Salle theatre, South Bend, Ind.

I believe not. Only they want clean moral stuff and seem to want it right off the press. (For nothing.)—J. W. BOAT-M, 'NIGHT, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.

Yes. More people every day are looking upon the motion picture as part of the program of daily life, and that its educational value is far-reaching and important. I believe the public is tired of pictures of the jazzy sort, yes. They want humor and thrill, but they also want body to it. A story. Stories that will leave a peaceful feeling.—MRS. A. HALL, Dupo theatre, Duplo, Ill.

No demand for pictures unless they are clean and free from sex stunt.—H. L. MC DONALD, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.

Yes. Our public are shopping for entertainment. The old phrase, “Let's go to a show,” is followed by the question, “What is on?” The day of the “program” picture is gone.—E. L. WHAR TON, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.

Yes. Most people look upon pictures as instructive and helpful.—FRANK DOUGLAS, Sherrard Show Company, Sherrard, Ill.

Yes. It is recognized as the most and best amusement for the money.—EDWARD WARD & CASE, Opera House, Paw Paw, Ill.

Yes. Nothing but the very best will ever attract picturegoers from now on. The pictures have cut out everything but the so-called “super.” The small showman will have to do the same thing that means close his theatre to the “program” releases entirely, running only when he has a real picture to offer. I haven't made a dime on a “program” picture for a year.—E. E. SPRAGUE, Lyric theatre, Goodland, Kan.

Yes—instead of going to shows regardless of the picture they are picking what they like, thus dividing up into groups—making it hard to get big houses on any picture.—EUGENE SAUNDERS, Palace theatre, Hesston, Ind.

It has changed. No longer can the public be entertained by trash. Pictures must contain both an entertaining as well as a moral lesson. The normal moral lesson all classes, and in unity there is commercial strength and public. —WALTER CODDINGTON, Home theatre, Rentoul, Ill.

The public's attitude has not changed—but high admission prices have forced millions to stay away and consequently they have gotten out of the habit.—I. L. DAVIS, Grand theatre, New Castle, Ind.

Yes, the public has changed toward pictures. There are not only clean pictures, but they demand them, and they want them in such condition that there are no stops on the screen. The time for junk film is passed, or should be, but still continue to get it at times, but on the other hand some exhibitors still insist on running a junk projector. Let's clean them both.—ELMER E. GAILEY, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.

Yes. It is impossible to make a dime on ordinary program pictures. They will have to go out to see the best.—R. C. WILLIAMS, Majestic theatre, Strator, Ill.

Yes, the public's attitude has undergone a very material change. Bigger and better pictures are demanded more than ever before. However, the big change in the public's attitude is that it has lost confidence in the industry, which up to 1920 had been steadily growing for the five years to a fair advance. It must create a business-like confidence between exhibitor and producer.—ROSS D. ROGERS, Mission theatre, Amarillo, Texas.

It's not exactly for pictures, but for prices of admission, especially in rural districts where money is scarce attendance has fallen off 25 per cent.—HERMAN SALMON, JR., Cissna Park Movies, Cissna Park, Ill.

Not the least bit, except the distributors call them specials to get more money and not as good as 1920 or '21.—I. TEACHER, Star, Evanston, Ill.

Very greatly. They are all from Missouri and you guys ain't no 'em. The cheap knock-em around stuff will not go, even in the smallest towns.—J. S. LATIMER, Merit theatre, Hartford, Ark.

Yes. They ignore costume pictures in Kokomo and want modern pictures of today, such as “Manslaughter,” “Three Lusty Infants,” etc. It is impossible to get business on ordinary pictures.—T. G. HELL ER, Victory theatre, Kokomo, Ind.

In our locality taking anything used to go, but now a good title or author has considerable to do with it. They are fast swallowing fish, line and sinker.—P. M. EDGERTON, Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.

Yes, the public demand pictures that are good and wholesome, that have a heart appeal. People becoming educated to the moral side of a picture, rather than just watching a screen with pictures on it.—MR. & MRS. C. L. GERMAN, Royal theatre, Bonner Springs, Kan.

Yes. The price is too high. It keeps the poor away because he cannot afford it to come very often.—CHARLES J. LAY, New Palace theatre, Pana, Ill.

The public is tired of sex situations and the so-called “good books” are going over big.—W. G. STURDIVANT, Hoyburn theatre, Evanston, Ill.

With the best of them it is hard to tell.—GEORGE HAKE, Lyric theatre, Bel mond, Iowa.

They have changed so that they don't care any more for a cheap picture, and you can't fool them like before with lots Should Pictures Be Sold Individually or in Program?:

Individually and on merits separately.—E. D. KEILMANN, Grand theatre, Topeka, Kan.

Good pictures could be sold either way. Cancellation clauses in contracts would soon do away with the poor pictures.—C. J. BOYD, CURRIE, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.

Individually. Whichever way we could buy at more reasonable prices.—J. W. BOYER, North Star theatre, Orland, Ind.

Program, the cost of selling individual pictures is too great.—E. Z. RHODES, La Salle theatre, South Bend, Ind.

Individually for small groups.—EUGENE SAUNDERS, Palace theatre, Harvard, Ill.

A happy medium is the most satisfactory solution of the above question. Sold as a program (compulsory) is 100 per cent wrong. Exhibitors must take the bad with the good and go along under the program system is, without doubt, the most perfect system. Absolute sale individually, promotes bidding, splits property, and causes business antagonism.—WALTER CODDINGTON, Home theatre, Bantam, Conn.

Individually or in blocks.—CLIFFORD L. WILES, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

In program, price is fixed when sold individually.—E. PIRLTE, Orpheum theatre, Jerseyville, Ill.

Pictures should be sold individually—each on its own merits.—W. J. POWELL, Lonet theatre, Wellington, Ohio.

For a house running a daily change program, a new picture every day, the old program or group plan is the best. For the theater running three days and a week, by all means the individual picture, as you know best what suits your audience and not over estimated.—WILLIAM C. SMALLEY, Smalley's theatres, Cooperstown, N. Y.

They are educated and know what good pictures are.—J. GOLDMAN, City theatre, West Hobbs, N. M.

Yes, the pictures we are giving our patrons today would have been absolutely impossible to “put over” three years ago. As a whole, the producers and distributors have gradually educated the public to the better class of pictures.—WILLIAM D. WISE, Star theatre, Cornith, Miss.

I believe people are eager for good pictures, good stories, regardless of star. It is a well known story, that makes an interesting picture. Of course, every company has stars, it is the producer principally owing to exploitation of exhibitors.—DICK CHARLES Bowen & Charles Theatre Circuit, Vader, Wash.

Yes. They want more for their money and don’t want to pay more.—C. F. KRIEGBAUM, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.

I believe the public by a great majority demand a standard of decency in pictures that they are required to pay for. I have one family to allow free attendance without anxiety that something off color would be shown. How can a producer or exhibitor adequately fill such a void and increase their business 25 per cent?—F. P. LIMPTON, Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass.

About as much as it changed toward the legitimate theatre, after the advent of Klav & Erlanger and the Shuberts. The theatres over the country gradually commenced to have more and more dark nights, more and more of them went into the hands of receivers (even before the picture craze). Answer, Rotten productions at $2.00 al.

We are due for that way now and the weak goes six years hard work. Theaters will be worth nothing.—FRANK FORREST, Forest’s theatre, Boonville, Ind.

They want better pictures. They will not come for program pictures.—C. E. CORRINGTON, Clintonia theatre, Clinton, Ill.

A picture must have real merit and advertising that will convince the public of its merit.—ROY M. HANSON, Capital theatre, Superior, Wis.

The public is getting disgusted with misleadership, overestimation and overestimation.—WILLIAM C. SMALLEY, Smalley's theatres, Cooperstown, N. Y.

THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH

THE BEST OF THE BEST

1922—THE EXPLOITATION YEAR

Right This Way Ladies and Gentlemen

BEN HUR IS ON THE WAY

Exhibition is keen, and exhibitors do not cooperate, probably pictures will want to be booked as a program. Where there is no competition, and where exhibitors work harmoniously, pictures should be bought individually.—ROSS D. ROGERS, Mission theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

Individually by all means as a picture that takes well in the city is not liable to go in the small town. A man should want to buy the pictures he can put over.—F. H. EDGERT, Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.

Program pictures should be sold in program and truly big specials individually.—L. H. DAVIDS, Grand theatre, New Castle, Ind.

That's up to the exhibitor. If he can buy a good grade of standard pictures on a program he usually gets a better price, but every exchange should be willing to set out a picture once in a while in order to let other exhibitors play a real knockout as they call them, but the trouble is these exchanges, although you give them a date a week, hesitate and drag around if you want to set out one.—ELMER E. GAILEY, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.

Pictures should, of course, be sold individually on their own merits. Think of going into a drug store to get your medicine at Lydia Pinkham's Celery Compound and, in addition, being forced to take some nux vomica, a package of C. C.'s, some ink and a roll or two wall paper. Some producers have perhaps one star with which you could make a little money. However, in order to get him, they force six or seven more "lemons" down your throat. There are others who harp on the prestige your theatre would receive by showing their pictures. This latter class ask so much for their pictures that all you have left after showing them is "pres-tige," and I never heard of anyone paying his taxes or coal or light bill with anything like that. I say, less prestige and more money in the bank after your picture is paid for.—WILLIAM E. TRAGSDORF, Trags theatre, Nellisville, Wis.

Individually. If sold that way less poor pictures will be bought for the simple reason that it would quickly become unprofitable to produce and distribute them—as it already has to show them.—J. B. STINE, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Individually. No distributor knows the needs of a certain community as well as a person right on the ground.—H. C. DOUGLAS, Sherrard Show Company, Sherrard, Ill.

We run four nights best programs and two specials to fill our week.—J. S. LATMER, Merit theatre, Hartford, Ark.

Individually on own merits. If good exhibitors will put in by publicity department as a matter of course.—FRANK E. LEE, Lee theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.

Individually. no program.—EDWARDS & CASS, Opera house, Paw Paw, Mich.

When it is finish one or more as long as they have the story, actor, etc., then it can be sold.—J. TEACHER, Star theatre, Evanston, Ill.

By all means, pictures should be sold individually. You buy a "cat-in-a-bag" when you buy a program and you are forced to exhibit the bad and the good. A man takes a gambling chance when he buys a group of pictures, when in buying one at a time he knows the quality of the product he buys and can be shown what he is buying.—CHARLES H. RYAN, Garfield theatre, Chicago, II.

I believe that the so-called special picture is the worst thing that has been brought into the industry, as it doesn't mean anything to the small theatre manager to buy these great big productions separately, and when they have the box office value to put them together. We would not take in enough money in a month to pay for them. Therefore, I am anxious to see the program basis return.—W. H. BENNER, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.

It makes little difference to small towns whether individually or program if price is right, but with you have to buy several one or two top ones at times or four or four good ones also at top prices, then buy individually.—BERT NORTON, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.

Individually by all means.—A. C. KING, Grand theatre, El Paso, III.

Individually—because all very large exhibitors must buy this way and it is a proper way for very small exhibitors to buy.—KARL B. GAST, Argonne theatre, Akron, Ind.

Individually. Service contracts hurt the industry in forcing mediocre pictures on market, thereby making patrons lose interest.—PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Individually surely. Most companies who rent programs make the exhibitor buy junk to get one good one.—A. B. BIRD, Opera house, Arlington, Iowa.

Individually, by all means. Program pictures are all right for transient trade, but different neighborhoods require different material and only the showman himself knows what the salesman of some film exchange.—ANDERSON & JOHNSON, New Penn theatre, Minneapolis, Minn.

Rather hard to answer. When a producer makes a poor picture he should stand the loss and not pass the buck onto the exhibitor by forcing him to use such product.—H. G. STEMTJUNK, JR., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Ohio.

The following exhibitors used the word "individually" in this manner: A. INKLY, Crystal theatre, Lindsay, Ind.; E. C. Williams, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.; D. W. Wilson, Wilson theatre, Rupert, Idaho; A. G. HELLO, Victory theatre, Kokomo, Ind.; E. J. Milhon, Cozy theatre, Hazelwood, Ind.; Herman Salmon, Jr., Cisna Park theatre, Cisna Park, III.; Britton & Lundgren, Melta theatre, East Broadway, Alexis, Ill.; Mrs. A. Hall, Dupo theatre, Dupo, Ill., and H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Melvin, Ark.

Pictures should be sold individually absolutely. Every exhibitor should be able to buy what his community likes and admires, let junk take care of itself.—MR. & MRS. C. L. GERMAN, Royal theatre, Bonner Springs, Kan.

We do not like the old program style, that is, where we have to take that is all right, we cannot make none, as there are so many bad with the good and in these days an exhibitor has hard time getting them in with all good pictures. On the other hand, pictures sold individually tend to boost the price, which small-town exhibitors cannot stand any longer.—J. MEYERS, Liberty theatre, Tvedale, Ill.

I am not in favor of the program as I think you might buy just what you want.—CHARLES PETRSON, Windsor theatre, Hampton, Iowa.

Individually, of course. Every picture should be sold on its own merits. A good picture should not have to support a weak sister. We refuse to buy so-called blocks of pictures.—H. G. SWEET, Royal theatre, Melvin, Ill.
Real Help and Needed Now

J. L. Meyers, manager of the Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, III., sends the following letter:

"Am attaching herewith check for my renewal subscription to the HERALD.

The HERALD certainly is a great help to the small exhibitor who needs more, than at any other time in the game, a magazine like the HERALD to help him along.

"Compliments of the season to the entire staff."

Lindo theatre, Freeport, Ill., and ARTHUR WHITLATCH, Empire theatre, Milan, Ind.

Pictures should be sold individually. Producers who do not keep up their standards of pictures would soon be in the discard.

By all means, individually.—E. O. FORD, Broadway theatre, Brooklyn, Iowa.

Absolutely they should be sold individually. No producer should be allowed to force any man to take his output. If they can force this system, then it matters not to them if they do make a few that are a knock to the exhibitors' business. Call them specials with a lot of punk advertising to put them over.—JOHN J. MEEHAN, Orpheum theatre, Mun-

Individually by all means.—F. E. SABIN, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.

Pictures should be sold on their individual merit to prevent trying to put over inferior stuff.—F. F. PLIMPTOR, Tremont Temple theatre, Boston, Mass.

I like to buy from one to five pictures at a time.—DICK CHARLES, Bevlyn & Charles Theatre Circuit, Vander, Wash.

Individually, by all means. We must eliminate all the bad ones that we can, if we build up. This applies to towns the size of mine.—F. S. DONATHAN, Crystal theatre, Booneville, Ark.

Pictures should be bought as the different theatre conditions could meet.—A. H. DODGE, Palace theatre, Capac, Mich.

No. Should this become the policy of all distributors, it would work a hardship upon the small exhibitors, as they usually have a short program, not so much from choice, but from necessity, on account of the rental they have to pay. Since buying pictures individually they can select as short a program as their needs demand and the money they have to purchase.—WILLIAM D. WEBB, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.

The following exhibitors used the word "individually" alone: James Clayton, Strand theatre, West Frankfurt, Ill.; C. F. Kriegsdam, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.; and J. GOLDMAN, City theatre, West Ho-bon, N. J.

Individually by all means and screened if possible.—WILLIAM C. SMALLEY, Smalley's theatres, Cooperstown, N. Y.

Individually.—ROY M. McCINN, Capital theatre, Superior, Wis.

Individuals if they wish, hold the cost down.—C. E. CORRINGTON, Clintonia theatre, Clinton, Ill.

Helen Jerome Eddy, Harrison Ford and an all star supporting cast appear in "When Love Comes," a Ray Carroll comedy-drama distributed by Film Booking Offices of America, Inc. The two scenes above are taken from the picture.

W. A. DIL-

LON, Strand theatre, Ithaca, N. Y.

Theoretically—individually. Practically—in program, with a cancellation clause in contract. The exhibitive in the sticks cannot view every feature he shows. Read the HER-ALD and avoid the bad ones.—M. L. QUIER, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.

I think pictures should be sold individually. When the producer has a lemon let him bear some of the loss, for the exhibitor has enough ups and downs.—S. A. BERG-ER, Star theatre, Public Square, Jasper, Ind.

Should be sold individually and not sold to the exhibitor until they are available. We are buying pictures now and play them a year after, because some other theatre has the first run doesn't set in dates.—GEORGE J. KRESS, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

In the good old days pictures were sold on program. Then we came to the star series and then look and buy. You know the result, producers and exhibitors are both hellin' now. Give me program.—C. R. SULLIVAN, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Texas.

They should be sold individually and not in groups, so in order to get one good one you have to take two bad ones.—W. T. RUGGERTH, Eagle theatre, Westville, Ill.

I should say individually every time. This thing of tying up an exhibitor to a certain program is in my honest opinion the worst thing that could happen, because there are so many poor pictures that are forced on you in this way.—C. H. POW-ERS, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.

I think individually. Some producers want an exhibitor to load up on a lot of pictures not even made. It is best to be free and buy them as they come out.

—W. G. STURDIVANT, Houburn theatre, Evanston, Ill.

I think pictures should be sold on their merits and pay for what you get. The exhibitors should have a review board and report more clearly the value of a picture.—W. M. REEVES, A-Mobile theatre, England, Ark.

Program, although it does not matter so long as they are sold cheap and they should be sold for cash, so as to cut down selling expenses.—CHARLES J. LAW, New Palace theatre, Pana, Ill.

A hard question for the small exhibitor to answer. We are forced to buy a lot of pictures to get a few good ones. If we bought only the good ones we would have to pay much more—so I think it is about an even break—J. M. & B. B. GARDNER, Arc theatre, Delphi, Ind.

We have long since ceased to buy programs, for in this age it simply can't be done and still give your patrons a square deal.—V. G. BOLLMAN, Castalia theatre, Castalia, Iowa.

The following exhibitors used the word "individually" alone: W. A. Hillhouse, Lyric theatre, Glasson, Kan.; P. G. Held, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.; Eldo M. Stewart, My theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.; Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.; George Hale, Lyric theatre, Belmond, Iowa;

Barry Entertains 2,000 Children of Police

Youthful Warner Brothers Star Also Broadcasts Christmas Greetings During Stay in New York

WESLEY BARRY, youthful star in Warner Brothers features, has won his way into the hearts of more than 2,000 children of New York police. When Wes appeared in person at the special showing of his latest picture, "Heroes of the Street," at the Strand theatre, the 2,000 youngsters greeted him with deafening applause.

ANOTHER exploitation stunt arranged by the Warner Brothers staff during the star’s stay in New York was his broadcasting of Christmas greetings to his many admirers through the courtesy of Westinghouse Electric Company. The Strand party for the children of the New York "coppers" was made possible through the efforts of several officials of the police department and Mrs. Julia M. Loft, deputy commissioner, who acted as hostess.

A special permit was obtained from the police, and a brass band composed of 100 boys marched from Columbus Circle to the Strand, headed by Barry who was arrayed in a junior naval reserve uniform. Behind this procession came the Warner Brothers float, advertising their seven productions for this season, carrying a special display for "Heroes of the Street," which was produced by Harry Rapf.

As Barry came to view police caps were distributed to the youngsters who cheered the freckled star for several minutes. Just before the picture was shown, Barry appeared on the stage and greeted his little friends. He was followed by six of the bravest heroes of the police and fire departments, who were awarded cash prizes through the courtesy of Harry M. Warner. The six men had performed conspicuous feats of heroism during the past year and the cash award was made to serve as an added inspiration to other members of their respective departments.

"Freckles" has left New York on a personal appearance tour which will take him to the Warner Coast studios on or about March 1. His latest feature has received a large number of first run bookings.

The theatres and circuits that have contracted for the feature include Finkelstein & Rubin circuit, Minneapolis; Southern Enterprises circuit; Lublin & Trinz circuit, Chicago; Rialto theatre, Washington, D. C.; Allen, Cleveland; Modern and Beacon, Boston; Third Street theatre, Easton, Pa.; Queen, Wilmington, Del.; Walnut, Cincinnati; Colonial, Columbus, O.; Strand, California, Cranada, San Francisco; California, Los Angeles; Riviera-Tivoli, Chicago.

Hedda Hopper Plays In Goodman Film

Hedda Hopper, stage and screen artist, is playing a prominent role in the Daniel Carson Goodman production "Has the World Gone Mad?"

Miss Hopper was recently featured in the Louis V. Anspsacher stage play "That Day," and this engagement interfered with her going to the West Coast to play a featured role in "The Famous Mrs. Fair." However since deciding to remain in the East Miss Hopper has been an extremely busy person.
Christmas Greeting

Christmas of 1922 brings to me, and I am sure it brings to everyone in the Motion Picture industry, a sense of joy born of the certain realization that we are working with each other in a great service to Mankind.

The motion picture has carried the silent call for virtue, honesty, ambition, patriotism, hope, love of country, and of home to audiences speaking twenty different languages, but all understanding the universal language of pictures; it has brought to narrow lives a knowledge of the wide, wide world; it has clothed the empty existence of far-off hamlets with joy; it has lifted listless laboring folk till they have walked the peaks of romance and adventure like their own Main street, with laughing lips and healthy hearts; it has been the benefactor of uncounted millions.

To the men and women who are actually doing this great service of Motion Pictures I would voice the sincerest appreciation.

To every one in the industry I send Christmas greetings, and the earnest hope that their happiness may be as great as is my gratitude for their splendid cooperation.

Will H. Hays
Star and Noted Singer Arrange Novel Gift

Father and Mother of John McCormack to See Son and Meighan on Screen Christmas Day

This is the story of how an American film actor in New York City played Santa Claus to a family in Ireland. Over in Dublin on Christmas day, there is going to be one family, with a few neighbors, perhaps, who have a Christmas unlike any they ever have had before. It is going to be a Christmas with an entertainment thoughtfully provided for them by a son on this side of the ocean and a close friend of that son.

The name of the son is John McCormack—he who put "Mother Machree" in the hall of fame, who introduced "Macushla" to the masses and who often responds to encores with "At Dawning."

McCormack and Thomas Meighan, the star of Paramount pictures, are great friends. Recently the tenor visited the Long Island studio to see Meighan at work in "Back Home and Broke" and he confided to him that he had told his aged parents so often about Meighan's work in pictures that they wanted to see him.

Meighan had an inspiration. With the assistance of his director, Alfred E. Green, one of the sets of the picture was arranged for an impromptu set. McCormack was lured before the camera—it took considerable persuasion, by the way—and a picture was taken of him singing "Mother Machree" to Meighan and his police dog. An entire reel was "shot," showing McCormack as if he had been in his own living room.

Then Meighan enlisted the co-operation of the officials of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and had word cabled to the London office to have a projection machine set up in the Dublin home of McCormack's parents on Christmas, also. The London office is to send a print of his picture, "The Bachelor Daddy."

In the meantime the studio laboratory rushed through a print of the McCormack picture, which is already on its way to England. When Christmas comes, Mr. and Mrs. McCormack will settle themselves in their living room to see a picture of John's friend, Tom, and they will see first of all a picture of John himself—singing just as he has sung to them, with rapt audience consisting of Tom and the police dog. All of which is going to make the best introduction in the world for their private showing of "The Bachelor Daddy."

Norca Obtains Big Feature

Distribution rights to "Love's Old Sweet Song" has been acquired by Norca Pictures, Inc., by a contract signed by R. C. Cropper, general manager, and Hopp Hadley of Land Productions Company. This special will be issued in January following "Just a Mother," in which Isabel Elsom is featured.

"Love's Old Sweet Song" was inspired by the famous composition of James Malloy. The theme of the song runs all through the picture as directed by Oscar Lund.

Louis Wolheim, star of "The Hairy Ape," is a prominent member of a notable cast. Other important members of the cast are Donald Gallagher, Helen Lowell, Helen Weir and Barry Margaret Brown and Warren Cook.

In addition to the recognized publicity value of its title, the production has a strong consistent story and has been made on an elaborate scale. Norca has moved into new offices at 1540 Broadway, New York City on the twelfth floor of Loew's New State theatre building.

Cost of Firemen at Troy Theatres to Be Reduced by New Plan

(Troy to Exhibitors Herald)

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Proprietors of motion picture theatres in Troy are looking for some relief after January 1, from a system which has prevailed in that city for many years, and which has cost theatre owners thousands of dollars. At the present time each house is obliged to pay out of its own pocket, for firemen who are stationed at the house during the afternoon and evening. These men receive $21 a week, and in some instances two and three men are assigned to a house, which foots a matter of from $42 to $63 a week.

Under a new plan, there will be an ordinance introduced calling upon each theatre to pay a certain definite sum each year for firemen. In houses of 1,500 persons, or more, the fee will be $1,000; in houses from 650 to 1,500, the fee will be $500; and in all other houses, the fee will be $200.

F. B. O. Salesmen Win Posts as Branch Heads

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—L. F. Young, Kansas City salesman, has been made manager of the exchange in that city.

Box Office Record Enables Showmen to Buy Accurately and to Advertise with Confidence

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER
( Editor of The Box Office Record )

IN MARCH, 1922, EXHIBITORS HERALD performed the greatest reader service in trade journal history when it published "The Box Office Record," the first infallible index to picture values, on the eve of the severest business depression the theatre has ever experienced. Giving incontestable exhibitor testimony as to the sales and satisfaction merit of 600 attractions, determined by actual exhibition test, this storehouse of information enabled showmen to book accurately and advertise with confidence precisely the product required by the theatre to weather the period.

Exhibitors writing, "What the Picture Did For Me," the original and inimitable report department, had made it possible for this paper to supply at that time of dire need the indispensable financial guide by which the theatre, practically alone among business institutions, had been denied previously. Properly, the book was given to the earnest subscribers who had brought about its existence.

With this information in hand the HERALD reader went into the summer with a distinct advantage over other exhibitors. He knew beyond the shadow of a doubt the drawing and satisfying power of the pictures he booked. He knew how much to pay for them. He knew what promises to make for them in advertising and that they would fulfill those promises.

The uncertainty that survives even personal inspection of product was practically removed. The element of chance was eliminated at a time when its presence would have spelled disaster to scores of businesses. Subsequent reports to "What the Picture Did For Me" and continued growth of that department revealed the value of the service to the nation's showmen.

In a letter dated October 20, written before receipt of the second edition of "The Box Office Record," JOHN STEWART, manager of the Wonderland theatre, Kaufman, Texas, indicates the trade attitude toward the publication:

"Enclosed find check covering renewal of subscription for the only trade paper on the market today, EXHIBITORS HERALD. You will also rush me the new September 'Box Office Record.'

"I wish to state that constant use of the reviews and 'What the Picture Did For Me' appearing each week in the HERALD I have eliminated beyond the question of a doubt the showing of a single disappointing picture, and with this thought in mind I am able to stand in the lobby of my theatre night after night and greet the satisfied patrons as they pass by.

EXHIBITORS HERALD, (Editor of The Box Office Record)

"I sure like your 'Box Office Record.' It is positively the only reference book as to what pictures are that on the market. I booked thirty pictures the past week almost solely on what exhibitors said about them. Be sure I get the next one."

Various attempts to express in terms of cash the service value of the "Record" were made, among them the following, from C. J. LATTA, Lyric theatre, Harlan, la.:

"The first issue of 'The Box Office Record' at hand and I am as well pleased over it as a kid with a new toy. If I could not get another I would not sell mine for $25."

H. P. THOMPSON, Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis., wrote:

"You just couldn't be wrong if you study 'The Box Office Record' and book accordingly. Don't listen to salesmen, but study 'The Box Office Record,' and you'll win."

Film salesmen apparently found exhibitors studying it wherever they went, for H. W. ROBERTSON, Strand, Covington, Va., wrote:

"We received 'The Box Office Record' all right and a good film salesman carried same off, so we didn't get very much good out of it."

A little later S. N. ANDREWS, Royal, Ponca, Neb., reported:

"I have had a great misfortune and may have to close unless you can come to my aid. One of those traveling picture salesmen got away with my 'Box Office Record' and I don't know how to run without it."

W. S. PENDLETON, Pendleton's theatre, Gate City, Va., had a similar experience, writing, "I received 'The Box Office Record' and liked it fine what time I had it, but it was so valuable some film salesman carried it off," and like complaints were received from every point of the compass. It became apparent very shortly after the first edition was in readers' hands that a better binding would have to be contrived for subsequent numbers if the book was to stand up under the constant reading to which it was subjected.

SAUNDERS, Saunders theatre, Harvard, III., wrote:

"I want to register a kick on 'The Box Office Record.' I have used it so much that I have worn out the cover. Can't you issue them with a raw hide cover?"

MARION WILSON, Happy Hour theatre, Chalmers, Ind., experienced a similar disaster:

"The cover has been off my 'Record' for the past six weeks, but I am still holding on to the internals and hoping it will stay with me until the next copy arrives. Don't care a darn about the 'kiver.' It's the contents that interest me."

Guided by these and countless other letters from subscribers, the HERALD laid plans for enlarging and improving "The Box Office Record" for September publication. The first step was elaboration of contents. Short subjects were included in the second edition, exhibitor appraisals of product by group name and by individual picture being included. Thus the service performed with relation to the feature attraction in the first number was duplicated with reference to the short subject in the next.

As a result of numerous requests an index to HERALD reviews by page and edition was also included. "Money-Making Ideas" printed in the HERALD were classified and presented in compact form, as were Public Rights League screen messages.

Finally, a new method of binding was adopted, in order that the constant use of the book would not again cause inconvenience and so that exhibitors might file successive editions as a library of motion picture performances.

That these efforts were well appreciated is indicated in the following letter from W. E. ELKIN, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.:

"I have just received my copy of 'The Box Office Record' for September, 1922, and I must say it is the best I have ever seen. This alone is worth the price of a two years' subscription to the HERALD. Your added features, 'Money-Making Ideas' and 'Public Rights League' should be a great help to the exhibitor if he will take the time to read and heed."

Mr. Elkin goes on to express the exhibitor sentiment that has made the great success of "What the Picture Did For Me" and "The Box Office Record" possible in these words:

"Let your slogan be 'They Shall Not Pass,' which I don't believe they can, and (Concluded on page 115)

A BAND of American pioneers in motion pictures, comprised of less than a dozen men and women, sailed from New York City for the Holy Land by way of London in 1911. They were equipped with a camera, a supply of film, a copy of Tissot’s Illustrated Bible and prints of Herr Scheik’s reconstructed architectural drawings of the ancient buildings of Palestine and Egypt.

The inspiration that sent this band to the mecca of Christianity developed in a fifteen-minute conversation in the old Kalem plant in Twenty-third street. The result was the greatest picture that had been made in the history of the industry up to 1912, and which has lived longer than any picture ever produced.

“From the Manger to the Cross” has been shown continuously from 1912, when the late John Wanamaker permitted the first invitation showing in the concert hall at his New York store, until today when it is being rented to exhibitors in every country in the world, and is being shown in every variety of moving picture theatre, church, school, monastery and convent. It is accepted as the universal picturization of the life of Christ. It cost $100,000 to make and it has grossed more than a million dollars.

The company of picture players under Sydney Olcott, director, did not go to the Holy Land to film the life of the Nazarene, that idea occurred to them after they had spent a winter in Egypt with Cairo as their headquarters. It is difficult to say now who is responsible for the idea, but Gene Gauntier wrote the continuity from which the picture was screened. William “Kalem” Wright, now manager of Vitagraph’s studio in Flatbush, is the authority for this.

When the decision was made to film the life story of Christ, Olcott, one of the serious thinkers among the pioneers of picture directors, gathered his company about him and told the members the plans. He knew that it was the most daring undertaking that any picture producer had ever attempted, because prejudice against the showing of Christ Jesus on stage or on screen, ran high. He determined that this could be overcome by his company only if they assumed the characters assigned to them with reverence and if the scenes were authentic in every detail. The picture must stand the acid test of ecclesiastical criticism; if it did not, the enormous expense estimated for its making would be waste.

The important work was to find the exact location where biblical incidents had occurred. In Cairo the director found his first location, a house on the exact spot similar in architecture, according to Herr Scheik’s drawings, to the house wherein Mary and Joseph and Christ, the babe, found refuge after fleeing from Bethlehem and Herod’s murderous order. But after the locations were found there remained the permission of the Turkish officials, then governors of Palestine and Jerusalem, to be gained. This was accomplished by the payment of tributes to them in American gold. But it gave to the little company encouragement for they found the very spots wherein the recorded incidents of the life of the Nazarene occurred.

The company did have to build the Temple of Jerusalem where Christ, the boy, sat with the learned men, and they followed in every detail the drawings Scheik had reconstructed. It was an exact reproduction of the ancient building. Other locations they found intact, such as the tomb of Lazarus and the garden of Gethsemane. They visited the Sea of Galilee, taking with them hundreds of natives to be used as “extras” and who were carried the 240 miles round the trip on the backs of donkeys. Bandits infested the district and the governors, for pay, detailed a military escort.

The spot on the Via Della Rosa, where the miracle of St. Veronica occurred while Christ carried the cross to Calvary is marked by the Convent St. Veronica, and so deeply did the company impress the Mother Superior with the sincerity of the undertaking that she invited Gene Gauntier and other women of the cast into the convent and gave them refreshments.

The marketing of the prints was of the gravest concern because the producers feared that the prejudice against showing an impersonation of the Christ on the stage would apply to films. The film was titled with the greatest care, each title being a verse from the New Testament. The main title carried only the name of the picture without any extraneous matter that might detract from the solemnity of the showing. After the finished print was ready, several clergymen of both Protestant and Roman Catholic churches were invited to a private showing at the studio. No member of the producing firm sat with them; they waited until the ministers came out. The churchmen pronounced it wonderful.

Mr. Wright then got in touch with John Wanamaker and arranged for the first public showing.

It was an invitation affair and limited to ministers and Sunday School teachers. The concert hall was packed and from that moment, “From the Manger to the Cross” became an assured success for the producers who had risked $100,000 to make a picturization of the world’s greatest story, and for the exhibitors.

The owners of the negative, Vitagraph, who took over the publication of this feature when Kalem disbanded, have never sold a print. Every print has been leased, whether it has been for Peru or for China; and it has been shown in the farthest parts of the world. Masonic societies have rented prints to be carried into strange countries to aid in their work of spreading the Gospel, and wherever there is a motion picture theatre, “From the Manger to the Cross” has been shown. In the company who accompanied Sydney Olcott were Gene Gauntier who played Mary, Mother of Christ; Alice Hollister who played Mary Magdalene; George Hollister, their son George, aged four, who played the child Jesus; Helen Lindroth who played Martha; Robert C. Vignola, now one of the famous directors of pictures; J. T. McGowan who became director and Jack Clark Clark played Joseph and singularly enough he and Miss Gauntier who played Mary, were married in Jerusalem. Vignola was Judy and McGowan, Pontius Pilate. An English actor, R. Henderson Bland, impersonated the Savior. George Hollister was the cameraman.
Aims of Public Rights League Realized During Year
Bay State Victory and Other Free Screen Activities Forecast Greater Achievements in 1923

By JAY M. SHRECK

(News Editor of Exhibitors Herald)

THE principles which inspired launching of the Public Rights League a year and a half ago have been put to a severe test and the results obtained are convincing evidence that these principles are fundamentally right and the logical foundation upon which the industry must build its defense in its fight against censorship.

Public opinion is, and always has been in this democratic country, the deciding factor on any issue directly affecting citizenship. Upon this conclusion the Free Screen League was founded and the Massachusetts victory over censorship was a pertinent example of the forcefulness of crystallized public sentiment.

Results of the Massachusetts ballot disclose that the legislators of that state were influenced primarily by meddlesome reformers and not by the will of their constituents. Herein has been one of the industry's greatest faults in the past. Exhibitors and other members of the industry have rested their case at final enactment of a measure rather than bother with the additional effort necessary to arouse the public to protest against harmful and unwarranted laws.

Massachusetts' victory over censorship should remain for a year to come as an inspiration to exhibitors in other states who are taunted by fanatics. It should inspire faith in the principles of the Public Rights League and should be the urge which prompts concentrated activity along the lines which ultimately mean a free screen.

While the Bay State victory is the paramount achievement of the last twelve months, other states have noticedable strides during 1922.

Missouri, through its constitutional convention, is considering a proposition which would give the screen the same freedom which always has been enjoyed by the press. If the aims of the free screen advocates are realized the statute will be precedential and will give the industry a concrete basis upon which to work in the future.

Both Martin J. Quigley, publisher and editor of the Herald and sponsor of the Public Rights League, and C. C. Pettjohn, representative of the Hays organization, appeared before a committee of the constitutional convention in the interest of the industry. The interest taken in all of the measure in the state are the exhibitors, representatives of the exchanges and laymen.

Another movement among Missouri exhibitors, one that evidences faith in P. R. L. principles, will be shown in the latter part of this month or the first of the new year. The state exhibitors' organization has evolved a plan of unqualified merit whereby a certain day at intervals will be designated "Educational Day." For the event prominent people in the community—ministers and other church workers included—will be urged to participate. The plan has been given the unofficial endorsement of clergymen who see in it itself of a changing attitude away from the fanatic and the intolerant.

Watch this Missouri plan for you may be wise in emulating it. The Public Rights League will keep you posted as developments follow.

One of the most meritorious instances of individual effort in the direction of cooperation between the public and the theatre is that of Harry M. Crandall's Public Service and Educational Department, conducted in conjunction with his string of theatres in Missouri. Mr. Crandall's activities among the juvenile organizations in Washington represent distinguished work. The Public Rights League is engaged in presenting detailed accounts of the Crandall movement and this policy will be continued for the League believes that meritorious service should be recognized and because of the influence it will bring to bear throughout the industry.

Charles Lee Hyde of Pierre, S. D., is another theatre owner whose individual efforts are elevating the screen in the minds of the public. He undertook a project of showing pictures and this was expected to be the deciding factor in defeating Sunday blue laws at the November election. Unfortunately the project was defeated at the polls in the face of a widespread sentiment in the state against the "sour" Sunday. In explaining the defeat in a previous issue of the Herald, Mr. Hyde declared that grouping of a number of referendum measures brought defeat for all. That the public and the theatre eventually will have unspoken understanding is indicated in the recognition of the Pierre exhibitor's work by newspaper editors and other prominent people of the state.

Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Public Rights League, is one of the most consistent in utilizing his program and his screen for anti-reform purposes. Mr. Meyer has found the screen a valuable asset each week in the Herald (in the Public Rights League department) a valuable asset to his other activities. His comment in this particular connection was: "It is of interest to know that after the first few of these messages had been used each succeeding screening brought applause from the audience." And no audience applauds that which does not register approval.

W. P. Cuff of Missouri is another who believes that the screen itself is the most powerful weapon controlled by the exhibitor. Messages which have been prepared by the management of his theatre have been published from time to time in the Herald. There can be no doubt that the present growing sentiment against the reform element is the result of concerted exhibitor activities. With the pendulum swinging away from the reform forces, the time is opportune for every theatre owner to adopt a policy of applying Public Rights League principles in the operation of his theatre.

During the past few months the Public Rights League has supplied gratis to exhibitors readers of the Herald hundreds of slides on which were transcribed screen messages, the subject matter of which gave a constructive presentation of the industry's stand in the reform issue.

Copy for additional slides is published every week in the Public Rights League department. Exhibitors themselves know the process of transcribing these messages and have purchased transcriptions of slides. In the September issue of the Box Office Record a selected set of messages also is published.

Further, the League during the last twelve months has printed columns of constructive propaganda which may be included and multiplied in the slide anti-reform campaign. Movements launched by state organizations and individuals are detailed so that they may be adopted readily by other theatre men.

The League will supply copy to exhibitors on blue laws, censorship, educational possibilities of the screen, night saving, statistics and like subjects.

The policy of the Public Rights League is and always has been: Go to your public with your case before it, and let it be the deciding factor. If your case is meritorious and properly presented, as it should be, there should be no doubt as to the outcome.

Although the sentiment against fanatic reforms is growing, the exhibitors in Indiana, Ohio and some Southern states are tormented by the activities of the hypocrites. In one respect this may be detrimental to the industry for it serves to bring the issue to the stage where some definite settlement must be made.

Whether or not the activities of the reformers are prevalent, the theatre owner must pursue a guarded course. He must be alert and fighting at every opportunity.

Nineteen-twenty-two has been an encouraging year for members of the Public Rights League. Achievements during the past five months are in themselves a display of the power of the screen. Exhibitors who have watched these developments should strive to make 1923 a year of still greater accomplishments. The Public Rights League will aid you.
The State Right Picture Has Arrived

This Is Consensus of Opinion of Men Who Have Spent Time and Effort in Development

Is the independent producer who distributes his product in the state right market coming into his own? The consensus of opinion of some of the men who have spent their time and money developing this branch of the industry is that not only is he coming into his own, but that he has a very large extent already arrived.

There was time in the not very distant past when a state right picture was supposed to be something for an exhibitor to book when he couldn't get something else that he wanted.

But times have changed. And very much of this change has come about during the past year. Many of the big pictures shown in first run houses throughout the country, and many of the ones that have made fat box office receipts for exhibitors—regardless of run—have been independent productions sold on the open market to state right buyers.

So recognized has this changed condition become that bookers of pictures feel that they cannot afford to pass by an opportunity of looking at state right offerings lest they overlook one of the best bets of the season.

In view of the above, the opinions of some of the leaders in the development of this branch of the industry are interesting. They follow:

Big Year Ahead

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of Arrow Film Corporation, in an interview with a representative of the Herald, stated that the independent market had suffered a severe depression during the early part of the year. As an illustration he cited that his own business suffered depression to the extent of 75 per cent during those months, but that beginning with September the business showed a marked and steady advance ment, and up to the present time had showed a 60 per cent increase over that of the summer. Dr. Shallenberger stated that by the first of the year he anticipated his business would be back to normal.

The independent exchange man, according to Dr. Shallenberger, was even yet feeling the effects of the depression; that is, in 1920 he had made a lot of money, but in 1921 he had lost it. Now he is again making money but up to the present time was engaged in wiping out old obligations and recouping his losses.

The independent market was never in a better or healthier condition than it was at the present time and it is the belief of Dr. Shallenberger and his organization that 1923 will be the biggest year in the history of the independents.

Dr. Shallenberger pointed out that it was vitally imperative that the exchange man of today should not lose the opportunity of securing the remarkable product that was being offered on the independent market. It is his belief that they should so finance themselves and their organizations that they can handle the new pictures which are being made and which are sure to be big money-makers for them.

He further pointed out that more independent pictures were being played by the big exhibitors of the country today than ever before and this was due to nothing other than their sheer merit. Exhibitors are not inclined to tie up with any one company for their entire output as they have in the past, for the reason that this has discredited the more important productions. It is becoming more and more their policy to book independent productions, thus assuring themselves of the cream of the market.

Offer the Best

By C. C. BURR

(President of Mastodon Films, Inc.)

INDICATIONS this past season show the independent producer forging steadily ahead. A glance backward recalls two recent independent productions at the Capitol theatre—WARNERS BROTHERS' "Rags to Riche's" and AL LIEHTMAN'S "RICH MEN'S WIVES." The current attraction at the Strand, with the first of five of the WARNER BROTHERS pictures which it is reported, the Strand has contracted for.

To go back a little further, I recall the tremendous success I had with "I Am the Law," the Edwin Carewe special. Before I had given the buyers a look at the print I had dispatched of the foreign rights and six territories in the United States. You will recall that this picture played almost every leading house in the country.

Another was "Burn 'Em Up Barnes." I sold every single territory in this country. That was less than eight months ago. Yet so great has been the demand for productions of this caliber, that my organization is fast nearing completion of a releasing schedule of six big features. Two of these are Johnny Hines features, a particular type of comedy, which I alone have been able to develop with great success. There is also one Edward Slobom production, and two di rected by Edgar Lewis. Perhaps the one in which I take the greatest pride is "Secrets of Paris," which I made with Whitman Bennett.

And I have just received word that "Sure Fire Flints," the second Johnny Hines feature has been booked into the Chicago, Tivoli and Riviera theatres in Chicago. This picture has already played in the State theatre in Minneapolis and the Capitol theatre in St. Paul.

Three Broadway premieres have been set for the near future, for those features which are completed. The "Torchy" comedies starring Johnny Hines played in the Cleveland, Rivoli and the Rialto. My Earl Hurd film cartoons have played the leading houses, the first, "One Of Cat," playing successively two weeks at the Rivoli, one week at the Rialto, and one week at the Cameo.

I am citing these facts to prove my statement that the independent producer has become an important fixture in the industry. Exhibitors everywhere are encouraging him. The enormous gains which the independent made over last year is due to slow and painstaking work on his output, combined with the dominant idea to give the public the best.

Pictures can no longer he turned out mill-fashion. The taste of the public for amusement changes rapidly. The tendency to flood the market with one type of picture, which for the moment seems to have hit the public fancy, is harmful to the industry. It results in loose and larcenous production, with the result that a flood of inferior productions are left loose.

Personally, I have always remembered that "the play is the thing." Independent productions are an insurance for the exhibitor and guarantee him through the year a share of the best pictures that can be produced. The exhibitor should save at least fifty per cent of his bookings for independent productions.

The year of the independent has surely arrived. It is my aim as one of them to offer the very best.

Advance Marked

By JOE BRANDT

(President of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation)

WHEN anyone asks me, point blank, "Has this been a year of achievement along any lines?" I say with the surety of the independent—"Has the film industry made strides in this or that direction?" I can't give you an answer warily. It's a very difficult thing to measure any type of achievement or non-achievement. All we have to go by, really, is our personal opinion. Each year sees its good points made, and its bad ones. Each year has seen its definite achievements and with them its inevitable backslidings. There is never a time when, if we are honest, we can write 100 per cent on the credit side of any proposition, and let the debit side go utterly.

But it is safe to say that in all the

No Need for Apologies, Says Thos. H. Ince

Screen Is Established, All Pessimists, Censors and Arbiters to the Contrary

THE motion picture industry is in for a boom that will last and there is no need for any individual connected with the industry to make an apology for lack of audience pictures. So declares Thomas H. Ince, whose latest big feature, "The Hottentot," will be published by First National on Christmas Day.

"THERE have been booms in our industry," says the producer, "but just as the boom days of other industries have slumped into days of lessened popularity so have our periods of the unnatural growth fallen away — we had not built a firm foundation and our periods of hectic prosperity could not endure. "But our day of enduring stabi- lization is here. This season will see the screen permanently estab- lished.

"I am not concerned with the pessimistic reports of 'picturegoers' indifference' — 'poor productions' — 'nothing new in pictures' — 'no new facts' — 'necessity for mixed programs,' or any one of the countless phrases that are being uttered by individuals who do not appreciate the strides we have made in a few years.

"Such unintelligent mutterings are not consistent with the evidences to the contrary that are everywhere throughout the industry.

"Would business men of proved judgment such as Balaban & Katz launch such a house as the magnificent Chicago theatre in the face of a possible waning popularity? And what of Colonel Fred Levy's new house, the Metro at Lexington, the Melba in Dallas, John Kunsky's new Detroit theatre, Sid Grau- man's Hollywood, Gene Roth's Granada in San Francisco, the splendid Eastman in Rochester.

"Out of the general chaos in the motion picture industry following the war — with its under-production and later its over-production — came a steady growth for our art-industry toward a permanent foundation. And I firmly believe this enduring foundation is now established.

"Never before have we had as many big splendiferous productions from American producers as are available in this season. Each producer seems determined to give the best that it is possible for him and his organization to achieve, whether it be spectacle, big drama, program picture or comedy.

"There is no need today for any individual connected in any way with the motion picture industry to make apologies for a lack of a audience pictures. There are plenty being booked this season and there will be none next year.

"We will have pessimists within and without our industry — we may have censors or arbiters, for one kind or another, but they will be outnumbered.

"My faithful hope of twelve years is my certain knowledge of today.

Quality Stressed in New Hodkinson Films

Strong Features and Short Subjects of Varied Nature Announced for New Year

NOT only is it the intention of W. W. Hodkinson Corporation to supply variety in their production output, but special stress is being laid, it is announced upon the quality of pictures scheduled to appear for the year 1923. Every necessary care has been exercised by the company in order to select screen entertainments with strong box office possibilities as well as a variety of subject matter with striking appeal to theatre-goers.

THE holiday season opens with the two Victor Schertzinger productions, "The Kingdom Within" issued December 24, and "Dollar Devils," issued January 28. "The Kingdom Within" is from the story by Kenneth B. Clarke. "Dollar Devils," which is the second Victor Schertzinger Production, is a comedy drama.

Hodkinson Corporation has also acquired the series of four Film Guild Pro- ductions featuring Glenn Hunter. The first three are "Second Fiddle," "The Lap of Luxury" and "The Scarecrow." 1923 will see the Corinne Griffith produc- tions issued through Hodkinson. Charles R. Rogers, former general manager of distribution for the Select Picture Cor- poration and the Roberton-Cole organi- zation, will have charge of the distribution of the Corinne Griffith productions. Edward Small will have charge of pro- duction.

"The Maurice Tourneur production, "While Paris Sleeps," which features John Gilbert and Lon Chaney in the cast, will be published in January. Hodkinson will also offer a variety of short subjects. The All-Star Comedies produced by C. C. Burr and starring Charles Murray, Ray- mond McKay, and Mary Anderson, "Gun From the Press," and "Colonel Hecza Liar" produced by Bray Productions, Inc., are among the short films to be found on the Hodkinson program as well as the Bray Romances.

"Days Afield With Rod and Gun" is among scores backed by an exploitation campaign in conjunction with the magazine "Field and Stream." This series was produced by Eltinge F. Warner, publisher of the magazine, and will be distributed through Hodkinson, is another one-reel novelty to fill out the program.

"Builds" His Characters

Films Point Success of Robertson's Methods

THE year 1922 has seen some splendid photoplays flashed on the screen, and whether they are "Pessimists," or "Light of the World," or "I, the Jury," or "The Chocolate Soldier," which are among those which will be found Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country," directed by John S. Robertson. It was almost a foregone conclusion that Miss Pickford's reproduction of one of her early successes would be a tremendous success, but scarcely anybody dreamed that star and director would accom- plish anything like the charming suc- cess of the finished product.

In this respect, Mr. Robertson, whose productions have been so confi- dently heralded as" the peak," as" Mr. Hyde," with John Barrymore, "Foot- lights," starring Elsie Ferguson, and "Sentimental Tommy," with May McAvoy and Garrett Hughes, contributes in a large way to the artistry credited to the screen for the year drawing to a close.

Mr. Robertson has achieved striking suc- cess with his public and with the critics as a direct result of "character building" in his screen players rather than in retorting to sudden changes with swift-moving ac- tion developments. Occasional stickistics seldom mar a picture, and Mr. Robertson believes, it is permissible for a light to waver in now and then, but through building character, and showing the betterment wrought by this character building, he has set his mark apart.

By his recent move in signing with In- spiration, to direct Charles Duell's stars, Richard Barthelmess, Lilian and Dorothy Gish, the director will have a charter as free as the wind upon which to base his future directorial activities. Producer-director with Mr. Duell calls for pictures which will be "John S. Robert-on Productions," as well as star pictures with the Inspiration stars.

Late in November, Robertson took a company, including Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Gish, to Cuba, where a num- ber of subjects among the best of these will be made. There is in Mr. Robertson's new production, "Bright Shawl," a story by Joseph Hergesheimer, in which Mr. Barthelmess will be starred.

Beginning as an actor, and with a wealth of acting experience, Robertson es- sayed screen work with Vitagraph, as lead- ing man with Vitagraph stars under the di- rection of Ralph Ince. After two years, Mr. Robertson took up direction, going hence to Famous Players, where for five years he directed Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's stars.
The fail of 1922 will long be remembered in the film industry as marking the end of a depression which extended over the preceding eighteen months, reaching its high point in the early summer of this year.

The entry of Will H. Hays into the business; the defeat of censorship by public referendum in Massachusetts; the Cohen-Walker split, and many other high lights mark it as extraordinary in many particulars. The files of the HERALD tell the story in the following tabloid:

JANUARY

Realart Pictures Corporation ceases to function as an individual organization.

* Canvas of New York state shows that 141 theatres take the Herald exclusively.

* Sydney S. Cohen and James J. Walker tour country, attacks on First National featuring their addresses to exhibitors.

* Carl Laemmle offers to cut prices for exhibitors proving operating loss.

* American Releasing Corporation is launched by Walter E. Greene and F. B. Warren.

* Will H. Hays, postmaster general of U. S., accepts call to head Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association.

FEBRUARY

Films displace stage and vaudeville shows in many important theatres of country.

* Senator Meyers starts movement in Senate to investigate "political activity" of motion picture industry.

* M. P. T. O. of New York launches movement to obtain reduction in film rentals.

* M. P. T. O. of Nebraska enters agreement with Vitagraph to receive percentage of gross rental in state during March.

* Newspaper treatment of death of William D. Taylor brings protest from branches of industry.

* Famous Players Canadian Corporation purchases Canadian interests of Allen Theatres, Inc., for $5,000,000.

MARCH

Exhibitors hail with approval the first issue of the Herald’s Box Office Record.

* New York exhibitors in convention demand 33 1/3 cut in film rentals; table resolution offering co-operation to Hays.

* Sam Harding and other Kansas City business men form Capitol Enterprises, million dollar theatre and booking organization.

* Representative Appleby of New Jersey introduces bill providing for federal censorship of films; union labor fights measure.

* Arthur S. Kane is elected president of Association Exhibitors.

Log of Field Representative Gives You Intimate Sidelights About Exhibitors Met in 35,000-Mile Tour

By HARRY E. NICHOLS

(Field Representative of Exhibitors Herald)

December 30, 1922

Dear Exhibitors:

Every year The Herald gives me a chance to talk about exhibitors and to you in the Holiday Number, and I've always had such a tough job of getting all I want to say, said (and always forgetting something) that this year I kept a log, as we old sea dogs call it, covering the 35,000 miles of my 1922 cruise. It's in pretty bad shape, what with camping out in Wisconsin and bucking cyclones and sand storms in Nebraska, but I've still got most of the pages and all of the material interesting.

My original idea was to just send it along and let you look at it, but 35,000 miles is a long road and I can't have all the space in the book to print it, so I'm going to scene it up for you. And anyway, I wouldn't like to trust it to the mails. It's worth a lot more than a letter.

You see, I haven't got any home, except the nearest theatre, and I haven't any kind of relatives except brother or sister exhibitors. When I park the Herald service car out in front of your lobby, that's my garage and I'm home. If you think it don't mean anything when you hold out your hand as I come in or slap me on the back as I leave, you don't know how many bums there are in 35,000 miles of miscellaneous country road and how far it is between theatres in this supposedly thickly theatre nation.

No, I don't think I'd trust my log to the mails. It's my family album, so to speak, and I can't take chances on it. I hope you'll bear with my stumbling synopsis of it. Before you start reading, though, I want to tell you that I'm sincerely grateful to all of you for the good times you've given me during the past year, and I hope you're the merriest kind of a Merry Christmas and the happiest of Happy New Years.

HARRY E. NICHOLS.

My first big stop in 1922 was Omaha, home of the World Realty Co., operating the Sun, Moon, Muse and World theatres, headed by the progressive and efficient Harry Goldberg. I was made at home in short order by the gifted Mr. Goldberg and was welcomed also by Nate Frudenfeld, exploitation wizard in charge of the World theatre. Everybody who reads anything, or travels, knows the kind of showmanship Frudenfeld dishes out, and anybody who's ever been in Omaha knows his brand of hospitality too.

Here I was present at the banquet given salesmen by the Film Board of Trade in the interests of clean selling. A big event, well managed and attended and bringing together as fine a lot of square shooters as one meets in a blue moon.

William H. Creel, pal of J. C. Jenkins and Jenkins theatres, headed by the progressive and efficient Harry Goldberg. On to Hay Springs, a small town where reside those consistent contributors to “What the Picture Did for Me,” Messrs. Horn and Morgan, owners of the Star theatre and a booming real estate business on the side. Genoa was the next stop, and Mrs. M. Peterson, who operates the Grand theatre, proved to me again the capability of the feminine sex in matters of showmanship, I doubt if there's a man in the business who could improve upon her management of the Grand.

HARRY E. NICHOLS, “Herald” field representative, and the car in which he traveled more than 35,000 miles in 1922. Pictures snapped with his camera have provided interesting illustration for these pages, presenting visually the highlights of his carefully kept record presented herewith.

It was with real home-coming enthusiasm that I drove into Neligh and stopped in front of J. C. Jenkins’ Auditorium theatre. “J. C.” and I found so much to talk about that I declared a temporary holiday, went out and put my feet under the groaning board presided over by the motherly Mrs. Jenkins, talked and talked and talked, and went to church with the head of the house on Sunday morning.

All of you know “J. C.” pretty well through his writings in the Herald, so there isn't anything for me to tell you about him except that he's just like he writes, only more so. If you ever get within a thousand miles of Neligh you shouldn't fail to drop in and let him tell you anything you happen not to know about the show business.

At Grand Junction another exhibitor, if I may use the term, added proof to the conviction that a good many exhibitors ought to run their theatres in their wives names. Mrs. D. I. Kimman makes the Rex do things just about as she wants it to, yet still has time to make a road weary field representative feel like he belongs. This jaunt through Nebraska was no holiday excursion. After narrowly missing a cyclone that tore things up all around me, I managed to run right into the heart of more sand storms than I saw in all the sheet pictures of 1922. All a man needs out there in Western Nebraska is a strong back and a compass, but I didn't have a compass. Luckily, the farmers see strangers so seldom that they'll spend an hour directing you to the next cross roads just as quickly as they'll sell you the best farm dinner you ever sat down to for a quarter.

Nebraska exhibitors weren't getting rich when I went through, but there was optimism that did your heart good on every side. I didn't meet a quitter in the state.

Entering Wisconsin, I made Viroqua just in time to be present at the opening of Ben Brown’s splendid new theatre, the Temple. Mr. Brown put the event over in big city style and made everybody, including this wayfarer, a booster for the house the first night.

At Stanley I met another showman of the same school, Tom Foster, whose genial personality is the chief asset of a house of many assets, the Star. The minute you shake hands with Tom you get the feeling that you've known him all your life. And he treats you as if he felt the same way about it.

A lot of camping out in the lake country, where the mosquitoes not men-

Cooperation Wins Recognition
For State Units

Activities During Past Twelve Months Have Placed Exhibitor Leagues on Firm Foundation

PROMINENT IN AFFAIRS OF STATE EXHIBITOR ORGANIZATIONS

C. A. Lick Al Pramer

E. M. Fay Charles H. Bean

SIGHTS of progress in state exhibitor organization have been unusually conspicuous during 1922. These marks of development denote but one thing—state exhibitor organization has found its footing after a number of years of groping about for the proper and sensible course over which to proceed.

No enterprise can hope to proceed smoothly without the element of constructive forethought and operation. That alone undoubtedly has given state exhibitor organization the impetus which it has received during the year just closing.

This constructive activity has been directed principally toward industrial cooperation and coalescence. Over no period in the past have such strides been made in this direction. The militant spirit, so prevalent in years past, gradually is being superseded by the spirit of alliance.

Evidence of this encouraging situation is found in the new association developing in the relationship between the exhibitor and the exchange. Once antagonistic these two forces, by permitting the spirit of cooperation to permeate their organizations, are creating a healthier condition within the industry. This condition should carry with it normal growth and prosperity.

Specific instances of this progressive relationship are found in the activities of the exhibitor organizations in New York, Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin, California, Illinois and to a marked degree in many other commonwealths. New York—more especially the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City—set the pace in this respect. Its arbitration plan is an achievement in itself. A check up of results indicates success far beyond original expectations. This in nowise means, however, that the sponsors did not realize the potential possibilities of such a movement. Although many similar plans of arbitration had met with failure, these failures had taught a lesson which, at the present writing, seems to have been the basis of a logical settlement of exhibitor-exchange controversies.

William Brandt was father of the T. O. C. C. plan, and although his defeat at the last election took him from the high executive post of the organization, the equity of his plan has made it endure.

Missouri revised its plan of arbitration shortly after launching of the New York movement. Kansas now boasts a workable scheme, as do many other states.

Solution of the arbitration difficulties perhaps is the outstanding achievement of the past year for it has created a harmonious understanding between factions and has made possible concerted action against the enemies of the industry.

The spirit of cooperation in fighting adverse legislation has been especially in evidence in California and Wisconsin, where theatre owners and exchanges have launched cooperative associations for combating the reform forces. Announcements of these movements were made following comparatively recent conventions of the two state leagues.

Constructive activities have not been confined to the few states cited in the foregoing paragraphs. Michigan continues its pace forward with the executive and business reins in the hands of W. S. McLaren and H. M. Richey. They are an unbeatable team as a five minute chat with any member of the Michigan body will convince you. Claude E. Cady, J. C. Ritter and others have been prominent in the advance of the Michigan League.

Pennsylvania with its two sectional associations is running second to none. Space limitations make it impossible to detail their activities. For Western Pennsylvania, it is enough to say that Jerome Casper is its president.

New York has been unfortunate in being split into a number of units in addition to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, the direct outcome of the Washington controversy. Despite this situation, however, leaders and members of the various units have not permitted interest in organization to grow stale.

Returning to Missouri, Charley Sears and "Larry" Goldman have been tireless workers in behalf of the exhibitors of that state. Word has been received this week of the resignation of "Larry," as secretary of the league to accept appointment as assistant county prosecutor. Missouri theatre men will miss him.

Kansas exhibitors have returned a former president to the executive post. In "Dick" Liggett the members of the state organization have a man whose bulldog tenacity and watchful eye assure continued success for an association which has many achievements to its credit.

Nebraska boasts the strongest organization in its history. Al Pramer, politician and exhibitor, and his enterprising co-workers have made it possible for the Mid West state to make that boast. There's Wes Fisher, familiarly known as "Father," J. C. Jenkins and others numbered among those who have placed Nebraska in an enviable position in organization circles.

Going back East you find C. H. Bean of New Hampshire. "C. H." also knows something about politics and a lot about exhibiting. His knowledge of affairs affecting the industry has given the theatre owners of New Hampshire a clean slate in legislative matters.

California has two good exhibitor organizations because it has such leaders as Glenn Hunter, C. C. Griffin, J. S. Lustig, Thomas D. Van Osten and individual members who are ready and willing to buckle down and fight for their principles.

Illinois has been unfortunate during most of this year in being without presi-

Lichtman and Schulberg
Ready for Big Year

Produce and Distribute Four Features in First Six Months of Alliance—1923 Plans Set

CHRISTMAS marks the end of the first months of existence of Al Lichtman Corporation, and Al Lichtman president, and B. P. Schulberg, vice-president declare the occasion one for a really merry Yuletide. During this period the executives point to outstanding accomplishments. Since pooling their resources last June, with Preferred Pictures, Inc., as the name of the producing company of which Schulberg is president, the company has made and distributed throughout all Lichtman Corporation "Rich Men's Wives," "Shadows," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," and "The Hero of Gascier," with discriminating exhibitors." A sequel" will be issued in January.

New offices have been opened at 1650 Broadway and with J. G. Bachmann as treasurer. Henry Ginzberg as general sales manager and Leon D. Netzer as special representative, combined with the fact that production plans for 1923 are mapped out are making Lichtman and Schulberg looking forward to a big year as indicated in their articles following:

Market Is There

By AL LICHTMAN

(President, Al Lichtman Corp.)

Six months of experience in independent distribution have convinced me fully that any organization handling good product and operating with a live sales force can find open time at big theatres throughout the country. That has been my experience.

I have watched developments in the independent field carefully and very naturally so. I have come to the conclusion that the thinking exhibitor has clearly indicated by his actions that he will book worthwhile product no matter what the source.

It sounds egotistical to speak of our own product but I should like the trade to believe that I select the case of "Rich Men's Wives," not so much because it is a Preferred Picture but because it typifies what I have in mind. That picture which launched the Al Lichtman Corporation will have grossed a figure unusual for a production of its type before its box-office value shall have petered out. Everywhere, exhibitors who played the picture have been satisfied and more so with the results at the box-office.

We were a new organization. That was our first picture. We had a real box-office picture with a title that was worth money so far as exploitation was concerned. We secured our first-runs at theatres like the Capitol, New York; the Chicago, Chicago; the Newman, Kansas City; the Metropolitan, Atlanta, the Strand, New Orleans. In our dealings with exhibitors, I have been careful to explain that the showman books this product when he wants it. He books it one or two or three, as he sees fit. His decision is the final one. He is—and it should be so—the judge. We intend being fair in our distributing practices. I think the exhibitors will bear us out in this contention.

The franchise holders in this enterprise have been selected with discrimination. They are all men who have established reputations for fair dealing with exhibitors and are men who mean something in the communities in which they operate.

Success Proven

By B. P. SCHULBERG

(President, Preferred Pictures)

We want to be known by our deeds, not by our promises. I point with pardonable pride to what we have done in the six months of business life. We have produced "Rich Men's Wives," "Shadows," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," and "The Hero of Gascier" and Tom Forman are producing for this company. Both of them mean something to the discriminating exhibitor who follows the pulse of the box-office.

What "Rich Men's Wives" has done commercially is well known. "Shadows," characterized as an Exceptional Picture by the National Board of Review and hailed as a fine, example of the "better pictures" movement by trade and newspaper critics everywhere is now gaining its stride. It is true exhibitors were first doubtful of its entertainment values but initial first runs have definitely established its commercial value.

In "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" exhibitors have a famous story by Bertha M. Clay, a top-notch production with a cast including Kenneth Harlan, Estelle Taylor and Edith Roberts and the surefire touches that Gascier imparts to all his pictures. "The Hero" is a version of the famous stage play by Gilbert Frank, made by Gascier with a cast including Gaston Glass, Barbara La Marr, John Sainpolis, Doris Dawn and David Butler. We are confident of the success it will make.

The January release will be "Are You a Failure?" directed by Tom Forman with Middle Holm, Lloyd Hughes and Tom Sanschi the principal players. Gascier is now making "Poor Men's Wives" for February release while Forman is making "The Girl Who Came Back" for release in March. The April release will be "Mothers-In-Law," directed by Gascier and the May release "Sunshine Alley," directed by Forman.

An important release will be "The Broken Wing," which was acquired in the first flush of strike conditions from other producers. Future material includes "A Mansion of Aching Hearts," "My Lady's Lips," "The Parasite," and "When a Woman Reaches.

We're set to do some things. We know we will make a dent in the field. Why shouldn't we find this Christmas a merry one with the forecast for the New Year a busy and prosperous one?

12 Kansas City Houses In "Music Tax" Charge

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO., Dec. 19.—Twelve "music tax" cases are pending in Kansas City against exhibitors. The complaints, filed by the American Composers and Publishers, charge that the exhibitors entered into contract for three years, paid the first year, but have refused to pay since then. The defense of the exhibitors in the case, which was heard before Justice Edward J. McMahon, was left to Edward Costello, owner of the Bijou theatre, which is represented by Lawrence E. Goldman, counsel for the M. P. T. O., Missouri.

There were two defenses introduced, first that the musical instrument on the Bijou was placed on the outside of the theatre and used for ballyhoo purposes, and second that the contract sued on was executed under threat of federal suit for infringement. The case was taken under advisement.

Three More Units Will Make Century Comedies

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Three producing units are to be added to those already making Century comedies upon the appeal of John Forman to independent producers who are in the ear in search of screen material. The present units are Raymaker, Goulding and Edwards.

Sixty carpenters are at work rebuilding and enlarging the studio to care for the increased production.
What Does Public Want?
Analysis of the Feature Productions on the Market During Past Year Is Presented

By J. RAY MURRAY
(Editor, Review Department, Exhibitors Herald)

THERE's a big job awaiting the fellow who can tell in advance each season just what the public wants. Up to date, such a far-sighted individual has not been discovered. The baseball and foot ball seasons have given us a crop of box-office hits, and occasionally there are pictures that do not make a profit, but no prophet has ever been able to tell in advance what the film industry who can forecast the future about such as about when the market is to be, with what flavor, and on what lines of action.

And another costume play of note was "The Last of the Mohicans," directed by Frank Lloyd, and was responsible for bringing out hidden talents of the fair Marion Davies. Our directors at least showed a few miles across the country that the business of photographing big sets and handling mobs is all in a day's work over here, and clearly demonstrated that they are the best of the American directors in this or any other respect.

We are told by capricious critics that the general trend of screen drama has been steadily downward. We do not agree with them. How about "Man in the大多数"? the Cecil de Mille production, which undoubtedly will prove one of the season's big box-office attractions, and rightly so.

We will not quarrel with a year that has given us "Smilin' Through," an exclusive Talmadge play; "Poo! First" an original crook story done in Marshall Neilan's best style; "Grandma's Boy" a Harold Lloyd five reeler that kept a nation rocking in its seat; "Blood and Sand" Paramount's faithful adaptation of Ibanez' colorful story of Spain, with Rodolph Valentino; Rex Ingram's "A Corner in Paradise" with Alice Terry; "The Storm" Universal's fine contribution to the amusement of the picture-going public; "Nanook of the North," a most unusual picture, by Frank Huron, and "Klaw and Erlanger's" "Sonny" a splendidly acted story of the Eskimo life; "Sonny" a splendidly acted story of the Eskimo life; "Sonny" a splendidly acted story of the Eskimo life; "Sonny" a splendidly acted story of the Eskimo life; "Sonny" a splendidly acted story of the Eskimo life.

The past season witnessed many unusual play-plays—some representing an immense outlay in money, while others that actually cost less were no less successful in satisfying the public demand for amusement.

Probably the most pretentious of these was "Douglas Fairbank's in Robin Hood," the picture of Richard the Lion-hearted of England. It was a typical Fairbank's entertainent and it quite outshone anything attempted along this line in America up to this time. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm" was another gripping costume play, a revival of an old melodrama, with much brilliant acting.

This year witnessed quite a few new "musts" upon the m.p. firmament with but slight lessening in popularity of the old ones.

Leatrice Joy, who used to do yo-yo sex comedies, has since full-fledged Paramount luminary, and Agnes Ayers was elevated to stardom by the same company. Claire Windsor, who has been free-lancing, can now claim to be the most talented of the two Barbara's, Barbara LaMotte and Barbara LaMarr. Billy Dove, Metro's latest acquisition, shows she has talent some of which was inherited no doubt from Flo Ziefield's "Follies." Bebe Daniels, Colleen Moore and Helen Ferguson have forged rapidly ahead during the past year as did Madge Bellamy, May McAvoy and Lila Lee. The men folks have been skipping around from one company to another, but picture devotees manage to keep track of James Kirkwood, who not only acts but also directs; Lew Cody, one of America's best actors; Conrad Nagel, popular and gentlemanly always; Lew Cody, who has been assigned several roles; Ralph Graves, Elliot Dexter and others.

Goldwyn led the way last year by doing away with the star system. Now it looks as though several of the other companies would try it. Selznick has announced that he will try and Vitagraph is letting its stars go to devote time and money to big productions.

There wasn't such an influx of foreign pictures as we anticipated in our last Christmas issue. A few were imported from France and England. Some good and others fair but all had to undergo revamping before they were ready for American consumption. The same was true of the German product. The American producer has ceased to worry about the foreign invasion.

The subject of short subjects is a perplexing one to the exhibitor. Many poor comedies find their way to the market and when a really big one comes along he is skeptical and will not pay the price. Buster Keaton, Larry Semon, Clyde Cook, Lloyd Hamilton, and the Century and Christie comedies still hold their own.

Of the new distributing companies to enter the field the American Releasing Corporation, Film Booking Offices, former Robertson-Cole, and Al Lichtmann Corporation are the most formidable. All of these companies have established product with well known players and directors.
Short Subjects Grow in Favor During Year

Pathe to Offer Strongest Program as Evidence of Faith in Development in 1923

NINeteen Twenty-Two, whatever else it may have been, has been a favorable year for the short subject. Exhibitor recognition of the value of the short film and the prominent featuring accorded it by leading and first run houses throughout the country presages further important developments for short subjects during 1923.

The past year has seen considerable improvement in short subject production, and in confidence of the development in popularity of short subject programs declares "Pathe will offer the 1923 market the best short subjects it has ever released."

According to E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Exchanges, the past year has been the most notable as far as short subjects are concerned. The outlook in the short subject field is discussed in the following articles.

Offers Diversity

By ELMER R. PEARSON
(General Manager of Pathe)

D esire for entertainment is the desire for diversity, and in no other way can an exhibitor offer as much diversitY as he can by offering a very generous portion of short subjects.

In fact, the sooner all exhibitors make up about one-fourth of their changes exclusively of short subjects, the sooner they will increase their weekly box office receipts. The past year has seen considerable improvement in short subject productions, and the ensuing year will, no doubt, see the short subjects make up in improvement the ground that has been lost during the three, four years that this department has, more or less, been denied the utmost in custom of the exhibitor.

I am certain that as exhibitors try an occasional exclusively short subject program as a relief from the daily feature, they will find their patrons responding to the diversity thus afforded with better patronage and a consequent bigger weekly gross, and will see the short subject again enjoying the rental to which it is entitled and thereby encourage the producer to efforts that will greatly improve quality.

In confidence of this development Pathe will offer the 1923 market the best short subjects it has ever released, and as a part of which in the neighborhood of seventy-five comedies in lengths of two reels or more, at least fifty-two of which, given the opportunity, will attract as much or more business at any theatre as any equal number of dramatic feature subjects.

In addition to which there will be nine or ten reel weekly Pathe product that, so far as we can now see, will be considerably the best of its kind, a selection from which, together with a comedy, we are positive of exhibiting weekly a change which will exceed in box office value any other combination the market affords him the possibility of making.

Pathe thinks that 1923 will be one of the best years the motion picture industry has ever had.

Win Exploitation

By E. W. HAMMONS
(President of Educational)

No one in our industry will be likely to question the fact that the very just drawing to a close has been the most notable as far as short subjects are concerned since the multiple reel feature came into popularity. Educational is proud of the part it has played in this advancement of the short-reel picture, and of the fact that the steady and rapid improvement in short subjects has been parallel with the growth of this organization.

In the last year, however, it has become increasingly obvious that the day is not far off when the "feature picture" will be the best picture on the program, not the longest.

One and two-reel pictures have been prominently displayed in lights during the last twelve months by theatres which herefore made no effort to exploit any but the longer feature picture on the program. Many of the best first run houses in the country are regularly giving space in newspaper ad layouts and on the billboards for the short subject half of the program. Entire short subject novelty programs are becoming more popular.

Receiver Appointed for Elliott Theatres Corp.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO., Dec. 19.—On application of J. C. Hartman and E. P. McClure, Judge Nelson E. Johnson of the circuit court of Kansas City Wednes day appointed W. F. Zumbrunn, a lawyer, receiver for the Elliott Theatre Enterprise Corporation. McClure and Hartman, both officers of the organization, alleged that Elliott, president, is a public accountant and that he is taking full charge and forbids their having a voice in the corporation. They allege that their salary of $125 a week has not been paid since the corporation was organized. The concern has a capital stock of $200,000.

Distributor As a Woman Proves Surprise

Margaret J. Winkler, who is probably the only young woman in the industry distributing short features on a state-wide basis, has had the misfortune of being mistaken for a man by many occasions, most recently by Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand theatre, New York. Miss Winkler is the distributor of Max Fleischer's "Out of the Inkwell" comedies, and Pat Sullivan's "Felix Cat Comics." The comedies apparently impressed Mr. Plunkett, for he immediately wrote "Mr." Winkler requesting that "He" appear at his office for further consultation on the financial question relative to the booking of the films. When Miss Winkler stepped into Mr. Plunkett's office, she claims he was somewhat scared, "But the sooner the better," said Miss Winkler, "after I convinced him that M. J. Winkler was none other than myself.

Miss Winkler has been connected with the industry for ten years. She began her career with Warner's Features in 1913 and with Harry M. Warner's private secretary. Three years later she launched a short feature distributing organization. "I think the industry is full of wonderful possibilities for an ambitious woman, and there is no reason why she shouldn't be able to conduct business as well as the men," says Miss Winkler.

Governors in Meet at White Sulphur Springs

See Newest Photoplays

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. VA., Dec. 19.—Governors usually every state in the union, in conference here, witnessed some of the newest films including a spectacular picture, "Back Home and Broke," starring Thomas Meighan, and "Minnie," Marshall Neilan's new picture for First National, were screened for the state executives.

In addition to the features a full line of short subjects were being shown giving the governors a complete show for relaxation between business sessions.

Leatrice Joy, who has the feminine lead in "Minnie," was in Sulphur Springs at the time and appeared in person following the showing of that picture.
1922 Rewarded Fighting Men of the Theatre

All Branches of Industry Have Contributed to the Development of Sales Technic and Exploitation

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER
( Editor of the "Theatre" Department)

NINETEEN TWENTY-TWO did reward fighters.

Fighting business men of the theatre won out over the most important boxoffice slump in its history. Fighting business men produced the better pictures vital to the winning of that victory. The theatre and the motion picture are richer for the struggle.

Better sales technic, better exploitation, was required, and fighters in all branches of the industry contributed to its development.

Associated First National put a staff of twenty-eight exploitation men into the field under direction of Ned

Hollmes.

Film Booking Offices of America launched a field force of thirty members under supervision of Nat Rothstein.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation sent twenty-four men to the aid of exhibitors with Eddie Bonns as director-in-chief.

Paramount and Universal added to their already established field organizations and extended the scope of operations and influence. Companies now made the acquaintance of intensified efforts to help showmen through improvement of accessories and service material and through execution of first run campaigns serving as modeles of procedure for subsequent exhibitors.

It was an exploitation year.

On the theatre side developments were as notable.

Showmen who had scorned direct bidding for business by lobby display and street advertising altered their policies to conform to the need of the day. Modernate users of newspaper space, adherents of the "dignified" school, reshaped or expanded policies to facilitate intensification of appeal. The mails were used in direct-to-buyer salesman ship more extensively and more wisely than ever before.

Showmen to whom presentation had always represented a pretty word for prologues learned that it embraces the entire manner of picture exhibition and gave to its perfection care and effort never previously undertaken. Better music, better staff morale, heightened consideration for the public's welfare and convenience while within the theatre, were results.

With attendance averages swinging lower and lower each week in the early months of the year, with "I can't afford it" the discouraging reply to the old established sales invitations, exhibitors were forced to contrive a selling plan which would convince the public not only that the show on exhibition was worth seeing but that the public could afford to pay.

The uniformity of style with which the nation's showmen approached this task is remarkable.

Very few permitted themselves to be lured by the apparent short cut of decreased admissions. Very few fell victim to the siren call of the added attraction, of vaudeville. Losses sustained during the period of readjustment were pocketed with becoming grace for the most part.

* * *

Big pictures, seemingly ill timed at first blush, were appraised at their real value in a short time. It was observed that the big picture, costing much to rent and much to advertise, went a long way toward correcting the public's "I can't afford it" attitude. A special technic was evolved for the big picture, setting it before the public as the pinnacle of film achievement. As such it came to be regarded and treated as more than an attraction, as an advertisement for the motion picture and the theatre. In this capacity it had a big part in the restoration of a normal demand for motion picture entertainment and a normal willingness to spend money for it.

Short subjects, treated with gradually increasing respect, by exhibitors in previous years, came rapidly to the front as a result of the exhibitor's intensified interest in his program and his pressing need of good copy. This paper made the brief entertainment and its box office value the subject of a special exploitation drive showing wisdom and effect of properly advertising the subsidiary features of the program. Exhibitors everywhere tested out points made and, finding them sound, advertised short subjects definitely and made them pay distinct cash profits.

The newspicture, formerly tossed off perfunctorily and seldom mentioned in the same copy, was given new department in the HERALD. Analysis of the product was followed by provision of prestige copy for theatre use. Exhibitors looked into their newspictures and found advertising capital of great value. It became the general policy to advertise pictured events of timely or local interest and the advertising paid for itself many times over at the box office. The news-picture was put on a paying basis.

* * *

As is wholly natural, exhibitors fighting against an industrial condition arising from causes over which they had no control "found themselves," as the saying is, discovered in themselves, in motion picture and in the motion picture trade, the time tapped in the period of plenty. They passed on from the mere vending of a novelty which the public wanted very badly to the conscious selling of a staple product toward which the public was for the moment coolly disposed.

Showmen abandoned whatever vestige of the ancient easy-come-easy-go philosophy may have been retained and undertook seriously the task of organizing the theatre on a business basis. Methods common in other lines of endeavor but formerly regarded as not adaptable, at least not necessary, to the theatre were employed.

The theatre was projected into the business and civic undertakings of individual cities and made an integral part thereof, a condition found only in isolated instances heretofore. Exhibitors joined hands with bankers, merchants, municipal authorities, clubs, schools, established institutions of all kinds, and worked wholeheartedly for the welfare of the community. In all naturalness the community responded, welcomed the theatre as a powerful recruit, and made its welfare, its success, a matter of community concern.

Individual achievements scored by the fighters of 1922 might be recounted almost endlessly. The pages of this paper for the past year have been crowded with stories of their undertakings and accomplishments. It is pointless to repeat them here to readers who know step by step the general progress made.

1923 Begins Under Most Favorable Conditions

Great Number of Outstanding Attractions Is the Answer of Industry to Critics

By ARTHUR S. KANE
President of Associated Exhibitors

O year ever started under more favorable conditions than are previous at the present time. The answer of the industry to such criticisms as have been launched against it has been the opening of the 1922-23 season with a far greater number of outstanding attractions, photoplays that are meritorious from every point of view and have proved real triunphs, than have marked any previous season.

There is every reason to believe that the determination to maintain this high standard is fixed and definite. Those of us who know something of the plans of producers, and of features which are being projected, are justified in believing that great attractions will continue to be the rule rather than the exception. In consequence, I feel safe in predicting that, not only will the advance now under way continue, but that it will gather impetus as it progresses.

HENCE, even were the trend in the entire business world not in the direction of a complete restoration of normal conditions—and it is, unquestionably, we in the motion picture industry would have good reason to hope the new year in a spirit of enthusiam. When I assumed the active direction of Associated Exhibitors last March, I announced that the policy of the organization was to obtain and release the pick of all independently produced features; that insistence would be placed on the selection of absolutely clean photoplays, not only because of our unyielding preference for products that are wholesome and decent, but also because the present superior box office value of films of this character.

Associated has never swerved an inch from these principles and the results have Hauptly vindicated the conviction expressed at that time. The reception universally accorded "Grandma's Boy," Harold Lloyd's first five part comedy, was impressive evidence of the public's reaction to such a policy. This feature scored one of the most notable triumphs in film history. Not only did it have a phenomenal run of nineteen weeks in Dr Breckwede's Symphony theatre, Los Angeles, but it smashed records in cities, towns and villages in every part of the country.

This past year witnessed also Florence
Vidor's elevation to stellar rank by Associated Exhibitors. Each of her features has brought many recruits to her host of friends, and admirers. Another item on our list of successes is the series of pictures featuring Leah Baird, and among attractions introducing other popular players, and winning wide approval have been "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," with May Allison and Robert
Ellis, "Till We Meet Again," with Mac
Marsh, and "Breaking Home Ties,"
"A Bill of Divorcement," starring Constance Binney, and just now being rele-sed, is typical of the out-standing features to which I referred as making the 1922-23 season unique in the dire-

Big Production Year Looms at West Coast Studios

1923 Will See Many Outstanding Features in the Making—Review Of Los Angeles Production Activities

By HARRY HAMMOND BEALL
(Coast Representative, Exhibitors Herald)

THE year 1923 should be fraught with activity on the Pacific Coast if last year's high score or most of the biggest producers and executives of the industry has any significance. From what announcements have been made during the year here it would appear that the Los Angeles film colony is going to be very busy making still bigger productions than those that set a new high mark in 1922.

Robinson Hood is here at this time in conference with Goldwyn's 'Hollywood News,' and if present plans are followed it is likely to eclipse any cinematic effort ever attempted. * * *

Goldwyn apparently is going in for big things all the way down the line. They are 'Adam's Rib,' the biggest and most costly thing Cecil B. De Mille has ever done, which is such a high class production it is even being considered by Sid Grauman to follow 'Robin Hood' in his Hollywood Egyptian theatre, 'Bella Donna,' Pola Negri's first American made picture which George Fitzmaurice is directing from the George Hichens novel, and 'The Covered Wagon' upon which James Cruze is spending much time, thought and money.

There has been considerable activity of late at the Ince studios. Cosmopolitan is using it for making Frank Borzage's "Ninth Commandment" with an all star cast, with William Sistrom as general production chief. Arthur Beck is busy making the Leah Baird productions for Associated Exhibitors, while Gene Stratton Porter also made the first of her novels "Michael O'Halloran" at the Ince plant, with Leo Meehan directing. May McAvoy is starring under John Griffith Wray in a production called "News." Metro likewise is active, and the extended visit here of Marcus Loew for a series of conferences would seem to presage greater activity in 1923. Viola Dana is making "Fatal Millions," while Irving Willat is doing an all star feature "All the Brothers Were Valiant." In addition Hunt Stromberg is making his "Bull" Montana comedies. Other Metro units are scattered, Clara Kimball Young making productions at the Garson studio, Fred Xibio making "The Famous Mrs. Fair" on the Mayer-Schulberg lot, and of course the Leonard-Murray unit at Goldwyn.

The R-C studios where pictures are made for F. E. O. keeps up an average of seven companies working, which is quite a high water mark of late. Among the stars making 1923 productions there are Ethel Clayton, Harry Carey, Jane Novak, Gloria Joy, Carter de Haven, and Johhnie Walker, while Mal St. Clair is making an all-star special.

The Mayer studios by the way is now the Mayer-Schulberg studio, Louis Mayer and B. P. Schulberg having equal rights in the old Selig plant. Louis J. Gasnier is making "Poor Men's Wives" and Tom Forman former Laskyite, "Are You a Failure." Both are scheduled for all star special to be issued by Al Lichtman.

Lois Weber is doing her famous "Jewel" once again for Universal, which promises to share premier honors with "Merry-Go-Round" which Rupert Julian took over after Von Stroheim edged off the Universal lot. We also hear of Von Stroheim once more directing his old star Priscilla Dean in "Drifting." Universal has about twenty companies in all working and giving evidence of being the busiest plant in California.

Warner Brothers have shown a burst of spoud during the past year and have big production plans for 1923. Sidney A. Franklin's production "Brass" is the outstanding feature now in the making, together with William Seiter's "Little Church Around the Corner." The United Studios give evidence of a busy year to come. Allen Holubar is just finishing his "The White Frontier" starring Dorothy Phillips, Jackie Coogan has extensive production plans, Lloyd Hamilton is shooting plenty of comedies for Educational, Selznick has two big productions in full blast: "Rupert of Hentzau" which Victor Heerman is making, and "The Common Law" which George Archainbaud is producing. The Talmadge sisters will be busy with bigger productions than ever before. Bennie Ziedman also plans to produce "The Spider and the Rose" at United and President M. S. Levee has negotiations on for a number of other producing units. Under his own banner Levee is sponsoring for First National the Maurice Tourneur production "The Isle of Dead Ships." * * *

Vitagraph has announced twenty-four specials based on big stories for early in 1923. While the company does not plan to abolish the star system, a policy of all-star casts will prevail.

William Fox has several companies at work at his Western avenue plant, both comedy and dramatic, and Sol Wurtzel his western general manager looks forward to a busy year.

John E. McCormick, western representative for First National, predicts a big twelve months for his organization on the coast, and the general trend of opinion is decidedly optimistic.
Charges False Arrest; Sues Kansas Exhibitor
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
KANSAS CITY, KAN., Dec. 19.—A $15,000 damage suit has been filed against M. Van Praag, former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas and owner of the Art theatre, Kansas City, by Edward J. Menninger. Menninger charges that, following a holdup of the Art theatre recently, Mr. Van Praag caused his arrest and imprisonment for twenty-one hours.
Two men, Lyle Hughes and Harry Davis, sentenced to the penitentiary in Kansas last week, are said to have included the Art theatre in their list of confessed holdups, and Menninger alleges that he was arrested without cause.

New Men Named in Hodkinson Branches
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—W. O. Galloway has been made office manager of the Cleveland branch of W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, replacing E. R. Little, temporarily assigned. E. H. Steele has become office manager of the Denver branch. He replaces Mr. P. G. Morris who has resigned, while G. A. Falkner has been appointed branch sales manager of the Washington, D. C. office.

Theatre Men Fined $5 For Opening on Sunday
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
WABASH, IND., Dec. 19.—William and P. H. Dickson, owners of the Eagle theatre, pleaded guilty to a charge of opening their theatre on Sunday, November 26, and were fined $5 each in Justice of the Peace court here last week.
As a result of the prosecution of the theatre men a general order has been issued by the chief of police closing every enterprise, with the exception of newsstands, on the Sabbath.

Seeks $418,500 From Fox for Alleged Injury
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Harriet Hammond has filed suit against Fox Film Corporation for $418,500 for alleged injuries sustained when dynamite was negligently exploded during the filming of "The Fast Mail" about a year ago.
The actress charges that as a result of her injuries she has been forced to turn down a contract with Mack Sennett at $1,000 a week.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Marshall Neilan has placed Francis Marion under contract to write the sub-titles for "The Strangers' Banquet," picturization of Don Byrne's novel which he is producing in association with Goldwyn.

Goldwyn to Open Branch
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
NEW HAVEN, CONN., Dec. 19.—A new branch of Goldwyn Pictures will be established here this week in the Kilfeather building, 174 Meadow street. A. Interrante has been appointed resident manager.

HENRY HULL of "The Man Who Came Back," "Thirty-Nine East" and "The Cat and the Canary" will return to Motion Pictures in the Syracuse Pictures Production of "SHAKESPEARE WAS RIGHT"
THIS should be the season of greatest rejoicing for our art-industry. For it is the climax of a year of substantial progress—a year of constructive development toward stabilized conditions and higher ideals.

Better showmanship in our theatres and better pictures from our studios have been the two great contributing factors to this progress. Realization on the part of the producer of the demand for more sincere creative effort and for real entertainment, coupled with splendid presentation and constructive exploitation, has re-established public confidence in motion pictures with consequent reaction at the boxoffice.

This season has brought the greatest array of big pictures in the industry's history—and the producing schedule for 1923 indicates that the high standards of 1922 will be excelled.

I offer as my contribution to the continued prosperity of the theatres, "The Hottentot," now in release through Associated First National Pictures, Inc. with every assurance that it will prove the greatest comedy-drama of the season, with "Bellboy 13" and "What a Wife Learned!" for release in January and February and "Scars of Jealousy," "A Man of Action" and "The Sunshine Trail" to follow in the spring.

years. I have been interested in, and pushing for the independents—and that has been a great many—the forward step made by the independents has never been so definite, so marked in the right direction, as it has been during 1922. The mistakes are few, the ultimate goal more clearly in view.

This has been a year that has seen a more and more marked percentage of independent pictures in the first-run houses on Broadway and what amounts to Broadway in the other cities, a year that has seen the "all-star cast" become not only a publicity line, but a herald part of the majority of the independently produced features. It has been a year that has seen exploitation, that has seen everything that the independent producer, made an art by the independents as well as the other producing and distributing organizations. It has been a year that has seen one lasting, greatest good in that exhibitors have more and more shown their willingness to give us the fifty-fifty break we've been asking for and have more and more felt a few open dates with confidence that there would come along one or two or three independently produced features that would merit their booking into these open dates.

Now that we've got it, what are we going to do with it? That's the thing we've all got to sit down and think quietly and carefully. We have gone far along the road we meant to travel and the wise people know that then comes the most difficult part—to keep faith that we have won; not to let it turn our heads, to go slowly yet not too slowly, and at the same time quickly but not too quickly.

This has been a year that has seen Lichtman make "Rich Men's Wives" and crowd them in at the Capitol with it, that has won Warner's "School Days," and "Beautiful and Damned" crowd them into the Strand; that has seen Weber and North produce a "Notority," that has seen Harr and Fugeny doing things; that has seen our own "More to Be Done" and "Only a Shopgirl" pronounced and proved suitable for the biggest first-run.

During the coming year, it is safe to say, will be on the independents. They will all be looking at us, some with approval, many with disapproval, but all with interest. And I predict that during the coming year the independents will become a more and more definite factor in the industry.

Out Promoters

The motion picture industry will become stable and rise to its greatest heights only when the element of stock promotion is eliminated, according to Harry B. Warner and J. Warner Brotheres. To substantiate his contention, Mr. Warner points out that the rapid growth of the Warner organization (proof of what can be done by any enterprising concern without the use of stock promotion.

"Motion picture stock promotion," contends Mr. Warner, "has done more to retard the progress of the wonderful industry than any other factor that has come to the limelight within recent memory. There are of course any number of methods of selling stock. "Most of them are a snare and a delusion. One schemer does more harm to the entire industry than good can be done in a year by those others who are wrapped up in its future welfare and longevity. And this injury is felt at the box offices of theatre owners throughout the country; for every person that is hoodwinked spreads the gospel and it needs very little imagination to conjure the ultimate effect on the industry.

"In direct contrast to these harmful methods, we are producing ad on pictures without the aid of stock selling schemes. Our productions made this season, namely, "Tea to Riches," "North of the Street," "Brass," "Little Church around the Corner," the fantastic and fascinating "Madame Butterfly," and the eighteen super-productions for next season will be pronounced without promotion. Our pictures are the outcome of very, careful planning, and they include the investment of an unusually large sum of money. This fact proves conclusively that Warner Brothers are doing something that others apparently cannot do. The reason for this state of affairs is simple.

"Our firm consists of three brothers—myself, Abe, and Sam and Jack. We want to live and let live, and in adhering to this policy we are able to put our hearts into our work and turn out pictures that are an credit to this industry. Moreover, we are not anxious to get all the money we possibly can, but rather we are anxious to use that money in furthering the interests of this and the motion picture industry.

"There is still current the idea that the motion picture industry is in its infancy. Where the 'infant' side of the issue was given birth I do not know, but I do know that we are a mammoth industry—rated the fourth largest in the world. Certainly, this rating does not signify 'infancy.' It means that we are growing so rapidly that within a very short space of time we will climb to heights undreamed of by those who believe the tremendous possibilities of the motion picture. But we will achieve our wildest dreams only when we eliminate the promoters, the schemers.

"There is no set formula to the making of box office attractions. The world has always wanted entertainment, and it will continue to want it. And if producers will turn out pictures containing the essentials that make for an evening's good entertainment, they need not worry about the possible direction the pendulum of public opinion may next be expected to swing. Entertainment is what the public wants, and they will want it first, last, and all the time.

D.W. GRIFFITH'S

"One Exciting Night,"

The first genuinely up-to-date mystery picture ever filmed. Brimful of love, laughter and thrills. A frantic search for a missing half million dollars. Stealthy figures and peering eyes. Sliding panels and secret doors. The funniest black-face comedian possible. And a tremendous storm scene as a gorgeous, dynamic climax.

"Orphans of the Storm,"

A Griffith picturization of the famous "The Two Orphans" as the basis for a historically accurate presentation of the titanic upheavals of the French revolution. The sweetest love story of all history. Scenes of pagan splendor among the aristocrats as the rabble riots for bread. The "great ride" as a Griffith climax.

"Way Down East,"

Foremost among the most popular pictures D. W. Griffith ever made. Melodrama and romance; comedy and adventure; box-office certainty everywhere every time. A cast beyond criticism or comparison. A picture for the small town theatre as well as the big city. And there's the Griffith thriller in the form of a smashing ice scene.

"Dream Street,"

A truly Griffith feature in every sense of the word, picturing the famous Limehouse district of London. A tenderly beautiful love story for the romantically inclined, plus mystery and melodrama as only Griffith himself transfers to the screen. The great director is at his best in this picture of beauty in the midst of squalor.

"The Love Flower,"

A D. W. Griffith triumph from all phases of picture-making. A wonderful story that runs the gamut of all the human emotions—love, hate, revenge, forgiveness. Superb settings on a tropical isle, with marvellous photography showing a battle to the death deep, deep, in the water at the foot of a towering cliff. A real thriller.

"Broken Blossoms."

The most artistically beautiful picture this master producer ever filmed, with real entertainment for all classes. Not a "high-brow" picture, but a tremendous melodrama of the London Limehouse district, with a love story so tenderly told as to bring tears—tears that wash away sadness and make beauty seem more beautiful.

we exhibitors will continue to keep your publication head and cars above all others."

P. G. H. Buxbaum, Stirling Theatre, Fairmont, W. Va., gives his opinion of Herald service in similar terms.

"Just received my 'Box Office Record.' Kindly accept my thanks. I sometimes think that if we exhibitors could have had 'The Box Office Record' ten years ago there would not be so many poor pictures in the market today, as 'The Box Office Record' and 'What the Picture Did For Me' is the only way for any small exhibitor to dodge the poor ones.

"I used to buy pictures recommended by the film salesmen. Today I am only buying pictures that have a good rating in 'The Box Office Record' and I find that I am well rewarded for doing so. My advice to every exhibitor in this great country of ours is to subscribe to the Herald and get the benefit of 'What the Picture Did For Me.'"

With hundreds of letters such as these at hand to indicate the importance of 'The Box Office Record' in the industry, the Herald takes this holiday occasion to thank exhibitors for delegating to it the momentous work of acting as their chosen agent in the compilation of the one dependable business guide to which the trade has access. While it would be pleasant to refer to 'The Box Office Record' as the Herald's Christmas gift to exhibitors, the fact that it is in reality exhibitors' gift to exhibitors renders such allusion pointless. Yet the personnel of 'The Box Office Record' and "What the Picture Did For Me" cannot pass this opportunity without expressing wishes for—tion and its rehabilitation under the name of Film Booking Offices by P. A. Powers and his competent assistants; and the rapid organization of the American Releasing Corporation with a nationwide exchange system by Walter E. Greene. Fred B. Warren are just a few "headlines" of the last twelve months.

The state right market made more progress in the last twelve months than any two previous years. At Lichtman has entered the field with a comprehensive system of production, distributing and exploitation. Warner Brothers have scored a series of remarkable successes and outbid "old line" companies for popular books. Arrow and C. B. C. Sales Corporation have made tremendous strides. Affiliated Distributors, Weber & North, and many others have brought pictures of unusual merit to the business.

In its relation with the public, the industry has progressed rapidly. Will H. Hays has played an important part in this, as he has been able to gain audiences and present facts, while others in the past have been denied the chance to speak or have had "the jury packed" against them.

In the Spring Virginia adopted a state censorship law. This apparently marked the turning of the tide. Ohio a short time later clipped the authority of a censor, who was too tyrannical. Other communities voted down the censorship ques-

Newspaper—particularly the "yellow" ones—gave the industry unfair treatment last Spring in connection with the mysterious murder of a director on the West Coast. Since then, however, there has been a gradual improvement and an apparent effort to be fair. They still insist on getting into every murder story just a line that "she is considering an offer to enter the movies—but that is a bromide which every cub reporter uses to pad out his third day story of the case and will probably be with us a year or two more.

tioned in the advertising made their presence duly known, Milwaukee loomed on the horizon. The city has adequate substitutes for what originally made it famous.

There’s Otto “Ballyhoo” Meister, for instance, whose White House theatre gets its picture in the papers about as often as any theatre in America on account of his exploitation methods. But the nickname only half states the case. His hospitality doesn’t run second to his showmanship, and his showmanship runs second to none.

* * *

Arrived in Milwaukee just after the new Famous Players exchange was opened there, and any Film Row in the World would be proud of it. Any industry would be proud, also, of the force that it houses.

Wisconsin stood up well under the depression of the early months, the western part of the state being hardest hit but sharing with all the courageous spirit that brought Wisconsin through with colors fly-ning. Aside from the mosquitoes, I enjoyed every minute of the trip.

Michigan, the state of 100 per cent organization, was next at hand and I had one of the biggest days of my road experience at Gull Lake, where the Michigan
M. P. T. O. held a field day with exhibitors from everywhere present with their families. H. F. Richley and Claude Cady, to whom management is second nature, put over the outing in much the same manner that the state organization is put over.
Everybody got out with the single idea of having the time of their life, and everybody had it.

The baseball game was a classic. Not even my speedy lens could do it justice.
And the field events were athletic gems alongside which the Olympic Games stack up like a pink tea. I used all the negatives
I had to get the pictures that the Herald printed, and I could have used another mile or so without wasting a snap. To see the Michigan exhibitors at play is to know why Michigan exhibitors at work accomplish such wonders.

* * *

Back in Detroit, I enjoyed another taste of Michigan hospitality when John Kunsky took me on his motor boat to his magnificent home at Walkerville, Canada. Charles Hutchison never had a ride like that in his wildest serial episode. And DeMille never photographed a more charming “country estate” in his most elegant production. There never was a finer host.

In Detroit again I met everybody who couldn’t get to Gull Lake at the screening of A1 Lichtman’s “Rich Men’s Wives,” another one of those events that make road life more than just one filling station after another.

At Otsego I got another chapter for my sometime-to-be-written book on the feminine exhibitors of motion pictures. Mrs. George Brookins is the efficient and successful expert of show-womanish at this point.

H. L. Well, Port Huron, whose Desmond theatre really merits that good old description, “palatial,” proved another man easy to meet and to say good-bye to.
And I took a whole course in showmanship under the guidance of Larry Hayes, formerly of driers exchanges, who now operates most successfully the Dawn theatre at Hilldale.

Michigan exhibitors kept out of the red ink during the big slump. Maybe their

In Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, territory pretty well covered in “The Exhibitor Visitor” articles in weekly issues of the Herald, I found a pronounced tendency toward reshaping of showmanship methods.
Exhibitors who used to laugh at such things as lobby display were going in for lavish undertakings never previously attempted.

Such men as Frank Heller, Victor theatre, Kokomo, Ind.; Billy Comers, Marion Theatres Company, Marion, and A E. Bennett, Strand, Muncie, have employed sign painters and mechanics to build elaborate fronts. The increase in effort along these lines is the outstanding development since my last tour of this territory.

Traveling was not always good in 1922.
On the first leg of my cruise, for instance,
St. Louis to Omaha, I was forced to drive through mud hub deep almost all the way.

I wore out three sets of chains in two months, which may be a record but certainly not an advertisement for the chains.

The car was a good traveling mate, tough, and didn’t often fail to deliver me where I was going on schedule. The schedule was ideal, bringing me to places where things happened just in time for the happening.

It isn’t all poetry, this unbroken annual jaunt about the country, but it has its compensations in the friends it makes and the knowledge of things theatrical that it gives.
I don’t know just where I’ll go from here, but if the fates are kind and take me through another year as pleasant as the last I’ll praise Allah, buy me a tent like the approved nomad, and one of these days I’ll drop in on you, sure as the calendar endures. Meantime, the best of luck to each of you.

Put Human Atmosphere in Your Program
Factors of Holiday Bill and General Theatre Presentation Are Discussed
By S. L. ROTHAFEL
(In Charge of Production, Capitol Theatre)

Each week in the year has a psychology of its own. Each week must be approached and treated in a different manner, taking into consideration the season of the year, the timeliness and any particular significance attached to it.

In building up a program, however, be your theatre large or small—certain general principles are applicable at all times. First—let your imagination play. Realize that the intelligence of the public must not be underrated. It must be given credit for as much intelligence as the exhibitor who offers his entertainment to the public. Try to avoid striking false notes. Strive to get an atmosphere of real humanness in your programs.

I have great faith in the intelligence and the aesthetic appreciation of the American audiences. I believe that they are ready for the best that can be offered them in motion pictures and music. A recent experiment undertaken at the Capitol theatre justifies this contention.

When we undertook to have the Capitol Grand Orchestra play Richard Strauss' symphonic poem, "Ein Heldenleben," several weeks ago, we embarked on a daring adventure in the field of popular entertainment. The popularity and appeal of the best symphonic music had already been proved by the thousands of regular patrons who come to the Capitol to hear the orchestra and its musical offerings—Liszt, Tchaikovsky, Beethoven, Wagner—each of these composers had found a permanent place in our programs.

But Strauss' "Heldenleben" presented an unprecedented step. Here is a magnificent example of iconoclastic modern music, a work which has provoked as much discussion as a Wagner music drama. Here is an example of Strauss' unparalleled mastery of orchestral devices and the highest development of thematic composition, tonal coloring and dramatic beauty.

The overwhelming success of its reception by our audiences was the most gratifying and encouraging element in the performance of this composition and justified our belief that our audiences are the finest in the world and capable of rising to the greatest heights of aesthetic appreciation.

In approaching the question of the holiday program, we must keep in mind that the keynote of the season is one of good cheer, optimism and hope—and that is the note to be emphasized in your program. It is an emotional season—this holiday time—when folks are quick to respond to color and sentiment. Let the first impression of your theatre strike a responsive chord. Let the decorations express the good cheer and the warmth of the season. Christmas trees, the warmth and glow of bright colors, special decorations—all these should exude the cheerful holiday spirit.

The general tenor of the program should be light. The feature picture should preferably be of a light nature.

For there is this consideration to be kept in mind: The Christmas holidays are in a great measure the children's holidays. And a program can be built so that it is entertaining, light and in good taste and will appeal to both young folks and, adults. For, if there is any time that the spirit of the tired entertainment-seeker is rejuvenated and the heart made to feel young, it is during these Christmas holidays.

There is another element that is necessary for the perfectly balanced Christmas program—that is a slight element of the religioso. This spirit can be carried in the short subjects and the music. Thus, while we are entertained and amused, we are still made aware of a deep and grave consciousness, a signal recognition of the debt we owe creation and the responsibilities we owe the future. Such a touch of the religioso gives inspiration to the program and elevates its atmosphere.

In looking over the year’s performances, we feel we have put one year behind us in this respect—that we approach the future development of motion picture entertainment with more confidence and surety than we have ever had.

Cast Chosen for New Charles Ray Feature
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—Charles Ray is going forward with elaborate plans for the production of “Miles Standish.” Massive sets are under construction and a cast including Enid Bennett as Priscilla, Fred Warren as Standish and Stanton Hack as Captain Jones, has been chosen. Other players will be Sam De Grasse, Joseph Dowling, Thomas Holding, Tom Wilson and William Sullivan.

Violating Law Allowed To Lapse Brings Arrest

Last Spring a blue law campaign was inaugurated by the Mayor but was allowed to lapse. Apparently the measure is to be revived.

dential leadership. L. M. Rubens has been abroad early in the year and seriously ill a greater share of the time since his return. "L. M." is fast regaining his health, we learn, and you may expect to hear more of him in the future. During his absence Sam Abraham conducted the executive affairs of the organization and increased membership must be credited to his tireless efforts. In charge of the Chicago headquarters is William J. Sweeney—call him E.Bill—and recognize you—who is an 100 per cent mediator. Then there's John Silha. You never worry about a meal at an organization luncheon or banquet when John pulls his roll from his pocket.

President Sydney S. Cohen of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election. Many of the exhibitors whose activities are cited in this article have been mentioned by President Cohen as likely presidential timber. It is time now to comb the field for the best candidate for the Chicago convention is but a few months away.

In one respect exhibitor organization has broadened its activities recently in the national league. Just what success these movements will have in New York, Chicago and the South will be seen. They are something to watch with interest.

State organizations have been given first consideration in this article for without them the national league under the guidance of A. J. Moeller, is operating a music department, hoping in this manner to get a more adequate sense of music played in the theatre. Several days ago President Cohen, M. J. Toole and other national executives connected with the state officials relative to the music tax situation. The status of this situation is published in the news section of the Herald this week.

National exhibitor distribution is most recent of President Cohen's activities. Announcement of formation of a $5,000,000 company was made by W. A. True, one of Cohen's lieutenants, at a meeting in Chicago a week ago. While the organization is apart from the M.P.T.O.A., it is its executive committee members who have been prominent figures in both national and state exhibitor circles.

The success of exhibitor organization, essentially that of the state organizations, can be measured by the benefits derived by the majority of individual members. These members alone know the success of the organizations in which they are members. Many benefits are derived, perhaps, which cannot be detailed in any review of our organization. One reason for this has been its necessity to deal with personalities and with concrete instances of outstanding accomplishments. This year has shown that the state exhibitor organizations can endure farsighted leadership and a spirit of cooperation among members.

"Knighthood" Will End Long Run at New York Criterion December 30
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Cosmopolitan's "When Knighthood Was in Flower" will end a run of fifteen and one-half weeks at the Criterion December 30 when expiration of the lease on the theatre prevents further presentation. Having its run extended over Charles Major's story in which Marion Davies is starred will have played 245 performances in 103 days.

Originally scheduled to play only two performances a day it was found necessary to give three shows on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

A department of practical showmanship
Exhibitor Contributors Write Christmas Greetings of “The Theatre”

Exhibitor contributors to this department, writers of “Theatre Letters” with whom the industry at large is well acquainted through their many communications published in these pages, have written this comprehensive symposium on theatre conditions, exhibitor policies, business in general and the holiday season in particular as “The Theatre’s” portion of this Holiday Number of the “Herald.”

Throughout 1922 these men have contributed regularly and voluntarily to the fund of theatre and exploitation advice and history that it has been this department’s privilege to provide for “Herald” subscribers. For this issue they have written letters of exceptional merit, letters of seasonable interest, but also letters setting forth their beliefs and convictions, their aims and their methods of obtaining them.

The sub-department, “Theatre Letters,” spontaneously conceived, sustained and developed by exhibitor initiative, has been acclaimed a valuable extension of “Herald” service. We can best introduce the present symposium by repeating our frequently indited thanks to the earnest showmen who have seen fit to elect this forum for their meeting place.

“It Has Been Proven That All Exploitation Pays”

R. P. Whitfield, Majestic theatre, Austin, Tex., extols the merits of exploitation, his Christmas letter adding to and rounding out a memorable series of contributions.

As the closing of the old year draws near I feel a great desire to express my appreciation of the help and many good suggestions your department has given me. Since it has been proven that exploitation of all kinds pays, every live exhibitor in the country is working it from every angle and no doubt they receive very beneficial results.

It is fine to be original, we all want to demonstrate our ability to create ideas, but through your department it is possible for exhibitors, everywhere, to exchange ideas. I have not hesitated to use many ideas suggested in “The Theatre” and this material has been of great assistance in my work.

Let me congratulate you on the manner in which you have developed and carried on the work, and may the coming year bring you even greater success. To you and my Brother Exhibitors, I hope that all the joys of a Merry Christmas and all the happiness of a prosperous New Year will be yours and theirs.

“Christmas in Every Home” Best Slogan

Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, O., believes that the exhibitor’s Christmas calls for more than the running of a slide or trailer and gives reasons in his customary, concise style.

No holiday carries with it more consideration, a greater responsibility, than Christmas, and when specifically applied to the theatre owner it presents a demand that “hits” New York as well as Squeedunk. Christmas is universal. The greater part by far of the theatre-going public observe the Yuletide season in some form or other. To disregard them and their innermost feelings would be the height of ingratitude.

However, the exhibitor’s problem is not ended by running a Christmas slide or animated trailer. Nor should it end with a few holly decorations or a suitable stage setting. One of the finest slogans I can conceive is the one providing for “Christmas in every home.” Every theatre owner can materially contribute toward this movement.

As “example: Cooperate whole-heartedly with the Chamber of Commerce or Rotary Club (if you are fortunate enough to belong), the Elks or any other organization that starts out to provide for “Christmas in every home.” Run at least one and, if necessary, two shows absolutely free to poor children. Don’t simply say “Free Show for the Children” and let it go at that. Make admission to these shows a sort of an invitation affair, and let the tickets be distributed through the Salvation Army or Associated Charities.

Only in this manner can you hope to reach the element that seldom if ever has the price to attend your theatre. Provide for some small gift for all youngsters, candy, nuts, fruits; either stand the expense yourself or make arrangements with some philanthropic individual or organization to play the part of Santa Claus from your stage. In either case the cost is insignificant.

Above all, make sure that you do your share to make Christmas a Merry one where it will be most appreciated. And if you run a Christmas show or two for the kiddies, give them something appropriate and worth-while. Of the recent pictures I have seen or played I could name a dozen or more that would be ideal for the occasion.

And another thing: Every showman is agreed that Thanksgiving and Christmas Day are the best box office bets in the year. While discussing this matter with a certain exhibitor the other day our conversation drifted to bookings. This
"THE OLD HOMESTEAD," Paramount, a picture of the type that won back the public confidence spoken of in Ralph Talbot's letter, was advertised by the Central theatre, La Porte, Ind., with a display made up of carved images made by a resident of that city. The window is an indication of the finer things achieved in exploitation in 1922.

A man, who owns five or six theatres, said, "Why worry about Christmas? You're sure to get them, regardless of attraction, so I put on the cheapest picture I can get."

I SIMPLY mention this because undoubtedly some readers of Exhibitors Herald will agree with this man. However, my viewpoint, which is in striking contrast to the former, is: "Exercise extra care in your holiday selection. Make it a point to give your patrons something extra good. Figure not that you'll get them anyway, but take into consideration that you owe them a Christmas present. Let your entertainment be the gift."

FIGURE that some two or three people, young or old, may see their first picture show on Christmas Day. Don't disillusion them. A patron made thusly will grow in numbers. And after all, you know and I know that the day of junk is gone. And the day of inferior entertainment is limited. The exhibitor who willingly or through short-sightedness will present mediocre pictures on a day that he knows his theatre will be packed anyhow may as well start looking for a new occupation, because sooner or later he'll need it.

YOU'VE heard the expression, "A pessimist is a man who wears a belt and suspenders; an optimist wears neither." Better by far be a little pessimistic now and then, rather than be too optimistic. Business is good, even during the customary lull of Christmas shopping. In time of prosperity prepare for adversity. Look ahead.

"THE SIN FLOOD," Goldwyn, was published with some of the finest advertising accessories in theatre history. The lobby of the Rialto, Loveland, Colo., shows the manner in which this material was used by exhibitors everywhere. Illuminated set pieces, many of them showing pictures in motion, were also used by a great number of showmen profitably.

"I Have Proven Value of Running a Good Picture"

W. G. Sturdivant, Hoyburn theatre, Evanston, Ill., states that in 1922 he has proven the value of running a good picture the second time, giving examples of his success.

THE last reel of the feature, "Nineteen-Twenty-Two," is nearly run off and we are all prepared to show the new feature, released January 1, entitled, "Nineteen-Twenty-Three." With your kind permission, I will tell you a few of the things that I did in our house. The first thing I want to say is that I consider Exhibitors Herald one of the finest trade papers published and I look forward every week to its appearance.

I HAVE proven the value of running a good picture the second time. I ran several this year and made good on every one. Some exhibitors are averse to doing this, but I fail to see why.

AD several Special Weeks, as follows: "Paramount Encore Week," "Pickford-Fairbanks Week" and "National Rook Week." These all went over good. This Fall we started giving special Saturday morning shows for children. We give one a month and give souvenirs to the children. We have shown "Black Beauty," "Huckleberry Finn" and "Jack and the "MORE TO BE PITIED," C. B. C. attraction, is one of the independent productions exploited in manner not formerly associated with the state right field. The exchange handling the picture in the Philadelphia territory sent this float upon the street in the interests of exhibitors using the feature. Progress in this direction was rapid in 1922.

"THE ETERNAL FLAME," First National, one of the pictures that punctured the old superstition against period plays, was widely and well advertised by the "original gown" method. The above window, used by the Valentine, Toledo, is typical of scores of windows used for the attraction in like manner. The advancement in display technic is evident.
Beanstalk." The children enjoy these mornings shows very much and we always have a good attendance of adults.

SEND out personally written postcards to several hundred of our patrons when we have a specially good picture. As I have a large attendance of students from Northwestern, about twice a year I give them a complimentary show starting at 11 p.m. I also give football scores during the season by quarters Saturday afternoons and show the final scores of all games in the evening.

W ith best wishes to yourself and all Fellow Exhibitors for a good, old-fashioned Merrie Xmas and prosperous New Year, with lower film rentals, and in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us every one," I close.

"Trade Paper Storehouse for Ideas, Accomplishments"

E. R. Rogers, Tennessee Enterprises, Chattanooga, wrote a brilliant tribute to the trade press for this issue as one of his last acts as a member of that company, leaving to join the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The service rendered the industry by the trade papers is of such magnitude that the occasion offered by the Yuletide season to felicitate you is both a happy and propitious one. The trade paper is like a great mollusk in which nestles a pure pearl. It is the storehouse for the ideas and accomplishments of a host of thinkers and doers.

"SKIN DEEP," First National, aided theatres materially in forming lasting ties of common interest with community forces. Loew's Park, Cleveland, for instance, cooperated with the American Legion with results shown above. The Ince production was accorded similar treatment in all parts of the country and its beneficial effect will be a lasting force for good.

"THE PRODIGAL JUDGE." Vitagraph, stirred many showmen to realization of the profit that lies in advertising picture through hook. Note the big line in the display made by John Stille, Columbia theatre, Seattle, an excellent feature of an excellent lobby. Note, also, that the picture was represented as an improvement on the book, an important item.

It is a show window in which is displayed the wares of those who are carrying on victoriously so the less successful can muster courage and greater inspiration to fly into the face of adversity. It schools the novice; it is a stimulant to the timid; it is an incentive to genius and a safeguard to the investor.

It is an investigator, an educator and a historian. It can give a failing business new life and a successful venture new hopes. While we are lustily shouting Christmas greetings all along the line we should raise our voices in a pean of praise to the trade paper and its workers. They are doing much to make a great industry greater.

"Keep Industry Worthy of Public Confidence"

Ralph Talbot, Majestic theatre, Tulsa, Okla., sees reason for general thanksgiving that pictures have won public confidence and urges that the industry keep itself worthy of the trust.

The outstanding feature of the motion picture industry today for which exhibitors should feel most thankful at this holiday season, and also the closing days of the year, is the fact that the quality of photoplays released during the past six months show such a wonderful improvement over the releases of the past. What is more important, the public is patronizing productions adapted from the writings of our "HUMAN HEARTS," Universal, is one of the pictures that shared the benefits of the better sign writing which was developed in the past year. The illustration shows the front of the Astor theatre, St. Paul, and the big line tells its own story. Exhibitors used electric letter signs more profitably in 1922 than at any previous theatre period.

The forming of an association among the producers for the improvement of motion picture productions and the retaining of Will Hays as the head of this association was, in my opinion, the result of this wave of criticism, and I believe that Mr. Hays has had a great deal to do with the restoring of the public's confidence in motion pictures.

The recent defeat of the censorship bill in Massachusetts by an overwhelming majority proves that the public's confidence in motion pictures has been restored. Let us all give thanks and bend our individual efforts to keep our industry worthy of that confidence.

"Too Many Have Forgotten the Meaning of Christmas"

Frank L. Browne, Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal., whose showmanship revealed in innumerable "Theatre Letters" reflects his depth of thought, writes about the theatre by writing about humanity.

Christmas is with us once more and we are all a little older, if not a little wiser. Yes, Christmas is with us once again, and the question is "What of it?" In years gone by the very word, Christmas, was awe-inspiring and betokened "Peace on earth. Good will to men."

Too many of us see in Christmas simply a time when our foremost thought is, "I wonder what the boss is going to give me," or "I wonder if the present I'm going to get from her is as good as the one she will receive from me," and so on as the case may be. Wrong. All wrong. Too many have forgotten the real meaning of the word, Christmas.

When he came upon this earth twenty centuries ago it was for a reason, and among the many things He preached was "Peace on earth. Good will to men." In the hurry and bustle of modern times His teachings have been all but forgotten. The spirit of the times seems to be, "Let's get it while the getting's good," or "Make him come across; we've got him where we want him." Again I say wrong, all wrong.

How much better it would be if we stopped wondering as to what we are to receive and tried a little of the spirit of "What can I give or what can I do to help make things a little brighter for the other fellow?" During the war the cry was, "Give. Give. Give!" and we gave, some gladly, others begrudgingly, but we gave nevertheless.

Would that that cry could have carried on. "How much nobler to give than to receive" is a phrase preached often but practiced very little, and no one can give the real reason for it.

According to the calendar Christmas comes on the 25th of December. Then everyone seems to remember all of a sudden that it is time to send a card with good wishes printed thereon or some sort of a message of good will. All very well, but let me ask this one question: "Why cannot the spirit of Christmas Day prevail throughout the year? Why cannot the first of May or August 10th, or any other day be a day for one another to be kind and charitable and practice "Peace on earth. Good will to men?"

We are all human and naturally are liable to make mistakes. In fact the people who make mistakes lead the world. There is no way to be always right. The only one who never made a mistake never made anything but failure, the worst mistake of all. Therefore let us not condemn because one makes a mistake. Let us be charitable.

When Christmas comes, try and remember that the greatest gift you can give is kindness of word and charity of thought, and each morning upon arising say a prayer and in beseeching Him for His kindness and charity toward you ask...
First National, mentioned under another illustration for its exploitation fitness, was also admirably presented by various American theatres. The above prologue was used by the New Garrick, Duluth, Minn. Thomas H. Ince’s message to the public, delivered at the close of the picture, made whole-souled exploitation and presentation of the film unusually effective.

Him to help you to do the same unto others. Can you think of anything in this world that is greater or more noble than trying to follow in His footsteps?

A LITTLE poem by B. C. Forbes seems to cover the entire situation quite satisfactorily.

A little more kindness and a little less creed,
A little more giving and a little less greed,
A little more smile and a little less frown,
A little less kicking a man when he’s down,
A little more “we” and a little less “I”,
A little more laugh and a little less cry,
A little more flowers on the pathway of life,
And fewer on graves at the end of the strife.

This is the real spirit of Christmas or any other time.

Edward L. Hyman, Mark-Strand theatre, Brooklyn, looks to the Christmas period as a golden opportunity to upbuild theatre prestige and details the manner in which he accomplishes that end.

One of the most deep-rooted institutional customs of first run motion picture houses is the appropriate celebration of important holiday events. Great thought, time and money is often projected by exhibitors into their holiday presentations, and their way of selling, too, is at variance with methods used ordinarily. Perhaps the best holiday of the year, for the exhibitors, is Christmas.

It arrives when the theatrical season is at its height, and the public attitude ripe for exhibitorial recognition. Thus a more spontaneous and altogether enthusiastic program building and exploitation planning accompanies the thought that all effort leaning toward and in celebration of the Yuletide will be seen and perhaps appreciated by the largest audiences of the year.

Advertising on this occasion does not shout. It merely whispers holiday greetings and suggests an hour or two of restful enjoyment. Lobby displays are thoroughly cleansed of obtrusive and commercial blurs. They must all be sub-

First National, brought out one of the finest examples of the efficiency which characterized the year. The Liberty, Portland, Ore., combined stock accessories and original matter to produce the lobby dressing shown in the illustration. There was less waste and better results in lobby manufacture than in any previous like period.
"ONE CLEAR CALL." First National, was the subject of some of the most sensational exploitation of the season. Among the best of this was the front of the Princess, Seattle, where riders on the marquee appeared against a black background, the pistol in the hand of one flashing as if in explosion at intervals. The ingenuity involved is always a productive element.

deed, quiet and beautiful, yet forcibly suggestive of the Yule tide spirit.

PRESTIGE built during Christmas week is an achievement because the events and incidents filling this week are usually carried throughout the year in vivid reminiscence and salubrious conversation. But to achieve this restive prestige during Christmas week an exhibitor must outdo all his former efforts.

THE continuance of every day methods is unavailing, because everywhere the public is emulating itself to impress and please. Shop owners, and possibly even your competitors, are ingratiating themselves to an extraordinary extent to win a place of distinction in the Prestige Room of the Hall of Public Approval where room accommodations at Christmas time are fiercely contested for.

TO build this prestige I first construct a solid foundation by presenting one of the most diversified, enjoyable and impressive programs of the year. Special care being taken that enough entertainment is provided for the children, attention is then given to converting this entertainment so that it will also appeal to the grownups. A Russian ballet has been engaged for this Christmas which will delight the children and their parents with its colorful and eccentric dancing. I con vey by means of a film trailer which, with novel photographic effects, I combine with thanks for past applause of our efforts, insights into forthcoming attractions.

SERVICE of house attaches is generally an accepted and unquestioned part of the theatre. During other weeks service is omnipresent at the Brooklyn Mark-Strand without being on apparent display. It works silently and efficiently. But during Christmas week every effort is bent toward making the patrons cognizant of all that is being done for them. Lady shoppers entering the theatre with arms sagging beneath dozens of Christmas packages are taken into the custody of officious porters who relieve them of their bundles, check them gratis and then say "Thank you." Everybody is immensely pleased with this courtesy, but not less when a porter volunteers a cent to a patron who lacks it when desiring a cup of water.

AND during Christmas week a surprising number of bundles, lost in the theatre, are returned to their rightful owners through the efficient system which I have evolved. In this case with the minimum of difficulty the maximum return of patron satisfaction is guaranteed the exhibitor. Every employee of the theatre is an active member of the lost and found department during Christmas week.

"LUCKY CARSON," Vitagraph, was not specifically announced as a race picture. The management of the Garden, Seattle, learning of its content matter, proceeded to capitalize it to the full in the front reproduced above. Exhibitors examined pictures minutely for advertising material and used that material with pronounced results when business conditions demanded.

"PENROD," First National, came to exhibitors supplied with the better class of advertising material which was developed by practically every company during 1922. Its accessories enabled the Empress theatre, Owensboro, Ky., to produce this striking lobby effect. Paper lessons learned by producers, distributors and exhibitors in the period will be remembered.
"EAST IS WEST," First National, contains much highly colored scenic matter, including the picturesque boat scene which is practically reproduced above in the display of the Empress, Oklahoma City. While the piece is really a flat cutout, its installation is such as to give the effect of perspective. Cut out art was developed greatly with naturally satisfactory results.

"EXPLOITATION for the Yuletide necessarily depends upon the feature productions. Where the feature advises exploitation the presence of the Yuletide does not daunt me. It does, however, change the general method of execution. Never to let the public lose sight of Christmas, as a sort of promise of something unusual in the way of entertainment, I always tie the feature up in some way with the advent of Christmas. Thus the public festive idea jumps to the foreground and the commercialistic idea of theatrical entertainment is eclipsed.

But at no turn in the campaign do I permit it to approach an every day method. Its conception and execution must be wholly different. Even dignity, so much respected and demanded during the remainder of the year, is lost, but not irretrievably, upon the altar of good, sensible and effective ballyhoo. One point to be most carefully observed by exhibitors is the cautious concealment of all attempts at the capitalization of Christmas week. All must apparently be spontaneous, freedom of joy mixed with regard for profit.

"THE MASQUERADE," First National, gave exhibitors a new star to advertise and, in the picture itself, the means of advertising him well. The display of the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, Pa., is an example of high grade introductory exploitation. Note the use of cutouts at sides showing star in the two roles that he portrayed in the production.

Christmas Campaign
Made Gala Event

William Freise, La Crosse Theatres Company, La Crosse, Wis., enjoyed the cooperation of local business organizations in his preparation for the holiday season.

Here is one of the stunts we pulled off December 1. The Merchants Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce here designated December 1 as the opening of the Christmas shop-

"GAS, OIL, WATER," First National, striking at the general interest in automobiles, was advertised in extremely novel manner by many showmen. The filling station erected in the lobby of the Rialto theatre, Boone, la., is especially interesting, reflecting much credit upon its producer. The reproduction gives details of construction plainly.

Willing to Try Christmas Program Once More

E. D. Keilmann, Grand theatre, Topeka, has not had the merriest of Christmases in the box office sense in the past, but is willing to try again, which is certainly the Christmas spirit.

I've been here at the Grand now through two holiday seasons and have tried two kinds of holiday bait and both times failed to get results. I don't believe there's any Christmas or Thanksgiving for a theatre man. Perhaps I'm wrong and perhaps I've not tried the right sort of bait yet, but I'm willing to try again.

Last Christmas, for instance, the Grand showed "The Ten Dollar Raise." It was a human interest picture and had in it all the stuff that one usually calls "good Christmas stuff." But the business did not pay for the film. This year I'm not going to try a week run. There will be a program of two three-day pictures and both of them will be the lightest comedy possible to obtain. If holiday crowds want to be amused they will be amused. If, however, shows do not fill the holiday need for amusement, why then I'm at an end.

"May Have to Dig But You Know How 'Tis'"

Larry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich., is like Mr. Keilmann in that he does not expect exceptionally big returns for Christmas, but he takes it in the Christmas spirit also.

As with the coming of the regular season things get just about so and stay so, in spite of all a fellow can do to better them, it occurred to me that a word or two in general might help. That "Eternal Flame" candle stunt is one of the best general stunts that I have ever seen, both for the theatre and the store as well. We worked it with a drug store and I know his business didn't suffer a bit. What could be better for the holiday season than this, with practically everybody on the streets right where they can see it?

I intend to put on a Christmas party for the little kids that are not so lucky. I will work with one of the organizations here in town, run a free matinee and give them a sack of fruit, candy and nuts. I figure I can get enough donations to do this and about all it will set us back will be our time and possibly we may have to pay a little on the refreshment hill. "You know how 'tis."

Will Try Christmas Party Matinee Again

W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark., was forced to omit his customary Christmas party matinee last year but, imbued with the Christmas spirit, will revive it this season.

All exhibitors look forward to the holiday season, which I guess is one of the big weeks of the year. I always give them the very best I can buy during this week and some few years back I used to give them a free show on matinee, but business has been so punk of late years that I could not afford it. This Christmas I will pull this again. I use an entirely different program at night. I find that it brings a good attendance in the evening.

A Merry Christmas to All Exhibitor Contributors

As it is the custom to reply in these pages to letters received, and as demands of the season and the interests of continuity render individual reply in this issue impracticable, and just because we mean it, the following ill-fitting but sincere paragraph is written.

To each of you whose letters are presented above, and to all of you whose earnest cooperation has sustained and developed this department in 1922, to optimist and pessimist, to readers as to writers and reader-writers, "The Theatre" sincerely addresses "Merry Christmas."—W. R. W.
Exhibitors and Public Accord Newspicture Recognition During Big Year

Exhibitor and public alike accord the newspicture recognition in 1922. "Exhibitors Herald," cognizant of newspicture possibilities and aware of general failure to capitalize opportunity at hand, led in bringing about this recognition by establishing this department and directing trade thought to the subject. Results have been gratifying to every branch of the business.

The new treatment which is fundamentally responsible for the great forward movement in the newspicture field emulated from the exhibitor, in need of instruments for the stimulation of business in a period of low patronage, he seized upon the suggested newspicture readily and proceeded in his characteristically direct manner to the evolution of a newspicture policy which would yield cash returns.

The suggestions and the theatre advertising copy prepared by this department and given to subscribers gratis were tested, found practicable and adopted. The newspicture began to make money.

Producers of newpictures responded at once to this encouragement and, in every instance, supplied better product and better service. Some of the most notable "beats," to use the vernacular, in newspicture history were scored during the year. Cameramen caught the spirit of the movement and went to unprecedented lengths to obtain exceptional material. No risk was considered too great if its taking promised a few feet of live pictures.

Fox News added notably to its staff, inaugurating a foreign field organization of great importance.

Kinograms incorporated Julian Ollendorf's cartoons as an added interest feature during the summer.

Pathé News developed an efficient method of providing matter of exceptional interest for given territories without extra cost.

Selznick News gave exhibitors a great asset in its "Women's Supplement," later adding Will Rogers' Remarks on News of the Day as a reader feature.

International News' greatest accomplishment, probably, was the production of "The Mirror," a special news service of which four editions have been published, scenes from the last of these being reproduced to illustrate this page.

In its preparation of "The Mirror" International News has given one of the most effective demonstrations of newspicture possibilities in newsfilm history. Supplying a splendid program feature, eminently worthy of exploitation and accorded that honor by the majority of exhibitors, this company has at the same time shown graphically what can be done with the news camera.

The process is simple, amounting merely to an assembling of library negative and subjecting it to competent editorial treatment. The result places before the public, in the case of the fourth edition of "The Mirror," for example, highlights of yesterday's news alongside today's.

In this case King Edward VII of England is seen in the full vigor of his reign. In another instant his son, the present King George is shown in his youth. Another moment and the auditor sees the coronation of the boy after his father's death. And at once he is seen with Queen Mary at the coronation of the present Prince of Wales at Carnarvon castle, where the first and subsequent sovereigns of Wales have been crowned.

King Edward died May 6, 1910. By grace of the newpictures the modern citizen may see him in the full vigor of his supremacy, in a few brief minutes witnessing the history of the British royal family from that time until today.

Striking as is this accomplishment of the reportorial camera, it but hints at the achievements to come.

That next year will witness additional progress, yielding greater benefits to the theatre and to the public, is in view of the record made a foregone conclusion. The newspicture has won recognition on its own.
DIGEST of PICTURES of the WEEK

Yes, sir, the outlook is bright for bigger and better business, with bigger and better pictures.—J. R. M.

"PEG O' MY HEART" (Metro) with Laurette Taylor has at last reached the screen. The performance of Miss Taylor is its outstanding feature and it makes an ideal vehicle for this popular stage star's screen debut. It has been carefully staged and should prove a distinct drawing card wherever good comedy-drama is appreciated.

"BROKEN CHAINS" (Goldwyn) presented with an all-star cast, including Claire Windsor, Colleen Moore, Malcolm McGregor and Ernest Torrence, is a dramatic and thoroughly convincing story of a wealthy city chap who finds himself and wins against a cowardly nature in the mountains of Kentucky. It was a prize-winning story in a contest conducted by a Chicago newspaper and very ably directed by Allen Holubar.

"CAPTAIN FLY-BY-NIGHT" (Film Booking Offices) presents Johnnie Walker in his first starring vehicle for this company. It is a colorful tale of Lower California in the days of Spanish domination, and was written by the author of "The Mark of Zorro," Mr. Johnston McCulley. Book it. It will please old and young.

"CATCH MY SMOKE" (Fox) is a rollicking, swift-moving story of the West, such as Tom Mix and his horse Tony specialize in. We advise you to flag the first Fox salesman you see and sign up for this one. It was directed by William Beaudine and is in five reels.

"ONLY A SHOP GIRL" (C. B. C. Sales) presents Estelle Taylor, James Morrison, Wallace Beery, Mae Busch, and Tully Marshall in an adaptation of the old-time thriller. It is a seven-reel production directed by Edward LeSaint and has been excellently done. It should prove one of the most attractive offerings of this sort.

"A CALIFORNIA ROMANCE" (Fox) with John Gilbert in the leading role. We can't say so much for this one. It is trite in story and development and lacks punch. The story concerns a beautiful girl in love with a youth who refuses to fight when fighting is very necessary. A sham battle which reminds one of a comedy battle figures in the proceedings.

"A BLIND BARGAIN" (Goldwyn) is a tragic story with a wealth of good acting. Lon Chaney in a dual role does some of the best work of his screen career. It should attract unusual attention because of its difference from the ordinary run of pictures. Directed by Wallace Worsley.

Three interesting scenes from "The Hottentot," a Thomas H. Ince production with Douglas MacLean, which First National is distributing.

"BROKEN CHAINS" is an exceptionally well made melodrama with enough exciting thrills to make it intensely holding at all times. The production deals with the regeneration of a coward through love and was made from the scenario which won the Chicago Daily News prize of $10,000 in a contest which excited no small amount of interest, more than 30,000 stories having been submitted.

The story was directed by Allen Holubar, and while as a picture it is not the best from the popular director, it is sufficiently good to cause it to stand out above the ordinary melodramatic offering.

The photography is no small part of the excellence of "Broken Chains," many of the camera shots being of exquisite beauty.

One of the big scenes is a fight which is prolonged to such an extent that it is probably the longest fight yet recorded on the screen, but so carefully and deftly is it directed, that in spite of its length, it is at no time tiresome.

The story is built around the adventures of Peter Wyndham, played by Malcolm McGregor, who is spoiled by luxury to such an extent that he has developed into a Mollycoddle. The girl he is expected by his parents to marry becomes disgusted with him when he stands passively by while a burglar attacks and shoots the butler. Scorned by the girl Wyndham goes west. There he meets Mercy Boone, a gentle lovable girl, married to a brute who keeps her in prison in chains. He releases the girl and plans for her freedom but the brutal husband discovers the plan and Wyndham is given a terrible beating.

A sheriff's posse is after a band of bank robbers of which Boone is a member, and Wyndham wrecks the drawbridge to prevent Boone's escape, but is himself left with the girl at the mercy of the mountain men. With the girl and his own self-respect at stake Wyndham recovers from his cowardice, and battles with Boone while the girl looks on. Boone is finally beaten, and through a door and meets death in the river.

The fade-out shows Wyndham and the girl in each other's arms, supposedly happily ever after.

ALL-STAR CAST IN ONLY A SHOP GIRL
(C. B. C. SALES CORP.)

This is a picture that should give satisfaction on any program. While just one more of the many tear transformations of cheap melodramatic thrillers into pictures, it is better done than most, has an exceptionally good cast, and a holding story. Seven reels.

Resurrection of popular old-time melodramas and making them into pictures has been the vogue with many producers of recent months, and the list would not be complete without Charles E. Blaney's great stage success, "Only a Shop Girl."

This has been made into a seven-reel production by Edward J. LeSaint for C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, and so excellently has it been done that it is likely to prove one of the most attractive offerings of this sort.

A cast of unusual merit was selected, containing several names of stellar worth, among these being Estelle Taylor as Mame Mulvey, Mae Busch as Josie Jerome, Wallace Beery as Jim Brennan, Tully Marshall as the manager of the department store, William Scott as the shop girl's brother, and James Morrison as Charles Black, the young attorney sweetheart of the shop girl.

The well-known story is built around the troubles of a shop girl—or more properly speaking two shop girls—employed in a big city department store. The unscrupulous proprietor is attracted by the beauty of one of the girls and takes her into his office as private secretary. Then follows the usual story of the girl carried away by the attractions of fine clothes and glittering cafes, ending in the death of the store proprietor, several arrests for his murder, a big fire scene with thrilling rescues, and love and virtue triumphant in the end.

The fire scene is put on with more than usual effectiveness and supplies thrills that are really thrilling. On the whole the picture is away above the ordinary run of thrillers and should prove an attractive box office picture.

JOHNNIE WALKER IN CAPTAIN FLY-BY-NIGHT
(FILM BOOKING OFFICES)

A well planned, actionful romance of Lower California during the days of the Spanish domination, Adapted from the story by Johnston McCulley, who wrote "The Mark of Zorro," and directed by William K. Howard. Five stirring reels.

This is Johnnie Walker's first big starring vehicle under the F. B. O. banner, as we'll see later on his pictures have done well by this promising young star. It has action plus. It is full of surprises and a wealth of beautiful scenery. And when you add that the beautiful Shannon Day plays the role of a bewitching senorita; Eddie Gribbon, a Spanish officer, Casara; Francis McDonald, a mysterious stranger; Bert Wheeler, a Spanish Governor-general; Fred Kelsey, another soldier; Victor Bateman, a government; James M'Eldera, a Padre, and Charles Stevens, a very good Indian, you've just about said a mouthful. There are many troops of soldiers, bands of Mexicans, hurrying and scurrying citizens and fringes of half-breed Indians as well. It is a colorful, well produced bit of Spanish fiction beautifully photographed and interest-holding from beginning to end. And in the words of the circus ad, writer, don't overlook the fight in the lofty bell tower, the remarkable shot of the——villain's fall, nor the wonderful displays of swordsmanship. The story was adapted by Eve Unsell. Lucien Andriot was at the camera.

The story occurs in 1884, in Lower California, and has to do with the mistaken identity of a dashing young patriot of old Spain and another Spaniard who impersonates him to the love and hand of a rich and beautiful girl and upon being balked, starts a revolution. Captain Fly-by-Night, a mysterious character, warns the townspeople of the proposed attack, the troops are called out and the revolutionists defeated, as Senor Rocha forces his adversary over the edge of the mission wall to his death at the point of his sword. Anita, the beautiful senorita, learns that Capt. Fly-by-Night is other than the intelligent fiancée, and there is a happy ending.

Max Graf Starts Work on His Next Three Pictures

Max Graf, whose first production, "The Forgotten Law," a current Metro picture, has taken up headquarters at Metro studios, and is preparing for the production of his next three pictures which will be made at San Mateo studios, San Mateo, Calif.

"The Fog," a story by William Pelley, will be the first. H. H. Van Loan is preparing the screen adaptation. Following this is "Beans," an original story by Mr. Graf and Mr. Van Loan. The third production will be "The Gamble in Souls," another story on which Mr. Graf and Mr. Van Loan collaborated.
LAURETTE TAYLOR IN PEG O' MY HEART
(METRO)

The long-awaited "Peg O' My Heart" has finally reached the screen a picture of exceptional merit. The performance of Laurette Taylor is its outstanding feature and it is a performance of such adroit effectiveness that it entitles the play to be classed high among the most delightful and thoroughly entertaining productions of the year. Story by J. Hartley Manners. Directed by King Vidor. Eight reels.

The picturization of J. Hartley Manners' greatly successful stage play of "Peg O' My Heart" with Laurette Taylor represents an unusually interesting experiment. It had the aspect of experiment about it because of the question of what it would gain or what it would lose in its cinematic translation. As a stage play it was an extraordinarily successful vehicle for one of America's most successful players. It had about it an infectious charm that endeared it to a great segment of the public. In it Miss Taylor was a delightful embodiment, audibly and optically, or a fascinating little character that lingered long in the memories of a vast throng of theatre-goes.

The picture affords Miss Taylor's initial screen appearance and the exactions of her new effort have been discharged in a manner that should elicit cheers from the most critical. It is so marked throughout with significant flashes of Miss Taylor's genuine artistry that it causes one to feel that had the screen and not the stage been the scene of her activities during recent years her's would have been a name at the very top of the list of worldwide celebrities of motion pictures.

Laurette Taylor as "Peg" in an amusing bit from "Peg o' My Heart" (Metro)

The picture, perhaps through a somewhat unfeeling direction at times, may have lost some of the sympathetic appeal of the play that preceded it but, on the other hand, it has gained much in picturesqueness and in action. It is adequately staged yet not pretentiously so is a fortunate result because in the latter case the role of "Peg," as played by Miss Taylor, might have been subordinated in a measure to the production itself—which would have been restricting the factor that makes the production a picture of exceptional merit.

The story of "Peg" is the tale of an attempted refinement of an irrepressible Irish girl and it affords adequate material for a picture of a somewhat familiar type. Without Miss Taylor it doubtless would have been a picture of satisfying quality but carried from beginning to end by the finished art and excellent screen presence of Miss Taylor, as it is, becomes a decidedly distinguished comedy-drama. It appears as an ideal screen play for Miss Taylor and, she, an ideal player for it.

An excellent cast affords very competent assistance for the star. Among the prominent players appearing are Mahlon Hamilton, Vera Lewis, Lionel Belmore, Russell Simpson, Nigel Barrie and Ethel Grey Terry.

"Peg O' My Heart," upon the screen, has about it a generous share of those things which make for universal popularity in pictures. And with the name and charming performance of Laurette Taylor added to it it becomes a high-calibre attraction.

THE EDUCATOR (EDUCATIONAL)

This Lloyd Hamilton comedy is a knock-out. It is chockful of good gags and the action is kept moving at a swift pace all the way through. It depicts the troubles of a school teacher in a tough town of gun toting pupils. Several charming children figure in the comedy and altogether it should prove agreeable entertainment on any program.

Stern Brothers Get Right To Buster Brown Cartoons

Julius and Abe Stern have purchased from Richard F. Outcault the screen right to use his famous Buster Brown cartoons as the basis for a series of Century Comedies. The Outcault cartoons were first published in The New York Herald, and then syndicated to the world. On the screen the part of Tige, the dog, will be taken by Brownie, the century dog.

What "The Jest" and "The Monster" were to the screen so "The Blind Bargain" is to the films. It is an epic as "Broken Blossoms" or "Trifling." It is a film yet with no similarity to either. It might be said the outcome of it is not a picture for children. Adults will like it, especially if they be the devotees of Edgar Allan Poe and Eugene Sue.

This production is made notable by the marvelous acting of Lon Chaney as Dr. Tige and The Hunchback. Indeed it would be difficult to imagine any other actor, either of the stage or screen, who could handle these two contrasting characterizations with one-half the dramatic finesse that is Chaney's. This performance will live in dramatic history along with John Barrymore's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and "The Proud Prince." Not since "The Miracle Man" has Mr. Chaney done anything so fine. His admirers will be thrilled by his artistic work.

Dr. Lamb one night is assaulted by a desperate youth. He overpowers the boy, takes him home and bargains with him to save the life of his invalid mother if the young man will allow him to perform an operation upon him. The young man, not knowing the exact nature of the experiment, agrees. In the doctor's house lives an ape-like creature which has been transformed into his present state through a similar experiment and this repulsive, pathetic creature, and the doctor's wife, do all in their power to dissuade the youth from submitting. When the boy realizes that the doctor is in reality a madman, a fight ensues—a gruesome, fierce battle, between the doctor and one of his patients, the doctor's jail-like ward for violent cases. The doctor is slain. The boy's mother and the boy, takes himself and the doctor's wife to the films.

While the acting honors belong to Mr. Chaney, the other players give an excellent account of themselves, especially Raymond Mackee as the boy, Fontaine La Rue as the mother and Jacqueline Logan as the boy's fiancée. "The Blind Bargain" deserves to attract considerable attention, and should prove a highly artistic feature on any program.

A BLIND BARGAIN
(GOLDWYN)

SPECIAL CAST IN

This tragic story by Barry Pain has a wealth of good acting by Lon Chaney in a dual role. One of the most compelling stories in recent years, it should attract unusual attention because of its difference from the ordinary run of film tales. Directed by Wallace Worsley. Length, five reels.

TOM MIX IX

CATCH MY SMOKE
(FOX)

Once again Mix shares honors with Tony, in a rollicking, swift-moving Western comedy-drama that will tickle the kids and not disappoint the older ones. The story is a familiar one but the stunts are new and Mix never lets the action lag. Directed by William Beaudine. Five reels.

If you have a large Tom Mix following, hop out and get this one. The fox folks know how popular Tom Mix’s horse Tony is, since he was starred in “Just Tony” and in “Catch My Smoke,” you get Tom Mix with Tony thrown in, or vice versa, whichever way your tastes run. However, they both supply plenty of action, and there is a beautiful heroine. Lillian Rich and the usual quota of bad men, crooked ranch foremen, etc., to whet your interest. The whole has been beautifully photographed and unusual ranch sets, that look like the real thing. You can safely recommend it to your steady customers and the Mix fans will eat it up.

Mix has the role of a returned soldier, whose ranch has been stolen, while he laid in a French hospital undergoing repairs from a German 72 shell. He finds his ranch occupied by a beautiful girl and while investigating matters, secures works there. There is a lot of crookedness going on, and an attempt by the foreman to secure the property for his own Mix discovers is due to the foreman’s discovery of oil on the place. An attempt is made to kidnap the girl, which Mix frustrates, and in an exciting finish he rides with her to a nearby railroad and his trusty pony jumps onto a passing freight train. The foreman and his gang follow, however, and it is necessary to whip them one by one and throw them from the moving train before peace is declared.

THE AVENGER
(IRVING CUMMINGS)

This little story of the Northwest is as well made and interesting as many fine reel features. Lilian West has the principal feminine role and throughout direction, photography and action are of a high standard. If you are in the market for a thrilling and dramatic short subject, book it.

JOHN GILBERT IX

A CALIFORNIA ROMANCE
(FOX)

Another mediocre play for this popular star. Trite plot and an attempt at humor in the titles make it an odd mixture of serious and light drama with little punch. Directed by Jerome Storm from a story by Charles Banks. Five reels.

This last John Gilbert production must be a disappointment to that ambitious actor. It offers him slight chance to show his mettle as a romantic actor, and we know from a recent interview with him he aspires to do bigger things. It was directed by Jerome Storm who has to his credit many of Charles Ray’s successes, so it is difficult to understand even with a poor story, why a more interesting screen play was not developed. Perhaps those who cut and edited it later are responsible. At any rate it is not up to the Fox standard in entertainment value. The plot is slight and lacks originality and aside from a whirlwind finish, it has no suspense and little action. Advertise it as a story of old California in the days of Mexican rule, with a beautiful girl in love with a mollycoddle who refuses to fight the invasion of Mexicans. Estelle Taylor is the heroine, and George Seegmuller the villain of the piece. Both give adequate support. It has a liberal sprinkling of so-called comedy titles.

Arrow Film Swells List
Of Mystery Productions

Arrow’s first contribution to the current quota of mystery plays will be “A Woman’s Faith,” which is now ready for screen inspection, having been completely re-titled and re-edited by J. S. Harrington and Richard Weil of the Arrow organization. “A Woman’s Faith” is said to be a combination mystery and society drama, with its scenes laid in India and in London. It centers about the discovery, by a noted physician, of an almost miraculous serum which is capable of effecting incredible cures. A crafty group of plotters seek to belittle the physician and strive to enmesh him in a tangle of crime from which he is fortunately enabled to escape unscathed.

Beautiful and Damned” Opens Eastern Premiere Run at New York Strand

Warner Brothers production of F. Scott Fitzgerald’s novel “The Beautiful and Damned,” is having its eastern premiere at the Strand theatre, New York, where it opened on December 17.

The premiere in the East follows a preview of the production recently at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, at which was presented a member of the cast, director, authors and city officials. The cast, in addition to Miss Prevost, includes Kenneth Harlan, Harry Meyers, Louise Fazenda, Tully Marshall, Cleo Ridgely, Emmett King, Walter Long, Clarence Burton, Parker McConnell, Charles Me-Hugh, Russell Keasby, and George Kuwa. William A. Seiter directed it, and Oga Printzau made the adaptation.

For the Strand presentation in New York, the Warner publicity department is aiding the management in putting over the production. One of the special publicity stunts was the placing of 20,000 free noses of the romantic heroine specially devised for the picture in the Sunday issue of the New York Call.

Nelian’s New Production
Is Praised by Reviewers

Marshall Nelian has again hit the bulls-eye of fine entertainment, according to those who have had a preview of his latest First National picture, “Minnie.” which Leatrice Joy and Matt Moore are featuring.

“Nelian has surprised us again with ‘Minnie.’ Real heart appeal and novel situations,” declares one reviewer. Another writes: “Nelian has dissolved his ego and is selling himself once more. Exceptional entertainment. Should satisfy all classes of patrons. ‘Minnie’ has thatString of story that brings out the Nelian best all the way through.” is part of the laudable comment of the National Board of Review.

Norca Pictures Issuing
Hopp Hadley Production

Hopp Hadley has arranged for the distribution of Oscar Lund’s latest production, “Love’s Old Sweet Song,” inspired by Molloy’s known song, and featuring Donald Gallagher and Louis Wolheim, through Norca Pictures, Inc. Prints have been signed and all advertising matter and exploitation accessories are being prepared for the immediate delivery to the exchanges handling the area production of the new Lund Producing Company special which is scheduled for publication in January.

Wins Popularity Contest

Billie Dove received the greatest number of votes in a popularity contest held by George J. Wehner, a New York exhibitor, who has under his control ten theatres. Miss Dove had been presented to the patrons of these theatres in her first Metro picture, “Youth to Youth,” in which she was seen at the head of a distinguished cast.

How
"The Dangerous Age"
Swept Paterson

Here—for the First Time in a Trade Paper—Is Given the A. B. C. of a Local Campaign

By ROGER FERRI

FIRST NATIONAL has communicated to every exhibitor in this country the information that its 1922-23 lineup of productions are the box office variety. And it intends substantiating and proving that statement beyond any shadow of doubt by telling the whole universe that it has entertaining features. And neither time, money nor effort is being stinted in the hard-boiled universe, but it is also intending to bring everybody in it to the box office.

Which leads this writer to the task of completing the most pleasant assignment we have had in a long, long time, namely, that of trawling the Paterson, N. J., exploitation campaign of "The Dangerous Age."

Lining up the best possible products and telling exhibitors about it was only thirty-three and one-third per cent. of First National's program. The second third of the campaign was the alliance with Louis Mayer, who assigned Harry Reichenbach to spare nothing in giving theatre owners every co-operation possible. The remaining third constituted the successful consummation of the superlatively original exploitation of this money-making showman and tying it up in such a fashion that sight of the exploited product would escape neither man, woman nor child and incidentally prove its mettle in good old dollars and cents at the telltale box office.

Unannounced he and his Assistant, Perry Charles, invaded this home of the silk industry and overnight securely took possession of it—City Hall, Mayor, citizens and newspapers.

There was not a single man, woman or child who did not know that Monday, Nov. 21, marked the world premier showing of Louis Mayer's latest John M. Stahl production, "The Dangerous Age," starring Lewis Stone. Every police officer in Paterson and in every city or town within a radius of 20 miles, for that matter, wondered what "The Dangerous Age" was. And they came on Monday, Nov. 21—a date Paterson will not easily forget—and saw and laughed and sighed and cried and then emerged from Fabian Brothers' Garden Theatre satisfied that they had received their money's worth, pleased because things had not been misrepresented, entertained because it was a wonderfully entertaining picture they saw, enthused because pictures had been "sold" to them in a new, up-to-date, dignified, intelligent style, rejoicing because they had solved a mystery that for fully ten days had been the popular topic of conversation on the streets, in the stores, in the offices, restaurants, cars, hotels and home, and smiling because they had lost no time seeing the thing that they so strongly wanted to see, for advance reports were so alluring, so captivatingly human, for the bid for patronage had been made so teasingly that keeping away from the playhouse was impossible.

It seemed as though a magnet attracted the whole of Paterson. Instead of the quiet, unassuming, conservative municipality it had been, Paterson, out of a clear sky and all of a sudden, arose, as if in unison, and bombarded the strongly guarded doors of the Garden, pressing to get in. But not even that manly Police Department of Paterson was powerful enough to conquer the populace that had been so rously awakened by an exploitation campaign that reached everywhere—in the offices and schools, in the shops and homes, in the churches, and, in fact, every place.

Paterson—and for this we have the word of Mayor Van Noort, who was born in that city and has lived there all his life—never greeted anybody or anything so royally as it awaited, impatiently, the advent of "The Dangerous Age."

The response to the exploitation was so great that even the smiling pilot of the house, Cameron Dooley, had to admit it was "the greatest sight I have ever seen." It was so great that the overflow from the Garden Theatre furnished capacity houses for opposition movie pavilions, for thousands were turned away.

And they didn't stop coming after the opening show, either, for the attendance on Tuesday was also great with every indication that the week would be the biggest any Paterson house has known.

The campaign did something more than permanently establish First National in Paterson; it did something more than bring an entire city to a box office; it went beyond accomplishing these tasks, for it injected life when life there seemingly was not and in the words, again, of Mayor Van Noort, it "convincing us Patersonians..."
Civic Parade Played Up With Great Results

This Line, Four Abreast, Stretched Two City Blocks from the Box Office—and Lasted Three Hours. 4,000 Were Turned Away.

what great things we can do and how wonderful our city is.”

An Horatio Alger could have received ample inspiration for material with which to write a story entitled “From Showman to Owner of a City” in what Mr. Reichenbach accomplished in Paterson. He did own the city in every sense of the word, for there seemingly wasn’t a single thing there that he wanted that he did not get. He conquered newspapers by intelligent tieups. Nowhere in Paterson was there a more enthusiastic booster of “The Dangerous Age” than Hissoner Van Noort. He won over the Chamber of Commerce to the man by enlisting the co-operation of every business executive there.

“The Dangerous Age” was everywhere. You just couldn’t escape it.

Everywhere people for ten days before the world premiere showing, which was itself an event in that Director John M. Stahl, Cleo Madison, Edith Roberts and others representative of Louis Mayer and First National were on hand, Patersonians and their neighbors residing within a radius of 20 miles were asking:

“What is ‘The Dangerous Age’?”

Newspaper editors editorialized on “The Dangerous Age.”

Preachers discussed it from the pulpits.

Screaming, screeching illuminated billboards at the helm of every road leading into Paterson blazed the trail and directed the attention of motorists, pedestrians and who not to the fact that “The Dangerous Age” was here—and later supplemented this announcement with the information that it was playing at the Garden Theatre.

For ten days every Paterson newspaper, every newspaper in six towns, carried prominently displayed stories on their front pages, all dealing with “The Dangerous Age.”

As one boarded cars there were artistically laid out cards announcing “The Dangerous Age.” Twenty thousand booklets reached 20,000 hands and told of the advent of “The Dangerous Age.” Five thousand one-sheets covered the territory as it had never been covered before. Twenty-four-sheets with attractive pictorial reading matter blazed in ideal locations on every road of any consequence and on roof tops. Hundreds of six-sheets and three-sheets were posted where they would escape the eye of no one. Attractive booklets were circulated by the thousand about the city, among men, women and children. Highbrows, lowbrows and highlowbrows all knew in plenty quick time that “The Dangerous Age” was coming.

Paterson has two morning newspapers—Morning Call and Times—and two evening papers—Evening News and Press-Guardian. There is one Sunday paper—the Chronicle. The combined circulation of these newspapers reaches virtually every English-reading and speaking home in Paterson. But “The Dangerous Age” didn’t stop there; it enlisted the cooperation of every newspaper in the territory and among them were the Hackensack Record, Suffolk Independent Hawthorne News, Clifton Times and others.

Bearing in mind that the text consumed 370% inches, the grand total of space obtained in the Paterson papers over a period covering nine days, including the space used for layouts, is 744% inches or about 84 inches a day for an average of about 21 inches daily in each paper—and included in this average is the Sunday Chronicle which gave a total of 60% inches in two issues, Nov. 12 and Nov. 19.

FIRST NATIONAL SCORES

As a consequence of the remarkable campaign conducted on Louis B. Mayer’s John M. Stahl production, “The Dangerous Age,” there is apparently not a man, woman or child in Paterson, N. J., and vicinity that is not now acquainted with the trade mark, “First National.” While the campaign effectively brought seemingly endless lines of humanity to the box office of the Garden Theatre, it established a good will for First National attractions that is un purchasable. Every business man and city official was made intimately acquainted with the policy of First National.

own mediums and by herals, throw-aways and cards written in their native tongue. Nothing or nobody was overlooked. The factories were carefully covered so that every workman and workwoman in the county knew that it was a question of just so many days when "The Dangerous Age" would overpower the city.

The cost of this marvelous campaign—the greatest ever conducted in that every newspaper in Paterson, conservative and liberal alike, and in adjacent cities and towns were completely tied up with it in one way or another—was astonishingly small, for no unusual amount of advertising was carried. But what made this campaign even more remarkable than the low cost was the fact that for ten days in all the aforementioned papers front-page stories that ran over into the inside newsy sections were carried with the title "The Dangerous Age" prominently played up in the headlines.

The campaign out-circused the circus without the typical circus ballyhoo. As an intelligent, sure-fire, effective campaign, dignified and concentrated on mediums that embraced the entire population. And without the services of the army of publicists, ballyhooers and billposters that circuses carry—receiving 21 times more space than all the circuses and carnivals that played Paterson this year, and this at less than one-tenth what it cost those wealthy combinations.

Instead of one front page story that usually greets a circus in town, the picture received thirty-five in eight papers in ten days, which is considerable of a record.

Thus it is shown, in cold figures, that for every line of advertising received brought four in return.

Of the total 370½ inches of space in the news columns were about 210 inches on the front pages. And most of these front page yarns, which averaged three papers a day, were continued to the inside pages.

In addition to this news space two of the newspapers editorialized at considerable length on "The Dangerous Age."

Inasmuch as 60 per cent. of the campaign was confined strictly to newspapers with all the editors wholeheartedly co-operating it is only right that we take this phase of the movement first and in detail, paner by paner. Then we will dwell on the billboard and miscellaneous campaign that reached out to everybody and covered everything. No street ballyhoo of any kind, however, was used.

Want to Make Fifty Dollars?

Lewis Stone has reached "The Dangerous Age" of life. Sickened with the motherly care of his devoted wife, the business call from his California home to the hustle and bustle of New York was welcomed as a relief of the steadfast daily routine of life.

It was a simple enough matter to mail the letter back home saying he was through, that the girl of his dreams had infatuated him even though she was a chance acquaintance, he knew that his future happiness lay before him. Yet a brief half hour after, he would have given his very soul to retrieve it.

"Why, you are old enough to be my father," she had laughingly called after him as he stumbled, half blind with mortification and humiliation from the parlors of her home, as she snuggled closer to her lover.

Thousands of times we seem letters dropped into the box without a thought of the strings of destiny that may be pulled and knotted by the contents.

How many of us have regretted the hastily scribbled notes written on the spur of the moment?

And what we wouldn't have given to recall it?

In "The Dangerous Age" there begins a continental chase that finally ends in California.

On Tuesday, November 28, will begin a chase that although not as country-wide as Stone's, yet of intense interest to Patersonians for The Press-Guardian has offered a cash prize of fifty dollars to any citizen of Paterson that intercepts one of twelve letters that will be mailed by Mayor Van Noort the Sunday before, and reaches The Press-Guardian offices first. The letters will be published one at a time, with the name of the sender who has captured the prize.

Was Stone successful? Will you be?

The next day—Sunday—the Sunday Chronicle broke with a double column box story, shown above.

That day the first three-inch, one column, teaser ad was inserted in The Sunday Chronicle. The text follows:

"Ask Any Married Woman What Is THE DANGEROUS AGE, Then Ask Her Husband."

Monday afternoon, Nov. 13 The Press-Guardian ran an eleven-inch story on its first page with a continuation on page two. The story was headed in 24 pt. Condensed Hancock with a three-line 14 point pyramid step-head. In this story, the contest announced the preceding day in The Sunday Chronicle, which is published also by the Press-Guardian firm, was again explained in detail. However, this story disclosed the local engagement of "The Dangerous Age," which by this time had taken the town really by storm, for the publicity given by the newspapers, together with the circuising of the city and countryside with banners, papers, heralds and what not had started the ball swiftly rolling, so rapidly in fact that the famous Hall-Mills' dual murder case of New Brunswick, N. J.; the movements of Clemenceau, the opening of the special session of Congress and the German cabinet reorganization news issues became of secondary importance insofar as Patersonians were concerned. The exploitation was that effective journalistically.

"It is simply a matter of endurance, rush, speed and matter of approach. All you need to do is approach some of the persons to whom the letter is mailed, ask for it in the name of The Press-Guardian and return it as stipulated above—and earn ten nice shining gold pieces."

"If two persons should return the letters at the identical time, which is almost improbable, this fifty dollars will be divided equally between the presenters. Full details of the enterprise will be published each day in The Press-Guardian and next Sunday in The Chronicle."

"Watch each day for new angles and details."

That same day three one-inch, one-column ads appeared in teaser form in The Times, Call, Press-Guardian and Evening News. These read as follows:

(1) Young Married Women Ignorant of THE DANGEROUS AGE in a Man's Life Can Ask Their Mothers or Watch Fathers.

(2) There Would Be No Need for a Divorce Court If Every Woman Knew When Her Husband Reached THE DANGEROUS AGE.

(3) Even a Greasy Old Gypsy Woman Is Competition When He Is at THE DANGEROUS AGE. You Must Watch Him Every Moment.

Tuesday The Morning Times continued its "Wives' Letter Contest" day ran the following featured story.

"Some times in the most outwardly happy married couple's life there is thrown the bombshell of divorce.

"That in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred could have been prevented were the wife aware of the dangerous age is seemingly a fact.

"Man may call himself the child of de-tiny, the plaything of fate or the apex of the eternal triangle, a vain seeker after harmony, romance and love, but it is the home ties that unweaving and unbinding themselves, play havoc with the bliss of a happily married woman.

"She becomes a mother to him rather than the girlhood wife of his dreams. The romantic cloak in which she appealed to him is left to fall when the duties of home and children begin to manifest themselves. She works herself to the very bone to satisfy every whim and thought and yet when
'The Dangerous Age' comes he forgets.

"A pretty face and again a flirtation with his buried romance begins. It has to comto every man sometime in his life. Not that he welcomes it, for facing the situation in cold blood he realizes the foolishness of it all, but when he does, he lightly throws off all thoughts of care and years of his wife's self-sacrifices and sadly plumbs.

"What is 'The Dangerous Age'?

The Evening News fell in line the

With the contests all underway, the newspaper editorial staffs co-operated hooking up with "The Dangerous Age" and the Garden engagement were printed in conspicuous places, mostly the first or second news pages.

After Wednesday the local reportorial staffs seemed to fairly vie with one another, for the space increased.
The rhetorical genius of the staffs were put on the jobs. Paterson was treated to a new novelty, that of a group of reporters working industriously trying to get over the best story. The picture was the winner.

A NATIONAL ATTRACTION

UPSETTING THE DOPE

The 5:30-7 o'clock supper shows are conceded bloomers in Paterson, N. J., show houses. The factories have suspended operations for the day at 6 o'clock, while the offices and municipal quarters shut up shop an hour earlier.

Showmen in Paterson never take the supper show seriously and an attendance of between 100 and 200 is considered rather high, for Patersonians are busily consuming their supper in that period. But seemingly a hungry stomach was ignored Monday night, for the supper show was as jammed as the last night performance of "The Dangerous Age."

The supper show Monday set a new record, for by 6:30 o'clock there was a line two blocks long, double file, waiting to get in. Eight policemen were rushed to the scene by Police Headquarters to handle the impatient, but enthusiastic crowd.

the wife to see that she is a pal instead of a sparring partner." Another woman, Mrs. R. H., contended that "The first five years of a married man's life constitutes 'The Dangerous Age.' If you can get over that space, you need not worry over anything else."

Saturday came the big play in all newspaper advertising and stories, all the sheets breaking all previous records for free news space given the picture. The Morning Times devoted almost one and a half columns to letters received from readers who discussed "The Dangerous Age." The letters were interesting and varied. The News, Press-Guardian and Call all gave equally prominent and liberal space to news stories. And mind you, all the while, the regular show notices were being published in the theatre columns of the various papers.

The Press-Guardian contest, coming to a climax on Saturday, published the following:

Race After Letters Starts Tomorrow
Mayor Van Noort Will Mail Them and First to Return One Gets $50

"Tomorrow is the day. Tomorrow, twelve specially printed letters with glaring words on the envelope will be mailed by Mayor Van Noort, at the mail box on Market and Washington streets, to the following persons in New York:"

"The addresses of these individuals will be published in tomorrow's Sunday Chronicle. The first person who reaches New York, approaches any of the firms or persons mentioned above, secures one of the letters, unopened, and returns it to the business office of The Press-Guardian, will be presented with $50."

"The receivers of the letters have been requested not to open the letters until after 12 o'clock Monday, so that one must work fairly rapid in order to secure the letter unopened."

"The mailing of the letters will occur at nine o'clock Sunday night. Mayor Van Noort will drop the twelve letters into the mail box, after which it is entirely up to you. If you arrive in New York too late to retrieve one of the letters unopened you will not receive any reward."

"This unusual enterprise was prompted by the unique situation in John M. Stahl's motion picture drama, 'The Dangerous Age,' which opens at the Garden Theatre, Monday, etc., etc., dealing with the story of the picture, the entire yarn taking up a full newspaper column."

The Sunday Chronicle conspicuously ran a front page story on the "go-get-the-letter contest," adding the New...

Test staged in connection with the showing of 'The Dangerous Age' at the Garden Theatre this week. He reached the Press-Guardian office at one minute past twelve o'clock today. He was the first person to return one of the six special delivery letters mailed by Mayor Van Noort last night.

"Macy Esterman, of 149 Broadway, came in second, arriving at the Press-Guardian office at 12.50 o'clock."

"Mr. Barlow, when informed he had won, immediately asked permission to phone his mother of his good luck. He then told how he left the office of the Crane Simplex Company, 200 West 9th street, exactly at 10.55 o'clock, when the letter arrived."

"Nick Harvey, well-known local sportsman, was waiting with his car. They dashed to the Weehawken ferry and just caught the boat. From Weehawken to Hackensack they made good time. Just this side of Hackensack they struck a bump and broke the rear end. Leaving Harvey, Barlow jumped on a bus for Passaic. There he just caught the 11.41 Erie train for Paterson. He ran from the Market street station to the Press-Guardian office, arriving there at 12.01 and winning the $50 prize for the first letter to be returned to this office."

"Mr. Barlow will be presented with the five ten dollar gold pieces at the Garden Theatre tonight."

"C. M. Donohue, of 129 Twelfth avenue, reported to the Press-Guardian at 12.51 o'clock with the third letter."

Monday's ad in all newspapers was a four-inch by three-columns one-size typed ad in 24-point bold face Gothic, reading:

"TODAY AND ALL THIS WEEK AT THE GARDEN THEATRE, LOUIS B. MAYER WILL OFFER JOHN M. STAHL'S DRAMATIC CAMEO OF MATRIMONIAL MATES AND MISMATES, "THE DANGEROUS AGE." IT IS WORTH THE WHOLE OF EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD IN PATERNON TO ATTEND. IT ACHIEVES A POINT SELDOM REACHED ON THE SCREEN."

So much for the record-breaking publicity campaign reaching out to every newspaper. The rural papers were not forgotten and equally effective tie-ups were arranged with them.

Following the conferences with Mayor Van Noort, city officials and representative business men, Mr. Reichenbach, with the newspapers well underway with their campaign and the reportorial staffs working overtime, devoted his attention, temporarily, to the billboard question. For this purpose De Angeles' circus crew of bill posters were brought into action and they "sniped" everything within a radius of 23 miles. Nothing was overlooked. Spots that had never been plastered were adorned with cards, or paper, whichever was more appropriate.

Every road leading into the city of Paterson was covered. Not a single spot with any magnetic value was missed. Four thousand one sheets were plastered at locations where they attracted the eye. As one started on his way to Paterson from New York, either from the 33rd street Hudson tube station (uptown) or the Hudson Terminal (downtown) one's eye is arrested by a series of well-worded one-sheets. The same sight greeted one as he walked leisurely along in the tunnel leading from the Hudson tube stop at Erie Station in Jersey City to the Erie Station platform.

And as the train chugged its way from Hackensack twenty-four and six-sheets held one's attention. Everything else seemed to have been forgotten, for not a single spot of any vantage value was ducked or muffed.

Going into Riverside and Clifton, N. J., each town about four miles from Paterson, boards, each 14x14, were erected at ideal locations cleverly advertising the engagement. No motorist could pass the spot without having his attention attracted to the brilliantly illuminated and attractive signs. For the first time, too, the Public Service property is Paterson covered with neat book-layouts on "The Dangerous Age."

Local churches also were cleverly tied up with the production. The theme upon which the production is based was capitalized by clergymen using "The Dangerous Age" for the sermons with mention made by most of them that it was playing the Garden Theatre. School teachers at the public schools encouraged the children to write manuscripts on "The Dangerous Age" of children.

The commotion stirred up by these dynamic tactics of Mr. Reichenbach and Charles resulted in the Paterson...

Scores of novelties were distributed. Among the most helpful of these was a neat 3x2 booklet, cleverly laid out in fourteen pages. The text follows: "The Dangerous Age' of man by a successful woman. (Page 1). After a man reaches The Dangerous Age 'Goo-goo' again becomes his chief figure of speech. Say it and watch him cuddle. After a man reaches The Dangerous Age he begins to love taffy. Say it now, Taffy is far better than 'epitaphy' later. Your husband is no banjo--don't pick on him. If he says he has been at the club, believe him. It won't add to your peace of mind to learn different. When a man reaches The Dangerous Age he begins to sharpen his skates and look for thin ice. No matter how slow at 39, at 40 he doesn't even stop at corners to toot his horn. When he attains The Dangerous Age of 40 he expects you to look 2 act 15 and talk 10. If he likes baby talk you must even cultivate a lip to please him. Eating may build you up physically, but it will play the very deuce with your domestic happiness. After he reaches The Dangerous Age he notices even ounces.

Then comes a two-page spread as follows:

Louis B. Mayer presents John M. Stahl's Screen document of Matrimonial Mishaps THE DANGEROUS AGE

From the play by Kirkpatrick Boone In which a man...demonstrates the dangers of life's highways after the daylight hours of his boyhood. Every wife--should see it--with her husband

Watch him every instant and try to be his permanent bride. Remember when your mind is on moth balls and a spring house cleaning, his is on spring poems and romance. Don't grow indifferent. There are three school periods in a man's life, 9 to learn his alphabet, 19 to study his career, 39 to strengthen him for his 40th birthday. You must be his tutor at the latter age. The last page contains the picture title, producer and production names and the First National trade mark.

It was no wonder then, with this remarkable exploitation, overlooking as it did no medium, but embracing everybody who was anybody in Paterson, with every newspaper tied up, with every business man's organization boosting and clergy co-operatively effecting, that "The Dangerous Age"

THE ECHO AND EXHIBITORS

There was not a single exhibitor in northern New Jersey who did not know of the extensive campaign of First National and Louis B. Mayer on the John M. Stahl feature, "The Dangerous Age," at the Garden. Exhibitors in the smaller towns adjacent to Paterson could not help but feel the effect at the box office, for the campaign spread into their localities, with First National profiting exceedingly, for it brought the public of those places in intimate touch with its attractions. It is safe to say that First National attractions in Paterson, N. J., are considered as valuable by Patersonians as the bonds issued by the First National Bank of that city.

when it opened Monday at the Garden did a record business.

Paterson is distinctively an industrial city. Six o'clock there means supper, but it didn't on Monday night, for promptly at 6 o'clock the record breaking line of three blocks started to form. It was the supper show that was on and for the first time in the history of the house the supper show was taxed to its capacity with at least 100 more folk waiting outside. By 7 o'clock the line had doubled and Manager Dooley had to summon additional police officers.

By 7:30 the entire street was choked, literally, with waiting humanity. Several thousands were turned away when the last show was started, thus driving them to other houses. The Tuesday business, however, continued in top form.

John M. Stahl personally attended the premiere and was introduced as were also the Misses Edith Roberts and Cleo Madison, who appear in "The Dangerous Age."

"DANGEROUS AGE" GIVEN PREMIERE

Thousands Turned Away From Garden Theatre Last Evening

Thousands of local theatre-goers attended the initial presentation of "The Dangerous Age," at the Garden Theatre yesterday afternoon and last evening. The film staged under the direction of John M. Stahl and featuring Edith Roberts and Cleo Madison, was released under the First National Exhibitors' circuit and after its presentation here will be shown in New York City.

Approximately 4,000 persons saw the performances yesterday afternoon and last night and it is estimated that nearly a like number were turned away. It became necessary early last evening for the management to appeal to police headquarters for aid in handling the crowd and Police Sergeant L. J. Dunn and a squad of men were sent to the theatre.

Included in the vast throng were prominent motion picture producers from New York City, all of whom desired to witness the mammoth motion-picture play, which until yesterday afternoon had been shown only in the production studios.

"The Dangerous Age" is one of those heart-gripping dramas of married life and shows the result of matrimonial mates and mis-mates in a most vivid manner. There is not a dull moment during the entire production and the audience is swayed with emotion throughout. There is a decidedly interesting moral story in the plot of the drama which should not fail to interest everyone.

The production will be shown at the popular Market street photoplay theatre during the current week and there is little doubt that the capacity audiences will witness every presentation. After finishing this week in this city the photoplay will be shown in New York City where thousands of theatre-goers are anxiously awaiting the initial performance.

Crowds Storm Garden to See Movie Stars and Wonderful "Dangerous Age"

A much mooted and talked about subject was this Dangerous Age before its world's premiere last night and a much talked about subject will it remain for the balance of the week.

With superb photography, a sex plot treated in masterly fashion by John M. Stahl, a cast balanced to a hair's breadth and its interest held until the very end, "The Dangerous Age" is bound to cut a wide swath in classical moviedom throughout these United States.

Edith Roberts, starring in "The Dangerous Age," Cleo Madison co-starring with Miss Roberts and John M. Stahl made their personal appearances and were received enthusiastically by the crowds.
Produce From Film of Famous Christmas Poem Will Help Relief Work

"The Night Before Christmas," widely read poem, has been picturized by Bray Production, Inc. Distribution is to be made through W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, proceeds of which will be turned over to the fund used by the Committee for Devastated France and Maternity Center Association of New York, Miss Sophie K. Smith, field secretary for the Film Mutual Benevolent Bureau which is presenting the film, wrote the scenario.

The Film Mutual Benevolent Bureau is interested in insuring the success of this benefit. Among the members of the Bureau who are lending their support to the proposition are Governor-elect Alfred E. Dr. Clement M. Moore, who wrote the poem one hundred years ago this Christmas eve, called it "A Visit from St. Nicholas," but it is better known as "The Night Before Christmas."

Three Exchanges Acquire New Goldstone Photoplay

Phil Goldstone, independent producer, announces the sale of his feature, "Deserted at the Altar," to Capital Film Exchange of New York, to the Twentieth Century Film Exchange of Philadelphia and in Boston to the Pioneer Film Corporation.

"Deserted at the Altar" is an adaptation of the famous stage play of the same name by Charles Kingsley and is taken from the book by Grace Miller White. The cast in the picture includes Bessie Love, Barbara Tenenbaum, Fally Marshall, Frankie Lee and others of prominence.

Buy Goldstone Product

A new series of six Franklin Farmun pictures have been sold by Phil Goldstone, independent producer, to Greenwald Griffith Company of Cleveland for distribution in the Ohio territory. The Progress Feature Company of Chicago purchased the Northern Illinois and Indiana rights to the series, while the First Graphic exchange of New York City has bought the Upper New York right.

At a meeting of the Old Second Church of Hartford, Conn., which was founded by Thomas Hooker, a group of 300 New England clubwomen endorsed Maurice Tourneur's "Lorna Doone," a picturization of the旧约小说"Lorna Doone," distributed by First National.

The occasion was a meeting of the Froebel Club, an organization of women interested in the education of children. The cast was recruited from the ranks of the club, who had seen the Tentwme production at a preview. The club voted to recommend the picture to its membership and to the thousands of children who are influenced by its members.

Buddy Martin to Star in Film of Shakespeare Tale

Buddy Martin, whose performance of Dickens' poor little orphan, "Pip," in a new version of "Great Expectations," is said to stamp him as an exceptional screen player, according to Hopp Hadley, who is presenting the picture, is being carefully rehearsed by the director of "Great Expectations," the part of Hamlet, and will soon produce an innovation in filmdom by appearing in an elaborate production of the Shakespeare drama, played entirely by children.

Nordt's Company is publishing the list of clever little girl screen stars to find one that can play the difficult role of Ophelia. By keeping all of the cast below the ten-year-old limit it is thought that a picture will result that will have unusual appeal to the public.

Ministers Pick Inc Film

Ministers of the Protestant churches in Albany, thirty in all, selected Maurice Tourneur's First National release, "Lorna Doone," as the entertainment for their benefit week at the Mark Strand Theatre, Albany, which was held Dec. 11. Proceeds go to the quota of the Albany churches for the fund of the colleges of the Orient for women.

Corinne Griffith

Company Formed to Make Corinne Griffith Films; Hodkinson to Issue Them

A company headed by Edward Small and Charles R. Rogers has been formed to star Corinne Griffith in a series of pictures to be known as Corinne Griffith Productions which will be distributed in the independent field by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Popular novels will be acquired for the star and she will have the support of prominent players in her new features.

Mr. Small, who will handle the production end of the work, has guided many stars and directors, and has an intimate knowledge of this end of the business. Mr. Hodkinson, a former sales manager of Select Pictures and later general manager of distribution for Robertson-Cole, has resigned from the latter organization to devote his time to Miss Griffith's productions.

Work on the first of the films, which will be produced in a series, will start in April, under the direction of Webster Campbell, in the East. It is understood that the stories will be the society variety and that a special exploitation and advertising campaign will be inaugurated with each picture.

"Fatty" Karr Starts Film

"Fatty" Karr has started production on his second comedy, first for a two-reeler series. The first one, "Weight for Me," was completed last month and has been shipped east. Franklyn E. Backer, president of East Coast Productions, Inc., will distribute it. The second is called "Long Skirts."

Motion Picture News

Selling Angles

The practical trouble with many an independent producer—and we counsel with many, here in this office—is that they make pictures for themselves rather than the market.

There are, we will say, fine ideas back of them. They are strong dramatically; they portray sincerely; they have literary excellence; they may be artistic triumphs.

If the producer is content to live for art alone, for the joy of expression—and can afford to—fine! The motion picture owes him a great debt of gratitude. But if he expects to make money—or even get his money back in any reasonable time—that is another matter.

The picture is generally advertised to them in the trade press just as any other picture is advertised. They are not told how to put it over; they lack the facilities; or they don't know how. And, anyway, the daily change system only permits an advertising flash; and these pictures have nothing to flash—no big star, no big book or play; no big sensation.

The name of a popular star or book or play is simply a ready made advertising value. That's why producers pay so heavily for these values. They bring the money back. The count tremendously in this business because flash distribution—the fast uncertain booking of pictures—demands flash advertising.

The big producing companies today know what selling values mean to a picture. They plan pictures with that idea pretty nearly foremost.

And whether it's art or not, or right or not for the proper development of the picture—it is commercially successful.

William A. Johnston.

Only A Shop Girl

Selling Angles

ONLY A SHOP GIRL was made not for ourselves but in response to a demand from exhibitors and the public for a picture that had a real entertainment value and big box-office possibilities.

ONLY A SHOPGIRL is an artistic triumph—and, in addition, has a real public appeal, because it has brought money into the box-office of the legitimate theatres for 25 years, proving that it is what the public wants.

Art played an important part in ONLY A SHOPGIRL but we did not overlook the commercial angle, so that the finished product is a combination of Art, which the public demands, and money-making possibilities, which the box-office must have.

We have provided an extensive exploitation campaign which includes elaborate fashion display cards for local department store tie-ups, an extensive line of wonderful novelties and other advertising and publicity suggestions that insure the success of this attraction.

We not only took a play that had been a money-making stage-success for a quarter of a century, but we improved this selling angle by adding thereto an all-star cast including Estelle Taylor, Mae Busch, Wallace Beery, James Morrison, Tully Marshall, Willard Louis, Claire Dubrey, William Scott, and Josephine Adair.

We plead guilty to paying heavily for these values, because we know that the combination of a successful play and the all-star cast in ONLY A SHOPGIRL will positively bring money back to the exhibitor and give the public full value.

We produced ONLY A SHOPGIRL with the selling value idea in mind, and if the formula that Bill Johnston gives for a successful picture is correct ONLY A SHOPGIRL is bound to be a real commercial success.

Hall Room Boys Comedies
Is Finished for C. B. C.

In the newest Hallroom Boys comedy which has been received by C. B. C. Film Sales Corp, from the West Coast production center, the Hallroom Boys decide to open a gown shop. This picture has been titled "My Mistake." Al Santell directed it and it is the eighth comedy in the Percy and Ferdy character series.

Duncan May Return To Serial Production Negotiations Have Been Under Way for Some Weeks, Says Star

Persistent reports that William Duncan intends returning to the serial field are embodyed in December picture gossip of the Coast. Two years ago, when Duncan was reaping fame as a star of the chapter-drama he suddenly left off with the "continued-in-our-next" features and started making Westerns under the Vitagraph banner.

Negotiations in Progress

Duncan gave as his reason for quitting the serial that he believed the chapter-play cycle was running to a point where the log returns previously enjoyed might fall off, as a matter of natural conse- quence. Vitagraph had profited hand- somely with Duncan in serials and his Westerns have met with the approval of exhibitors, as is instance in their weekly comments.

Mr. Duncan, however, declares that he always figured upon a return to the serial and is inclined to believe that the time is not far distant when they again will prove extremely remunerative. At any event, he admits that negotiations be- tween himself and various producers have been in progress for a period of several weeks.

Contracts Ends in 1923

The star commands one of the highest salaries in pictures and his contract with Vitagraph runs through the next spring or summer. Whether or not he will resume with Vitagraph appears doubtful and Duncan seems inclined to believe that he might be able to purchase his release from that organization providing proper arrangements could be made.

"The Silent Vow" and "The Fighting Guide" are the two most recent publica- tions in which Duncan and his co-star, Ethel Johnson, appear.

Tours Mid West in Behalf of "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

Following the private premiere of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" at the Hotel Bancroft, Worcester, Mass., Herbert Lubin left for Chicago. He is enthusiastic over the possibilities of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which is the first full-length picture to be sponsored by Associated Pic- tures Corporation, his newly formed organization.

While in the middle West, he will confer with the district supervisors of Metro Pictures Corporation exchanges in that territory, for the purpose of cooperating with Metro in the placing of certain first runs. Arthur H. Sawyer, supervising director of Association Pic- tures Corp, who made a special trip East for the purpose of witnessing the Worcester showing, has returned to the Coast and will begin work immediately on the next S-L special for Metro, which will be "Your Friend and Mine," by William Mack.

Friend Gets MacGrath Tale

Harold MacGrath's story, "The Ragged Edge," has been sold for picture produc- tion to Distinctive Pictures Corporation of which Arthur S. Friend is the president. It will be placed in production immediately and an all-star cast is being assembled.

"Notoriety" Starts Round
Of First Run Theatres at Newark, N. J. December 22

Following its successful presentation in Louisville, Ky., and Albany, N. Y., "Notoriety" has begun its swing around the country's leading first-run houses. It was signed by the Rosenthal circuit of New Jersey for a full-week run beginning at the Strand, Newark, for December 22 to 28.

The two runs of the seven-reel society drama at the Alamo, Louisville, and the Clinton Square, Albany, with the heavy opposition it met in both cities, and the outstanding success it achieved despite all, has convinced L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North as well as the Rosen- thal circuit that "Notoriety" will stand up against all odds.

Ferdinand Earle Engaged

To Direct Theda Bara in New Selznick Production

David Selznick, of Selznick Pictures Corporation, under whose supervision Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way," starring Theda Bara, is soon to go into produc- tion in the East, has announced the selection of Ferdinand Earle to direct the big special. The contract with Mr. Earle has been pending for some time. George D. Baker has been en- gaged to provide the script.

Mr. Earle is al- ready busied with his plans for the production and Mr. Baker has his story well in hand. There is every indication that the actual work of "Shooting" will be begun in the very near future.

The engagement of Ferdinand Earle to direct "The Easiest Way," is regarded as indicative of the character of the pro- duction the Selznick company is plan- ning to make.

Educational Subjects on Program of New Theatre

At the opening of the Capitol theatre, Allston, Mass., Gordon's new half-mil- lion-dollar house, the short subject half of the program was made up entirely of Educational subjects. Kinograms, the news-reel, "King Winter," the first of the Lynham H. Howe's Hodge-Podge series, and the Mermaid comedy, "High Power," were the films presented.

Sell "Environment" Rights

William Shapiro of Franklin Film Company, Boston, has purchased for New England and Renown Pictures Corpora- tion of New York City has acquired for New Jersey and New York state rights to the Principal Pictures special, "En- vironment," co-starring Alice Lake and Milton Sills.
A Plea From The Censor

A WELL-MEANING, honest writer, a doctor of philosophy, who is a moving-picture censor in Pennsylvania, has published a book. In it, he not only asserts the failure of moving pictures to improve in quality, but the impossibility of getting any improvement through public opinion. His reason for the second assertion is interesting enough, and common enough, to demand comment.

"We all know," says this writer, "that if one person with a responsible social sense, in any community, there will be fifty who have none, and the one may readily be contaminated by much familiarity with the impish forces which he set out to destroy."

There you have it, plain and flat—the doctrine and belief of the born "reformer," who honestly believes that personal liberty is a danger and its exercise likely to be a crime. For one man who cares anything for the betterment of his fellows there are fifty who care nothing: and therefore, of course, the conduct of the community should be in the hands of the one.

The doctrine upsets itself at once. Power can only be put into the hands of the one by the consent and decision of the fifty; if the fifty are without the responsible social sense, the one, however earnest he may be, has not the slightest chance of accomplishment. This is as true in politics, religion, and art as it is in the narrow field of the moving picture. In the long run the people will get what they want, if it is procurable, and they will reject what they do not want. They may be educated, slowly, to want this which seems better to a particular reformer, or that which to him seems worse. But they cannot be successfully directed against their will.

If fifty people in a community want crime, to one who wants decency, the community will be criminal. If fifty want jazz to one who wants Brahms, the saxophone will be lord of the air. If fifty want peace to one who wants excitement, the shrift of rioting will be a short one. But the fifty will rule and if it were true that this majority everywhere had no "responsible social sense" we should find ourselves not a community, not a nation at all, but inhabitants of chaos swiftly rusing to perdition.

A Plea From The Censor

The Honor Roll

Screen Message No. 87

"The motion picture has carried the silent call for virtue, honesty, ambition, patriotism, hope, love of country and of home to audiences speaking twenty different languages, but all understanding the universal language of pictures."— Will H. Hays.

Majority Must Rule Declares Newspaper in Rapping Censor Attitude

The appended editorial, published in the "Chicago Herald and Examiner," is reprinted in this department because of its intelligent presentation of the censorship question. The argument presented in the editorial is right as every sane mind knows, but too often right is overshadowed by the false front of the reformer. You will be serving the industry and the public if you make use of this editorial in your programs.

Prison Officials Again Speak

Following the release of "Skin Deep," a crook play, First National made a survey by questionnaires to learn the effect of motion pictures on persons whose moral fibre is not of conventional strength. These questionnaires were sent to wardens and chaplains of penitentiaries throughout the United States and the opinions, without an exception, were to the effect that:

Motion pictures tend to make convicts more patient in their surroundings; more eager to work, more amenable to discipline, happier and more ambitious to do right.

Convicts are prone to hiss the villain and applaud the righteous hero. Most of them dislike slapstick plays and are always eager to see right triumph over wrong. And to use the words of Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing Prison, who delighted his charges with "Oliver Twist" as a Thanksgiving film treat, "The cinema undoubtedly has a bettering effect of its kind has been given since Magna Carta. The power of the film is enormous. Constant picture-going creates a train of activity which leads to a knowledge of things along other lines; it creates a demand for books, a wish for thorough scientific knowledge."

Warden Robert J. McKeeny of the Eastern State Penitentiary writes: "We regard motion pictures in this institution as the highest type of entertainment. The benefit derived for the men theretofrom cannot be measured. The motion picture has brought the outer world, society, into their midst. The picture walls do not a prison cell."

The wardens and chaplains of penitentiaries where films are shown are warm in their praise of motion picture pictures, which, for what one official terms "Liberality in helping bring the outside world to men in dense of sense," the biggest government penitentiaries wrote First National, "in behalf of cinema, in behalf of a program of pictures that will successfully entertain during the prison season, in behalf of pictures that seem to be the only satisfactory answer to our problems."

J. C. Harrison, chaplain of the State Penitentiary at Montgomery, Ala., says of motion pictures that "their effect on convicts is better than that of music. Many instances in which convicts have been influenced to do good."

Thomas H. Rynning, warden of the State Prison at Florence, Arizona, says the inmates "like dramas above other plays, comedies next and melodramas third," and adds that he finds "motion pictures very effective as helpful factor in administration."

Thomas J. Flynn, warden of the Colorado State Prison at Canon City, says: "We find violations of the rules at this institution have decreased 80 per cent since the installation of motion pictures."

A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity adds effectiveness to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

Film Rentals Big Question

SPOKANE, WASH.—To the Editor: The general condition of the moving picture business today in Spokane is serious from the standpoint of the amount of business and income. Most of the local film companies have received high rentals while we have been receiving low box office receipts. The cost of film service has been so high in Spokane, that, when we ask the film companies to put the price where we can make money, they think we are trying to steal the film from them.

We all know that nowadays there are just two kinds of pictures—the bigattraction pictures like some of the mediocre pictures that hardly pay expenses. The film company wants us to carry the big-attraction pictures at a high price for the mediocre attractions and then when the big ones come along, get all the money there is in it. No doubt, this is true in other parts of the country.

On Monday of this week (December 1) there was hardly a handful of people in our theatre to see Dorothy Dalton in "The Siren Call." Without any notice to the public, we put on Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack" Tuesday with an advertisement to play the same evening. We had with the result that Tuesday night we had them standing up waiting to be seated. I mention this to show you the contrasts of business nowadays. When you see the theatre filled when you have a big attraction, you wonder where all the people have gone when you are not doing business. The largest theatre in the city and I really feel sorry for the smaller houses.

To mention the big battle right now is between the exhibitor and the distributor. The distributor has been getting too much money for his pictures and it is very hard for us to compete with the prices. We have the largest theatre in town to compete with. Maybe they will listen to a combination of exhibitors and allow everybody the opportunity to make a profit.

I believe in paying the price for the picture when we get the money, but I do not believe that we should carry the load of the producer.—Ray A. Gromacher, Liberty theatre, Spokane, Wash.

The Small Town Situation

IVESDALE, ILL.—To the Editor: We have heard so much from salesmen the last year and this, and a great deal in the trade papers lately about business being better and getting better along that we thought they would say a word or two regards the small town situation. And I don’t think our own situation is a bit different than many other small town. I find, and I believe most everywhere, better in the larger city than it was, since so many are leaving the farms and small towns to get a job in the city. Our population is supposed to be 386. Last week we figured that if we had 300, we had it figured strong enough. We can count 64 who have left town and gone to the cities, most of them to get a job. Of course for other reasons. If the proportion is as large in towns larger than ours, will this not help the city?

It should surely help the large city exhibitor, but it puts another nail in the coffin for us little fellows. Yet, most of the exchanges and the bigger business is good in the city that the small town fellow is getting his share, also.

The year is almost over and we have had to two shows that we could just about double our business was fine on. The past summer, we have done more advertising than at any other time in the business, but when they haven’t got the money, you simply can’t get it. We recently have shown "Reported Missing" and I believe for a time it was the best of all that was shown. In it before the public. We used ones, threes and 11 x 14 photos. Special lobby display, heralds, snakes, bars, a trailer and a special letter to everyone on our mailing list. We used slides and advertised the picture in electric lights. The result was that we had three or admissions less than the week before when we had just an ordinary program picture.

Of course I am not saying that we had the best picture on the market when we had "Reported Missing," but merely stating the amount of work as regards the advertising angle. We have done almost all the advertising work to purchased, get the crowds and this fall as well. And like all other exhibitors, gone our limit to please our patrons. We drove fifteen miles for each picture we showed from the beginning of the strike to the end in early fall, and I might add for the condition was and that the patrons are that people feel it is impossible to do enough to satisfy them.

We have shown pictures such as the following, some after going without a cheap picture of any kind: "The Fox," "Behold My Wife," "Mystery Rider," "Confiscated," "Sky High," "The Trap," "Man to Man," "Reported Missing," "Flower of the North," and others. Not any super specialty some may say, but I can’t help it. Cheap and all that received exhibitor approval in the Herald. However, I might add again that you simply can’t get the money from them when you are not doing big business.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.

A Word from Michigan

MASON, MICH.—To the Editor: We just received a circular from United Artists boosting George Arliss as "The Man Who Played God." They had better announce Douglas Fairbanks as "The Man Who Played the Devil" with United Artists when he sold "Robinhood" outside the trade. Besides, if they want to hear loud applause from Michigan—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.

Boy, Page Mr. Meyer!

SPENCER, IND.—To the Editor: Walter would have thought that Fred Meyer send in more reports. His stuff reads like you would like more of them. When he tells you what a film is, he gives it to you straight. I’ll bet Meyer doesn’t buy a one-sheet and a slide and expect the producer to do the rest if he can buy the film right. Too many “birds” are afraid to spend something on advertising. They are not Barrums by any means.—H. E. Campbell, Campbell theatre, Spencer, Ind.

Purely Personal

Interesting news about exhibitors and people with whom they come into direct contact. Readers are invited to obtain honor publication in this column. Address them to “Purely Personal.”

Elmer Rauh, president, and Howard Liechtenberg managing director, have issued neatly printed invitations announcing the opening of the State theatre, 818 Green St., formerly the Auditorium, 8 Dec. 9.

Buster Brown of the Strand, Iowa City, and Mr. and Mrs. Hendricks of Mt. Vernon, Ia., were visitors at the Des Moines exchange of Universal last week.

Be careful while in St. Louis. Fred C. Ditzenberg of the St. Clair, Odeon, East St. Louis, Ill., parked his car in front of the First National exchange and when he came out some one had appropriated it.

M. G. Keller has been appointed manager of the Bel-Air, San Francisco, and H. J. Landgran, who has been manager since Turner & Dahmen Junior Enterprises took over the house has accepted a position with United Theatres in Los Angeles.

Ed Haas, manager of the Midland and Royal theatres, Detroit, announced the opening of the Boys Carriers Club the other evening with a free show at the Royal. Twenty-five boys were his guests.

Among the things Marcus Loew will do when he gets to San Francisco is to give his $1,250,000 Warfield theatre the once over. Mr. Loew hasn’t seen the theatre since it was opened last May.

Arthur Schoenstien, owner of the Atlantic Boulevard and Ashland and Brighton Park theatres, Chicago, is having a great time in St. Louis where he is spending two weeks with friends.

C. W. Perry, branch manager for Goldwyn at Boston, is staying in the home of his daughter in Cleveland during Thanksgiving.

And by the way, any time you’re in Cleveland Samuel Bradley of Samuel Bradley Productions in the Film Exchange building invites you to drop in. Says he has contributed items for anything from a news reels to a feature.

Manager Frank Masek has installed two new Powers machines at Spauls Family theatre, Delphi, Ind. United Theatre Equipment did the job.

M. D. Martin, manager of M. D. Martin Attractions, New Orleans, La., has moved into new quarters at 405 Dryades street.

Tom Caraway has been appointed manager of the Palace theatre at Breckenridge, Tex.

Sam H. Barck owner of the Market Square theatre, Cleveland, had a fire at his house that did almost $500 worth of damage. The blaze started next door to the theatre in a defective furnace.
You are especially invited to contribute regularly to this department. It is a co-operative service for the benefit of exhibitors. Tell us what the picture did for you and read in the Herald every week what the picture did for the other fellow, thereby getting the only possible guide to box office values. Associated Exhibitors Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—You can’t make a mistake if you book this one. Don’t hear one kick on it. Laugh from start to finish. Rental too high for what I made on it.—David Hess, Iris theatre, Monte Vista, Colo.—General patronage.

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Very good. Can’t be beat. They all liked it. Broke all records.—T. J. Kemper, Bart’s theatre, Grand Forks, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma’s Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Played to good business for seven days. You can go wrong on a Lloyd.—W. W. Watt, Gaiety theatre, Springfield, Ill.—General patronage.

The Devil, with George Arliss.—Good picture. Film in good shape. Brother, don’t miss this one. Wrong title, but will find the moral.—F. Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

F. B. O.

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Consider it the best Carey I have ever run. Builds up to one of the best climaxes ever seen in a picture. Story, acting, continuity and picture, The Fox. Service and price right on all F. B. O. productions.—Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—This is a dandy. Plenty of good comments on this one. Played two days to good business. Three’s and one’s. Very good.—M. H. Morris, Colonial theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.—General patronage.

Up and at ’Em, with Harry Moe.—Here is a snappy bright light comedy that makes any audience laugh.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Live and Let Live, with a special cast.—This picture seemed to please nearly all, and the cast was perfect. Book it.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmarth, N. Dak.—General patronage.

Son of the Wolf, with a special cast.—Of no interest to the patronage. A picture can’t get by on scenic backgrounds alone.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Five Days to Live, with Susse Hayakawa.—I have played several of this star’s features and we have not had a bad one yet. Personally we do not consider this one as good as The Devil’s Claim, yet he does some real acting. This is the first we have played with an entire Jap cast, including his wife, but if your patrons like this kind of actors don’t be afraid to get one. The photography is fine. Action good.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Cornith, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Seven Years’ Bad Luck, with Max Linder.—Book it and give your patrons a real, honest-to-goodness comedy. One of the best one’s that has ever come. Good moral.—F. Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Dago, with a special cast.—This is a good picture. All were pleased. Give us more like it.—John Juel, Opera House, Farwell, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Kismet, with Otis Skinner.—One of the finest productions I have ever seen, but it went completely over their heads. Bad pictures.—Art and Wanda Empire theatre, Milan, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Salvage, with Pauline Frederick.—Picture would be good if the print was all there. Most of it was cut out. Print in very bad condition.—John Juel, Opera House, Farwell, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Long, Letty, with a special cast.—Not much to this one. Pleased only 50 per cent. Film in fair condition.—John Juel, Opera House, Farwell, Neb.—Small town patronage.

One Man in a Million, with George Beban.—Not much to this picture. Pleased only about 30 per cent. Print in bad condition.—John Juel, Opera House, Farwell, Neb.—Small town patronage.

First National

Lorna Doone, a Maurice Tourneur production.—Good picture.—Wm. McNamar, Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—Will draw and please. Story is not as good as The Silent Call, but Strongheart is better and it will draw better.—R. C. Williams, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—Exhibitors, listen. Don’t let some critic’s reports fool you. This is bigger and better than The Silent Call. We broke Silent Call record. Oh, boy! if producers would get pep and get us more like this. Book it and bill it out of it.—C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.—General patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.—Pleased them all.—Wm. McNamar, Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Prices ten and thirty cents. Went over big first and second show.—Klontary Bros, Strand theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Talmadge.—One of the best. Will draw well and please everyone. It is one of the most charming pictures I have ever seen.—R. C. Williams, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Silent Deep, a Theodore Ince production.—One of the three best pictures played at this theatre this year. Milton Sills is as big a drawing card as Reid, Meighan or Valentino. Did extra well on this.—S. C. Chapman, La Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Skin Deep, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Good picture, but did not pay.—Wm. McNamar, Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Hurricane’s Gal, with Dorothy Phillips.—A Wasden and Morton production and a two-days’ run we lost money. In fact, just got film rental. A wonderful production. Pleased all that saw it, but posters and photos kept them away.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Christmas Fantasy

The Exhibitors of America are eating Christmas dinner, but there is no set menu too, my boy, or else I am a sinner.

The table stretches out so far 'twould make a Negro.
And he who'd run around it once would be acclaimed a hero.

The boys come up from Alabam and with the Christmas spirit.
Old California sends her lads who wear the orange blossom;
And the crowd pours in from Maine to Texas, Alaska to the ends of Canada (with what a buffalo pocket?)

The table groans beneath the weight of mountain deer and sheep,
While native fowl which used to prouw no more'll disturb our sleep;
And mountaineer's high of Yankee pie, with tons of duck and quail,
And what delicates ancient line (though some prefer their ale).

Let glasses click and let us drink a toast,
Come great and small.
Rise up and let your voices ring "The Movies first of all!"
And as the cheers resound 'far upon this Christmas day the scenes at sea are especially worthy of mention, and there is no lack of action.—E. L. Frack, Chicago, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hurricane’s Gal, with Dorothy Philip—Oh, boy! That’s the kind.—Wm. McNamara, Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Hurricane’s Gal, with Dorothy Philip.—One of the best action sea pictures ever made. Wonderful acting, scenery and direction. Yet did not draw for me either night. Do not understand why. Looks like an ideal small town story.—P. G. Vaughan, Lee’s Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—One of the best pictures of the century ever seen. I have personally recommend it and you will not only make money but will make many new friends for your theatre, Williams, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—Excellent production from all angles. Pleased a large Thanksgiving Day audience. Should please anywhere.—M. M. Hansen, Victory theatre, Oxnard, Calif.—General patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—O. K.—Wm. McNamara, Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—Mighty fine. Star does some great work playing a dual role. Used on Nov. 10th and 11th. Made an exceptionally fine Armistice Day feature. Williams, Majestic theatre, Streator, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hopkins, Richard Barthelmess.—Proved good drawing card. Dandy picture. Liked by everybody.—Bowen & Charles theatre Circuit, Vadour, Wash.—Good patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—This is another I believe as good as Tolable David. It pleased 100 per cent. While we didn’t make any money, I believe it is because he is a new star and people have to learn to know him.—D.

the Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—While this is artistic and there is no fault to find with star’s work, photography or directing, my patrons are tried concerned cost of this picture. Did me so.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

the Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—Nobody came.—Wm. McNamara, Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

the Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—As Smilin’ Through, it is a fine story and should make every theatre. Step it on, advertise it to the sky, and you won’t go wrong, as it will please.—S. A. Best & Oldham, Olentangy, Chas., Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

the Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—Drew better than anything we have had for weeks. Talmadge always good here, and this picture helped cinch her a little bit more.—Larry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Hillside, Mich.—Small town patronage.

the Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—First Talmadge picture run in my house. Very good feature. Had hundreds down seeking to see it, but showed to two full houses anyway.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

the Notorious Miss Lisle, with Katherine McDonald.—Fair picture, but nothing to enthrall over. Drew only a small house at thirty and ten cents.—E. O. Hopkins, The Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

the Notorious Miss Lisle, with Katherine McDonald.—Only a fair offering.—H. R. Carlson, Marion, Minn.—Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

the Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Good.—Wm. McNamara, Rex theatre, Viro—General patronage.

the Silent Call, with Strongheart.—Absolutely fine. A real special. Patrons ask for more like this one.—E. J. Turner, Electric theatre, Cambridge, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

the Silent Call, with Strongheart.—This is a good one. If this feature will not make money, tell me how you paid for it.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

the Silent Call, with Strongheart.—This is was some dog. Saturday picture to jammed houses.—Giacomo Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

the Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast—Splendid picture. Patrons ask for more like this. Will please all classes. There is wonering.—W. H. Harris, Electric theatre, Danbury, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

the Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—Splendid picture. Patrons ask the acting in this is good.—Little Richard Headrick will long be remembered here. Not one adverse comment.—W. H. Harris, Electric theatre, Coleridge, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smilin’ Through, with Norma Talmadge.—The most satisfying picture that have ever had the pleasure of showing, and my patrons told me so. It’s wonderful, brother; grab it.—Majestic theatre, Macston, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smilin’ Through, with Norma Talmadge.—This picture to good business. A woman’s picture that pleased the house too.—Bowen & Charles Theatre Circuit, Vadour, Wash.—General patronage.

A Christmas Poem

BY JOHN CURTIS JENKINS

Auditorium theatre, Neligh, Neb.

To that great army of wholesome exhibitors, who may have a "rough and unworthy exterior but true hearts within," and to the stars upon the screen who are putting forth their best endeavors to entertain and educate the world, this little poem is lovingly inscribed — J. C. J.

On Christmas day, the gladdest of the year,
Do you look back, dear friend, and shed a tear?
For deeds undone, for things you failed to do.
To make life grow more like His year to year,
I do.
Do you find traced upon the yearly scroll
Some act of yours that burns into your soul?
And throws across your path the bars that hinder you?
From pressing on and up to reach life's highest goal?
Do you believe that all the works for good
To whose do His will, as all men should,

—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

Polly of the Follies, with Constance Talmadge. An effort has been made in this one to please, but am afraid this kind of entertainment goes over their heads. All the fun, and first part of the advertising slogans were used. However, I would rate this as a good picture and we enjoyed average business three days in a two-day-week with extra advertising, as this subject was used in a "Norma and Constance Talmadge Week." — W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

Scrap Iron, with Charles Ray. — Positively the best fight picture we have ever shown. It's a plump good one if your patronage is pleased. — E. F. Felder, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Passion's Playground, with Katherine MacDonald. — A very good program picture. Please about 90 cents. Boost it. — J. J. Felder, Jr., Clinch theatre, Frost Proof, Fla.—Small town patronage.

The Barnstormer, with Charles Ray. — Terrible; every one said so as they went out. Did not hear one person say they liked it. — David Hess, Iris theatre, Monte Vista, Colo.—General patronage.

Courage, with a special cast — Not enough action to please the majority of my patrons. Too long by far. More acceptable in the women's rans to the men. — E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Clear Call, with a special cast — A very fine dramatic picture. Acting puts it over. Used trailer showing Ku Klux Klan scene, two stills on K. K. K., and said nothing but pretty. Did a good business. Klan scenes more anti-clan than anything else. — P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Penrod, a Marshall Neilan production. — Here is a program that will please young and old alike. Wholesale entertaining. Did very well. — W. F. Anderson, Orpheum theatre, Coleridge, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mamma's Affair, with Constance Talmadge. — Went over fine. Big audience and good patronage. — Giacomini Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Love Expert, with Constance Talmadge. — Get out and boost this one, but do not raise your price. Will please as near all of them as any. — J. J. Felder, Jr., Clinch theatre, Frost Proof, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Foolish Matrons, with a special cast — Fine from all angles. Too bad this combination, Ass. Prod., quit, as they sold good stuff at fair price before they were given what would follow suit. — H. E. Campbell, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.—General patronage.

Peck's Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan. — Well and pleased at regular admission. I should have raised but did not.—J. J. Felder, Jr., Clinch theatre, Frost Proof, Fla.—Small town patronage.

The Family Honor, with a special cast — Just average picture. Print was in very poor shape and didn't help it much. — H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Hail, the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince production. — We couldn't have booked a more suitable picture for Thanksgiving. An ideal picture for the holidays. Splendid business two days. Everybody raved over it. Wonderful title. Classy paper.— W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lotus Eaters, with John Barrymore. — A most unusual type of picture which caused lots of discussion. Everyone seemed finally to arrive at the conclusion that they liked it. Drew much better business than we had anticipated. — E. I. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rosary, with a special cast — Drew an awfully nice crowd with this one and pleased about half of them. Too change
Yuletide Comes
By H. G. STETTMUND, Jr.

Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.

I am afraid I will have to withdraw from the race, because if I ever got out on me locally that I was a poet I would be ruined. This town never did produce but one poet, and he was a shiftless sort of a fellow and everyone here thinks poets are all worthless. If I should (and I know I would) win the crown it would be sure to be given national publicity and I would suffer locally.—H. G. S.

Yuletide comes and the world is gay. Santa will soon be here, the kiddies say. They're all writing letters, the girls and boys. Of trinkets and toys, that all bring joys. It makes him smile when the lines he reads, 'Cause that old man knows all our needs; and not the kind of picture that pleases the majority of picture show goers. Beautiful line of paper with this one and will get them in.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Seventh Day, with Richard Barthelmess.—Why draw comparisons? Every picture should be judged on its own merits, and this is a good picture. Drew fair business with a dog and pony show, an American Legion picnic and a dance as counter attractions.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Business, with Constance Talmadge.—Dangerous is right. At least a few scenes are. This may not go in some localities, but a good little picture at that. Will please Conrie followers.—J. W. Anderson, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Song of Life, with a special cast.—Splendid in every sense of the word, but refused to draw. Lots of nice compliments, but this didn't help the box office. Lost money, as we paid too much film rental.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Married Life, a Mack Sennett production.—Did not draw a good crowd but those who came enjoyed it. Some of the more hysterical nearly laughed themselves to death. Well worth showing.—C. E. Hopkins, The Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Deuce of Spades, with Charles Ray.—Nothing to it. Ray has not had a decent picture for a year. —T. J. Kempe's, Majestic theatre, Fairbury, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Two Minutes to Go, with Charles Ray.—Pleased all. A good deal better than many of Ray's.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Last of the Mohicans, with a special cast.—Tied up with the public schools on this and did a good business two nights. Draws better than many newer specials and will make the small town exhibitor more money.—C. E. Johnson, Paramount theatre, Gibbon, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Stranger Than Fiction, with Katherine MacDonald.—My audience was satisfied on this one. Personally didn't think it worth the price we have to pay First National.—F. S. Donathon, Crystal theatre, Booneville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Branded Woman, with Nora Tal- madge.—Poorest picture we ever had of Nora. Could not present it right on account of junk film.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Fox

The Love Gambler, with John Gilbert.—One swell picture. Gilbert going to be as good as Jones or Mix. Good business.—John Shirk, Pictureland theatre, Kewanee, Ill.—Truckers patronage.

The Fighting Streak, with Tom Mix.—Mix always pleases here, and this was no exception. Good business Friday and Saturday for this time of year.—Les Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Fast Mail, with Charles Jones.—Widely fair. Patrons gave many good comments.—H. Greenberger, Keystone theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thunderclap, with a special cast.—A picture like this makes me want to stay in business. If your attendance has been falling off, get this one and try the jockey stunt two times and the next thing you know you'll have morons in your lobby like an old-time livery stable and clean up. Will please them all.—J. J. Felder, Jr., Clinch theatre, Frost Proof, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Thunderclap, with a special cast.—Very good picture.—T. J. Kempe's, Majestic theatre, Fairbury, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Thunderclap, with a special cast.—Melodrama is Rex. This melodrama is king of all. It has three distinct punches: the rapids fight at the film's end, the Chinatown rough house, and an exciting horse race. Secure a mile-a-minute piano player who can sound and the excitement will be intense. The paper from the twenty-four sheet down is excellent. Seven reeds. Book it and boost it. We will try twenty to twenty-cents big crowd two days.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—A Zane Grey picture that pleased everyone. Packed them in on it.—J. E. Doe, Electric theatre, Arcadia, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—A real picture. Boost it. —T. J. Kempe's, Majestic theatre, Fairbury, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Men of Zanibar, with William Russell.—Get this and advertise it. It should be bought at program prices.—Vernon Loccy, Temple theatre, Howell, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Men of Zanibar, with William Russell.—A good program picture. Will please about 90 per cent.—J. J. Felder, Jr., Clinch theatre, Frost Proof, Fla.—Small town patronage.

The Broadway Peacock, with Pearl White.—Mighty fine picture, but our patrons like rough pictures. Westerns most of all.—Bonton theatre, Jackson, Mich.—General patronage.

The Broadway Peacock, with Pearl White.—Well flat. Now we can show a Peacock theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with a special cast.—Fair business three nights at fifteen and thirty-five cents, distributed everywhere, judging from the constant laughter and applause.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with a special cast.—Played in connection with Semon in The Show at fifty and twenty-five cents. Made one little picture that pleased everyone. Everybody pleased.—G. R. Harris, Iris theatre, Broadwater, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with a special cast.—Splendid picture which pleased all. It's a little too long. Business not as good as Over the Hill, but cold weather and storm kept lots away.—David Hess, Iris
Out into the Light

By H. P. THOMPSON

Liberty theatre, Pardeeville, Wis.

While I am not inclined to be over religious, I do think at this time of the year that a little peace along the lines I have touched upon might not be amiss, even in "E. T."

Great is the world's confusion and strife... But there can be no doubt but what most of us hope to go to the good place at the last analysis.

Christmas is, well, we all know what Christmas is, but very few of us seem to recognize the fact that it begins to slip down the side, so don't overlook the little sentimental in regard to things spiritual, but I hope that a man has not got to sacrifice his manhood and religious beliefs to be an exhibitor. I do not think that, at least, is true, so I am contributing the following.

A Christmas Toast

By WILLIAM H. CREAL

Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.

Here's to the "Exhibitors Herald." The best paper in the business. And heres to all the Brother Exhibitors, Their wives and their relation.

To each and every one of you, I bid you be of good cheer, For I now wish you a Merry Christmas And a Happy New Year.

Also the fair exhibitor sisters, May God bless your dear name, Do not mean to slight you, So I wish you ditto, the same.

Now a word to the pesky reformers, Those strange freaks of Fate, Whom we always meet to talk When they ought to be late.

If they ever sneak into Heaven With the good and the great, It will be through a dark alley, And in the back gate.

Some day, by some good fortune, If they should fall in a well, I hope they never stop going Until they arrive in—l beg pardon, I forgot to ask whether you want prose or poetry.

When Romance RIDES, with Claire Adams.—Good picture, but did not draw as previous Zane Grey's. Had title been the same as book, would have been better — E. J. Milbon, Cozy theatre, Hazlewood, ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Always the Woman, with Betty Compson.—Nice, clean, entertaining picture. On the order of The Sheikh. Patrons liked this one. Drew good - William F. Taddeken, Extreme theatre, Morganville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Invisible Power, with House Peters.—This is an excellent picture and made a distinctly big hit for a regular program picture. Bride and the Beast+, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Come on Over, a Rupert Hughes production.—Used band bills headed "Come on over to Morganville." Used five-piece orchestra. Charged fifteen and thirty cents. Good picture to good business. Will F. Taddeken, Elite theatre, Morganville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mr. Barnes of New York, with Tom Moore.—Fair. That's all. No one satisfied. Played this the day after Christmas and one patron remarked, "Why can't you always have such good ones as you had yesterday?" - H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Prisoners of Love, with Betty Compson.—A well acted play, but we question its moral effect. Drew a fair house at thirty and ten cents. Nobody commented for or against. E. Hopkins, The Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Beating the Game, with Tom Moore.—This was a satisfactory program picture. -Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Penalty, with Lon Chaney.—This drew a good crowd at thirty and ten cents. We consider it an extra strong show and it seemed to please our folks. Would advise booking it. - E. C. Hopkins, The Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Beating the Game, with Tom Moore.—This was a satisfactory program picture. -Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Penalty, with Lon Chaney.—Lon Chaney does not take here. Good acting, but a weird picture of this life. No entertainment. Did not take in enough to pay for the picture. W. W. Anderson, Orpheum theatre, Corderige, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wet Gold, with a special cast. Some unusual scenes in this which make picture very interesting. Drew well. - Will F. Taddeken, Elite theatre, Morganville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Be My Wife, with Max Linder.—Very good comedy that kept the crowd roaring. Some said it was the very best they ever saw. - Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Be My Wife, with Max Linder.—Very excellent comedy. Max surely does know how to make a clean - E. C. Hopkins, The Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—Two nights at fifteen and thirty cents to fair business. This picture has everything, we claim, but we think it better than Over the Hill. - Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

On My French, with Vivian Martin.—Makes a good comedy program attraction. - Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Paliser Case, with Marshall Frederick, and The Girl With the Jazz Heart, with Madge Kennedy. The Paliser Case just fair. The Girl With the Jazz Heart very good and went to town. Ran both as a double-header two nights, trying to overcome the bad-night epidemic. It did well, but will try it again. - Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Idaho, Idaho.

Madame X, with Pauline Frederick.—A picture every theatre should run. Boost it to the limit. It will please your audience. Film in good condition. - Fred W. Anderson, Orpheum theatre, Corderige, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Those We Love, with Betty Compson.—In one word, "Hit." Brought the base drum to keep the audience awake. - Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Hodkinson
Free Air, with a special cast. -Say, brothers, if this was put out by some of the "hug" producers you would pay double that which you have paid for H. Is not a hog. Any exhibitor who buys Free Air can go on the limit, as the goods are there. If you don't jam the audience it's your fault and not that of W. W. H. - H. E. Campbell, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.—General patronage.

Pay Air, with a special cast.—A fine little program picture. Good clean entertainment. Will please if they can be satisfied without some high powered star's name. - Geo. K. Davis, H. E. Linder, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Heart's Haven, with Claire Adams.—A safe comedy picture. Strong throughout. A fairly well, and pleased those who saw it. Though "Christian Science" in theme, but not enough of it and any sect or creed. - S. C. Chapman, Lar. will please the town. - Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Jane Eyre, with a special cast.—Poor picture. No drawing power. Old fashioned.—T. J. Kempeks, Majestic theatre, Fairbury, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lavender and Old Lace, with a special cast.—Drew a draw at all. Not a specialty. An absorbing story, but not entertaining.

—Plot centers around Vigilante days of San Francisco.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Santee. Idaho.—Ideastandard patronage.

The Gray Dawn, with a special cast.—Did a draw at all. Not a specialty. A good picture. An absorbing story, but not entertaining.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—As usual, a good Zane Grey story. Well produced. Drew S. R. O. Hodkinson was to be above average, but we—Will T. Taddiken, Elite theatre, Morganyville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

God's Crucible, with a special cast.—Wonderful acting. Great story. If this picture had attractive advertising it would be one of the big ones of the year. Did not pay too much for it. —Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Down Home, with Leatrice Joy.—Good routine story. Liked base on an ordinary Night.—E. J. Sherburne, Electric theatre, Cambridge, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Glorious Fool, with Helene Chadwick.—A very nice program picture. Don't be afraid to advertise it.—Harry Hohblith, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Partners of the Tide, with a special cast.—Very good drama. Last half full of thrills. Seemed to hold interest well.—R. L. Cherry, Western theatre, Cam-bridge, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Metro
Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—Very clever picture that pleased all who saw it. Miss Young as Madame excellent.—M. M. Hansen, Victory theatre, Oxnard, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Youth to Youth, with Billie Dove.—Fair program picture. Look for still better stuff with this lady. Would go very fine with a two-part Lloyd.—Wm. Morrison, Sterling, Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

Forget-Me-Not, with Garth Hughes and Bessie Love.—Great. Personally, I think it is the most appealing picture I ever saw. Bessie Love great. Story fine.—B. L. Cherry, Bart's Mecca theatre, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Forget-Me-Not, with Garth Hughes and Bessie Love.—Great. Personally, think it is the most appealing picture I ever saw. Bessie Love great. Story fine.—B. L. Cherry, Bart's Mecca theatre, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—Played three days to fair business. A good picture. Very little people. Watch your rental price. Admission ten and twenty-five cents.—A. D. Poteat, Palace, Cleveland, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—Wonderful picture. Good business. Please all. Lewis Stone does great work.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca theatre, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—This is a good picture and it is quite a picture. —W. C. Glazebrook, Victory theatre, Cambridge, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production. —This picture pleased our patrons more than anything we have had for a long time. Those two crows sure are a scream. —E. H. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—The star is very good. Made money for me. Advertising: three scenes, window cards and a half page picture in the Eagle theatre, Westville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Our people thought it was better than The Peacock Alley. This is surely some picture.—S. I. Goodwin, Royal theatre, Lehi, Utah.—General patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—No good in small town.—Wm. McNamar, Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Drew well and was well liked. —The last two reels could be cut down a little and the picture thereby speeded up, but other than an excellent picture.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Match Breaker, with Viola Dana.—Good stuff. Book it. You are there and over, Viola, and our favorite of all the lady stars. Keep putting pep in your productions and it will mean dollars for exhibitors.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Marmarth, N. Dak.—General patronage.

The Hands of Nara, with Clara Kimball Young.—Absolutely a piece of cheese. Made a good run. But ran it two days, but could have run it two more.—H. C. Reimhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Second run went over big.—Klantory Bros., Strand theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Second run went over big.—Klantory Bros., Strand theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

The Alley, with Mae Murray.—Good. Ought to suit all classes. It did here.—G. W. Yeaton, Ioka theatre, Exeter, N. H.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Idie Rich, with Bert Lytell.—Excellent comedy-drama which pleased my patrons. Well made in all ways. Business fair.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Home Stuff, with Viola Dana.—No good at all. Why can't they give Viola Dana stories like they used to?—H. C. Glazebrook, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fighting Man, with William Desmond.—A good Western burlesque on The Three Musketeers. Pleased the majority. Did not draw.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Saphed, with Buster Keaton.—Thrills in every form and shape. Thrills to make one gasp and gasp. But by far the thrilliest thrill of all was the thrilling theme of the picture. —Where the hero, caught in the raging fires, (Twas all the fault of the plugging plotters.)—Was swirled and twirled toward an awful death. Gee! How the audience held its breath. But, never fear, as in each issue, To kill our hero wouldn't be fair. And so he's saved from a fearful fate, And quickly shows off the villain the gate. It all ends up the usual way. The fans all leave for home quite happy.

Now ain't it grand to have no kid and your cash box full of嚷blenin'?—We've scribbled this rhyme to put you folks in a better mood. So you'd grab this picture and advertise. A Merry Christmas to you, old chap, And to Mr. Fox, for his "Thunderclap."
Old picture and nothing very entertaining about it. Would not advise you to pay any more for it than the ordinary two-reel comedy. O. H. Bird, short house, Opera House, Adams, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

The Pride of Polamor, a Cosmopolitan production.—Fine production. A real audience picture. Don't fail to go after this one. Three days of rain, but I cleaned up. Admission forty cents. Played one week first run.—J. P. Calia, Strand theatre, Canton, O.—J. P. Calia

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—One of the best storm scenes I ever saw in a picture, although it does not follow the story close enough. Nevertheless it will get the business if properly advertised.—Page & Oldham, Rivoli theatre, Winchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Valley of Silent Men, a Cosmopolitan production.—While story has no special kick, the photography was a knockout. Scene after scene of wondrous beauty. O. H. Bird, short house, Oregon, have spent weeks finding these spots. Drew well.—Larry Hayes, Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Nice People, with Wallace Reid.—Although not suitable for nice people to see, a bit too strong for the small towns. A very light picture to be classed a special.—Page & Oldham, Rivoli Theatre, Winchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pink Gods, with a special cast.—A picture that appealed to most every one who saw it. Acting very good. Kirkwood is liked around here.—David Hess, Midland Theatre, Monte Vista, Colo.—General patronage.

Pink Gods, with a special cast.—Personally liked it, but customers were lukewarm. Claimed ending was too sad. So that's that.—Larry Hayes, Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Holds the record when it comes to real entertainment. Great comments from one and all. Here's how good three real pictures I have played recently as the best. This one, East Is West and The Eternal Flame.—M. S. Fine, Savoy Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—100 per cent picture. Please all.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—One of De Mille's best of the year. Played three days to good business. Patrons well pleased. Admission ten and twenty-five cents.—E. F. MacBride, Ezzella Theatre, 7007 Superior Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Lew well and pleased.—Page & Oldham, Rivoli Theatre, Winchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with a special cast.—Positively one of the best costume plays ever. You can absolutely play it up strong. Most appreciated by the highest type clientele.—Wm. y. rison, Sterling Theatre, Gelsey, Colo.—General patronage.

To Save and to Hold, with a special cast.—A real production. Worth every cent asked for it. Costume pictures not worth a tinker's darn here as a rule, but slipped into town on Monday and it went over as good as anything we ever played. Book and plug.—Larry Hayes, Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—Good picture and properly exploited. Will make some money and will please the average people.—Page & Oldham, Rivoli Theatre, Winchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—By far the poorest, Valentino has ever appeared in, and there is not complaining of his personal work. Valentino will draw fairly well, but do not plan on big business after first night.—Wm. Morrison, Sterling Theatre, Gelsey, Colo.—General patronage.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—Making a better picture as you pay a large price for it. We bought it in the 41 and are kicking ourselves. Paying real money for it, too. Of all the exhibitions of directorial dumbness this is the prize. Even old stagey lagers like Ogle and Fannie Midgley impress you as doing the best they are told, but their heart doesn't seem to be in it. Story has possibilities, but they were never taken advantage of. You would be better off to get your money in and get disappointed. And the direction—Ouch! Imagine this: Valentino quarrels with rival, chokes him and turns his back and walks down path. Rival gets up and throws stone. Close up showing Valentino hit in front of head over left eye. Then dissolve to a shot of the Pre-Fame Giants. And again, after Valentino sees vision of himself getting murdered he is sent to private sanitarium closely guarded, so there were told. Patrons have no trouble in taking the places of the attendants or in getting into the place from the ordinary entrances. A picture for booking without looking, but you can be careful.—Larry Hayes, Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid.—Very, very nice comedy for high class intelligent audience and will get plenty. Book and plug.—Wm. Morrison, Sterling Theatre, Gelsey, Colo.—General patronage.

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow, with Thomas Meighan.—A great picture in every respect, and shows a new talent.—Daniel Buss, Star Theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with a special cast.—Wm. y. rison, Star Electric House knocked 'em over. Made a dandy show.—Larry Hayes, Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Siren Call, with Dorothy Dalton.—Terrible. Far fetched story that takes up a lot of footage without giving them a nick of worth of entertainment. Scene of raft and canoe and Indian massacre will not go down well. In the sequel rescue made them laugh harder than most comedies.—Larry Hayes, Dawn Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—Drew well and pleased.—Page & Oldham, Rivoli Theatre, Winchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—We heard a few say they liked it, but most every one compared it with The Sheik, saying this is not so nice a picture and not what they expected. Personally I liked it—David Hess, Princess Theatre, Del Norte, Colo.—General patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—This was a humdinger and full of punches. Please all classes.—S. I. Goodwin, Royal Theatre, Lehi, Utah.—General patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—The best Reid picture since What's Your Hurry. Ford gets plenty of excitement and the picture is entertain-ment only in name. However, it is good entertainment.—Ernst Vetter, Midland Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Young Diana, with Marion Davies.—We have not heard a word of any money with Marion. Patrons do not like costume pictures. Settings and photo good.—L. W. Watts, Vaudeville Theatre, Springfield, Ill.—General patronage.

The Young Diana, with Marion Davies.—This is a good clean picture. Very pretty scenery. Please the women and children but the men didn't care for it. Business poor on it.—David Hess, Prin-
Where Tall Corn Grows

By C. S. FORD

Princess theatre, Reindeer, la.

As the days get shorter, and my hair from worry turns gray, I found myself having time to later To even pass the time of day.
First along comes a salesman, With pictures galore, With me let me have a certain picture. Without I take a lot more.
Next is the rent, Then the war tax is due, And I haven't a cent— What's a guy goin' to do?
To the people in town, but outside the county too, This job looks like being a clown— "All doled up and nothing to do."
But if they'd follow my footsteps, Day by day, They'd find work plenty in this Little theatre in Iowa.

Exhibitors Herald

Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The World's Champion, with Wallace Reid.—Not as good as our other pictures, although a good picture.—J. T. Kempees, Majestic Theatre, Fairbury, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World's Champion, with Wallace Reid.—The poorest Reid yet.—G. W. Yeaton, Ioka Theatre, Exeter, N. H.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Loves of Pharaoh, with a special cast.—The hardest picture to get the people out on yet, but will please after you get them to see it. Some of the most massive settings I ever saw filmed.—Page & Oldham, Rivoli Theatre, Winchester, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Footlights, with Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid.—As good as many specials. Seven reels of real entertainment. And the rental was low.—Vernon Lacey, Majestic Theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Footlights, with Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid.—Not empty. Nothing to it. Seven reels. Four would have been plenty.—A. W. Sæve, Masonic Theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—A 100% picture and the kids love it. All stand the picture 100% of the production. Should please any audience.—S. I. Goodwin, Royal Theatre, Lehi, Utah.—General patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—Satisfied all.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

The Holi Diggers, with Wallace Reid.—Fair picture, but star gets by. When we look at some of his pictures we wonder why we pay so much for them. Will not stand for another raise.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman God Changed, a Cosmopolitan production.—Here is one you want. It's good from start to finish, but don't let them stick you on the price.—F. Paulick, Paulick Theatre, Muscoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Good entertainment and the rental did not take all the receipts.—Temple Theatre, Hillsdale, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Canyon Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Very good pictures. This star always pulls them in. Held the audience from start to finish. This star got a raise. We are obliged to pay more for his pictures—

The Ghost in the Garret, with Dorothy Gish.—Played During Paramount Week. Picture arrived late, causing the smallest crowd of the year. Am through with these "weeks." Paramount refuses to do a thing when film arrives late.—J. I. Meyers, Liberty Theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Ghost in the Garret, with Dorothy Gish.—This is the best comedy this star ever made. Could hear the audience laugh a block away. Book this. Great for kids, but it's a good picture.—Milton Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production.—A good comedy. An English made picture. Pleased our patrons. Photography in the print we received was poor. Business fair.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Beauty's Worth, with Marion Davies.—A really good picture. Ought to please the good class audience anywhere. If anyone tells you this is poor don't you believe it. Unless you have a roughneck audience. It's sure to be a hit.—G. W. Yeaton, Ioka Theatre, Exeter, N. H.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lane That Had No Turning, with a production.—A good comedy. An English made picture. Pleased our patrons. Photography in the print we received was poor. Business fair.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Home Stretch, with Douglas MacLean.—Once in a blue moon a fellow gets a pleasant surprise. The Home Stretch blew us unannounced and registered a distinct hit. This rural comedy drama with race horse background proved to be a dandy. The Toreador, with Clyde Cook, also astonished his way into the hearts of our fans, and the two features made a most enjoyable Thanksgiving program. These two sure put the business in the Thanksgiving.—Philip Rand, Rex Theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Lion of the Lady Letty, with Dorothy Dalton.—Business slumped this week. Valentino failed to get in on this. However, picture seemed to please those who saw it.—E. Vetter, Majestic Theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

cast—A dandy. One that will go over anywhere, but after I got through paying Paramount the film rental that's nothing left for me. They got it all. Business fair. Ady, lobby and six sheets.—A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

The Eyes of the Mummy, with Pola Negri.—Also Red Peacock, The Devil's Paw and The Last Payment are all lemons and spoiled fruit at that. The Wife Trap and The Greatest Truth are in the same category, a lot of limburger cheese and sauer kraut. You are stung if you get them free.—S. I. Goodwin, Royal Theatre, Lehi, Utah.—General patronage.

The Rookie's Return, with Douglas MacLean.—Good, but not up to 23½ Hours Leave.—R. Ross Riley, Wiggswin Theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

The Beauty Shop, with a special cast.—People walked out on this and we don't blame them for it. It isn't even a good program picture. Nothing to it but titles and no real comedy about them.—S. I. Goodwin, Royal Theatre, Lehi, Utah.—General patronage.

At the End of the World, with Betty Compson.—Six reels that are in the special class, but I bought it at program prices. Fair business two days. Loecey, Temple Theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Her Own Money, with Ethel Clayton.—It is one of the best pictures this star ever made. Please all.—W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.—Good picture, though a trifle long drawn out. Mechanically up to high Paramount standard.—E. L. Franck, Oasis Theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

An Old Fashioned Boy, with Charles Ray.—Very lively and pleasing comedy. A good picture. We've had, and don't take in film rent, owing to bad weather and approaching Christmas season.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime Theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Find the Woman, a Cosmopolitan production.—Good mystery, well directed, and with a good cast. Can safely be classed as a pleasing picture.—E. L. Franck, Oasis Theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under the Lash, with Gloria Swanson.—A good picture. Nothing to rave about, but will please. Good film. Good business.—E. E. Gailey, Crystal Theatre, Wayne, Neb.—General patronage.

Conrad in Quest of His Youth, with Thomas Meighan.—Good picture, but nothing to rave over. Poor business.—Jas. L. Cozad, Arcat Theatre, Camden, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Behold My Wife, with a special cast.—A real good picture, but rental twice what it ought to be.—L. Meyers, Liberty Theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Why Change Your Wife?, a Cecil B. De Mille production. This is an old picture, we know, but we've had it booked so long that it had whiskers. Sorry that we didn't play it long ago. It's a hummer. Has the "Altered" affair stuck off the map. Play it, it's got the real stuff.—Clyde Allen, Casino Theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pathé

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—A very entertaining high-class educational picture. Don't be afraid of it. Boost it as a high-class scenic and a fight for life in the Arctic regions. It will please them all. It's in a class alone and good.—W. H. Harris, Electric Theatre, Caribbean, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sage Hen, with a special cast.—Ran on Wednesday, but is a good Saturday out. This is the kind of picture that makes a feature. Run with comedy. You can buy this right.—F. Paulick, Paulick theatre, Muncoda, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Why Change Your Wife?, with a special cast.—No good for the small town. Only the best music will make this a program worth while. They walked out on me.—W. H. Harris, Electric theatre, Danbury, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Power Within, with a special cast.—A picture you can boost to the limit and not be ashamed to be in the lobby when they come to the censor-people and many said it was the best picture they had seen in my house, and I have several of the best.—W. H. Harris, Electric theatre, Danbury, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Playgoers

Reckless Chances, with a special cast.—Here is a dandy for Saturday. Went over big here and got lots of compliments on this one. Plenty of action. Small town patronage.

A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.

Tropical Love, with Ruth Clifford.—Very excellent picture, but title turned people away.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Representative Wives, with J. P. McGowan.—Nothing to it. Have seen worse, but can't remember when.—M. M. Hansen, Lyric theatre, Oxnard, Calif.—Small town patronage.

Realart

The Case of Becky, with Constance Binney.—Good. Fair production with cheap rental.—A. V. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Heart Specialist, with Mary Miles Minter.—Very poor. Had several walk-outs.—Nothing.—A. V. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Selznick

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammerstein.—It was two days of joy for us to run this picture. I consider it best thing Hammerstein has ever done.—M. M. Hansen, Victory theatre, Oxnard, Calif.—Small town patronage.

Love Is an Awful Thing, with Owen Moore.—Highly entertaining from start to finish. Owen Moore is a drawing card at this theatre, as is Marjorie Daw. Great stuff.—S. C. Chapman, LaSalle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

W. H. Announce Your Marriage? with Elaine Hammerstein.—All of the Hammerstein pictures are good and they draw well.—W. V. F. Strand and theatre, Wiggins, Miss.—Small town patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—Personally thought it great stuff for their class and lots of people yelled their heads off, yet had some of the very same ones say they did not like it. If we had advertised like we did for this picture and didn't do any better he would probably quit advertising.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—One of the best Selznick pictures we have used. Fair crowd at ten and twenty cents. Blanket contract worth the money, you bet, if they were all like Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—Crackerjack hang-up show. I thought to and so did my patrons. No Chaplin vulgarity. No attempts to register animal desire with a simplex look to it. No illegitimate children. Drew better than expected. Shows like this and censorship will take care of itself.—Joseph Gray, Tru-Art theatre, Spangler, Pa.—Small town patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—You can boost this as it's some comedy drama. It sure made them all laugh. Get behind it if you have it booked.—H. D. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—Good comedy, probably because Owen is not the star. Should go to the actor who played the darkey.—G. W. Yeaton, Toka theatre, Exeter, N. H.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Village Oddity, with Conway Tearle.—You could have heard a pin drop while this picture was being shown. Drew a very good house. On same bill with Semon comedy, The Grocery Clerk. A surely fine program.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl from Nowhere, with Elaine Hammerstein.—This little star is always good.—E. J. Milholl, Cozy theatre, Hazelwood, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pleasure Seekers, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Found this a good program picture. Would be fine for a holiday program.—M. Garner, DeLuxe theatre, Spearville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Referee, with Conway Tearle.—One of the best of this star. Drew good business, although there were few ladies present.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Hammerstein has a wonderful following here and not yet has she disappointed. Evidence is extremely interesting and will please 100 per cent.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Drew very small house. Picture is a very spicy comedy drama and just a little bit suggestive, but always stops just in time. Should please this star's admirers.—P. G. Vaughan, Northwest theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Elaine is mostly always fine. She's a real actress as well as a star.—L. T. Dunham, Maxine theatre, Imlay, City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Stands out as being far the best of series pictures.—R. P. Stockton, from Selznick. Price right.—Arthur Whitley.—Empire theatre, Milan, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Brought in a number of favorable comments. They kept some of the continuity at the exchange. Guess they thought we didn't have time to run the whole picture. Interesting and pleased.—Joseph Gray, Tru-Art theatre. Spangler, Pa.—Small town patronage.

The Man of Stone, with Conway Tearle.—Desert theatre. Not to be compared with The Sheikh. Held no comments. Drew average Tuesday attendance.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Imp, with Elsie Janis. —Old picture, but it's good. It's a little different than the average.—H. A. Larson, Majestie theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Channing of the Northwest, with Eugene O'Brien. —The poorest mounted police drama I have ever seen. Very abrupt ending. Had many complaints.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Good-Night Paul, with Constance Tal madge.—Not much in title, but will please if you can get them. It's an O. K. picture.—Harry Hobolth, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Goodnight Paul, with Constance Tal madge.—Highly amusing comedy drama. Settings and photography fine. Gave satisfaction.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Scandal, with Constance Tal madge.—This picture in good shape and everybody pleased. I saw it several times. West Helena, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Red Foam, with a special cast.—Not the kind of picture anyone should show. May be an invites censorship, Selznick should take it off the market. There is no good in it. Lay off.—J. M. Boatwright, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Chicken in Case, with Owen Moore.—Rather a comedy-drama with several laughings scattered through it. Did not cause any stampede at the box office. Heard no complaints or comments.—P. G. Vaughan, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Forbidden City, with Norma Tal madge.—Laid stress on Norma Tal madge and Thorne Smith type of Oriental type picture. Did an extra good Tuesday night business. Picture is suitable for the highest class houses. Reissue does not hurt this offering.—P. G. Vaughan, Royal theatre, Lee's Summit, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray.—Our first picture with Ray. Awful strong competition, but did fair business. It pleased majority. Many saying it's his best.—Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Iron Trail, with a special cast.—A good picture to poor Friday and Saturday business, due to cold weather. This follows the book well, and scenic shots are good.—G. W. Adams, Parame theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Three Must-Get-Theres, with Max Linder.—The Three Musketeers has ever played, everybody who saw it will appreciate this. Is sure fire burlesque. Fair business. Majority pleased.—Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith produc tion.—I consider this the best picture ever played in this theatre. Well produced. Acting wonderful. I advise all small towns to play this.—Jas. LeRich eux, Arcade theatre, Camden, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny.—Despite rather cold weather, this drew good houses for a week's run.—David Harding, Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Transient patronage.

Another Man's Shoes, with Herbert Rawlinson.—A very good picture involving much action and adventure in a mythical kingdom. This is a delightful little picture, and both Rawlinson and Barbara Bedford are splendid.—C. Chapman, LaSalle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Married Flapper, with Marie Pre vost.—Best Prevost picture I've had. Good story, action does not drag, and an exciting auto race at the climax.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Long Chance, with a special cast. —Another good Universal picture. Drew well and pleased.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Paid Back, with Gladys Brockwell.— Above the average program. It will make good entertainment in any theatre.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

The Lavender Bath Lady, with Gladys Walton.—A very poor excuse for an ordinary picture. If Gladys Walton is a star, then Louise Fuzesda should be given heavy dramatic roles.—S. C. Chapman, LaSalle theatre, Chicago, Ill.— Neighborhood patronage.

Headin West, with Hoot Gibson.—
Played this with Century comedy Mutts, and made a right good program, but for some reason or other it ranked second in the audience as far as patronage is concerned. No opposition of any kind, either, and weather good. But—who can tell?—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Headin West, with Hoot Gibson.—
Best Western program picture I ever played. There is enough action to run a watch factory and enough comedy to suit everybody. Pulled at above these this one.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Sal

The Prodigal Judge, with a special cast.—A real special at a decent price. It's there in every way.—Harry Hobolth, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Three Sevens, with Antonio Moreno.—Nothing to it. No story. Not much acting and very poor directing. Very few comments and all those were that it was the bunk.—Crosby & Schwierske, Rex theatre, Colby, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Courage of Marge O'Doone, with Pauline Starke.—Not too old to run and boost. It's worth your time. A good one.—Harry Hobolth, Maxine theatre, Imlay City, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Courage of Marge O'Doone, with Pauline Starke.—This is a very good picture. Can be run as a special anywhere and at raised price of admission. Print in excellent condition. Many good comments. Pleased 100 per cent. Crosby & Schwierske, Rex theatre, Colby, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Single Track, with Corinne Grif- fith.—A very good picture. You won't go wrong in booking. A railroad picture with lots of action of the serial type. Vitagraph treats you right and is fine to deal with.—G. W. Johnson, Mystic theatre, Mar- marth, N. Dak.—General patronage.

The Heart of Maryland, with Cath- erine Calvert.—Very good picture. Act- ing very good. Was disappointed on film. Played the day after. No business. $50.00 less than average business on same days for previous weeks.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Men Are Men, with William Duncan.—A very good and clean picture. Will please all.—C. Kobog, Opera House, Elba, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl in His Room, with Alice Calhoun.—Good picture and pleased all. Alice surely is a coming star.—H. C. Reinhart, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wid Gunning, Inc.

The Old Oaken Bucket, with a special cast.—Here is a picture every small town should run. It is a classic of its kind. Broke all my house records and gave almost universal satisfaction. Played it on Thanksgiving Day with Harold Lloyd in Never Weaken and proved to be one of the most satisfactory programs I have ever put on.—W. J. Powell, Lonet theatre, Wellington, Ohio.—Small town patronage.

Quo Vadis, with a special cast.—In six reels. Last three reels of this show are intensely interesting. (I never saw the original.) Best foreign made picture I've seen. Should go well with Italians, in Catholic communities, and where educational standards are high. Requires much more thorough background for bulk of picture patrons to enjoy it.—Joseph Gray, Tru-Art theatre, Spangler, Pa.—Small town patronage.

The Timmer Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—Have put on Episode Thirty-three and it has got business from the start. Best serial I have had.—W. Lyford, Gem theatre, West Helena, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timmer Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—Now playing eleventh episode, Absolutely O. K. Playing with five and six reel features. Charge ten and twenty-five cents. Best program we have ever used.—Will F. Taddiken, Elite theatre, Morgantown, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timmer Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—On seventh episode and holding up good. Think it the best serial I have had in a long time.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robinson Crusoe (Universal), with Harpo Marx in the serial's Twelfth Episode. Good enough to the Fourth Episode. No life after that. Nobody killed and none in serious danger. A heck of a way to appeal to serial patrons. Let's have some blood and thunder hercules.—Joseph Gray, Tru-Art theatre, Spangler, Pa.—Small town patronage.

Do Do De (Universal), with a special cast.—L. D. had the best show I have seen in a long time and am on Sixth Episode now. Down to $1.00 house.—F. S. Donathan, Crystal theatre, Oneonville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Jungle Goddess (Ex. & Imp.), with a special cast.—Am now on the seventh episode. Holding up good. These are some of our audience forget they have chairs to sit on.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pirate Gold (Pathé), with George B Seitz.—Good but old serial in twenty-one reels. Comedy and action.—Vernon Locer, Victory theatre, Howell, Mich.—Small town patronage.

State Rights

Shadows (Lichtman), with Lon Chaney.—The star's masterpiece. Will live up to all exploitation you can give it. Showing on up.—F. S. Donathan, Crystal theatre, Oneonville, Ark.—The Plaundleur and News boost this as the best picture of the year. Only theatre in Cleveland that had standing room only crowd. Opposi-

When Knighthood was in Flower and Wallace Reid in Thirty Days. Capicity 14,000.—W. F. Watts, Vaudette theatre, Springfield, Ill.—General patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Played this picture seven days to fair business, but no fault of the picture. Was off week, for all of us. W. F. Watts, Vaudette theatre, Springfield, Ill.—General patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Get it and boost it. It is better than School Days as a picture, but not as a money maker. Everyone likes Freekles here, and he went over good.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kans.—General patronage.

Sure Fire Flint (Affil. Dist.), with Johnny Hines.—For an audience picture this cannot be beat. Don't let salesmen compare it with Grandma's Boy, but at the same time, it will always clean. Fully as good as Burn Em Up Barnes.—Wm. Morrison, Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo.—General patronage.

Sure Fire Flint (Affil. Dist.), with Johnny Hines.—If you haven't booked this one, hop to it. A riot along with a good story. We seldom have any luck with a week's run here. W. F. Watts, Vaudette theatre, Springfield, Ill.—General patronage.

Rich Men's Wives (Lichtman), with a special cast.—Backed While Satin Sleeps on Saturday, and Blood and Sand on Sunday and Monday, and made this a week of friends and some money. Many said we had the best show in town on both days too. They say it's the way they will come and see it and go away satisfied if advertised.—Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Rich Men's Wives (Lichtman) with a special cast.—This will draw and will please. Get it and boost it and you will be repaid.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kans.—General patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—We enjoyed a fairly good business on this program. I consider it one of the best productions that has played. Brother exhibitors book it and boost.—F. W. Anderson, Orpheum.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell. — A good one that brings them in. This is an eight reel show and you can advance price without injury to your box office. — W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Anita, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell. — Best picture we have run for a long time. Broke all box office records. Can't go wrong on this one. — John Juel, Opera House, Farwell, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

I Am the Law (Affiliat Dist.), with a special cast. — Made a big hit to big business. — Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Girl from Porcupine (Arrow), with a special cast. — This is an average Curwood picture, but it only drew an average Sunday's business. Action in this one is not as good as Nomads of the North. — C. H. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—K. R. town patronage.

Black Panther's Cub (Zeigfield), with Florence Reed. — A real production and if presented as such will get the money and please majority. They liked it here. I know because they told me so. — Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast. — A good picture, but failed to get the business for me. — Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Rounding Up the Law (Aywon), with a special cast. — Didn't see it, but reports were favorable. Box office receipts doubled. — Nuff said. — H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Burn 'Em Up Barnes (Affiliat Dist.), with Johnny Hines. — If the oil paintings for lobby are available, and the trailer, get them. They did the business for me with the usual newspaper and paper. Fine business and everybody satisfied. — Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Deserted Wife and Love's Young Dream (Brott), with George Brott. — George Brott appeared personally with his two pictures and drew a good audience. — M. Miller, New Elite theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

So This Is Arizona (Smith), with Franklyn Farnum. — This the best Franklyn Farnum picture yet. The kind of a Western that suits our people, and went over well with our Saturday night crowd. You cannot go wrong by booking it. — A. E. Berlin Jr., Lyric theatre, Rock Falls, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mountin Dew (Tri.), with Jack Richardon. — Triangle "huddled better than they knew" and made some mighty good pictures. Enterprise has reissued fifteen of the best, and they are as good as a lot of specials today. This one is a thrilling story of the moonshiners' life in the mountains. — R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

Short Subjects

Earl Hurd Cartoons (Educational). — I think this is about the cleverest one reeler on the market, and it pleased the customers also. That's what counts. — Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Harold Lloyd Reissues (Pathe). — We have played nearly all of them and will say they are better than most of the new comedies today. — W. W. Watts, Vaudette theatre, Springfield, Ill.—General patronage.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). — If you are not playing the Semon Comedies you sure ove it to yourself to play them, as there are no better comedies made. I have booked all of them. After you play one you will play them all. — A. Berlin Jr., Lyric theatre, Rock Falls, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). — These comedies are real laugh getters. You make no mistake in booking these. — J. L. Andersen, Irish theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph). — Not one but all of these a tonic for a sick box office if you give these to your people. The kind of things you want, well made, fast and laughs in all of them. — Bowen & Charles Theatre Cireuit, Vader, Wash.—General patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny. — Took well here from the start. They are all waiting for the next round. — J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca theatre, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny. — Here is one of the biggest short subjects we have either shown. The "Chatter" is very catchy. Even some women liked it. — Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—Small town patronage.

Louis Sargent Comedies (Universal). — We used two of these, and if there ever was laughs in either they were extracted before we saw them. The bunk. — M. H. Hansen, Lyric theatre, Oxnard, Cal.—Small town patronage.

Topics of the Day (Pathé). — A short reel subject that has lots of good laughs. — W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Squirrels (Hodkinson), with a special cast. — If you have people in your town who have never been in your place, this will convert them if they are not blind or bedridden hopeless tightwads. That is, if you do your part in advertising and not expect the film to do it all. Fine animal postcard on this that will make people laugh and look. Advertise it like Barnum would. — H. E. Campbell, Campbells theatre, Spence, Ind.—General patronage.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. — A good comedy. It will please the public as it is different from ordinary comedies. — W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Young Sherlock (Pathe), with Hal Roach's rascals. — Exceptionally good. The youngsters, their uncle, and the pony very clever. Let the kiddies know you have it and they will flock to see it. — H. G. Cettmurn Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Pop Tuttle's Movie Queen (F. B. O.), with Dan Mason. — A good comedy which got many laughs. Better than the Tompervilles, and as a matter of fact the average run of two real comedies. — E. L. Franke, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Weak End Party (Metro), with Stan Laurel. — This is the type of comedy that suits. Stan Laurel will, if given a chance, make us the leaders in booking comedies on the screen. — H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

The Idle Class (F. N.), with Charles Chaplin. — Book it and make some money but when the show is over have your office stairs swept. — The name Chaplin is all there is to it. — D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

She Sighed by the Sea Side (F. N.), with Ben Turpin.—One of those good old style Mack Sennett comedies with those famous bathing beauties. Just the kind folks want to see. Very funny indeed and gets lots of good laughs.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fireman, Save My Child (Pathe), with Harold Lloyd.—This is the poorest of the one reel reissues we have had. Generally they are good. Star draws well with us.—C. E. Hopkins, The Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

I Do (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Rather old, but a good one. However, in my opinion, this guy is wanting too much for his stuff. Small towns would have to close up at rentals asked and films not worth rentals asked.—H. E. Campbell, Campbell's theatre, Spencer, Ind.—General patronage.

The Studio Rube (Fox), with Al St. John.—Not yet have we had a bad St. John picture. It seems that he alone will make them laugh. This one is rather good and should please all.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Any Old Port (Educational), with a special cast.—Good comedy. All Educational comedies are good.—Bonton theatre, Jackson, Mich.—General patronage.

Fast and Furious (Fox), with Al St. John.—This comedian is improving all the time. Sure made a hit in this. Patrons all thought it a swell hit. E. Doc, Electric theatre, Arcadia, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pardon Me and Do You Take (Arrow), with Eddie Lyons.—Both as good as the average comedy and lots better than some.—G. W. Yacout, Ioka theatre, Extor, N. H.—Neighborhood patronage.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

Healthy Business Revival Under Way
As Present Season Draws to a Close

High Peak in Activities Is Reached in Latter Months of 1922 Compensating for Slump During Year—Actual Work Begun on Many Early Projects

By H. E. HOLQUIST
Equipment Editor, EXHIBITORS HERALD

Reviewing activities in that branch of the motion picture business which properly comes under the division of theatre construction and equipment, we find that the year drawing to a close has been an unusual one from several angles. The general depression which was experienced by the entire industry during the first part of the year was not without adverse effect upon the theatre building and business of distributors and manufacturers of theatre properties.

Peculiarly, from a rather brisk activity in the early months of 1922, business in this field passed into a period of stagnation not equalled for many years. From this dormant situation a boom that promised to be unsurpassed for a long period has come forth. What was undoubtedly a new low point in the theatre construction and equipment was reached in 1922 and what promises to be a new high peak in activity was started in the same period, during the latter month, as the present activity is compensating for the dull period.

Reports from all sources are virtually unanimous that business now in equipment and building line is better in every way than it has been for years. In many lines orders are crowding production. This situation, of course, reflects general conditions in all branches of the industry. Particularly does it signify a healthy increase in theatre attendance.

An outstanding feature of developments during the year is the great number of theatres which have, and still are, being remodeled. While decorating, renovating and the making of other miscellaneous theatre improvements is common during a portion of each year, the work this year has been so significant in that it has involved the actual rebuilding of entire theatres on an unprecedented scale. So far-reaching a scope did this rebuilding program attain that a prominent theatre architect saw fit to organize a staff of experts to specialize in this work. During the period of greatest inactivity this rebuilding work kept the wheels of industry turning in many lines.

While hundreds of new theatres were completed or opened in 1922 an indicated building boom in the early part of the year failed to materialize. Projects set for early work, in many instances, are just getting under way and accumulation from this source undoubtedly is responsible in a measure for the present brisk demand for product.

In view of the fact that it is virtually impossible to obtain figures on all projects for which appropriations were made during the year, an estimated, in round figures of incomplete records, point that appropriations for new theatres, rebuilding and general improvements will reach the $100,000,000 mark by January 1.

Among the larger theatres opened during the year were the new Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y., costing $3,000,000; McVickers, Chicago, costing $2,000,000; Wardfield, San Francisco, costing $1,500,000; Loew's State, Newark, N. J.; World, Omaha, costing $400,000; New Indiana, Terre Haute; Capital, Detroit, costing $2,000,000; Loew's State, Boston, costing $2,000,000; Commodore, Washington, D.C., costing $250,000; the Colorado, Denver; Frank Hall's $1,000,000 State and Capitol, Jersey City; Tivoli at Los Angeles, and Hippodrome, Bakersfield, Cal., $1,000,000 each by West Coast Theatres; Miller, Wichita, costing $500,000; Grauman's Egyptian, Hollywood, costing $500,000; Castro, San Francisco, costing $300,000; Hope, Dallas, costing $1,000,000, and others equally beautiful and expensive.

The advent of the radio into theatres was the subject for much interesting discussion during the year. A number of prognosticators foresaw in it a competitor of the theatre. Such, however, has not been the case, although the radio is proving an attractive novelty at many houses.

A number of new items of equipment made their appearance on the market during the year. Among these is the changeable attraction board of Luminous Signs Company, which has been so perfected that breaking of glass, by use of skeleton letters, has been virtually eliminated. A new line of control equipment has been presented by Cutler Hammer Company, Milwaukee. New designs and latest improvements in theatre seats have been worked out by American Seating Company, Chicago. The Major pre-selective system of remote theatre lighting control has been so perfected during the year as to place it within reach of the theatres of all sizes. Frank Plowman Company, Chicago, has evolved a new direction sign combining art with service. In addition to these numerous other items of the present year such as a new Mazda lamp regulator, Taylor-Hobson lens, a new type of chair known as Mov-Ezy chair, film scissors and various lobby display devices have also been marketed.

An event of the year was the formation of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers, Inc., at Indianapolis in July. Leo E. Dwyer was named president and the organization is planning its first meeting since formation in Chicago next year. It is the aim of the equipment men to increase efficiency within their ranks, which will, in the ultimate, enable them to give a better and broader service to theatre owners.

Insuring theatre receipts against rain is another feature that got a foothold in 1922. One of the first instances on record is that of W. C. Patterson, Metropolitan Theatre, Dayton, Ohio, who took out a $1,000 a day policy while presenting a big production. Since then several cases have been reported and the practice of taking out rain policies promises to grow heartily during the next year.

One of the outstanding needs in the theatre construction field today is a closer cooperation and understanding on the part of those charged with the design and construction and theatres and the problems confronting smaller theatre owners. There is, it appears, a sad neglect on the part of prominent theatre architects who specialize in theatre designing to consider or assist small theatre owners in a general way along lines that would make for more and better theatres throughout the country.

In the building of a small house any number of suggestions and ideas are available to the prospective builder. Various products in the building line have associations which lend encouragement and are sources of education in the use of their product. Yet, in the theatre world, little encouragement is given by theatre architects along constructive lines which would encourage better theatres generally.

I believe there is a big opportunity for those who are specializing in the theatre construction field to further a movement of educational propaganda along theatre building lines which will not only be of value to the small theatre owner but which will also have the effect of stimulating theatre building, ultimately establishing the smaller theatres of the country on a higher plane in construction beauty and equipment.
Makes Own Light System for House
Roy W. Adams Describes Arrangement Worked Out for His Theatre

The following interesting letter describing an indirect lighting system which he has evolved has been received from Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Ohio.

Mr. Adams says: “Here’s a tip for the man who wants an inexpensive and effective indirect lighting scheme. Last winter I bought a new opera house, and only fitted it for pictures. It has an old-fashioned horse-shoe gallery on three sides of the house in which I made provision, as I have 400 seats on the main floor. I wired the place myself, as this is my trade, and with the assistance of my partner in the electrical business, worked out an indirect lighting scheme that functions perfectly.

All Lighting Indirect

On the ceiling underneath each side gallery, three feet from the side wall, a line of sockets are placed on this conduit about every five feet, each with a parabolic shade throwing all of the light away from the house toward the side wall. Illumination is obtained by reflected light from the side walls, painted in ivory. There is no direct light on any of the audience, but a glare of three lights on each side are 25-watt Mazdas dipped in moonlight-blue coloring. To dim the house for pictures the operator snaps off these direct lights and substitutes light bulbs and exit lights from the blue bulbs (and the exit lights) illuminate the house perfectly, without any interference with the screen, although I am using 600-watt Mazda projection with a 75-foot throw, not the strongest light in the world by any means. Patrons entering can see every seat in the house, and rowdism on the part of a certain class is obviated to quite an extent because it is much easier to locate the offenders.

This would be a cheap and satisfactory layout for the man who is fitting up an ordinary store house with a 12 or 14 foot ceiling, for a picture theatre. Such a house, fifty or sixty feet long, and 25 feet wide, two wide, the front is illuminated with two blue lights on a side when the picture is on. Ceiling and house light turned on for projectors to aid the reflection. My walls, below the line of direct illumination from the side lights, are finished in tan.

Makes Own Cement

“I wonder how many of the boys know that cement, lime and water, mixed in equal proportions, make a better film cement than any you can buy. It dries in the film without interference, does not give off fumes, and is very easy to use. All you have to do is to turn the cement and water into a mixture, heat it down, and you have a perfectly satisfactory film cement.”

Makes Scenes Abroad Ship

Accompanied by 20 members of “The Isle of Dead Ships” company, Maurice Tourneur, producer, and Mrs. D. G. Pickson, star, have left for San Francisco on the H. F. Alexander to make scenes enroute for the new Tourneur production. The Alexander is being used by Tourneur for the opening sequences of his story.
The profits of your house

The profits you take out of your house depend upon the highlights you put into your pictures. After all, you have but the one thing to sell—pictures in light. Inferior lighting degrades the best picture in the world to worse than mediocrity; an ordinary good reel, it reduces to a fizzle. The most you give your patrons for their money—what you provide to interest, to amuse, to educate, to thrill—they get through their eyes! And they won't keep coming back to see dark pictures. Poor lighting makes every picture poor, and will work more to keep people out of a theater than any other factor in the industry. The direct road to bright, brilliantly highlighted pictures is—Columbia Projector Carbons.

On Direct Current: Columbia Silvertip Combination Carbons present richer color values; and the narrow diameter of the silvertip negative lower permits it to burn to a sharp point, holding the arc steady and also keeping the shadow off the lens and screen.

On Alternating Current: Columbia White Flame A.C. Special Carbons yield a sharp and pure-white light, steady, brilliant, absolutely silent.

Use Columbia Projector Carbons to double the enjoyment of what you are showing and keep the profits of your house up to where they belong.

Columbia Projector Carbons are the most satisfactory source of motion picture light in the world!

Theatre Construction News

Exhibitors are invited to report to this department changes of ownership, new theatres planned, remodeling contemplated, openings, etc.

New Projects

San Monicas, Cal.—A new theatre is to be built in this city by Venice Improvement Company for West Coast Theatres. It will cost approximately $1,500,000 and is to be completed by June.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Plans for the new Wisconsin theatre in this city have been accepted by John J. Beggs and Oscar Brachman. The house will seat 3,500 and will be located at Grand avenue and Sixth street. It will be an office and theatre building seven stories high.

Los Angeles.—Erlangers new theatre is to be built on a site adjoining the New Biltmore hotel and will replace the old Opera House which will be torn down.

Vacaville, Cal.—A modern theatre may soon be erected in Vacaville according to plans discussed at a recent meeting of Vacaville boosters.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Bds for a new theatre to be erected at Broadway and Huestis avenue will be called for by Broadway Theatre Corporation about February 1. The building is to cost $50,000 and the theatre will seat 700.

Chicago, Ill.—A theatre and hotel to cost $1,250,000 will be erected at 64th street and Cottage Grove avenue by Garden Building Corporation. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

Whiting, Ind.—A theatre having a seating capacity of 1,000 with stores, will be erected at 119th street and LaPorte avenue. Matlon and Blskunke have the contract.

Ownership Changes

West Liberty, Ia.—Ludy Boston has purchased the Miller theatre here which he will run in conjunction with his Muscatine theatres.

Brookings, S. D.—T. O. Haugen, manager and proprietor of the State theatre has sold the house and good will to G. G. Estee owner of the Fad and F. E. Thompson, manager of the Pleasant Hour. There is not sufficient business to carry three theatres so Mr. Haugen sold to the two others who were first in the field. The State will be remodeled in the Spring.

Great Bend, Kan.—W. H. Weber has purchased the Lakin theatre here. At present he is operating the Echo theatre.

Marshall, Ill.—L. J. Bugler has sold his theatre in this city to Mr. Fundis.

Cleveland, O.—Albert J. Rozetta, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., has purchased the Superior theatre here.

Chicago, Ill.—The Kimball theatre has been purchased by Charles Facher and Fred Nortman from Harry T. Leper.

Openings

Two Rivers, Wis.—The new Rivoli theatre is scheduled to be opened December 15 by Manager Niquette.

Pine Bluff, Ark.—The Orpheo theatre which has been closed for the past two years has been opened under the management of Saenger Amusement Company.

Corpus Christie, Tex.—The Amuso theatre will be reopened as a motion picture house under the management of F. Stuart.

Blooming Grove, Tex.—The new Majestic theatre, recently damaged by fire will be closed for several weeks before reopening.

Kansas City, Mo.—Capitol Enterprises of which Samuel Harding is president has opened the new Linwood theatre here. The Linwood has a seating capacity of 1,100.

Defiance, Ohio.—Harry O. Thomas and Frank G. Nafus have completed a deal with Harold Wendt whereby they have taken over the Rivoli theatre.

Linwood Theatre, Fully Remodeled, Is Opened by Harding at Kansas City

The Linwood theatre, practically rebuilt and now one of the largest and most modern houses in Kansas City, opened its doors to patrons last week. The new theatre, located at Thirty-first street and Prospect avenue, will seat 1,100 persons, including more than 100 box seats which may be reserved. The interior decorating is in polychrome effect, with gold, rose and blue tints predominating. Foyer drapes and curtains are of old rose. A new $35,000 Hope-Jones pipe organ has been installed with Ted Meyn as organist. W. O. Lenhart has been appointed as manager of the Linwood, which is one of the houses purchased by the Capital Enterprise Company, of which Samuel Harding is president.

This is the fifth neighborhood theatre the Capital Enterprise Company controls, the others being the Benton, Gladstone, Roanoke, and Summit. The company which recently was organized and incorporated for $1,000,000, is purchasing theatres in Kansas and Oklahoma also.

"Adam's Rib" Called Most Colorful DeMille Picture

Cecil B. DeMille is said to have outdone himself in "Adam's Rib," by Jeanie Macpherson, his latest Paramount picture, which is now nearing completion at Paramount's West Coast studios. The Chicago Board of Trade, with its wheat and corn pits, was reproduced with fidelity to make real the scenes where Milton Sills wins and loses a fortune in grain trading. Scores of trained brokers were used in these scenes. Colorful also is the revolution in which Theodore Kosloff, as the King of Morania, is overthrown. Then there is the natural history museum where Elliott Dexter and Pauline Garon start a pleasing romance. This is the set which Jesse L. Lasky called an "adequate refutation to the argument that there's nothing new in pictures."
Reproductive quality enables the sensitive emulsion to correctly portray every step of gradation from highest light to deepest shadow.

EASTMAN

faithfully reproduces every tone of the negative. It carries the quality through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

Hamilton Members See “Third Alarm”
F. B. O. Picture Acclaimed by Audience of 700 Present At Club Screening
Members of the Hamilton Club were entertained last Friday with a screening of the new F. B. O. production “The Third Alarm.”
Roderick Ross, chairman of the motion picture committee, arranged the screening with the cooperation of J. J. Sampson, manager of the Chicago branch of Film Booking Offices.

700 at Screening
The audience consisted of nearly 700, who were well pleased with the picture. The local branch of the F. B. O. has received scores of letters from members of the Hamilton Club who saw the picture, declaring it to be the best or one of the best screen productions they had ever seen.
A special screen dinner was served the members before the screening.

Is Second Johnson Film
“The Third Alarm” is the second Emory Johnson production and is described as a simple story of American home life built around a fireman and his family. Ralph Lewis plays the part of the veteran driver. Ella Hall plays opposite him. Others in the cast are Virginia True Boardman, Richard Norris, Josephine Adair and Frankie Lee.
It is said to be a picture without a villain, the dramatic action evolving around the characters and the misfortunes that befall them when the breadwinner is deprived of his means of livelihood.

Salesmen Here Win First National Prizes
There is joy in the First National exchange over the outcome of the recent sales contest, which has just come to a close. Three Chicago men—Jacob M. Jacobs, John N. Howland and William C. Cook—were prize winners in the Midwest district and five Chicagans figured in the first six positions.
Jacobs’ prize was $300; Howland got $200, and “Bill” Cooke, $100. Among the twenty leaders of the contest who had the largest amount of gross billings for the eight week period of the contest were Thomas R. Gilliam and Edward Brichetto of the Chicago office; Clyde Pratt, of Des Moines, who took $150 prize money, moved up from fifth place to third in the Midwest district, crowding out Louis Goldhammer of Omaha. The Chicago boys held organization place of eighth or better throughout the eight weeks of the contest.

Williams in Town
J. D. Williams, former general manager of First National, passed through Chicago Saturday, on route to California.

Bonns Here to Put Over Goldwyn Film “Broken Chains” Opens at The Chicago Theatre January 1
Eddie Bonns, in charge of exploitation for Goldwyn Pictures, arrived in Chicago last Friday and is now busily engaged in laying out his campaign for “Broken Chains” which opens at the Chicago theatre on January 1.
Already Bonns has planned several stories with the papers and the Daily News is cooperating with the Goldwyn company to put it over. The picture was made from a prize winning story by Winifred Kimball, who received $10,000 for it. Over 250 original scripts were submitted in the contest.
Mr. Bonns has arranged several stunts which should center in the Goldwyn loop district, as well as the neighborhoods, on the Goldwyn special.
He has arranged for an illustrated rolling billboard, the first that has ever been used in Chicago’s loop district, to exploit the picture in the downtown district. A special permit will be obtained for this. Mr. Bonns returned to New York Sunday for the holidays.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES
By J. R. M.

I CAN’T get up any poetry like is on these here store cards—I leaves that to these here long-haired guys. None o’ that for mine, I says. Just a Christmas greeting, fulla feeling that’s me, once every year, to my friends “down the line” which means Chicago’s Film Row. So here goes—Merry Christmas, fellows.

Charlie Ryan, manager of the Garfield theatre, Chicago, kicks in with a poem “To J. R. M. of the Chicago Personalities” as follows:
A thing that sure is hard to do
Is send Christmas greetings to a regular fellow like you.
This voice and stuff and other junk
To send to you is sure the bunck;
But I hope these lines will help to bring
A bright Christmas to everything.

Morris Schlank was registered at the Congress last Saturday. He’s on his way to New York.

Frank Mantzke, resident manager of the American, reports the situation has a big smile on his face. As “The Challenge” opens at the State Lake theatre week before Xmas, and “The Marriage Chance” opens in the Chicago loop week of January 7, O. H. Wooden, former salesman of the Select Pictures Corporation has joined the American sales force covering the Northside.
The electric lights that have been burning in the wee hours of the morning will have a rest at the local American Releasing office as J. de Waal the traveling auditor has left the city.

Jacob M. Jacobs, the First National go-getter, is spending some of his $300 prize money and his holidays in Buffalo, with his parents. And Salesman Whitmoyer of the same office is down in Nebraska.

The departure of Jeff Lazarus, the First National exploiter, was fittingly celebrated last Friday night at the Rainbow Gardens. Grad’ Senator was on hand with all the First Nationalers who attended report it a complete success. Nat Wolf is off the gin, orange and fuzz water for life, it is said.

Henry Igel, the operator of the First National projection rooms, has been dividing his time off duty in the sick room with his little boy and running to the corner drug store for medicines.

Manager Sidney Meyer, and Ernie Coons, chief of the Fox forces, made a flying visit to Milwaukee and Racine, last week.

Matt Cavanaugh of Fox Exchange is spending his Christmas holidays down in New England.

Harry Coons, of Hobart, Ind., was a caller at the Fox exchange recently. He has taken lack the Gem theatre at that place.

DID YOU KNOW that of $250,000 worth of movie ads placed in Chicago in 1922—we excelled all other advertising companies combined by $255,000—Plans and ideas free. THE MASTER ADVERTISERS CORP., 732 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.—Adv.
Regular daily screenings of the Fox special, "The Village Blacksmith" were held at the Fox exchange Dec. 13, 15 and 16th, and many exhibitors attended.

Universal postponed the showing of their big Jewel special "The Flint" at the Randolph theatre from Dec. 14 to Dec. 21, and invite all showmen hereabout to attend.

Bert B. Perkins, publicist and exploitation man at Metro exchange left for a circuit of his territory, last Friday. He will be in Indianapolis a few days then go to Omaha, St. Louis, and Kansas City.

Bill Danziger, the Paramount exploiter, tried to stage a bull fight at Warsaw, Ind. but couldn't find a bull. Of course the Centennial theatre, playing "Blood and Sand" had nothing to do with it. Oh, no.

Adolph Zukor, and Claude Saunders of Paramount, were Chicago callers last week.

William J. Sweeney, secretary of the M. P. T. O. of Illinois and his committee men held an interesting session at the Hotel Nelson, at Rockford, Ill., last Friday.

CLYDE F. ELLIOTT opened his new Evans ton theatre, Wednesday night with "The Man Who Played God."

DID YOU KNOW that we sell pluggers on all features released at $2.50 per thousand. Special attention given to mail orders. Prompt service, copy and cuts furnished free. THE MASTER ADVERTISERS CORP., 732 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.—Adv.

F. J. Young has been made short subject salesman at the Vitagraph exchange.

Have you noticed the spiffy ads Pat Campbell has been getting up for Andrew Karzas' new dance hall on the South Side?

SAM DEMNOW, assistant general sales manager of Fox Film Corp. was a Chicago caller last week. He was enroute to New York.

ARE FRANKEL, of Des Moines, attended the convention of public park owners in Chicago last week. He also visited the Fox exchange and said hello to Tom Delany and the boys.

DAN ROCHE, in charge of the Central West exploitation of Paramount, made a hurried trip to Charlotte, So. Carolina, on Paramount business. He returned last Saturday.

LARRY WAGNER, of McKeesport, Pa., who does imitations of Larry Semon, the Vitagr aph comedian, is now under the management of Saml. Lamovsky, at the Vitagraph office. Sam has his man booked solid till January 15.

J. S. Jossey, of the Progress Pictures Company, Cleveland, dropped in on Frank Zambreno last Friday and left for the East on Saturday.

BILL BUMSEBERGER, county sales manager, First National, has an assistant now. He is none other than Tom Gilliam, erstwhile assistant to Jeff Lazarus, exploitation man at the local exchange.

L. V. KUTTNAUER, formerly connected with the Fox exchange at Oklahoma, has been added to the sales staff of Sidney Meyer, handling the Fox Wisconsin territory.

AL FRANER, of Alhambra theatre, Omaha, paid the Fox exchange a call last week, and was accompanied by Exhibitor Williams of the Park theatre, Omaha.

Didja see Al Gallas' nifty decoration of the Select exchange. Looks like Xmas for something with a suggestion of chinatown.

CLYDE ECKHART, former manager of Fox exchange, now assistant general manager of the same concern, dropped in on the Century last Saturday.

RALPH CROCKET, of the Star theatre, Elgin, finds the artisans rather slow on his new theatre building, and to kill time takes his skates and enjoys himself on the Fox river these crisp mornings.

RICHARD KIPLING, the producer, was a Film Row visitor on Saturday. Mr. Kipling is on his way to Los Angeles.

JACK SAMPSON, manager of the F. B. O., and "the boys" as well as the bookkeepers and stenos suffered in silence all last week, while painters decorated the exchange. Now that it is all finished it presents an inviting appearance and is one of the most cheerful offices in town.

DID YOU KNOW that Universal, Progress Pictures, Vitagraph, Celebrated, Film Booking, Select, Hodkinson and others rely on us for most of their printing. An initial order will convince you why. THE MASTER ADVERTISERS CORP., 732 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago. —Adv.

Grevier Buys Two

Si Grevier, of the Grevier Productions, has just closed a deal with Irving Lesser, for two new pictures for this territory. They are "Environment" and "The World's a Stage," and both are Principal Pictures, productions, the first starring Milton Sills, Alice Lake, Richard Headrick and Ralph Lewis; while the "World's a Stage" has Dorothy Phillips as its star. The latter is a story by Elinor Glyn and is the romance of a screen star. Irving Lesser left for the Coast after completing the sale to Mr. Grevier. Both pictures will be released at an early date.

Sobler Assigned Here

A. L. Sobler, of Louisville, Ky., has been appointed to succeed Jcfrey Lazarus, local exploitation and publicity man for the First National exchange. Mr. Sobler has had considerable experience in the field and is well known in the East. He arrived in Chicago and took over the work on Friday of last week.

Choice Productions Makes Fourth in Two Reel Series

Choice Productions, Inc., which recently took over the studio at 6044 Sunset boule
dard, Los Angeles, has rearranged and improved their new quarters is now forg ing rapidly ahead with production. Filming is under way of the fourth of their two-reel series known as "Comparables," which they expect to complete within the next two weeks. The independent company is now developing service to dis tributor and exhibitor plans.

Plans have been completed for intensive production extending into the fall of 1923, which production will not be confined to "Comparables," but will comprise a well-balanced output that it is believed will receive a hearty welcome.

"A. E." to Issue Binney

Production December 24

With publication date set for December 24, Associated Exhibitors feature "A Bill of Divorcement," in which Constance Binney is starred, is arousing interest among exhibitors, Associated reports.

Letters to the sales department, indicating a combination of circumstances contributing to the great interest aroused by announcement of the forthcoming publication, as a stage production, "A Bill of Divorcement" with Allan Pollock starring, played at the Times Square Theatre, New York, during the entire 1921-22 season and proved one of the outstanding hits of recent years.

HODKINSON PICTURES
“If Music be the food of love, play on!”

Love makes the world go 'round, and that which feeds it best is Music. Music, catering to human emotions as nothing else can do; the strongest weapon to move the multitude.

And the instrument which handles this theme, in all its variations, all the heights and depths of feeling, is the Barton Organ.

It is not only a full pipe organ, but it has the exclusive orchestral features which open vast new fields of melody and bring every shade of emotion within the player’s scope.

The Barton is easily installed and anyone can play it. For the sake of your theater’s artistic reputation and to boost box office receipts, investigate.

Write today for the plan which makes the Barton earn its own cost.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION
FOREWORD

PARAMOUNT herewith makes its regular semi-annual announcement of its product—definitely fixed and set for release in the coming six months.

The task has been a tremendous one of bettering the picture values and of topping the box-office power of Paramount's first half-year's releases, the "Famous 41"—such pictures as "Manslaughter," "Blood and Sand," "The Old Homestead," "To Have and To Hold," "The Young Rajah," "Nice People," "The Impossible Mrs. Bellev," "Kick In,"—to mention only a few of Paramount's big releases of the past few months.

I sincerely feel, however, that this task has been accomplished. I believe that the new pictures herein described will be found of even greater money-making proportions for exhibitors than the best of the "Famous 41".

The selection of stories, the choosing of strong casts, the assignments of famous directors, the elaborate details of luxurious production, the popularity of Paramount stars—all has been combined with one thought in mind—to make the finest pictures the screen can produce. Not art for art's sake alone, but box-office value as well.

Certain it is that there has been no effort or money spared to make these "Super 39," the greatest pictures Paramount has ever released.

Adolph Zukor

I Pledge—

SIX months ago we issued the Paramount Booklet. In that Booklet we listed forty-one pictures—the most sweeping promise ever made to the exhibitors of America.

In the front of the book, nailed down in black and white, I pledged my word that this group of forty-one Paramount Pictures would be immeasurably better than any like number of pictures ever produced before.

The performance of that pledge—its performance to the last letter—is recorded in the box-office of every theatre that has played or is playing the "Famous 41."

But we cannot rest there—this swiftly moving business will not let us. So I make this new pledge:

Just as this "Famous 41" outstripped all previous records so this second group of Paramount Pictures will be better than the first—better collectively, better individually.

And, just as I kept my last pledge, so I know I will keep this pledge, too; for back of me, alert, untiring, resourceful, is the great Production Department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, better organized than ever before, functioning like a machine and manned by the greatest organization of picture producers ever grouped in one company.

Each member of this organization—directors, writers, stars, leading players, executives, studio employees—is keenly alive to the importance and magnitude of our task. Each has pledged me his unsparing support and loyalty, and each one knows, as I know, that with Paramount's "Super 39" we shall exceed our promise in this, our greatest work and greatest opportunity.
Dorothy Dalton in "Dark Secrets"

The highly dramatic story of a woman's struggle between love for her husband and the strange power of a mystic Egyptian. Scenes in the wealthy homes of Long Island, and in glamorous Cairo. With a cast including Robert Ellis and Jose Ruben.

By Edmund Goulding
Directed by Victor Fleming

A Paramount Picture

PRODUCTION

WITH

MILTON SILLS  ELLIOTT DEXTER
THEODORE KOSLOFF
ANNA Q. NILSSON  and  PAULINE GARON

In "Manslaughter" you saw one side of the modern girl. Here's the other. The same things that made DeMille's marriage series so successful are present in this production.

Surprising scenes include the Natural History Museum, filled with 30 foot skeletons of million year old monsters; the Chicago Board of Trade; "vision" scenes showing the life of prehistoric man; and a ball that marks the ultimate in DeMille magnificence.

Written by Jeanie Macpherson, author of DeMille's greatest successes. Staged on the scale that has made his name the greatest box-office attraction in the world.

A production that actually tops anything Cecil DeMille has ever done.

GEORGE MELFORD PRODUCTION

"JAVA HEAD"

by JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER

with Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, and Albert Roscoe

A GREAT big special production, with a story-appeal like "East is West," lavishly produced with a cast that means perfection.

The masterpiece of the author of "Tol'able David." The story ran in the Saturday Evening Post.

Made on the original locations in the most picturesque part of America. This one is a box-office knockout!

Adapted by Waldemar Young

A Paramount Picture
THIS is the story of a girl who is half American, half Hawaiian. It was made in Hawaii, where the entire company and technical staff were taken. The story is full of romance and mystery, and it is altogether unusual.

Miss Compson's supporting cast includes Edmund Lowe, Arline Pretty, Edward Martindel, Leon Barry.

in a

George Fitzmaurice

PRODUCTION

"BELLA DONNA"

Supported by Conway Tearle and Conrad Nagel

The genius of Pola Negri attains its really first full flower in this powerful love story, made in America, with an American cast, by one of America's foremost directors.

The story of a woman's love for an Arab chieftain, for which she forsakes all else, is a hundred times better than "The Sheik." The star wears fifty alluring, exotic gowns.

Here is the world's greatest emotional actress in her proper setting. A new Pola Negri, glorious, flashing, vital, magnetic. A Pola Negri you've never seen before!

By Robert Hichens Scenario by Ouida Bergere

A Paramount Picture
ROBERTS' greatest characterization—May McAvoy's most appealing role. The play broke London's record, ran a whole year in New York—and then came back for a season-long return engagement. A mystery live-story that appeals to all classes.

in

with

Jacqueline Logan

HERE'S Walter Hiers as you've always longed to see him—in a role that gives him full opportunity for his inimitable fun-making. All the fans who have shrieked with glee at his antics will shout with joy when you make this announcement. It is a rapid-fire comedy from the unusual story in the Red Book.

By Dana Burnet
Directed by Wesley Ruggles Screen play by Albert Shelby LeVino

A Paramount Picture
THE enthralling and unusual story of a lady’s maid who won the love of a famous statesman. As it deals with life in the highest circles, it gives Fitzmaurice opportunity for marvelous sets and gowns. The two stars are cast in roles particularly suited to them. Miss Compson has a role ideally suited to her as has Mr. Tearle. This one is a de-luxe special.

By Cosmo Hamilton
Scenario by Ouida Bergere

A Paramount Picture
"DECLASSE"

Supported by Elliott Dexter

A Paramount Picture

No actress has ever had a role so full of emotional and dramatic possibilities, and Pola Negri is ideal for the part.

Made in America by one of America's greatest directors. From the play by Zoe Akins.
The Box-office Sensation of 1923!

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS A JAMES CRUZE PRODUCTION

"HOLLYWOOD"

Based upon the novelette, "Hollywood, and the Only Child" by Frank Condon

WITH A CAST INCLUDING ALL THE STARS ON THIS PAGE AND OTHERS

Paramount is making this story—a comedy-drama about a girl who tried to get into the movies, but didn’t—with a cast that when listed will be a duplicate of the top sheets of the Lasky Studio payroll.

Angela, the heroine, is the counterpart of a million American girls, and she goes to Hollywood to try to get into pictures. There is melodrama, love, mystery, humor.

She leads a life that a million girls will envy, that will make every motion picture patron laugh and thrill.

There have been hundreds of successful plots laid in New York, but not one in Hollywood. And Hollywood is the most interesting city in the world.

This production shows "everything and everybody."

The leading characters will be prominent. But the supporting cast will be so important and so large that no theatre on earth will have enough electric lights to announce all of the names.

There will be no propaganda, no expose of the secrets of picture-making. It is not a moving picture tour of Hollywood. It is a real, fast moving story. And the cast!

Just about everybody big that you can think of.

Directed by the man who made "The Old Homestead."

Without any question, "Hollywood" will be the box-office sensation of 1923!

A Paramount Picture
A MODERN "Monte Cristo"—with twice the thrills of the old one. Barrymore, as the man who, supposed dead, returns with a fabulous fortune and wreaks vengeance on his enemies, gives one of the screen's greatest portrayals. Alma Rubens is tremendous. The staging is magnificent, over a hundred thousand dollars having been spent for art treasures specially for this picture. A best seller by one of the most popular of modern authors.

By Marie Corelli
Directed by Alan Crosland
Scenario by Frances Marion

VENDETTA with Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens
A Cosmopolitan Production
THIS story was specially written for Meighan by R. G. Kirk, famous as a Saturday Evening Post writer of dramatic tales laid in steel-mills. The picture is unusual in locale and in theme, intensely dramatic, and gives Meighan the finest role he has had since "The City of Silent Men."

By R. G. Kirk
Directed by Alfred Green Scenario by Percy Heath

A Paramount Picture
ADOLPH ZUKOR . . . PRESENTS

Agnes Ayres

in

"The Beautiful Adventure"

DAVID POWELL

A GREAT title and an ideal combination in this delightful romance. It is a modern love story that will move and thrill even the most hard-headed audience. A human, fast moving romance and one of the most enjoyable pictures of the season. Made from the Charles Frohman successful play which ran in Paris and New York for long seasons.

A Paramount Picture
In this Miss Compson plays a clever girl crook who is hired by the district attorney to commit a legal robbery. There's novelty for you! It's by the author of "Within the Law" and "The 13th Chair," and has more thrills than both of them together.

It will be enacted by a cast of favorites.

By Bayard Veiller

A Paramount Picture
Gloria Swanson
in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife"

This tremendously successful French comedy makes an ideal vehicle for Miss Swanson. It is a modern story of a French girl who marries an American, and it is filled with startling situations. The story calls for the ultimate in daring gowns. This will be a great big special de-luxe production.

This "Bluebeard" is a modern millionaire, whose wife decides to hold him—and does, by the most amazing stratagems imaginable. The play has just closed after a record-breaking year on the road.

In New York it did capacity for six months. It promises to be a screen sensation, with a title that means money.

Conrad Nagel is the leading man.

A Sam Wood Production
Scenario by Monte M. Katterjohn
From Charlton Andrews' adaptation of Alfred Savoir's play

A Paramount Picture
WILLIAM deMILLE

PRODUCTION

"ONLY 38"

Elliott Dexter with George Fawcett
May McAvoy and Lois Wilson

WILLIAM deMILLE is at his best in this story of a mother whose youthful gaiety shocked her own children. It is a delightful, wholesome comedy, that will bring laughs and chuckles and tears. The cast is remarkable. Miss Wilson is better than ever before. Dexter has the finest role he has had in years and Miss McAvoy will duplicate her success in "Clarence." Laughs, sentiment and pathos combined in a play of life as we all know it.

By A. E. Thomas
Suggested by a story by Walter Prichard Eaton Screen Play by Clara Beranger

A Paramount Picture
HERE'S a star combination that means money anywhere, in a play which has been sensationnally successful on the New York stage, and is ideally suited to filming.

JESSE L. LASKY PRESENTS

Bebe Daniels and Bert Lytell

in

"The Exciters"

MISS DANIELS has never been more delightful than as this girl whose life was a search for excitement. And Lytell as the handsome detective will make thousands of new admirers. It's a flapper story with a different twist—a melodrama and a comedy in one.

By Martin Brown
Scenario by Edmund Goulding

A Paramount Picture
A rapid fire comedy in which Wally, on a wager, disguises as a burglar. Then he gets a real burglar to help him, and this starts a series of screaming situations. A farce with real romance and drama in it.

By John Stapleton and P. G. Wodehouse
Screen play by Albert Shelby LeYino
Directed by Wallace Worsley

JESSE L. LASKY
PRESENTS

"Children of Jazz"

Nita Naldi, Jacqueline Logan, Conrad Nagel and Robert Cain

EVERYBODY'S talking these days about the difference between the young folks of today and of yesterday. Here's a bright and unusual comedy contrasting the two generations.
As jazzy as its title, with a super-excellent cast. Stanlaws at his best, in a drama that parents and children will want to see two or three times—and talk about for weeks.

By Harold Brighouse

A Paramount Picture
MISS DALTON has the role of a girl who lives alone on a tiny island. Her peace is broken by the arrival of a desperate criminal and his pursuers. How the heroine brings the murderer to justice and saves the man she loves, makes one of the most dramatic and exciting melodramas ever screened. The star never had a role richer in emotional possibilities.
Adolph Zukor presents

ALICE BRADY

in

"The Snow Bride"

A NORTHERN picture unlike any you've ever seen. The greatest avalanche thrill ever put in pictures. Alice Brady in a part she can play to perfection. A love story of two young people who become involved in the death of the villain and who are saved in the most unusual manner ever put on the screen.

Screen Play by Sonya Levien from the story by Sonya Levien and Julie Herne Directed by Henry Kolker

A Paramount Picture
THE author of "While Satan Sleeps" has written a sea story with a tremendous punch in "The Light to Leeward." The two stars appear in splendid roles and make an ideal combination. Scenes of shipwreck, battles with the elements, amazing rescues, provide thrill upon thrill.

Directed by Joseph Henabery
Scenario by Jack Cunningham

A Paramount Picture
and—
THE most costly production ever made. Over a million dollars was actually spent on it.

The sets are gigantic and gorgeous, of unparalleled beauty and breath-taking magnificence. "Knighthood" has received more press praise than any other ten great pictures.

3000 actors: genuine antique armor, tapestries, costumes, furniture, paintings.

Six months in the making.

As a novel, one of the biggest sellers ever written. As a play, an international success.

The all-star supporting cast includes Forrest Stanley, Lyn Harding, Pedro de Cordoba, Ruth Shepley, Ernest Glen-dinning, Charles Gerrard, Macey Harlam, and George Nash.

It has become the picture that millions want to see.
"WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER"
Some press comments on

“When Knighthood Was in Flower”

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is one of the greatest film epics ever made in America; in fact, the picture merits visit after visit to grasp all its glories.” — N. Y. Telegram.

“The most amazingly beautiful motion picture ever screened. Moves swiftly, never wearying, and leaving at the last a regret that it is over.” — N. Y. Mail.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is all that has been claimed for it; the people burst into applause again and again. Don’t miss it.” — N. Y. Tribune.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower ranks high alongside of the best in romantic screen drama with a beauty of background which has not to our knowledge been surpassed. The scene showing Marion Davies in an attitude of prayer is one of the finest moments which we have seen in the cinema.” — N. Y. World.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is dazzling to the eye, splendidly impressive and apparently true to the time and places of its settings. Marion Davies really outdoes herself, while Lyn Harding is a joy. Such a King! Such a King!” — N. Y. Times.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is everything that a spectacular photoplay should be. It is beautiful, exciting, vivid and authentic. It is a great picture.” — Robert E. Sherwood in “Life.”

“A gorgeous spectacle not to be missed.” — Boston Traveler.

“For luxury of settings, excellence of casting, and faithfulness to detail, When Knighthood Was in Flower is the acme of art in screen-dom.” — Boston Telegram.

“For gorgeous and sheer beauty, there probably has never been another photoplay that can equal this one.” — Boston Globe.

“If the motion picture public fails to appreciate When Knighthood Was in Flower, then its plea for better films is all a sham.” — Boston Post.

“Neither time, thought nor expense has been spared to make When Knighthood Was in Flower what it is—a truly gorgeous spectacle.” — Mae Tine, Chicago Tribune.

“It is, in some respects, the most finished product ever turned out of a studio.” — Detroit News.

“It forms one of the most auspicious occasions in screen history. All the arts of the theatre have been harmonized in this splendid production. It is a feast to the eye; a play that will delight those who revel in fascinating romances.” — Detroit Free Press.

“It is the richest, most entertaining and by far the most spectacular photoplay that we have ever seen.” — Detroit Times.

“Marion Davies is a star of the first magnitude, and When Knighthood Was in Flower is one of the half dozen finest pictures ever produced.” — Milwaukee Journal.

“Even better than we were led to expect.” — Washington Star.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is a picture every man, woman and child should see. Every writer should see it, every member of the motion picture industry. It is the greatest argument against censorship I have ever seen, and proves conclusively that the moving picture industry will never surrender the coveted place it now holds as one of the great arts. It will fascinate the spectator and is an incentive for every producer to contribute something better and bigger to the screen than he has in the past. Give us more like it.” — H. H. Van Loan (Famous Author)

“One Week of Love from an audience viewpoint, is made on platinum and set with pearls” — Film Daily, Nov. 12-'22.

Your latest production, "The Pride of Palomar" which has just completed a week at my Capitol Theatre has occasioned so very many enthusiastic comments that I am forced to take out the good picture set into the Madison for week of December 17th and insist that you let me play this production another week at my Madison Theatre. This is only the second time in the history of my theatres that I have done this. "The Pride of Palomar" is undoubtedly one of the best productions of the year.

EVERY prediction has been fulfilled. Constance Binney in "A Bill of Divorcement" is superb entertainment.

In dramatic strength it even exceeds the power of the stage play which amazed New York, startled London and in Chicago lived up to its reputation as one of the biggest hits of 1921-1922.

Joe Dannenberg of Film Daily saw the feature and wrote "A fine picture—one that is going to start them talking because of the wallop it contains. For sheer dramatic entertainment it can hardly be surpassed."

The National Board of Review (Exceptional Photoplays, November, 1922) declares, "It has an essential merit deserving of wide appreciation."

Constance Binney's work is simply amazing. Her exquisite beauty lends an appealing background to her poignant interpretation of a daughter who sacrifices her own future for the happiness of a divorced mother and the salvation of a lonely father.

Fay Compton, Malcolm Keen, Henry Victor and others complete "an exceptionally capable and well suited cast and all credit is due Denison Clift, who made the picture," to again quote Film Daily.

Associated Exhibitors proudly proclaims Constance Binney in "A Bill of Divorcement," combining the name of an alluring star with the fame of a great stage play, as an emotionally perfect photoplay and a genuine first run attraction.

Think This Over

"Exhibitors Herald" receives and prints more communications from exhibitors than all the other motion picture trade papers combined.
Are you buying pictures by the calendar or by their quality?

Whenever you buy a picture by the calendar you are paying a premium for its newness quite apart from its quality.

What are your audiences after, just newness or quality?

Which pleases them the most, a poor or fair new feature or a smashing good old one with a real record for success and of popular approval?

Out of the many fine features Pathé has released during the past two and three years, fifteen have been selected as being distinctly worthy of revival. You couldn’t get fifteen better pictures at any price. They are real audience pictures with stars, casts, production, stories and direction that would be difficult to match today.

Compared to the prices you have to pay for new features of indifferent quality the prices are amazingly cheap.

Buy low, yet please all. Do you know of any better merchandising principle than that?

A New Year's

We announce herewith to the Exhibitors of North America a group of powerful, ably-made, popular productions of character and box-office value; each picture sold alone on its own independent rating in keeping with its true value to the theatre that is to present it.

These productions constitute our releases for the second quarter of the 1922-1923 season and again assist in stamping American Releasing Corporation as one of the three big, dependable national distributors controlling sufficient product to supply any theatre's complete needs for feature-length attractions.

The variety of this second quarter's output is equal to that of the biggest factors in the industry. All of these productions are completed and already in or on the way to our branch offices.

"THE BOHEMIAN GIRL," Harley Knoles' tremendously beautiful romance. This is one of three great productions of the past two years. It ranks with "Robin Hood" and "When Knighthood Was In Flower." A cast never exceeded in any picture. Beautiful Gladys Cooper, Ivor Novello, Constance Collier, Ellen Terry, C. Aubrey Smith. Griffith has just signed Novello for his next big special. Novello will be the successor to Valentino in popularity. Gladys Cooper is the greatest screen discovery of the year. Exhibitors will remember Aubrey Smith in "The Witching Hour" and Novello in "Carnival." Women fans will rave over him.

"THE GRUB-STAKE," Nell Shipman's tremendous new drama of Alaska. This production was written by Miss Shipman and directed by Bert Van Tuyle, with Miss Shipman herself codirecting. The splendid cast supporting Miss Shipman includes: Alfred Allen, Walt Whitman, George Berrell, Hugh Thompson, George Hernandez and C. K. Van Auker. The big, basic situation in this picture is the refusal at first of an Alaskan gambler to grub-stake a Seattle girl for a trip into Alaska, his later decision to stake her; his deception of the girl; his tricking her into marriage; the effort of this gambler to rid himself of the girl's father, and the flight of the girl and her father through the Alaskan wastes, and their final discovery of the famous Lost Valley and its big gold depositories. In this picture you see Alaska in all of its primitive wildness and rawness, with the biggest and truest picture of the country that we have ever seen in a motion picture. It has the "sourdough" atmosphere in every inch of it and the picture will stand tremendous exploitation, which it invites and encourages.

"THE MARRIAGE CHANCE." A Hampton Del Ruth comedy with a dramatic shock. A finer cast in one picture than some distributors have in a year's output. Lovely Alta Allen, Milton Sills, Henry B. Walthall, Tully Marshall, Mitchell Lewis and Irene Rich. Look at the reviews in the trade papers. Look at Harrison's Reports. See our trade advertisements. Here is a surprise picture with comedy, melodrama, mystery and a cast to brag about.

"THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER," Mark Twain's immortal romance. Pre-released since October. At its Minneapolis premier week of November 19th it stood the town on its ear and received tremendous exploitation. For gross we predict that this picture will top everything you have played recently in public satisfaction.
“THE DANGER POINT,” a Halperin Production, directed by Lloyd Ingraham, starring Carmel Myers, Joseph Dowling, (his best role since “The Miracle Man”) and W. P. Carleton. The story of what happened to a young wife whose husband was “too busy to love.” See the fine reviews in the trade papers. It will please everywhere. The story is by Victor Hugo Halperin.

“THAT WOMAN,” starring beautiful Catherine Calvert and directed by Harry O. Hoyt. An F. C. Mims production. An excellent supporting cast around an extremely handsome star. The story of a stage beauty who married a millionaire’s son and went through hell to prove that she really loved him.

“AS A MAN LIVES,” an Achievement Films Production, directed by J. Searle Dawley, with an all-star cast, Robert Fraser, Gladys Hulette, Frank Losee. A powerful romantic action-drama, with a melodramatic wallop. Filled with exploitation possibilities and sure to get money for exhibitors.

“THE WEB OF THE LAW.” A Gibson and Dyer Ranger Production, directed by Tom Gibson. The story of a Texas ranger who rounds up his gang of train bandits. This is a fast story of its kind and type, sold on a fair sales schedule.

“MILADY.” Right where Fairbanks’ “Three Musketeers” ended at the final fade-out, this wonderful production begins. It is a tremendous romantic melodrama by Dumas junior and the heroine is the villainess of “The Three Musketeers.” Any exhibitor who ever did big business with “Musketeers” will clean up with “Milady,” which, in some ways, is a better, bigger, more thrilling drama than the Fairbanks’ story. Put all your pep and ginger behind smashing this over big. This is a big Diamant-Berger production of romance, intrigue, loyalty, treachery.

“A SON OF THE DESERT,” by Wm. Merrill McCormick. An F. W. Kraemer Production, featuring Marin Sais, supported by Wm. McCormick and Robert Burns. This picture is released on a moderate sales schedule, with a large exhibitor patronage awaiting it in certain first run houses and for the neighborhood houses at all points.

“ONE MILLION IN JEWELS.” A. J. P. McGowan Production, written and directed by Mr. McGowan. A fast, vigorous, surprising story of an attempt to smuggle into America the Russian crown jewels. A splendid cast comprising Helen Holmes, Mr. McGowan himself, as “Burke of the Secret Service,” Elinor Faire, Charles Craig and half a dozen other widely known players. This picture was photographed in New York City, Havana, Cuba, Key West and Miami. The story has all the old thrill that has made McGowan pictures popular with exhibitors. Produced by William B. Brush.

“VENGEANCE OF THE DEEP.” An A. B. Barringer Production, made in Honolulu and Los Angeles. A big cast including Ralph Lewis, Virginia Brown Faire, Maida Vale, Van Mattimore and Harmon MacGregor. Your exhibitors are going to be delighted with the thrilling, under-water episodes of this fine melodrama that pack a terrific wallop.
Tell your patrons of this great novelty picture — and it'll go BIG!

Says Charlie Yong—50-50 American:

"You marry me or I kill Lo Sang Ken!"

To my notion the moment thing a man can do is to spit away the feet of a play. I never do it. I have not done it this series of "East is West" advertisements. All I have is that Ming Toy, the little "Chinese" said who doesn't want, means to settle among American (Billy Benson) as a man burned to a liveboat to be sold into slavery. That happens in China and presently little Ming Toy San Francisco. I have not and not she gets them, or at least San Francisco a new will pop up—the 50-50 man Charles Yong, who is going to get Ming Toy if he used her and murder everyone else.

That does create a situation! Charlie Yong is the finest character nearly king of San Francisco, and he usual what he wants. I don't mind saying he is the most ordinary contented and ever ran across and that I felt extreme delight in seeing him get Ming Toy. Charlie one of the fellows such as a big lump of grinning that you want to kick him down every time you even if you have to hire a carpenter to build that same pleasure to dislike Charlie Yong, a man feel and better for disliking him. To sit there and dislike Yong for half an hour is better than going to chum away finding that this is not a good old way there are people left that you can dislike as joyous dislike Charlie Yong. And even Pilsner, dear do be glad—glad to see what Charlie Yong gets rest of "East is West."

Look for my last advertisement next week.

She—Ming Toy—belong to Charlie Yong—"Not if I know it," says Billy Benson

This is the last of the set advertisements I was to write about "East is West," and it has been good at it to talk to ten million people, writing what I pleased, and getting paid for it. I think I have done pretty well as an advertisements writer and I'm going to be disappointed if at least ten million do not see "East is West" because of these advertisements. My whole picture was to be accounted for.

And now for my grand finale and bow. Before I agreed to write these advertisements I went to see "East is West." If I had not thought it was a good picture I would not have agreed to write anything. I did like the picture. I really remember one picture I liked better—and I wrote that one myself. "East is West" has drama, thrill, fun and plot and some of Ming Toy reveals shades of emotion—from broad fan to appealing yowl—such as she has never shown before. Her scenes, or I mean my scenes. If I am not rightly counting "East is West" is going to be a tremendous success. That's what I think. I wish every one of my 50,000 readers who see the picture could tell me whether they think as I do. I think the other two and I do not hesitate to urge you to see it at the first opportunity. I thank you.

And I thank you.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT TO FRANCHISE HOLDERS

Of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

It is now almost three years since Associated First National Pictures, Inc., put into effect the franchise system.

Though First National has never contended that the franchise method of selling pictures is entirely perfect, and that all the problems involved in establishing stable and sound methods of dealing between Distributor and Exhibitor have been settled, First National has no apologies to offer for its efforts. I believe that in the Franchise Plan First National has made a great forward step.

First National is as firmly convinced as ever that a great many exhibitors who have invested large sums of money in motion picture theatres desire to be assured of protection for their film supply and placed in a position where they can maintain their independence as exhibitors. The motion picture industry will be firmly established only when there is a proper balance between Producer, Distributor and Exhibitor, which leaves them all secure, both in their policies and investments.

Independence and protection still remain the basic principles of our franchise, and therein it has been eminently successful. Moreover, in establishing the franchise, First National has made the first notable effort to do away with the old system of individual barter and unfairly varying prices, and to substitute in place firm and properly adjusted prices.

It has been and still will be, our organization's constant effort to bring about more equitable methods of dealing between Producer and Exhibitor, and we are hopeful that the great majority of our franchise holders will realize that their cooperation with us will continue to maintain an organized continuity of effort for the object which means so much to us all.

I feel confident that those franchise holders who believe the plan unsuited to their peculiar circumstances should not be asked to continue under franchise. So, if there are franchise holders who do not share my faith in the First National franchise, I wish to announce the willingness of our organization to cancel the franchise of such exhibitors. Moreover, it is the desire of First National that those franchise holders who are released, if they have faithfully and fairly lived up to their franchise obligations in the past, should suffer no loss on account of the money they paid out in the purchase of the voting trust certificates involved in the sale of the franchise.

Any franchise holder who is not in default under his franchise, who desires to terminate his franchise, as of June 30, 1923, or any subsequent time can do so by giving First National six months' notice at any time. It makes no difference whether the notice is given before January 1st, 1923, so long as six months notice is given to First National and provided that the termination cannot become effective prior to June 30, 1923.

Therefore, First National is willing, at this time, in cancelling such franchises, to refund to the franchise holder who is not in default under his franchise, the consideration paid for the voting trust certificates in the form of film service consisting of such pictures as First National determines are available in each instance, which must be taken advantage of within six months of notice of cancellation.

First National will, of course, account to its Producers for this service first as if it had received the rentals in cash.

In making this voluntary statement (which goes far beyond First National's legal obligations under the franchise) I request that notice be sent immediately by any dissatisfied franchise holders to the Manager of the Exchange by whom they are being served, so that it may be determined by First National as to whether such franchise holder has been in default and is entitled to this adjustment. Needless to say, I include in this suggestion franchise holders who have sent in their notice prior to January 30, 1923.

So there may be no misunderstanding, I would say that, under this arrangement, the franchise holder when cancelling, will have to forego all his rights in the voting trust certificates.

In making this announcement, I wish to say that First National has no other motives than those herein expressly stated. I believe that the great majority of our franchise holders have sufficient confidence in the future of First National, and in the forward looking, and perhaps somewhat bold effort First National has made in establishing franchise, to continue with us. I invite such franchise holders to remain members of the First National "franchise family." But those franchise holders who do not wish to continue will, I hope, appreciate the fairness of our voluntary suggestion and terminate their franchise with the same friendly feeling toward First National that First National has, and will have, toward them.

The motion picture industry requires, more than anything else, the spirit of goodwill and fair dealing between all engaged in it. It is in this spirit and with high hopes for the future of First National as an organization grounded on the principle of fairness toward both independent Exhibitors and independent Producers, that I am making this announcement, and I hope it will be received in the same spirit by all our franchise holders.

Arbuckle

The lifting of the Hays' ban on Roscoe Arbuckle was inevitable. However, Mr. Will H. Hays doubtless did not enter into the task confronting him with any degree of enthusiasm whatsoever.

At the time the Arbuckle pictures were ruled off the screen, following Arbuckle's acquittal, Mr. Hays simply acted as an instrument of popular opinion in standing in the way of the immediate circulation of pictures featuring the comedian who had been involved in the unsavory scandal.

It would have been very bad judgment to have attempted the circulation of Arbuckle pictures at that time. And the opinion, inside and outside the trade, was unanimous on that point.

But it was inevitable that the matter eventually would reach a status wherein the keeping of Arbuckle from the means of a livelihood would have amounted to both a cruel persecution and an arbitrary censorship. Mr. Hays could not have remained consistent had he assumed the position that he be allowed to keep up his little private censorship of Arbuckle and Arbuckle pictures and at the same time continued pronouncing against all other kinds of censorship.

We regret to see the Arbuckle pictures return—probably not as much as Mr. Hays, however—but there is no just or reasonable escape. It cannot be expected that those who have large sums of money invested in unpublished pictures would be willing to throw these pictures away; neither would it be reasonable to expect Arbuckle to seek new fields for his labors. And unless these two things happened, Arbuckle and Arbuckle pictures must come back.

We regret the return of Arbuckle pictures, not because we do not feel it is just and right to give him the chance he is now receiving, but because the incident already has attracted much unfavorable criticism of the industry and pictures generally and it will continue to do so for some time to come.

The whole matter has become a very delicate problem for the industry. The industry will suffer regardless of the fate of the forthcoming Arbuckle pictures, but this could only have been escaped had Mr. Hays and those elements of the business for which he speaks assumed a cowardly and unjustifiable position. The question is now up to the public; and this is as it should be. The public need not go to Arbuckle pictures—but it probably will, and in large numbers.

In view of the decidedly delicate and uncomfortable position the industry is in on the Arbuckle question, which position it was thrust into without any alternative, it might seem that Mr. Sydney S. Cohen would have given consideration to the unfortunate and unavoidable circumstances and, hence, would have refrained from dipping his oar in the troubled waters. But to have done this would have been doing something quite foreign to the Mr. Cohen the industry has been observing for the past two or three years.

Of course, Mr. Cohen for the purpose of building a little cheap capital had to join hands with the assailants of the screen and issue a statement criticizing Mr. Hays, the return of Arbuckle, etc. If it were assumed that Mr. Cohen was sincere in the statement he issued it would be very interesting to know what he had hoped to accomplish by it. To convey the opinion that the industry is divided on the question certainly can do nothing but to afford comfort to the enemies of the business. If it was his intention to discourage exhibitors from using the Arbuckle pictures, he might have discovered some means of communication not quite so blatant as a public statement. But, here again, the Cohen motive is quite obvious.

Re-Takes

J. R. M.

Don't forget to write it 1923.

And before we forget it, we want to say we wish you all a happy and prosperous New Year.

Strange, Is It Not?

Isn't it funny how little interest one takes in the price of turkeys the day after Christmas?

These Is Dry Days!

That slim company that sent out the hip pocket flasks ought to have explained what they're for.

Here's How

By the way, we want to thank the thousands who thoughtfully sent us Christmas and New Year's greetings.

Picking a Hall o' Fame!

Dear Bill:—

Youse ask me to tell you who's de greatest fellum guys in dis biz. Well, now I'll tell you, Bill, it's a little ticklish to leave out any 'em and when you try to pair 'em down to ten—well you just can't do it. There's Felix the Cat, and Mutt and Jeff, and a lot o' other good comedians that's going to be sore. An' yuh can't blame 'em—much. 'Cause if they start something why it'll leave a wreck o' your business. So let's start right down the line an' put in everybody, Abe Kibibble, Bull Montana, Rodolph Valentino, Flora Finch, Corona, Underwood, Remington, Chas, Dickens, Robinson Crusoe, Santa Claus and all the rest. I'm enclosing the N. Y. city directory, the Chicago directory and the L. A. directory. Print 'em all, Bill, and save a lot o' grief. Yours fer a prosperous N'Year.

EVERYTHING'S O. K.

By Dan E. Daily

Well, now that Will Hays has a man on the West Coast to see that Mabel Normand doesn't eat peanuts in public and get written up in the newspapers And Fatty Arbuckle is to be allowed to come back and Wall street doesn't want any more coarse stuff. In English, or any other language. It begins to look as though everything is going to be "apple sauce." From now on, both for the exhibitors and the producers. Of course if the exhibitors start to make pictures, and distributing them, and the producers start to buy up houses—why the fight'll start all over. But in the meantime, let's be cheerful.
Maxson R. Doolittle Dies at Minneapolis
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Dec. 27.—Maxson R. Doolittle, former publicity director of the Criterion Theatre, New York, and lately Paramount exploiter at Minneapolis, died at his home this afternoon of Friday, December 15th, at Minneapolis. A public memorial service was held in Eau Claire, Wisconsin, on his birthday last Saturday. He was a thirty-one year old and is survived by his wife and mother.

Doolittle was one of the best known and beloved figures in theatrical, being affiliated with pictures since he was old enough to usher in a theatre. At an early age he acquired the Orpheum company and sold out to Eau Claire, which he sold later to join the art staff of Finkelstein and Rubin in the Twin Cities, going from there to New York.

Opening of New House Brings Cut in Prices
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The Barcli theatre has just announced a cut in admission prices. This has largely been brought on through the opening of the New State theatre, one of the Strand chain of houses, and which overshadows all other, Schenectady theatres in size and magnificence. The Barcli also adjoins downtown house. Admission was dropped from 20 and 30 cents to 15, 22 and 25. The Barcli has also deepened when in the trade, having and will provide music by an organ instead. A policy of split-weeks, two features to the week, rather than a double feature for all seven days, will hereafter prevail at the house.

Dividends Declared by Associated Exhibitors
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—The board of directors of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., at its December meeting, voted to declare a 2 per cent current dividend on preferred stock for the last quarter of 1922, payable to stockholders of record as of December 22nd. This is the fourth 2 per cent quarterly dividend declared this year. The directors voted also to declare a 2 per cent accrued and unpaid dividend on preferred stock for the year 1921 to stockholders of record as of September 1, 1921. Both dividends are payable January 4, 1923.

New Firms Incorporate

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 27.—There is a beginning of movement picture companies incorporated in New York state the past week. Combined, they represented a capitalization of $598,500. They were all from New York City.

Hays Decision Leaves Fate Of Arbuckle Films to Public
Comedian, Not Reinstated by M. P. P. D. A. Chief, Is Merely Given Opportunity to Return to Screen If People Will Permit It

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors, has not reinstated Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, as has been reported in many press stories.

This is made clear in an official statement issued last week in Chicago where Mr. Hays made a brief stay while en route from the West Coast to his home in Sullivan, Ind.

Arbuckle Given Chance—Public to Decide Future

Mr. Hays' action in lifting the ban placed on the comedian following his three trials merely gives the star an opportunity to return to his profession, but places his future success within the power of public opinion. President Hays' action has aroused antagonism in many quarters. On the other hand, there are those who believe the step he has taken is correct and that the public itself should be the judge of the player's future.

 Upholding the action taken by Mr. Hays is Arthur Brisbane, noted editorial writer, who writes in the Chicago Herald and Examiner, says:

"In dealing with the Arbuckle case Will H. Hays was in a hard position. Reinstating Arbuckle is not generally popular, and he knew it would not be.

"Public opinion in this case is formed by those that have come to regard the story that tried and acquitted Arbuckle, made up of eight women, and four women, no church members, not even a woman or a woman. Arbuckle, but signed this statement: "Acquittal is not enough for Roscoe Arbuckle. We feel that a great injustice has been done him, for there was not the slightest proof adduced to connect him in any way with the commission of an offense,"

"Hays knew that reinstating Arbuckle would not be a good thing for Hays, or for the motion picture industry. But like the judges that discharged Arbuckle, Hays was obliged to accept the facts, and accept as they are.

"The entire matter is unnecessary. No one need ever see Arbuckle on the stage again. The main thing is the moving pictures, greatest educational force since the invention of the printing press.

"Let the Public Judge"

Northwestern motion picture interests have assumed a "let the public be the judge" attitude. W. A. Steffes, president of the Minnesota division of the M. P. T. O. A., declared that the members of his organization would accept the position of re- versing their position and that no attempt would be made to exhibit the Arbuckle pictures unless the public demands them. A similar attitude was expressed by Theodore Hays general manager of Finkelstein & Rubin theatres. He states that if it means that the pub makes the decision, Fink- elstein wants the Arbuckle films before his houses will present them.

While expressing surprise in the action of Mr. Hays, the national headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A., declared that "as the public alone constitute the judges of what should or should not appear on the screen the American people will determine whether or not they want Arbuckle films."

This statement leaves the way clear for members of the organization to choose their own course in the matter.

In a statement issued following first announcement of Mr. Hays' action, the National Board said: "The National Board is still of the opinion that Mr. Arbuckle, having been tried by a jury of his peers, and the public of the charge brought against him, justice demands he should be allowed to go before the bar of public opinion, and public opinion must now decide either Mr. Arbuckle as a public entertainer."

In answering his many critics among church workers, Mr. Hays said: "I neither sponsor him nor stand in his way, but in the spirit of American fair play and I hope of Christian charity I propose that we all leave it to the public, if he can have his chance. It is absolutely right. I am content."

Mr. Hays further said that his action did not mean a reduction or restriction in any way on the opportunity of publication of pictures already made. He said that in his opinion every man was entitled to his chance to make good and that Ar- buckle's conduct during his trouble merits that chance.

For a brief resume of the situation in the various states and cities of the country:

Committee of Fifty, comprised of church representatives in St. Louis, says Hays' action is "indescribable and unwiseful.

Troy and Albany, N. Y., theatres have gone on record as opposing exhibition of the Arbuckle films.

Mayor Lew Shank of Indianapolis states that he will not permit presentation of the pictures.

N. M. McCullough of Anderson, Ind., says the Arbuckle pictures will not be shown in any of the theatres.

The Motion Picture Bureau of the National Catholic Welfare Council, in voicing opposition to Mr. Hays' action, says that Mr. Hays and his employers have as yet failed to appreciate that the American people are, as a whole, clean minded and demand that their entertain- ment, whether on the stage or on the screen, be wholesome as well as artistic and entertaining."

The National Education Association has requested Mr. Hays to reconsider his action.

The censorship board in Pennsylvania has announced that it will not act in the matter unless the pictures themselves warrant it. Mayor Curley of Boston said that he believed all Arbuckle films should be barred.

The Ithaca club women have protested against showing of the Arbuckle pictures, although no action is being taken by the censorship-board.

The independent exhibitors of Wisconsin are to produce by Joseph M. Schenck, who declared in answering critics of Mr. Hays' action:

"It is not Christianlike of ministers to condemn Arbuckle before he has been heard. Arbuckle is willing to meet these charges and face the camera and at any place to defend himself."
“Prosperity Dinner” Mystery Stirs New York Trade

Unauthorized Use of Names of Leaders of Industry Is Denounced by Film Men

By JOHN S. SPARGO

(New York Editor, Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, December 27.—David R. Hochreich today called off his much heralded “welcome prosperity dinner of the motion picture industry,” thus shrouding in deeper mystery an affair which has aroused leaders in the business. The event was scheduled to have been held on January 11.

According to Mr. Hochreich’s letter and publicity articles which have been broadcasted for the past couple of weeks, this “welcome prosperity dinner” was to be one of the biggest and most glorious things ever projected into this industry or any other.

But what the people who make up the personnel of the industry here in New York were told, the letter said, was that no such dinner was to be held.

“Who appointed him chairman of the committee on arrangements?”

“What is he going to give them for $25 per plate?”

“Who gets the money the Astor hotel debt? Do they owe?”

“And what is it all about anyway?”

Quoting from one of Mr. Hochreich’s letters to a prominent man of affairs:

“On Thursday evening, January 11 next, a most representative gathering of 2,000 of the leading leaders of nearly every branch of business, political, art and amusement fields, besides representatives of the press, will be held at the Waldorf Astoria dinner to be held in the grand ball room of the Hotel Astor.

“A committee is being formed and such representative men of action as Charles M. Schwab, William Randolph Hearst, David Belasco, Marcus Loew, Adolph Zukor, Governor-elect George S. Smith of New United States Senator-elect Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, Governor-elect Alfred E. Smith of New York, United States Senator John H. Rogers, B. S. Moss, P. A. Powers and Jules Mastbaum have already accepted.”

All of which listening like something big and grand, but the sole trouble was that a number of the men whose names were given as having accepted positions on the committee, and a number more whose names appeared on the printed stationery of Mr. Hochreich, stoutly asserted that their names were used without authority.

Others asserted that they were persuaded to allow their names to be used by the letter written by Mr. Hochreich giving the list of honored others and said he had said so.

Marcus Loew, whose name appears both in Mr. Hochreich’s letters and on the printed list of committee men, was most vehement in his denunciation of the use of his name. Said Loew: “I had a letter from Hochreich asking that I serve on the committee but never having heard of him, I thought I would find out who he is before accepting. I tried in various ways to learn something about him, but no one seemed to know him or anything about him. I then put the letter in the wastebasket and forgot all about the matter.

“The next I heard of it is when I am shown a printed letter head with my name as one of the committee. My name is there without authority. I don’t know anything about the dinner or about this Hochreich who is supposed to be giving it and I don’t want to. The methods used are enough to show that it is all wrong.

Adolph Zukor, head of Famous Players, whose name was one of the magnets which drew many names to the committee, also asserted that he gave no authority for the use of his name.

Mr. Zukor said: “I had a letter from some man named Hochreich asking me to allow my name to be used, but I gave no such permission. I recall sending him a perfunctory letter wishing him well or something like that, but he had no authority to say that he had agreed to be a member of the committee. Who is Hochreich and why the dinner?”

Several other men prominent in the industry who were named by Hochreich denied that their names were authorized, or stated that they had been misled into giving sanction to the affair by the use of the letters of the names of others whom they knew as being leaders in the industry.

Despite calling off of the dinner the question remains: “Who is Hochreich and what was the purpose of his proposed ‘welcome prosperity dinner’?”

Observe Completion of Six New Pictures With Dinner to Film Colony

Los Angeles, Dec. 27.—In celebration of the completion of six new productions, Warner Brothers, Sam, Jack, Abe and Harry M. Warner, last week gave a dinner to the able exhibitionists of the trade and the patriot of the industry at the Ambassador hotel.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Williams, Marie Prevost, Monte Blue, Pert Kelton, J. T. Torrence, S. S. Hops, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Josephson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beaumont, Mr. and Mrs. William Seiter, Harry Meyer, Claire Windsor, Mr. and Mrs. William Beaudine, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rapf, Chester Franklin, Marguerite Clayton, Pauline Starke, Millard Webb, Walter Long, Jack White, Cyril Chadwick.

The new production features completed are: “Rage to Riches” and “Heroes of the Street,” plus a number of productions featuring Wesley Barry; “Little Church Around the Corner,” from the stage play; F. Scott Fitzgerald’s “Flappers Will Be Flappers,” “We Three,” “The Happy D’Annez,” with Marie Prevost, Kenneth Harlan and others; “A Dangerous Adventure,” with Grace Darmond, and the Charles G. Norris novel, “Brass,” a Rapf production directed by Sidney Franklin. Sinclair Lewis’ “Main Street,” the last of the seven productions for this season, is in the course of production.

Claim Victory In Music Suit

Aarons States Dismissal of Motion Means Allegation Must Be Proved

(Please to Exhibitors Herald)

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Dec. 27.—What is considered by exhibitor leaders to be a signal victory in the “music tax” fight is the dismissal by Judge Smith in the United States District Court here of the suit by Wimmark & Son, members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, strike out the defendants, Pastime Amusement Company of Charleston, S. C., charged with infringement of the copyright law for playing excerpts from “Three Amigos.”

Offer Affirmative Defense

The answer of the defendant, which was presented by George P. Aarons, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, and his law associate, I. Emanuel Sauder, “set up as an affirmative defense that if the defendant had played short excerpts, it would not be an infringement of the copyright law, covering public performance of copyrighted musical composition, that there was no intent on the part of the defendants to use the business in the interest of the American Society composed of the majority of the composers, songwriters and publishers; that this society conducted its business so as to bring it within the purview of the Sherman antitrust act.”

Must Prove Allegations

“Dismissal of the motion,” says Mr. Aarons, “forces the plaintiffs to prove allegations that a motion picture theatre playing short excerpts from copyrighted musical composition is an infringement under the copyright act.”

(Mr. Aarons, 251 North 13th street, Philadelphia, requests other exhibitors who are threatened with suit, or actually sued, to communicate with him and he will advise them.)

Wilbur F. Crafts, Well Known Reformer, Dead

(Washington, D. C., Dec. 27—William F. Crafts, head of the International Reform Bureau, died at a hospital here today of pneumonia. During the past two years, main activity of his was against the motion picture industry. He started a wide spread movement to close theatres Sundays and headed the forces demanding federal censorship and other government control of films.

His plan to harness the screen was first made public in an exclusive interview in Exhibitors Herald in January, 1921.

Universal City Hit By $350,000 Blaze

Los Angeles, Dec. 27.—Universal City was the scene today of a fire which destroyed more than a million feet of film, wrecked a building, resulted in the loss of a man and caused a loss estimated at $350,000.

The film destroyed comprised only the prints, negatives being saved. Edward Curtis, film cutter, was slightly injured, while Norman Kerry, actor; Fred Archer, of the art title department; Frank Atkinson and Edward Curtis, film cutters, were slightly burned.
Rumor Valentino Will Produce for Williams
Gossip Has It Settlement With Paramount Is Near—Banker
Aids, Report
(Special to Exhibitor's Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Rodolph
Valentino's troubles with Paramount will be settled shortly after the first of the year, according to persistent rumor along Broadway, and the young Italian will head his own producing company making pictures to be released by J. D.
Williams' new company.

No confirmation of this can be had but it is asserted by those who claim to know that Dr. Giannini, of the East River National Bank, is the intermediary through whose intervention Valenti's troubles will be settled and he will again be placed in a position to make pictures.

Report Aid from Banker

According to the current gossip Dr. Giannini has been interested in the welfare of Valentino and shortly after the announcement of Valentino's break with Paramount, sought some way to prevent the ending of the star's promising career.
It is said that when it became evident that a peace could not be healed, efforts were made to secure Valentino's release from his Paramount contract, and that these are still under way, in spite of the continuance of the legal activities.

It is said that during the past months several conferences have been held between Dr. Giannini and Joseph Schenck, and that it is now planned, Valentino can be released from his Paramount contract, for Dr. Giannini to finance him in a series of pictures to be made under the direction of Mr. Schenck, and that these productions are to be distributed by the new J. D. Williams company.

All Go to West Coast

Dr. Giannini and Mr. Schenck went to Los Angeles on the same train about ten days ago and shortly after Mr. Williams also made the trip to the coast.

Lichtman Firm Moves
To New Headquarters
(Special to Exhibitor's Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Temporary quarters at 576 Fifth avenue have been abandoned by the Lichtman Corporation and equipment and personnel of the organization have removed into a permanent home at 1650 Broadway, occupying the ninth floor of the new building opposite the Capitol Theatre.

A private projection room is incorporated in the new quarters, which have been obtained with a view to accommodating an increase in the firm's forces and activities.

Many Editors Acclaim
“Orphans” Year’s Best
(Special to Exhibitor's Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—What is undoubtedly proving a welcome Christmas to D. W. Griffith is word in the form of a series of excellent notices in various sections of the country which in many motion picture editorials have named “Orphans of the Storm” as the best production of 1923. An example of this was the Advocate of Chicago,
Other of Griffiths productions have received similar honors in years past among them being “Birth of a Nation,” “Intolerance,” “Broken Blossoms,” and “Way Down East.”

Assure Plenty of Product
For Theatres During 1923

Distributing Organizations Announcing Plans for Coming Six Months—Take Steps to Provide Exhibitors With Complete Information

There will be no shortage of suitable product for the theatres in 1923.

With the opening of the new year, practically every distributing company has come forth with detailed statements of what the exhibitor may expect from it during the next six months and, in many cases, during the next twelve months.

Take Step Forward in Informing Theatre Owners

On every side, it is apparent that the distributor is making an earnest effort to put an end to many objectionable features of “blind buying.”

Advance trade showings; providing salesmen with “trailers,” and many other features are being taken up.

Traditional newspaper advertising, too, is constantly increasing in importance in the movement. Carefully written copy—pictures which are typical of the productions they are taken from—practical exploitation suggestions—are making this advertising more and more effective and more and more valuable to the exhibitor.

Within the past few weeks, a series of announcements from distributors have been printed in the Herald. In this is-ace, statements on product from seven companies appear.

First National Statement

Associated First National Pictures is about to issue a statement on its new acquisitions. The committee recently concluded an important meeting at Los Angeles and issues the following statement:

“We have carefully gone over the entire production situation in Los Angeles, both with respect to our company and others. We have satisfied ourselves that Los Angeles is the logical production center of the universe and we have decided that the majority of our pictures will be made in this city.

“A great many independent stars, directors and producers have submitted proposals to us, many of which are under serious consideration and a few of which have already been accepted.

“We have decided unhesitatingly that we will not make any statement of our new acquisitions until we return to our home office in New York.

“The outlook for the future of our company, both from a distributing and exhibition standpoint is exceedingly bright. We have lined up for our 1923-24 season the greatest number of box office attractions ever assembled under one company’s banner.

“We will have an independent star, director and producer to know and appreciate that Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has been and always will be, principally a distributing and exhibiting company and will always be receptive to making contractual relations for high-class films.”

Paramount’s Announcement

Beginning on page 65, the Herald in this issue gives a detailed announcement of Paramount’s plans for the next six months which includes the publishing of 39 pictures.

One of the most interesting points in the statement is that provisions are to be made with strips of films from the pictures to be offered. Under this plan, exhibitor will be given an idea of the films before booking them.

A brief description of each of 39 pictures is also contained in the announcement together with pictures of the stars, and directors and scenes from many of the productions.

Six Other Announcements

On pages 53 to 55, the Herald presents announcements of products from Universal, Lichtman, Goldwyn, American Releasing, Cosmopolitan, and Arrow that are designed to aid the exhibitor making his plans for the coming year.

In the past few weeks, the Herald has contained detailed statements of future products from several other companies, and is arranging for similar announcements from the remaining companies.

Universal’s announcement on page 57 describes the twelve Jewels to be issued one-a-month in 1923. Mr. Christman lists twelve pictures for the coming year.
Goldwyn gives an interesting statement on nine pictures for 1923. American Releasing makes public the ten pictures with which it opens the year. Cosmopolitan announces 29 productions for 1923. Arrow reveals his first eight pictures for the year.

J. Searle Dawley Will Make Own Productions
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—J. Searle
Dawley has organized J. Searle Daw-ley Productions and will make his own pictures in the future. With Mary Carr as the star he is ready to begin production of the first subject.

Mr. Dawley has directed numerous stars in the past among them Mary Pickford, Pearl White, Richard Barthelmess and others.

Moeller Visits Butte
To Organize Theatres
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

BUTTE, MONT.—Dec. 27.—A. J.
Moeller, general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was in Butte with a view to organizing Montana theatres as a unit of the national organization.

A meeting was called at the Broadway theatre, where Mr. Moeller was scheduled to address a gathering of exhibitors.
Burr Regards Distribution As Being at Critical Stage

Predicts Two Large Concerns Routing Pictures Over Chains Unless There Is Thorough "House Cleaning" Soon

In discussing the present condition of the industry last week, C. C. Burr made the startling prediction that unless a decided change is put into effect at once—"a change that will guarantee a square deal all around and stabilize the business"—that within six months, the booking of pictures will be done in precisely the same manner as attractions for the speaking stage are handled. In other words, that there will be at least two large concerns routing pictures over a circuit of houses, similar to the Erlanger and Shubert booking combined for the legitimate.

"Such film booking organizations," says Mr. Burr, "will consist of the present big producing and theatre companies. The prevailing method of distributing organizations, independent producers and the recently formed booking combines on the other."

Therefore, in Mr. Burr's opinion, that should not change for the better take place in the present method of booking or selling product to the exhibitors of the country within few months, an entirely new arrangement will be put into effect that will pattern itself after the two stage booking combinations.

"My own personal opinion," said Mr. Burr, "is that only one thing can be done to prevent such a drastic and unfortunate move. The industry must have a thorough house cleaning which will result in a standardization of business methods which will affect every phase of the industry. Methods that will guarantee a square deal all around, one that will bring the producer, distributor and exhibitor into perfect harmony."

In discussing the prevailing method of booking pictures, Mr. Burr says that in most instances there is entirely too much bargaining between the producer and the exhibitor. The practice of "gyping" the producer is far too prevalent, he says, and is one of the things that should be stopped, unless the producer, theaters, and distributor want to see two such booking companies as he predicts, come into being.

"A readjustment at this moment is needed, and needed badly," continued Mr. Burr, "yet if no other solution offers itself, if the big producers and the exhibitors cannot get together and iron out their differences for the good of all concerned, if there are no compromises of some sort which will put the industry on a more businesslike basis, then the division line will come, let the consequences be what they may.

"The chief trouble is the uneven and often discriminating bargaining between the producer and the exhibitor. This could be eliminated by adopting a uniform system of percentage booking. This remedy has been advocated consistently for some time. Nevertheless, the fact that combinations of exhibitors for less than the present rate being formed almost daily is sure proof of the fact that the present system of hit-or-miss bargaining, has failed utterly. Percentage booking is the salvation.

"A further split in the ranks of the industry would only prolong matters which must ultimately meet a more logical solution. At the same time, such a split as I foresee, unless there is a sure remedy, will serve only to aggravate matters and make feeling all around more unyielding.

"The signs all point one way or another. Let us hope, for the good of the industry, the proper actors will read the signs aright."

Protest Griffith Film As Aid to Ku Klux Klan

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—A protest against publication of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" has been registered by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce because it is believed that presentation of the film will act as propaganda for the recruiting of membership to the present Ku Klux Klan.

Reports Gap Between Publication Time in U. S.-Britain Closing

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The outstanding feature of the motion picture industry in Great Britain during the last twelve months has been the reduction in the length of time between the American and British release dates," says John Cecil Graham, manager of the Famous Players Film Company, Ltd., and Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., the British Paramount organizations, who, accompanied by Mrs. Graham and their daughter Dorothy, is in New York on his annual visit to the home office of the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation.

"The state of affairs which has existed since the war has steadily improved under the operation of the law of supply and demand and during the coming year we will be able to bring our schedule within from six to twelve months of the release date in this country. When one recalls that this difference in schedules was often from one to two years for a period of several years one can begin to appreciate the changes that have taken place abroad," he pointed out.

Mr. Graham will remain in New York until the first of the year for a series of conferences with E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department.

Sawyer and Lubin Build First Studio at San Diego

Mayor of City Makes Address of Welcome—Many Stars of Screen Present at Laying of Cornerstone

(Los Angeles, December 27.—Arthur H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, producers of SL pictures for Metro, have achieved a long-cherished ambition to build and operate their own studio. Before a crowd of several hundred people, the cornerstone of the new SL plant was laid at San Diego. This will be the first motion picture studio to operate in that city.

Using a silver trowel, Barbara La Marr, star of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," an SL picture, laid the cornerstone for the first stage of the new studio. The ceremony was attended by a galaxy of motion picture celebrities from Los Angeles and Hollywood.

Among those present were Elmo Lincoln, Hank Mann, Allen Ray, Rosamund Theby, Lon Chaney, Louise Fazenda, Clarence G. Badger, Director of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," Walter Hiers and others. Mayor E. W. Porter made the address of welcome to Mr. Sawyer and his associates, to which Mr. Sawyer responded:

"The laying of the cornerstone for SL studios today marks the initial construction of a series of stages intended to accommodate fourteen producing units. I believe that San Diego is an ideal location for a project of this kind, and the building of these studios will provide motion picture producers with an opportunity to secure completely new atmosphere and exterior locations."

"It is the intention of Herbert Lubin and myself to produce SL special pictures here immediately the new studios are completed, and I am sure that other film makers will appreciate the opportunity to secure stage space in a city which has equal advantages with Hollywood in the way of facilities, locations, etc. When completed it is expected that SL studios will report an investment of more than one million dollars and it is only through the co-operation and assistance of the various leading business men of San Diego that the laying of this cornerstone today has been made possible. Incidentally, all future SL productions intended for release by Metro Picture Corporation will be made under the supervision of Arthur H. Sawyer in the Metro West Coast studios at Hollywood until completion of the plant now being built at Grossmont Park, San Diego, California."

In addition to the speech of Mr. Sawyer, brief speeches were made by F. M. White, general manager of Benson Lumber Company; Colonel Bishop of the Marine Corps, Clarence Badger and Barbara La Marr.

SL studios will be erected on a plot of twenty acres at Grossmont Park, and in addition to the fourteen stages will include a large administration building. The stages have been designed and will be built under the personal direction of Edward J. Shurtleff, well-known technical director and responsible for the technical work in several of Metro's biggest pictures.

The new building will include in addition to the group of stages, a paint shop, a carpenter shop, costume room, property house, electrical shop, garage, photographic department and a special film laboratory. Additional space will include rooms for the use of directors, film cutters, accounting and publicity departments and executive offices.

The erection of SL studios is an important step forward in the development of the SL organization and the completion of the San Diego plant should place Sawyer and Lubin in the foremost ranks of motion picture producers. In connection with the new SL Pictures, the Western Film News has the complete co-operation of the San Diego Chamber of Commerce.

Europe Demands Big Films, Says Johnson

Ordinary Product Lucky to Get By First National Executive Reports

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—"The backbone has fallen out of Italian and German production. Exhibitors who have been depending on cheap German and Italian pictures have found out that they must have the high class American production despite the higher cost of such productions."

Like the Big Pictures

This is the report of Bruce Johnson, foreign manager for Associated First National who has just returned from a three months' trip abroad. Mr. Johnson further says that only high class pictures are demanded and that "ordinary American screen plays are lucky to get by because foreign producers can usually supply such pictures for their own market. But with the super productions made in America exhibitors can afford to pay a price commensurate with the production costs because the people in foreign countries are anxious to see such pictures."

Picture conditions in all countries except the central empires are improved Mr. Johnson reports. In Scandinavia, Italy and France producers have an advantage over Americans as the theatres will take in as much money with the home-made product as with ordinary American production and the pictures only cost about $10,000 to make.

Cuts Poster Costs

In England Mr. Johnson found that too much was being charged for posters by the renters and reports an increase in sale and more advertising as a result of a reduction in cost at First National offices.

Evangelist Denounces Brothers Who Sponsor Blue Sunday Measures
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

WABASH, IND., Dec. 27.—The Rev. Matt. J. Allen, an evangelist who is conducting meetings here, has criticised ministers of the Wabash churches for their stand in regard to Sunday movies. He said "a lot of ministers have lost their courage" and are sending out S. O. S. calls to close all places of business on Sunday so they can get an audience. He thinks of Jesus calling on the sheriff or chief of police to close everything so that he could get an audience.

"The advocates of the 'blue law' think," he continued, "that if they take away a man's automobile, his golf clubs or his Sunday paper on Sunday that he will drift back to church. They want everything closed except the church door. The work of the Christian minister is to lead souls to Jesus Christ and not to the police station."

The "blue laws" have been enforced here for three successive Sundays as a result of the prosecution by the ministers' association of William and J. H. Dickson, owners of a motion picture theatre that was opened on Sunday, Nov. 19.

Offer Further Details On "Music Tax" Case
(Washington Bureau, Exhibitors Herald)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 27.—Further details of the complaint of the motion picture owners against the association of authors, composers and music publishers have been furnished officials of the department of justice, it has been learned, and the department is now considering the complaint with a view to determining whether any action can be taken regarding the so-called monopolistic activities of which the exhibitors complain.

Because of the fact that the complaint is actually pending, officials of the department are reluctant to discuss the case, but it is understood that information regarding the "blue laws" has been submitted by the association of Washington to other interests, among them, it is said, certain music publishers. What information the publishers gave, however, or the attitude they have adopted on the question, could not be learned, nor could it be ascertained whether the federal trade commission has been asked to issue a formal complaint against the music interests.

Paramount Employees Are Santas to Poor
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Loaded with baskets of food and toys, scores of employees of the playing-Lasky Corporation who are members of the Paramount Pup Club, joined in bringing cheer to hundreds of homes in New York on Christmas day.

In the direction of Miss F. V. McGovern, chairman of the Educational and Welfare committee of the club, preparations had been made in advance and the organization of club members obtained in the distribution of the gifts. Approximately 400 families were given a cheerful Volstead through the club's efforts.

Passage of Film Bill Would Cost Trade Millions Yearly

Measure Now Before Congress Would Impose Fine of $1,000 and One Year Imprisonment for Transporting Inflammable Stock

The motion picture industry is facing an additional expenditure of $20,000,000 annually if Bill No. 1348, now before congress, which would prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of inflammable film is enacted, according to Jules E. Brulatour, distributor of sensitive films, manufactured by Eastman Kodak Company.

"This matter is a very important one," says Mr. Brulatour, "and we should all become very active at once so as to present a concerted front."

Violation Would Bring Year's Imprisonment

Violation of the law, if enacted, would be punished "by a fine of not more than $1,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

Under the provisions of the measure, films which have been given a protective covering designed to render the stock flame-proof when subjected to heat at or above a temperature of 75 degrees Fahrenheit are not prohibited from transportation.

The law if enacted would become effective in January, 1925. Its contents:

Effective in Two Years

"Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That on and after the 1st day of January, 1925, it shall be unlawful for any person to deposit or cause to be deposited in the United States mails, for mailing or delivery, or to deposit or cause to be deposited with any express company or other common carrier, for carriage, or to send or carry from one state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, to any other state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia or to bring or cause to be brought into the United States from any foreign country any inflammable films."

"That the word 'film' or the words 'inflammable films' as used in this Act shall mean material generally used for photographic purposes in the commercial photographic process of making a positive from a photographic negative (having a thickness not exceeding ten one-thousandths of an inch)."

 Defines Prohibited Film

"Inflammable films, shall mean a film or films made of, or from, any compound having the quality, character and content of, or that is or may be similar to nitrocellulose as the basic compound used in its or their manufacture, but shall not mean any such films that shall have been given any protective coating or covering designed to render and which renders the film flame-proof or to protect them against combustion, decomposition, or deterioration upon the application of or when subjected to heat at or above a temperature of seventy-five degrees Fahrenheit."

The word 'person' as used in this Act shall mean individual citizen, firms, associations, societies, corporations, copartnerships and partnerships.

"That any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall for each offense, upon conviction thereof, be punished by fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

Wampas Visit Mexico as Guests Of Louis Lewyn
West Coast Advertisers Frolic at Famous Resort—Poor Gusses on “Ponies” Cost Considerable Pocket Change
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, December 27.—If a telegraph editor in Tia Juana, Mexico, was required to cover this story for “Exhibitors Herald” instead of your local correspondent, probably this is the dispatch you would receive over the wire:

Tia Juana, December 16.—Party of forty—count 'em—wild men, who were labeled “Wampas,” arrived here today on pleasure bent; and most of them returned home that way—bent—and a few were absolutely broken.

But its own correspondent that's going to type the yarn, hence, we'll do away with the date line and other formalities, and get down to brass tacks.

The contingent of Western Motion Picture Advertisers, forty strong, departed for the Mexican border and the oasis of Tia Juana. Saturday morning nine o'clock aboard their special car "Wampip," as the guests of Louis Lewyn, producer of Snapshots and real good fellow. Those members of the association who were unable to join the party sent their regrets from various hospitals, jails and other institutions of confinement, before the train pulled out thus assuring President Arch Reeve that every able bodied man was doing his duty at his post.

The trip southward was uneventful other than that there were several marked changes in the financial status of the board members, the special pulled into San Diego, where the "fighting forty" disembarked for a hurried lunch prior to the dash for the border line and Jim Croft's "merry-go-round" at Tia Juana. While in San Diego, headquarters were established at the Hotel Maryland.

From the expedition to the Mexican border, a distance of twelve miles by rail, the party journeyed in taxis, the caravan across the burning sands being led by Shoshone, Lingala, and Exalted Noble's Howard Strickling, Pat Dowling and a few less exalted brethren. Upon attaining the edge of these United States, members of the excursion were greeted by Mexican officials who, after frisking the delegates, turned them over to the committee in charge of thrills. Thus the boys were introduced to the famous Canadian Club, Messrs. Haig and his brother and a couple of bobs marooned till hell. This formally being attended to, the delegation proceeded to the race track where the third race of the day was being run. The boys lost no time in disproving Li Hung Chang's famous statement to the press, that "it is already established that one horse can run faster than another.

A few of the brothers, men who had made a study of the life and habits of the cow pony, paid the fares for the remaining portion of their return trip to San Diego that night—but that's another story. Suffice it to say that the various cleaning and pressing establishments of Los Angeles were thouroughly out on the Tia Juana bookmaker. Anyway the less said about this matter the better say Ray Leek, "Ham" Beall, Mike Boylan and a few score others.

We drifted over to Old Town, the historic beauty spot of Old Mexico, where

The sunsets sands float through the ranched air of the quaint Blue Bird Cafe and Separatorium. We drifted in to this novel cabin house and heard the decorator say, "said burning sands and here we have a really delightful dinner ala the good ole days. Our genial host, as the Bingville Bugle has aptly describe Sheri Looie, had left nothing undone that would alleviate the sad memories of the muddy track and the ornerly brotch thereof.

And then the fun began! It was some night—in fact the following morning wasn't half bad at that. What with the social favors of the Mexican metropoli at our feet and cold ice at our head we sang danced and gambled (typographical error) through a dusky night, and the dead broke offset to the band, the little hawks called, the wheels whirred and the innocence rattled. Hilarious press agents exchanged checks at green-covered tables while others, perhaps not quite so hilarious, tripped the little fantastic to the dying strains of a weared orchestra.

The Wampus Committee on the return of the dead to their native heart's, never mind a body, despite heavy casualties. From 7:30 in the evening until midnight, the "dead broke" and otherwise injured parties were cast (cast is right) into cabs and tumbled homeward to San Diego where, under medical care at the hands of another self-appointed committee they speedily recuperated.

The following statistics pertaining to the international Wampus affair have been compiled by the author for hasty reference:

Number in Party: Forty Purpose of mission: To cement relationship of U. S. with Mexico
Survivors of track, green cloth and brass raling: None
Deaths, or what have you? 501 quarts, 10 pins.
Resultant good to the association: Good!
Resolutions passed if any: Yes, but we're savin' 'em for New Years.

Scene of battle: Mexican Border and Hotel Maryland.

Note: Despite pressure brought to bear by outsiders, the debts contracted during the engagement positively will not be cancelled nor will any entangling alliances be formed that will drag us into any more wars.

No Entertainment for Jurors
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA. Dec. 27.—Jurors before whom a criminal case is being tried, should not be permitted while the case is in progress, to attend a motion picture which might either consciously or sub-consciously influence their verdict, was the opinion rendered by Judge E. S. Bessey, associate justice of the Oklahoma Criminal Court of Appeals.

The evidence in the case appealed was purely circumstantial, according to the briefs filed in the case, and the jury, while the trial was in progress, was allowed to view a motion picture show, the theme of which was a web of circumstantial evidence being woven around a suspected murderer, and the picture was said to have made a deep impression on the jurors and influenced them in finding the defendant guilty and sentencing him to life imprisonment.

Griffiths Next Film To be "White Rose"
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—The next photoplay to be made by D. W. Griffith will be "The White Rose" it has been announced by the producer.

For this production Mr. Griffith has engaged Mae Marsh for the leading role. This will mark the star's return in a Griffith production after an absence of six years.

It is said that Miss Marsh will have the kind of role which has made her famous previous Griffith films, a part that will allow full play of her dramatic ability. No definite date has been set for start of actual filming of the production.

The WEEK in NEW YORK

They had a stage performance put on last week by the First National Club over in Brooklyn, "The Follies of Forty-Eighth Street." According to all accounts, it surprised even those who expected the amateurs to acquit themselves creditably. All the executives who were in town were there. Also Felix Feist. Tom Wiley, who has no official connection with the franchise organization, drove a party over and back.

Their biggest forte was in putting over laughs without apparently intending to. Morton Blumentos, for example, made the introductory announcement by telling how a lot of the good gags had been planned for the bill but had been ruled out by Frank Conklin, who directed the show. There was a story about Floyd Brockell's golf. His score was 78.

But that story was ruled out. The sales manager is very sensitive about his golf. Besides, it was said that he did much better on the second hole.

For the benefit of those who didn't know that Blumentos German for flowers, the boys presented Mort with a bouquet just before he went out to make his speech—made it possible to make an acular demonstration and the impresario helped them out by saying the bouquet as a bow-tie—and the audience got it.

There was a barret scene, too, beautifully staged, introducing Rudolph Porhagen with a solo; Mimi Shusterman with her flapper act the flapperettes being Misses Benny Coffee, Mimi Shusterman, Lawa Hollman, and Brandt and Remo in a Gallaghers and Shean act.

The dancing chorus introduced Mesrs. Loges, Hollander, Purcell, Kennedy, Bailey, Kibrisky, Price and Rechenwald and Miss Benedict, Cohen, Garber, Karns, Levy, Sullivan, Tiefenbomr and Weisman.

Ann Meyers did a Nora Bayes and Tom Cleary pirouetted across with a George Conklin original.

Bob Dexter turned the smiles into tears and big gobs of glycerine water trickled down powdered cheeks as a select audience of friends and the thousand miles from home. The cast consisted of Carl J. Goe, Clarence Lawarous and Bertine Brown. It made a hit. It was so realistic that Dick Crenn and "Batting Bill" Yearsley feared the crew of merry makers might go home in tears; but at the psychological moment the curtain drew down on the act and Ted O'Royle came on with his specialty which was very good but which we didn't hear so much because Morton Blumentos just came back from buying a new collar.

There followed Mort's act "Krazy Kateenberg" with S. Charles Kinfield as the star. In the cast were Clive Waxman, who was also musical director for the show, Frank Cotter, Miss Ruth Yedak, Walter Eberhardt, Miss Helen Blumkin and Mrs. Michel McMillin.

There was dancing after the performance and at one o'clock Director Conklin called "Get out, we're going to bed!" Arthur Thomas was among those present as the show's light comedian. He operated the "spots."

Carl Laemmle recently received a letter from E. J. Smith, Universal representative in Great Britain, reading thusly: "I have just appointed a manager for Ireland, with headquarters at Dublin—Mr. J. Boland."

Eddie Smith appropriately signed the letter with green ink.

James V. Bryson, Universal foreign manager, who has a keen nose for new, routed the letter to the publicity department with the following notation:

"Is this news?"

He probably had in mind the recent trouble George V. had in managing Ireland.

It isn't often that they overlook a bet at the A. M. P. A., but they booted one last week which brought many a laugh. In keeping with the Yuletide spirit the last meeting before Christmas was planned to be celebrated by presenting the trade paper editors and hirelings with gifts and things in recognition of what they had done or hadn't done or something.

It was on the program to make the presentations with witty speeches by Victor Shapiro, Horace Judge and other celebrated journalists. It was expected that the trade paper editors would reply with the bon mots for which trade paper editors are noted the world over.

All went well until time for the presentation of the esteem tokens or whatever they were, when Vic Shapiro, in a hoarse whisper, said to Secretary Tom Wiley:

"Where are the trade paper people?"

"Where are they?" echoed Wyle.

Then it was discovered that the little matter of inviting them to be present had been overlooked.

Al Browberg, director of exploitation of F. O. O., got a big change of heart from Yuletide by declaring a week's holiday for himself with his better seven-eighths, who has just returned from a world tour.

"The next time she goes away alone, I'll go with her. I hate this lonesome life."

Lon Young, of Warner Brothers, declares he is tired of denying that he is the man who, at the T. O. C. dinner, danced, stepped into the envelope and asked to be let off at the third floor.

Emmund Grainer, of Goldwyn's, is wearing the smile that won't come off and at the same time secretly practicing up wearing a paternal look. Cause—a 104-pound boy has been adopted by Grainer and his domicile. Permanent title of the youth has not yet been decided on, but Eddie says temporary one is "Spike Grainer."

Walt L. Parker, who has been connected with the Selsnick Pictures Corporation as advertising manager for the past four years, has joined Warner Brothers publicity department in a similar capacity. Mr. Parker was formerly a Seattle newspaper man and has been allied with the film industry for a number of years.

E. Bruce Johnson, foreign manager of First National, has just returned from a three month's trip in Great Britain and the continent, says film conditions are improving in all countries except the central empires.

J. G. Backman, of Preferred Pictures, has gone to the coast for a six weeks' trip to confer with B. P. Schulberg on production.

John C. Flynn, of Famous Players, who is also president of the A. M. P. A., has returned from an extended sojourn in Mexico, arriving in time to preside at the meeting of the advertisers.

Frank Lloyd, whose latest work was the direction of Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist," was an actor before becoming a director. His first public appearance was as a boy soprano. After singing in the choir of All Saints church, London, and gaining no small amount of local notoriety, Lloyd, at the age of fifteen, decided upon a stage career. His first engagement was at Uxbridge, a little town out of London.

Promised everything by an obscure manager, Lloyd arrived in the town. He was billed as that "Versatile comedian and singer under the conditions that he pay his traveling expenses and also his hotel bill, it was his big chance, he was told, so Frank accepted. Arriving at Uxbridge he encountered his first disillusionment. Instead of a big theatre or music hall he found a "hit-up" which in plain English meant tent.

"Perhaps," says Mr. Lloyd, "this would not have annoyed me so much had I known that years later Divine Sarah was to play 'Joan of Arc' in a tent in Texas."

His first position in the silent drama was with the old Keystone Company, at the sum of $5.00 a day, then he worked under similar conditions with Lois Weber of Universal City. At the latter place he made his way upward to the role of "featured heavy" and thence to director.

With Paramount, Lloyd directed many stars in five reel productions.

In 1915 Lloyd entered the Fox organization and during a period of two years directed William Farnum, Gladys Brockwell, and other notable stars. With Goldwyn, Lloyd directed for more than two years and had Pauline Frederick, Geraldine Farrar, Jack Holt and many others to lead through their several plots.

He has just finished "Oliver Twist" and this production has been referred to, not only as Jackie Coogan's greatest, but Mr. Lloyd's as well. Lloyd was born in Glasgow, Scotland, but spent the early years of his life in Engd, at the age of thirteen he left the edge of England and of Charles Dickens that won him the responsible position of piloting the famous little Jackie through this masterpiece.—J. Blue Law Suits Dismissed; Walker Denounces Censors

Lack of Evidence Frees Exhibitors in Cleveland; New York State Senator Addresses City Club in Ohio Metropolis

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

CLEVELAND, O., December 27.—Reformers, in more than one instance, have received a setback within the past few days.

First, seven exhibitors and other business men, charged with blue law violations, had their cases dismissed by Justice of the Peace R. R. Hawkins because of lack of sufficient evidence. Secondly, James J. Walker, New York State senator, in one of his characteristic addresses before the City Club, denounced censorship as "a violation of the constitution of the United States."

Reformers Determined to Get Evidence

Following dismissal of the cases against the exhibitors and others, charged with violation of the Sunday closing laws, N. D. Davis, who is handling the suits for the reformers, declared: "We expect to get enough evidence to do some convincing before we are through." Justice Hawkins said that it was his opinion that it was not sufficient that Davis had seen people buying tickets and entering theatres.

Exhibitors whose cases were dismissed follow:

J. SCHWARTZ, 11506 Detroit avenue.
Lakewood, manager Homestead theatre; nolled, lack of evidence.

MARTIN PRINTZ, 15013 Detroit avenue.
Lakewood, manager Lakewood theatre; nolled, lack of evidence.

M. SILVERMAN, 911 Thornhill drive.
East Cleveland, manager Wind-A- Meer theatre; dismissed, insufficient evidence.

JACOB J. SHUMAN, 13920 Baldwin avenue; East Cleveland, manager of U-No theatre; dismissed, insufficient evidence.

FRANK KINNEY, 17823 Detroit avenue.
Lakewood, manager Lucier theatre; bound over, $100 bond.

Senator Walker Speaks

Senator Walker took as his topic of discussion "Censorship, 100 per cent un-American," and those who have heard the former M. T. O. A. counsel know the convincing manner in which he presented his subject. He said:

"If they had had censorship in Shakespeare's day, the censor probably would have found enough things on which to bar his plays and the most treasured possessions of the English language probably would have lost to the world."

"It is un-American. It violates the constitution of the United States. It is a violation of the freedom of the press. It hampers progress. It cripples art. It is ridiculous."

Public Is Waking Up

"The people are beginning to see what censorship means. In New York state Governor Smith was elected by an overwhelming majority on a platform which called for a plank for the abolition of movie censorship in New York.

And I believe that the next session of our legislature, censorship will be abolished.

There are 11,000,000 people in New York state. Is there anything American under a system by which these people decide what the 11,000,000 should see?"

"In reality, one decides. Because as a rule only one censor looks at any given picture. I believe the people are capable of picking their own amusements and deciding for themselves what they want to see."

Retards Industry's Progress

"Censorship is also hampering progress. The maker of a movie has to think all the time whether or not his picture is going to pass the censor. As a result he is afraid to try new things.

Furthermore, censorship in practice and censorship in theory are two different things. Censorship is supposed to be moral only. As it works, it is political. Worse than that, the censors use their power to impress every one of the pet reforms into the pictures.

"Censorship begins with an utterly false basis. Namely, that a person is immediately going to leave a movie theatre and begin acting like the characters on the screen had just acted. "Censorship is an attempt to get morality by legislation. It can't be done. Morality must come to a person through other channels."
Calls "Quincy Adams Sawyer"
A Box-Office Champion

William E. Atkinson, General Manager of Metro, Regards Picture as One of the Finest Yet Given to the Screen

"THE year's all-round box-office champion" is the manner in which William E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation, designates the company's screen version of "Quincy Adams Sawyer." From the standpoints of the merit and reputation of the story, of the excellence of the cast and the skill in production, the Metro official this week said he considered this Metro-SL Special Production would prove, by returns at the ticket-window, the best motion picture attraction available.

SUMMARIZING Mr. Atkinson's statement from the home offices of Metro, in New York, the following items of popular appeal in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" are found:
1. The story itself is human, exciting, amusing and unquestionably clean.
2. The reputation of the story, as told in the original novel by Charles Felton Pidgin and later retold on the stage, alone is sufficient to attract patronage.
3. The cast is of a brilliance as to require no verbal illumination, comprising Blanche Sweet, Lon Chaney, John Bow-ers, Barbara La Marr, June Elvidge, Louise Fazenda, Hank Mann, Victor Potel, Billy Franey, Edward Connelly, Gale Henry, Elmo Lincoln, Joseph Dowling and others.
4. In both adaptation and direction Metro has delegated the screening to experts especially fitted for the task; the scenario to Bernard McConville, author of the script of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," and other major attractions; the direction to Clarence G. Badger, whose success with a series of Will Rogers features was pronounced.

"I admit I am prejudiced in favor of "Quincy Adams Sawyer,"" says Mr. Atkinson, "but I won't admit that I'm prejudiced without cause. When I put myself down as believing that it is the all-round box-office champion of the year, whether it steps from this company's cor-

MONEY MAKING IDEAS
Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By H. E. SWAN
(Empress and Crescent Theatres, Kearney, Neb.)

Monday has always been my weak night until I tried giving away photos of the different stars. I advertise that on each Monday, a certain star's picture will be given away to each lady. You'll be surprised the way they come to get these photos.

They can be purchased for a small sum and the returns that you will get on them will certainly surprise you. Several persons may say that I wasted week's program printed on the back. This does not spoil the photo and it is a good advertising stunt.

Have had many women tell me they always come on Monday in order to get the pictures. No doubt most exhibitors have the addresses of the different companies that supply these photos. (If not I am sure the "Exhibitors Herald" will supply them to you.)

I honestly believe that my Monday night's business has picked up over 30 per cent since giving away these photos. Try it for a few weeks and see what a surprise you will have. Advertise it first for a week or ten days.

By F. L. DONATHON
(Crystal Theatre, Booneville, Ark.)

To build up that weak night, I have put on one night as "Pal Night." If they take some one with them to that show, I charge 10 cents each. If not, 20 cents. Consequently, I have over trebled my attendance.

Also, I have added another night as "Family Night," explained in the HERALD and the Box Office Record. Doing fine. Try it.

Observe Forefathers
Day on Ray's Vessel
Historic Society Holds Its Ceremony on "Mayflower" Replica Made for Film

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 27.—Charles Ray proved himself a host de luxe on Forefathers Day here Thursday, when he staged the formal closing ceremonies of his good ship "Mayflower" at his Fleming street studio, "The Mayflower" will be the hub about which many of the bigger scenes of his "Courtship of Miles Standish" now in production will revolve.

100 Members Present

More than a hundred members of the California descendants of the Mayflower company assembled at the Charles Ray studio and held their annual meeting up on the deck of a replica of the ship of which their ancestors made their historic journey to America.

The affair was a gala event in every particular with civic dignitaries, members of the judiciary, a large quota from the ranks of notable film producers and many others in attendance. The affair celebrated not only the great patriotic festival, historic as Forefathers' Day, but marked also the conclusion of long months of preparation for the new Charles Ray film, "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Mayor Makes Address

Promptly at 2:30 o'clock Priscilla Alden Evans, a direct descendant of John Alden and Priscilla Mullens, mounted the platform at the bow of the boat, and christened the good ship with the traditional bowl of water specially imported from Plymouth Rock for this occasion. Mayor George E. Cuyer also addressed the gathering.
Chicago Christmas Program in Detail

THE Chicago theatre program for Christmas week is one of the finest the theatre has housed, therefore of interest to showmen everywhere. The following detailed review of the performance is given to show the lengths to which Balaban and Katz have gone to fitfully denote observance of the holiday season. Applause in which theatre and entertainment shared broke out after every number and at frequent intervals during the run of the feature picture.

I. "Tannhauser"

Based on the full orchestra, directed by Nathaniel Finston.

II. "The Good Spirit"

Pizoma subject depicting journey of Three Wise Men, finding of Babe, evolution of Christmas to present day and closing with sequence showing child discovering filled stocking.

Presented to accompaniment by orchestra with tenor solo closely paralleling action.

III. "The Sheik"

Poses by a beautiful white horse in tinted spot. The last thing expected on a Chicago theatre program, but a horse that does the last things a horse is expected to do. (The bearing upon the feature picture becomes evident subsequently.)

IV. Newspictures

Selections from the editions of the week, featuring under-sea views of Florida Winter resorters swimming.

V. "I'll Whistle Tonight Beneath Your Window"

Organ solo by Jesse Crawford. First verse and chorus as straight selection, breaking into invitation number with bearing upon New Year's in which audience joins, whistling, until number ends.

VI. A Trip With Santa Claus

The biggest Christmas feature of the bill and one of the biggest of the Chicago's staged features, using a cast of 36, three settings and a transition.

Opening discloses peasant cottage with child greeting homecoming father, bearing Christmas tree, who reads jingle of "Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe" until child sleeps.

Dark stage change reveals mammoth shoe, out of which six tiny tots dance in costumes of fairy tales. Witch enters and frightens all, who come until entrance of Santa Claus in reindeer-drawn sleigh. Brief dialogue in which Santa invites children to go with him to his home, after which all mount sleigh and white drop comes down to take combination motion picture and moving stereopticon denoting passage through heavens. Santa announces passing of moon, constellations, until arrival at destination.

Gigantic set centers about icy centerpiece down which six dancing girls in spangles make way to stage for brief figures. Other girls enter from left, covering retirement of predecessors, who again mount pedestal.

At this point the whole setting revolves, ice giving way to colorful background before which girls continue spirited dance into tableau which marks finale.

VII. "The Hottentot"

Thomas H. Ince's steetlechase comedy played less adequately than nine out of ten pictures seen at the Chicago but greeted with a continuous sequence of chuckles broken at intervals by boisterous outbursts of laughter.

VIII. "The Educator"

Lloyd Hamilton comedy, well received.

EXPLOITATION AND REVIEWS

Exploitation that justifies itself and its employer proceeds from worthwhile product.

First notice of worthwhile product is made for the trade in the Review department of this paper.

In the current issue two pictures especially suitable for and worthy of exploitation. "Hearts Aflame" and "The Hottentot," are reviewed.

Good exhibitors always read the announcements of production, the reviews of finished pictures and finally the box-office check yielded by "What the Picture Did For Me." Their exploitation is the better for the reading.

A NEWSPICTURE ANALYSIS

Newspticure editions of the week are analyzed from the exploitation viewpoint in "Newspticures," this week. Any who have not yet formed the habit of advertising good newspticures will find study of that page profitable.

DO YOU RUN SUNDAYS?

If you operate on Sundays, or if you do not, you will find George Rea's "Theatre Letter" of inquiry in this issue especially interesting. If you are a normal showman, normally interested in affairs of the theatre, you will feel like replying to it. It will make you think.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

"The Theatre" wishes every reader a happy and prosperous New Year.
"THE VALLEY OF SILENT MEN." Cosmopolitan-Paramount, was advertised by A. C. Cowles, Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., with the brilliant lobby display shown above. All except overhead stage lights at back of lobby were green; these shedding over the box office a red glow penetrated by a strong light from the balcony at front. Paper snow fell during rush hours. Thus was a lobby shape of difficult design made to yield rich returns.

"NOTORIETY." Weber and North feature, is supplied with exceptionally colorful accessories. The Clinton Square theatre float shown above utilizes some of the material admirably. At night the box was illuminated from within.

"CLARENCE." Paramount, contains a sequence in which Wallace Reid demonstrates his saxophone ability while seated in an automobile. The Strand theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., practically duplicated the scene in the stunt shown above.

"LORNA DOONE." First National, has profited greatly through exploitation plans made before publication. As a result of a tie-up with the National Biscuit Company, a delivery wagon parade of 200 units, each advertising the picture, went through Boston streets exploiting the run at Gordon's Olympia theatre. The cavalcade left the factory in the morning and covered the downtown and much of the residential section thoroughly. The record of this and other pictures similarly campaigned in advance is an argument for development in that field.
"THE FROZEN NORTH." First National, drew inexpensive but effective billing from the Lyric theatre, Duluth, Minn., in the paper marquee fringe shown above. The stunt shows proper appreciation of short subject importance, as well as resourcefulness and keen sense of values. The short subject advertising did not detract in any degree from the representation accorded the feature attraction.

"A FOOL THERE WAS." Fox, drew this splendid hand painted board during its run at the Rex, Spartanburg, S. C. A local artist did the work for A. C. Cowles, manager.

"THE STORM." Universal, was accorded this elaborate display by Otto Meister, White House theatre, Milwaukee. Natural foliage masked paper used abundantly.

"SILVER WINGS." Fox, afforded the Strand theatre, Wichita Falls, Tex., opportunity and material to produce the intriguing front shown above. Note skill with which paper and lattice is combined at top and general cleanliness of detail. Cutouts and lattice admit of infinite variation in treatment. "Silver Wings," naturally considered as a successor to "Over The Hill," has been accorded such exploitation throughout the country as might be expected to arise out of that association. Other striking exploitation in its behalf will be included in future issues.
"WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER," Cosmopolitan-Paramount, opened at the Adams theatre, Detroit, after a Marion Davies resemblance contest conducted by Walter F. Lindlar, exploiter, in cooperation with the management of the city's largest dance hall. Presentation of one of Miss Davies' gowns to the winner, on the night of the "Knighthood Ball," is shown above. At right, the winner wearing the gown. The stunt may be adopted with infinite variations.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD," Paramount, has induced in all its spectacular exploitation career no more complete lobby display than that produced by the Lyric theatre, Traverse City, Mich., which included practically everything but the windmill. The Lyric is a Fitzpatrick and McElroy house.

"SHERLOCK HOLMES." Goldwyn, was advertised as above by the exchange when shown at the Chicago theatre.
“RAGS TO RICHES,” Warner Brothers, showing at Loew’s State theatre, Los Angeles, aided and was aided by the Salvation Army in an old clothes drive for charity. Salvation Army collection trucks and a theatre street device are shown above. A collection booth of the type widely used was reproduced in the last issue of this paper. Clarke Irvine of Warner Brothers had charge of the undertaking. The precedent undoubtedly will be adopted elsewhere.

“BLOOD AND SAND,” Paramount, was given this highly colorful but not expensive frontal representation by the Bleich theatre, Owensboro, Ky., an institution long prominent in the annals of progressive showmanship. The Bleich front attains through use of wide stripes a flash of color that is far-reaching without being complex. The draping admirably sets off the stock matter used in the boards.

“THE ETERNAL FLAME.” First National, has been accorded practically every type of exploitation, but it remained for the Tivoli theatre, San Francisco, to stage a fashion show in its lobby during the engagement. The photograph shows four of the models. The attraction power of the stunt is apparent.
New Year's

New Year's always suggests resolutions, and mention of resolutions always recalls good resolutions broken. Each year less is heard of resolutions and the belief that they are worthless grows.

In matters of the theatre, at least, this is not the case. The good resolution, acted upon, is usually an innovation in program or service. If it is good it is not discontinued.

The best of all theatre resolutions is this: To run the theatre more and more for the public and less and less for self. This we recommend to all exhibitors.

For "The Theatre" this resolution is made: To run "The Theatre" more and more for readers and to invite more and more exhibitor help and guidance in its administration.

"DR. JACK," Pathe, was lobbied in this admirable fashion by the Majestic theatre, Portland, Ore. The picture is one that admits of widely varied exploitation and repays efforts made in its behalf. Its theatre career should be one of big exploitation. The type of accessories supplied, previously mentioned in these pages, makes this sort of advertising easy.

"THE FIGHTING STREAK," Fox, was accompanied to the Province theatre, Winnipeg, by a Fox representative, who persuaded the management to use the space above the marquee for advertising for the first time. The cutout matter was taken from a 24-sheet and mounted on a painted background.

"THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER." American Releasing, won J. J. Cluxton, manager of the Pantages theatre, Minneapolis, away from usual vaudeville methods and to adoption of the press book campaign complete. The above window is an item in the voluminous results which brought big return to the house with the picture featured over the usual vaudeville.
Photos Show Material In “Hottentot”

“The Hottentot,” Thomas H. Ince production, is the Christmas-to-New Years attraction at the Chicago theatre. The press division of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., distributors, has provided the following digest of its exploitation possibilities for the benefit of “Theatre” readers.

“The Hottentot” is pure comedy that gallops along at a swift pace with the winner of the steeplechase.

It conjures up endless possibilities in the way of tie-ups with sport shops, exploitation with racing horses on the streets and prologues centering around a typical race course with its exotic coloring.

But this article is concerned primarily with suggestions offered by the stills.

Here goes:

Every one who has the slightest touch of superstition—and that includes almost 5,000,000 people in the country—knows the maxim about spilling salt and promptly throwing it over the shoulder to avert a quarrel with some dear one, presumably a sweetheart. Hence vest film fans will be familiar with the meaning of Raymond Hatton’s action in still No. 1 of “The Hottentot” wherein he erudite butler is seen throwing salt over his shoulder.

The action suggests the introduction of “Good Luck Man” or “Hottentot Luck Fan” whose exact standing in the community can be publicized in the newspapers. The statement is made on the assumption that the story will have sufficient unique news value to be regarded as copy by the average newspaper.

He will bring good luck to anyone who stiches him throwing salt over his shoulder. He will avert trouble between sweethearts if they detect him in the act. He will establish cordial relations by letting them see the greatest laugh feature of the film. His award to the person who catches him can be a pass for two to “The Hottentot.”

The fact that Sam Harrington, the central character, can ride the roughest gale that ever blew but can’t ride a walking horse is exemplified in the two stills, one of which shows Douglas MacLean on his craft and again bending over the neck of the Hottentot.

The gathering at the race course in Still 4, shows a colorful gathering that can be adapted to prologues, lobby pastels or newspaper discussion.

The blanketed figure of the Hottentot in Still 6 is a rather homely affair but then how would you like to be wrapped up in burlap? Wouldn’t any beauty blush with shame if she had to make a public appearance in a wool necklace?

In addition to a newspaper discussion on this subject the still offers a suggestion for a lobby display of a blanketed horse’s head with two red electric bulbs covered by tinsel paper and a red flicking mouth.

Madge Bellamy again illustrates in these stills that she not only photographs beautifully but is able to wear stunning sport suits and evening gowns in enviable manner. One of the sport suits is illustrated in Still 6 and shows a fertile line for tie-ups.

A blanketed horse, touted as a high class steeplechase runner, furnishes a suggestion for a street ballyhoo also. If there is any keen interest in the subject around the theatre’s community a race might be arranged.

Throughout the picture the comedy element predominates almost entirely. In this respect the stills fail to show the complete exploitation possibilities of the picture. Advertisements as better than “Twenty-three and a Half Hours’ Leave” and exploited along comedy lines that make promises on a pure basis of entertainment it should draw not only satisfactory houses but houses that will find amusement in the kind of picture they have been led to anticipate.

“Third Alarm” Campaign Book
Service Giant

Nat Rothstein’s great campaign material for “In The Name of the Law,” commented upon in these pages, unquestionably had an important part in bringing about the almost universal police cooperation that figured so prominently in the theatre record of that admirably exploited attraction.

Mr. Rothstein has done even more for “The Third Alarm.”

The campaign book for “The Third Alarm” runs to 24 pages and each page measures 15½ by 22 inches. The measurements would not be important were space tossed about recklessly as is the custom in certain quarters, but there are no waste inches in this vast acreage. On the contrary, the contents seem to cry for expansion.

The front page is itself a better than one sheet than one often sees. The second page tells all about the picture, the next gives testimonials of 1,000 fire chiefs who have seen the picture, and subsequent pages present step by step, the exploitation campaign which undoubtedly will become standardized on a national scale as the picture goes into exhibition.

Newspaper material, billboard matter, accessories of all sorts and specialized drives in complete detail are supplied to suit metropolitan and small town exhibitor alike. Synopsis of the brochure is impracticable in this space, but the comparison with the former work tells the story.

In preparing the matter Mr. Rothstein was aided by Leslie Jordan, Harry Osborne, Hyat Dash, Al Bossberg, Ben Grimm, Dave Strumpl and Matt A. Taylor.

Personal Accounts of Constructive Showmanship
Contributed by Readers of "Exhibitors Herald"

"BRAWN OF THE NORTH," First National, was accorded its best exploitation to date by C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex., whose letter herewith gives full details of the campaign which led up to the opening with the brilliant lobby display shown above.

Sullivan Hits
Top on "Brawn Of the North"

C. R. Sullivan, creator of much excellent exploitation, "hit the top" in his campaign for First National's "Brawn of the North." His letter and photograph, giving details of the campaign, constitute a practical precedent for any exhibitor contemplating exhibition of the attraction.

THEATRE EDITOR
EXHIBITORS HERALD

Dear Sir:

Enclosed herewith find lobby front we used on "Brawn of the North." In explanation I wish to say that this front is built of slabs from timber.

The wolf you see in the center is the mother of the half breed dogs tied on each side of the mother, but do not show in the picture.

We started our campaign about two weeks in advance on this picture and handled same carefully all the way down the line to the grand smash—the lobby. Our advertising on "Brawn of the North" was carried on about in accordance with our lobby as the final part. However, there is one thing on this picture we did that we never used before.

Two weeks before opening we built five boards out of beaver board, framed 6 by 12 feet. We ordered five 24's on "The Silent Call" and cut out Strongheart from each and pasted on boards, making five large cutouts. We worded properly and placed these boards on five prominent corners of Amarillo, just above awnings and facing diagonally across the street.

I actually believe that is the best piece of advertising we ever did. Of course there is no use telling you we got results.

Thanking you and wishing the Herald success, I am

C. R. SULLIVAN
Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN:

While we are not familiar quite with everything that you've done at the Fair, we quite agree that this is the best piece of exploitation you have reported. Your letter, with the excellent photograph, gives other showmen ample material to work with in advertising the picture. But we doubt if everybody can obtain the live stock you found available. It must have drawn instant interest.

That idea of going back after the "Silent Call" paper cutouts shows the type of resourcefulness that distinguishes the real showman. All who play the new picture should do likewise.

Hyman Details
Plan of "Tess" Presentation

Edward L. Hyman, pioneer in the field of presentation, gives reasons for his selection of the musical prologue as the most effective picture introduction in the following letter, also providing a practical working script for exhibitors who will use United Artists' "Tess of the Storm Country."

THEATRE EDITOR
EXHIBITORS HERALD

Dear Sir:

I send you, enwrapped herewith, a picture of the prologue we used for the engagement of Mary Pickford's recitation of "Tess of the Storm Country."

The musical prologue, built in synchronization with the feature, I believe to be the most graceful way of sliding into a featured attraction, without divulging its highlights or plot. Spoken words, with a view to creating atmosphere for the feature, invariably are very atmospheric, but also invariably make the features' climaxes anti's.

For "Tess of the Storm Country," wherein natural atmosphere lies in abundance, I contrived a sort of pseudo prologue. Basically it was an incidental part of the program, which I worked in such a fashion as to make it allude to and enhance greatly the feature.

The set is a fishing village, consisting of two set houses, fashioned after those seen in the picture. These are on both sides of the stage. A broken down picket fence connects the two, while set rocks, rising sun against blue neutral background curtain, fishing nets, oars and a boat were the other properties. For the front lighting the Mestrum and Klieg floods are medium green upon orchestra; on both sides of the orchestra are two transparent windows also bathed in soft green. Four green entrance spots are focused "center" upon the acting.

Three persons participated in this fetching number, who were costumed after Tess, Tess' father, and Frederick Graves, characters of the feature. Vocal numbers were:

(a) "Dum" (McGill).
(b) "Ship O' Dreams" (Francis)

EDWARD L. HYMAN
Mark-Strand theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.

DEAR MR. HYMAN:
We believe you state an approximate axiom in regard to the effect of dialogue in a prologue. There are exceptions, of course, as in the case of "Earthbound" and certain other productions which were most effectively presented with a somber spoken prologue, but in the main we believe music preferable.

Thanks for the letter and the picture.

Any Volunteers
Care to Answer
Rea's Question?

George Rea asks explanation of the Sunday opening proposition in the small town. We reply briefly and suggest that readers add information gathered in their own experience. Mr. Rea’s letter presents a substantial case for the six-day program.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir: Something on my mind, so, as usual when I get that way, I turn to you for the answer.

Why does the small town exhibitor get for Sunday shows—and get the sentiment of the good people against it?

I am just a small town exhibitor, that’s where I belong, and most every day someone asks me why I don’t run on Sunday. I know the mayor would be up it. I also know the good people who atronize my show would be against and cut me off.

In the small town they have so much to spend for amusement. I have six days to try to get my share of it. On Sunday my lobby works all day and my help gets a rest. I never heard of a poor Saturday and I don’t know the meaning of a blue Monday.

I am sending you a picture of my Sunday, December 17, lobby at work.

If the small town exhibitor is a 1912 model and gets two one-sheets in the can he might be excused for wanting Sunday shows, but with the wonderful accessories, especially Paramount’s, does he need it?

I understand about the big cities, but why Sunday in a town of 20,000 or under?

Thanking you for a reply and with best wishes to you and the Herald, I am

GEORGE REA,
Colonial theatre. Washington C. H., O.

DEAR MR. REA:
While the question of Sunday opening is quite too complex to admit of exhaustive discussion in the space here permitted, we believe there is at least one angle, a purely mathematical one, that you have overlooked. Grasping for the moment that you are able to collect as many admissions in six days as you would get in seven under normal circumstances, it is clearly true that whereas a rain or blizzard now deprives you of one-sixth of your revenue the fraction would be but one-seventh if you were operating seven days.

This is the mathematical side of it, and should be calculated on a basis of annual intake. Other points which might be made in a more complete discussion concern the workers who "TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY," United Artists, was presented in the above manner by Edward L. Hyman, Mark-Strand theatre, Brooklyn, whose letter gives details of the prologue and Mr. Hyman’s presentation policy.

GEORGE REA, who asks why small town exhibitors want to operate on Sunday, contributes this photograph showing how he puts his lobby to work on the "White Eagle" Wins Ledou to Serial Policy

L. R. Ledou, opposed to serials in policy, booked "White Eagle," exploited it intensively and experienced a complete reversal of opinion. His letter tells the story.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir: I thought you perhaps you would be interested in a little "White Eagle" advertisement which I used to good advantage.

I opened the first episode to the largest house in two years. This is how it was done.

I got good advance notices in the paper in regard to parade. Tied up with merchants on free ticket stunt and they put out 400 tickets for me. The parade was pulled off to good advantage and brought lots of people to town out of our trade territory. I used Indian headdress and kids were sure tickled over them.

I have always taken a firm stand against serials, but now I am convinced that they are the life of the small town exhibitor.

L. R. LEDOU,
Istabee Opera House, Isabel, Kan.

DEAR MR. LEDOU:
Your experience brings out a point that cannot be emphasized too often. This is the fallacy of any hard and fast rule against any form of entertainment in the theatre.

As concerns the serial question, we believe it to be a serial question than a management question. Certainly too many serials defeat their own purpose, just as too few serials deprive the theatre of normal income. In the end it becomes a matter of judgment as to how much of this and too much of that to give a definite public. If anybody knew that perfectly held be richer than Midas. Only by constantly experimenting trying this and that, can any degree of certainty be attained.—W. R. W.
PLACING back over my route of the last few weeks, I note two outstanding bits of exploitation not previously reported. Together they constitute ample material for a weekly installment.

At Holland, Mich., I arrived while Raven and Kramer, resourceful executives of the Colonial theatre, were advertising Pathe's remarkably successful feature, "Nanook of the North." While I have seen this production advertised in every possible way at various points about the country I have witnessed no more striking effect than that obtained by the Colonial management.

A stuffed bear was borrowed from a local furrier. Cotton was purchased in the amount of $2.50, a wooden frame work made to carry it, and the igloo shown in the picture was placed in the lobby. To add the important touch of special interest, a tie-up was made with the schools which brought practically every child to the theatre. Of course where every child goes a goodly portion of the parental body goes also.

At Kankakee I found William J. Thenor, Chateau theatre, engaged in a similarly simple and effective exploitation stunt for the Hodkinson picture, "Fifty Candles," an attraction which many have exhibited profitably but few have advertised as well as might be expected. Here was the exception that proved the rule that a good picture well exploited is always a better attraction.

An automobile was converted into a road piece for the picture at very little expense. Flag hunting was used to decorate the car, a specially painted banner occupying top position. The cake which shows up so prominently in the photograph was made from an inverted tub upon which short lengths of broomstick were mounted to resemble candles. Of course it wasn't practical to use fifty of these, but the effect was no less good.

Both of the photographs give detail very clearly, that of the Colonial lobby also showing the manner in which Pathe News is advertised at that up-to-date playhouse.

"Fifty Candles" at the Chateau, Kankakee, Ill.
Newspictures of the week include much material that may be profitably capitalized in exhibitor exploitation. In order that showmen disposed to start the new year right by getting squarely behind their programs and advertising every item as merit justifies, this exploitation digest is substituted for the usual weekly tabloid of contents.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Never before has the outlook for a prosperous season—a season of bigger pictures, bigger business and better business—been so bright. By better business we mean an extended clientele. No business can succeed if catering only to the old customers. You must interest and attract new business. And the 1923 pictures so far announced give promise of doing this very thing.

For instance in the present issue of the HERALD you will find "The Hottentot," "Hearts Aflame," "Back Home and Broke," "The Third Alarm," and many others that will warrant extra exploitation. The producers have faith in these productions and are getting back of them with their exploitation departments, and it is up to the showmen who buy them to do likewise.

Yes, everything points to a Happy and Prosperous New Year. Let's Go!—J. R. M.

"HEARTS AFLAME" (Metro) stands out as one of the season's big attractions. It is full of suspense, has a good sound story back of it and contains enough thrills to satisfy the most blaze film devotee. Frank Keenan, Anna Q. Nilsson, Richard Tucker and little Richard Headrick are but a part of the all-star cast. The fire scenes are worth the price of admission alone.

"THE HOTTEINTOT" (First National) with a special cast, is a comedy- plus. It is great in story, in acting and in staging. The successful stage comedy has been transferred to the screen with great fidelity by Thomas H. Ince. The story lends itself well to picturization and it is sure-fire not alone because of its thrills, but because of the keen vein of humor running through it.

"BACK HOME AND BROKE" (Paramount) brings the best of George Ade to the screen. Thomas Meighan has done nothing in his productive career as good as his work as Ade's hero. Lila Lee just fits the opposite role, and dozens of competent supporters make up the cast. The picture is an American idyl for every-day Americans and its theatre history should be an unbroken record of financial and audience satisfaction.

"MAKING A MAN" (Paramount) presents Jack Holt and an excellent cast in a very interesting story by Peter B. Kyne. It concerns a skin-flint land owner, a beautiful girl, and a band of oppressed farmers who unwittingly teach the hard-hearted millionaire a lesson that is of lasting benefit to him. Directed by Joseph Henabery.

"WASTED LIVES" (Second National) is a five-part feature with a mission, containing sufficient human interest points to have it meet with favor on any program. It is a story of love, of devotion to duty and contains not a few heart throbs. Because of the dramatic appeal it should meet with success.

"SECOND FIDDLE" (Hodkinson) is an interesting little domestic drama, full of action, much good acting and is worthy of a place on every regular program. It was made under the direction of Frank Tuttle with Glenn Hunter in the leading role. Mary Astor and Townsend Martin lend excellent support.

"KICK IX" (Paramount) a first-rate crook play in every respect, based on Willard Mack's stage success. It is swift moving and gripping in its big moments. An all-star cast includes Bert Lytell, May McAvoy, Gareth Hughes, and Betty Compson. George Fitzmaurice directed and the underworld stuff has been well handled.

"WHAT FOOLS MEN ARE" (American Releasing) is an interesting society play, well acted and very well produced. It was adapted from Eugene Walter's stage play "The Flapper" and has Huntley Gordon, Joseph Striker, J. Barney Sherry, Lucy Fox and other well known players supporting Faire Binney, as the flapper. Six reels.

"MAN'S SIZE" (Fox) is a Northwest story, with William Russell in the role of a reformed bootlegger. Alma Benet, a pretty little ingenue appears opposite him. It concerns a mix-up in identities and a plan for revenge, which is straightened out in the final reel. Some pretty out-of-doors scenery and hard fighting are its high points.

"A FRONT PAGE STORY" (Vitagraph) is one of the most pleasing farce-comedies of newspaper publishing in a small town that has come to the screen in some time. It is a Jess Robbins production and besides Edward Horton, has Edith Roberts, Lloyd Ingraham, Buddy Messenger and other well known players in it. Well up to Mr. Robbins former successes "Too Much Business" and "Ladder Jinx."

"THE THIRD ALARM" (F. B. O.) makes its principal appeal to lovers of horses and seekers after excitement. It has a pleasing, though simple story, and the fire sequence is one of the best ever filmed. Ralph Lewis who appeared in "In the Name of the Law" has the leading role in this story of a fireman's life. Johnny Walker appears in support.
Here's a big box-office attraction with suspense, action and thrills enough for two features, plus a superb cast, striking out-of-door scenery and an all-star cast which includes Frank Keenan, Anna Q. Nilsson, Richard Tucker, Lee Shumway, Russell Simpson, Little Richard Headrick and a dozen others equally as prominent. Adapted from the novel "Timber" by Harold Titus, and directed by Reginald Barker. A Louis B. Mayer production in seven reels.

If you're looking for a feature with unusual audience appeal we unhesitatingly recommend "Hearts Aflame." This is another of Metro's bigger and better pictures and it surely lives up to the title. It has a good, consistent story based on a big theme—the conserving of American timber tracts—and under Reginald Barker's careful direction the story is developed smoothly and logically and holds the spectator's attention throughout the seven reels.

The fire scenes in the final reel are some of the most realistic and thrilling ever photographed. The wild animals rushing out of the woods ahead of the flames, the deer seeking shelter in lakes and river, and the dash of the lumber camp locomotive through the burning forest with a load of dynamite on board are but a few of the incidents of this well-staged and entertaining story. The beautifully tinted fire forest scenes will appeal especially to lovers of the beautiful.

Frank Keenan is back in one of his strongest roles. His Luke Taylor is a gem. He has good support in Anna Q. Nilsson, as Helen Foraker; Craig Ward, as his son, John Taylor; Russell Simpson, as Black Joe; Richard Tucker, as Philip Rowe, a seething secretary; Martha Metaxo, as Aunt May; Walt Whitman as Charlie Stump; Lee Shumway as Milt Goddard, Gordon Magee as the Sheriff and Richard Headrick, as Bobby Kildare.

The story revolves around Luke Taylor, his son and Helen Foraker, the daughter of a man who devoted his life to replenishing Michigan timber lands. Taylor, millionaire lumberman, presents his son John with a tract of timber land and cut logs, when he asks for a "flying start" in business. Upon his arrival in Michigan he finds difficulties in the way of marketing his timber. However, he joins forces with Helen Foraker, whose father has re-grown 10,000 acres of timber land and the logs are gotten to the mill. Old Taylor attempts to buy Miss Foraker's timber but she refuses. A disgruntled employee fires the tract and it is saved through heroic efforts on the part of Taylor, his son and Helen and an understanding is reached between all parties finally.

The early footage introduces the late Theodore Roosevelt making a plea to replant every tree that is cut down. The location is another interesting and well-photographed bit of this big picture. The feature offers unlimited possibilities for exploitation and with such a cast you have good talking points.

It is THERE, too when it comes to entertainment.—J. K. M.

JACK HOLT IN MAKING A MAN

(PARAMOUNT)

Five reels of enjoyment in this excellent comedy-drama from a story by Peter B. Kyne, adapted by Albert Sheray LeVine and directed by Joseph Hanabery. This is one of the all too rare pictures that fulfills every requirement of screen entertainment. It is an interesting story with a well-defined theme to start with, and has been understandingly directed by Joseph Hanabery, the result being genuine value.

Jack Holt is excellent as the self-satisfied, arrogant small-town millionaire, the "King of the San Geronoimo Valley," who tried to win a girl's heart on his last profit made by foreclosing a mortgage. Holt plays "Horace Winsby," the aforementioned "king"—a hard-headed and hard-hearted banker, disliked by the townspeople and the farmers who can never get him to extend time on their loans, regardless of the hardships of a bad season.

The story opens with Winsby refusing time extension on a mortgage to an Italian farmer. He drives to the bank, running out of gas in the middle of a pool of dirty water. When he calls for aid no one will help him—he never extended a helping hand to any of them in the past. So the immaculate Mr. Winsby is forced to get out of his car, slips on a wet stone and lands in the mud, his white flannels being badly soiled.

Patricia Owens, just back from school, finds her father having trouble getting Winsby to pay his share of damage to a certain fence. She steps in, manages to get the bill paid and incidentally captures the heart of the "king." Later she repulsed his wooing.

Led by the peppy Italians, the farmers demand of Winsby time on their notes, and are refused, after which an Italian goes for Winsby with a shot-gun. On the advice of his old cashier Winsby goes to New York, hastily, taking with him only a suitcase. The cashier is to write him and let him know when the farmers are less hostile. In the city Winsby is robbed and is turned out of his hotel. Frantic wires fail to bring him money and he begins to wonder if it is to be broke. A park bench acquaintance gets him a job as a waiter, and while at this lowly occupation, Winsby learns many things, among them sympathy and understanding. The girl and her father arrive, find an entirely new Winsby, renewed friendship ripens into love, and Winsby begins living all over again.

THE THIRD ALARM
(FILM BOOKING OFFICES)

Here is a splendid audience picture. It has good atmosphere, a pleasing cast and plenty of thrills. This story of a fireman's life has a pleasing human note, and the fire climax is as startling and realistic as anything ever done for the screen. A good box-office attraction. Adapted from story by Emile Johnson. Directed by Emory Johnson. Seven reels in length.

While appealing principally to audiences that like action, thrills and tense suspense, "The Third Alarm" has its comedy, pathos and human note as well. Ralph Lewis who made his mark in "In the Name of the Law" has the leading role in this recital of the life of a city fire department employee. In this play he is Dan McDowell, who is retired when motor driven fire apparatus takes the place of horses. As in the former piece he gives a very finished and pleasing performance—a real characterization. He is well supported by Johnny Walker, as Johnny McDowell; Ella Hali, as June Rutherford; Virginia True Boardman, as Mrs. McDowell; Frankie Lee, as Jimmy, a newsboy, and Josephine Atair, as the daughter. There are a score of clever youngsters in the picture and a wonderfully intelligent white horse, "Bullets."

The fire scene are exceptionally well handled and convincing. A pretty romance runs through the picture.

The picture allows of unusual exploitation and will repay those who expend the extra effort to advertise it.

The story concerns Dan McDowell, fire truck driver, who is retired when motor apparatus is introduced into the fire department. He finds work as a laborer and saves an old fire horse from punishment at the hands of a cruel driver. His son is accused of stealing the horse from the dump cart driver and old Dan assumes the blame for the theft. Johnny, the son, gets a job with the department and at a big fire he is instrumental in saving June Rutherford, daughter of a physician. Old Dan assists the firemen in rescuing his son and June from a tight place by using "Bullets" the old fire horse to lift a safe that pins them down. The picture ends when Dan is given full charge of the old fire horses on a little farm, and his son finds happiness with June, the physician's daughter.

GLENN HUNTER IN SECOND FIDDLE
(HODKINSON)

An interesting little domestic drama, full of natural scenes and much better than most films of its type. Made under the direction of Frank Tuttle with a cast including besides Glenn Hunter, pretty Mary Astor, Leslie Stowe, and Townsend Martin. Six Reels.

"Second Fiddle" has the appeal of a well-told story, natural and picturesque New England scenery, and although nothing sensational in its development, it will please the majority of picture-goers. Glenn Hunter, who is perhaps better known upon the speaking stage than in pictures, plays the lead, that of a country youth who idolizes his elder brother, a college man, and plays "second fiddle" to whatever brother Herbert does. Mary Astor, as the girl in the case, Polly Crawford, in love with Jim Bradley, gives a pleasing and finished performance. Leslie Stowe is George Bradley, the father, and Townsend Martin is Herbert, the eldest son. There is much excellent photography and the direction is A-1.

Herb, Bradley returns from college for the holidays, and is presented with gifts and showered with praise by the family. Jim, the younger brother, who conducts a garage, is shoved into the background. A murderer runs rampant in the village and the sheriff with the men folks forms a posse to apprehend him. Jim is left behind to guard the murderer, who is discovered hiding in the Bradley home, while Herbert goes in search of the sheriff. The gun given Jim is empty. Herb, having taken the shells with him, Glenn, Hunter, who is the murderer, escapes. Polly, a young woman caught in a storm, seeks shelter in an old house, where the murderer is hiding. He attacks her, and she is saved when Jim comes up, outwits the murderer and effects his arrest. Jim then becomes the hero of Spell's River, and the affianced husband of Polly.

SPECIAL CAST IN WASTED LIVES

(SECOND NATIONAL)

This is a picture with a mission, but one with sufficient human interest points, and sufficiently well made to cause it to meet with general favor as a program feature. Five reels of interesting entertainment. Directed by Clarence Geldert.

The Mission Film Company set out to make films with a real message, and with the first one, offered by Second National Pictures Corporation, as a criterion, it will succeed in its object. The first production of this new company is a photo-played story which appeals deeply and the awakening of an idler to his mission in life and his efforts to relieve the sufferings of stricken children and restore them to health.

While getting over the message Clarence Geldert, who directed, did not fail to take into consideration the box office values, and the picture, besides having many touches which bring the heart throb, also has a good holding love story and plenty of dramatic appeal. The picture should prove a good attraction.

The story is built around Rondolph Adams, a young man of wealth who studied surgery and then was too much of an idler to take his profession seriously. While on a hunting trip in the North woods, he is called to a cabin, where his knowledge of medicine saves the life of a little child.

The suffering of the child and the following relief sets Adams to thinking. On his return to civilization he again takes up his studies determined to devote himself to treating children. So intense becomes his interest in this that he devotes little time to his young and charming wife. Ned Hastings, a former suitor, showers the wife with his attentions, urging that the doctor is so devoted to his profession that he cannot make her happy. The world war comes, and the physician goes to the front. His rival remains behind and lays siege to the wife. The physician is reported killed, but returns in time to save his hospidal and his home.

GLAD RAGS
(METRO)

There are a lot of good laughs in this latest Bull Montana comedy, which was made under the direction of Hunt Stromberg. Tom Gallery and Otis Harlan assist in the festivities. Bull is cast as "Frisco Flash," a prize fighter, who is hired by a nervous and irritable wealthy man to keep order in his home, and when the servants quit, "Flash" makes the pampered son and jazz loving daughter go naked and foot. There are two good ring battles, well staged and with some real fighting. A first rate comedy for any house.

Two scenes from the Emory Johnson production "The Third Alarm" with Ralph Lewis and an all-star cast. (Film Booking Offices)
THOMAS MEIGHAN IN BACK HOME AND BROKE
(PARAMOUNT)

One of those pictures that everybody likes without knowing why or caring. Just a narrative of a man doing what practically everybody has always wanted to do—and getting away with it. George Ade at his best transcribed to screen without the loss of a chuckle. Directed by Alfred E. Green in eight reels, which may be shortened slightly.

Writing "Back Home and Broke," George Ade deliberately sent his main character out to do the usually impossible thing that practically everybody has always wanted to do, permitted him to do it and get away with it, and enables everybody to do it for himself in the pictured person of Thomas Meighan, the perfect selection for the assignment.

The story is about a young man born wealthy, shunned when impoverished, who makes endless millions of dollars in oil and comes home to stand the old town on its ears. To tell the details of the operation would be to rob all who read this appraisal of one hour's rich experience.

Thomas Meighan is the typical American young man to a "T" in the picture. Lila Lee personifying with equally gratifying results the typical American young man's sweetheart. The names of those whose likewise typically American impersonations add endlessly to the picture's power as the play progresses are legion. There is not a weak spot in the populous cast.

Small town life is pictured in the inimitable Ade manner, burlesque and realism mixing together to produce semblance of perfection. Suspense is maintained by the most amazing means ever attempted and the picture elicits an unbroken succession of chuckles.

If there is an audience in this country which will not accord "Back Home and Broke" unreserved approval it is not an American audience. The picture should be advertised to the limit and depended upon to take care of itself upon the screen.

Two First Run Houses
In Indiana Territory Play "Notoriety"

The Will Nigh production, "Notoriety," being stated rights by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, has been booked for two first runs in two premiere houses in the Indiana territory. The bookings are the Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, and the Apollo theatre, Indianapolis.

The bookings were closed by the H. Lieber Co., distributors of the Indianapolis district, which bought the rights to The Will Nigh photodrama only a week ago. Within six days after purchase the Lieber Company was able to report the two first runs closed on this picture.

Big returns are looked for in both first runs when the picture plays, and the H. Lieber Co. are preparing themselves for record bookings on the Nigh feature. The film was screened for both exhibitors before it was booked.
A first-rate crook play with a "kick" in every scene. Made from Willard Mack's famous stage success, it carries you along swiftly from one point to another and holds you in a vise-like grip throughout the seven reels. Directed by George Fitzmaurice.

Can't have too many interesting crook stories like "Kick In." Those who recall the stage play will remember its possibilities. None of the Mack punch lines have been left out and Director Fitzmaurice has added a few for good measure. The incident of hiding the body in the couch, and later escaping the watchful detectives with the body—these are two of the thrills, but only too. It is packed full of them.

Aside from Bert Lytell, who has the role of Chic Hewes, we have Betty Compson, as Molly Brandon, an appealing and well acted part. May McAvoy appears as Myrtle, the wife of the young pick-packet, and no better bit has ever been done on the screen than where she passes the detectives—smiling—when her heart is breaking over the death of Bennie, her husband. Garrett Hughes plays Bennie, and plays it with fine understanding. Kathleen Clifford is "Frou Frou," Mayme Kelso Mrs. Brandon; John Miltern, the district attorney; Walter Long, a vicious detective, Whip Fogarty; Jed Proudly, as Jimmy Monahan and Charles Ogle as Delaney.

When Chic Hewes leaves the penitentiary he resolves to go straight, but the detectives, determined to learn of the operations of other crooks, bound him until he loses one job after another. He accidentally meets the daughter of the district attorney and a warm friendship springs up between them, and when Chic attempts to cover up the death of his brother, Bennie, who has been wounded while stealing a necklace, she comes upon the scene and becomes involved in the fray. She stands by him, and when her uncle offers him a position in the west she assists him in making his get-away. Later there is a happy reunion between the two.

A story of the Northwest, of bootleggers, pretty mountain maidens and a stalwart youth bent on righting a wrong and marrying the girl. The story is by William McLeod Raine. The direction by Howard Mitchell. It is in five reels.

While "Man's Size" is a big improvement over the last few of Russell's vehicles, it lacks much in plausibility and human interest. The Fox star is always fortunate in having a pretty girl playing opposite him, but the producers do not pick his stories with equal care, apparently. The action wherein a brutal old man whips a young and defenseless girl and practically sells her to a tough individual out of revenge is not pleasant to contemplate. However, the discovery that she is his own daughter and his ultimate repentance is a new twist.

Russell at first appears as a bootlegger, Tom Morse; but later becomes a government officer and helps break up the whiskey traffic. It is a good role for him and he is called upon to do some strenuous fighting. Alma Bennett appears as Jessie McRae, a girl of the forest who becomes acquainted with the hero when she shoots holes in two barrels of bootleg whiskey. Charles K. French is Angus McRae, her guardian; Stanton Heck, a brutal-looking Bully West, and James Gordon plays Carl Morse. McRae's hated rival. It is a good supporting cast and the story moves along swiftly from point to point with a dramatic climax.

Angus McRae forbids Tom Morse to speak to Jessie, when he learns who Morse is, because of his hatred for Morse's uncle. McRae illtreats Jessie, and finally because she confesses she is in love with Tom, he gets Bully West to take her away. The elder Morse appears and explains that Jessie is in reality McRae's own daughter and there is a desperate attempt to overtake West and his gang. There is much hard riding and fighting and plenty of beautiful out of door scenery.

Following his two former successes, "Too Much Business" and "The Ladder Jinx," comes Jess Robbins with another equally as entertaining.

This story of a small town publisher, a politician, and an energetic newspaper reporter, will amuse and at the same time gives an insight into rural journalism in the making of the screen.

As in the other two pictures Edward Horton plays the lead in his usual clever and natural manner. Edith Roberts makes a pleasing heroine and Lloyd Ingraham, as the mayor, almost runs away with the picture. James Corigan is the publisher: Buddy Messenger, the printer's office boy; W. R. Lawrence, a reporter; and Vera Boys, the mayor's wife, with her usual charm. Vernon Walker is responsible for the excellent photography.

The story concerns Rodney Marvin, out of work, who sees an opportunity to make himself solid with the publisher of the "Gazette," win the publisher's daughter and the everlasting favor of the quarrelsome mayor. The publisher prints a story about the town's need of buying a vacant farm for the improvement of the city, just as the mayor proposes to purchase the same property. Gorham, the mayor, sends a man to get an option on the farm, but Marvin befriends him to it, then sells the property to Gorham for $5,000. He uses the money to take up the mayor's name and buy a newspaper. The unique ending is one of the picture's high points.

SPECIAL CAST IN

WHAT FOOLS MEN ARE

(AMERICAN RELEASING)

Here is an interesting and well-made adaptation of Eugene Walter's stage play, "The Flapper"; and while it is neither very strong dramatically nor highly original in plot, it makes good entertainment of the society type.

Directed by George Terwilliger.

Six reels.

"The" is the story of sweet, young, lovelorn lass who is rejected by the man she loves. How her estranged couple are reunited and the little flapper wins happiness with her youthful but penniless husband makes up the balance of the tale.

Huntley Gordon is well cast as Bartley Claybourne, the young lawyer who supplies his sister-in-law with a beautiful wardrobe, while his wife writes fiction. Florence Billings is the authoress-wife. J. Barney Sherry is the wealthy Horace Demarest, and Peggy Kenricks, the son. Ralph Demarest. Templar Saxe plays a semi-comedy role, Bayard Thomas, Demarest's lawyer. The role of the flapper, Peggy Kenricks, falls to Faire. Binney, and while we have seen her in more appealing parts, she brings into play the impression of a headstrong, foolish little girl who finally finds herself, with considerable charm. Lucy Fox plays, or takes over, the role of Ola. There are some pretty interiors, several cabinet scenes and the whole is nicely staged by Clarence Badger. Peter Milne adapted the Walter play.

Second Betty Blythe Film

Issued by B. B. Company

B. B. Productions, Inc. announces that deliveries are being made on "Darling of the Rich." the second picture in the series of the Betty Blythe state right special productions being issued on the open market. This production is described as far more elaborate than "How Women Love."

B. B. Productions, Inc. also announces that the name of the third picture has been changed from the original "Darling of the Rich." The production will be made under the personal supervision of Whitman Bennett, and will be directed by Lawrence Windom.

Anchor Get New Feature

In Which Bosworth Stars

The latest production starring Hobart Bosworth, available through the Anchor Film Distributors, is entitled "The Law of the Sea," which has been produced by the Motion Picture Utility Corporation, was directed by David H. Clifford and is a five-act story with the principal scenes laid at sea. Clarence Badger wrote the continuity from an original story by Ethel Gillette.
With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

PAUL BERN, who has been head of the Goldwyn scenario department, has been engaged by the Universal organization and is now at work at Universal City. Mr. Bern is widely known as a writer of great ability and he carries with him the best wishes of his host of friends in his new position.

Four big producing companies are bidding for the services of Larry Semon, we are told. The fun maker's contract with Vitagraph expires with the completion of five more comedies, and an announcement is expected shortly stating that the popular comedian has affiliated himself with one of the active bidders.

The Charles Chaplin studio is once again a beehive of activity. Edna Purviance, the new star, has almost recuperated from a recent attack of appendicitis, and Eddie Sutherland, assistant director, is out of bed following a mean case of tonsillitis. Chaplin, himself, is wielding the megaphone for Edna and the initial Purviance starring vehicle will shortly be ready for distribution.

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, who but recently returned from a 15,000-mile tour about the world, which embraced most of the cities of Europe, is now settling down in Hollywood and is preparing for an active season of production. What with Roscoe Arbuckle again added to his string of stars, the energetic producer of the Norma and Constance Talmadge productions and the Buster Keaton comedies will have but little time for play.

With "Rupert of Hentzau" and "The Common Law" both well under way in the hands of Directors Victor Heerman and George Archainbaud, Myron Selznick, head of the Selznick production forces, has taken advantage of the opportunity to make a hurried business trip to New York. During his absence A. G. Vocke, vice-president of the company, will assume active charge of production activities. Selznick will be absent from the United "lot" but a short time.

PHIL GERSDORF, well known exploitation man who arrived here recently from New York, has joined the Hunt Stromberg forces as exploitation representative. Aside from putting over publicity and exploitation stunts for the comedy producer, Gersdorf will conduct a service department for the benefit of exhibitors.

MAYOR GEORGE E. CUYER of Los Angeles, who recently returned from a trip to Washington, D. C., where he went to confer with President Harding relative to plans for the proposed Monroe Doctrine centennial celebration to be held here next summer, reports that the chief executive will make every effort to place the position so that he will lend those who have the affair in charge every effort that will tend to make it a success.

After conferring with numerous studio executives, newspaper men and civic leaders, WILL HAYS departed for Sullivan, Ind., last week to spend the holidays with his family. While in Los Angeles, the motion picture chief offered his assistance to the several organizations who have taken up the battle against dope.

FRANK LLOYD will shortly become an independent producer. He is now directing Norma Talmadge in "Within the Law" and at the conclusion of this production he will begin a series of independent pictures to be released through some established organization. Mr. Lloyd has made no statement as yet concerning the story of the star he will employ in his initial production.

ROGER LEWIS, for some time past special correspondent for an eastern magazine, has been added to the staff of the Pickford-Fairbanks studio, where he will assist in the preparation of stories for Jack Pickford, and will also do general work in the titling department. Jack, by the way, left recently for Detroit, where he will spend Christmas with his wife, Marilyn Miller, now playing there in "Sally."

GLORIA SWANSON, who has been seriously ill for several days, is on the road to speedy recovery and has resumed work on her current picture under Sam Wood's direction.

"SNOWY" BAKER, the latest addition to Phil Goldstone's string of stars, has become a real Hollywoodite. The Australian sportsman and athlete has rented a pretty little California bungalow where he maintains "open house" for his many friends and admirers.

CECIL DE MILLE entertained Will Hays during his recent visit to Los Angeles with a dinner party. The director-producer is very enthusiastic about the achievements of the Motion Picture Producers' and Distributors' Association up to date and he feels that the work of Mr. Hays is one of the most important factors in the progress of the cinema art, both from the viewpoint of the studio and from the play-goer.

After vacationing for a brief period in New York during the press month, James Leo Meehan, director of Gene Stratton Porter productions, expects to return to Los Angeles to begin preparations for the second picture to be made by the filmmaker. Her first production, "Michael O'Hallaran," will soon be ready for the public, we are informed.

PHIL GOLDSSTONE, the independent producer, took the entire "Snowy" Baker company to his studio last week and it is expected that the studio will begin production of "His Lost Race." Of course "Boomerang," the star's blue-blooded trick picture is still under way and all the boys could do to keep the animal off of the muddy Mexican track where daily races are now being run under the supervision of Jim Cofforth.

The honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Dexter is over. Elliot's respite from the grinding camera was short but sweet and he has returned to the studio to play in the Selznick production of "The Common Law," which is being directed by George Archainbaud. Members of the cast are endeavoring to make Dexter's hours at the studio as enjoyable as possible so that he will not miss the separation from his newly-wedded wife too greatly, which is what the Selznick publicity director says.

BULL MONTANA is diligently studying the art of terpsichore for his role in "They Call It Dancing," a forthcoming Hunt Stromberg production. "The Bool" is out to show up Ted Shawn, Erisco, and other dance celebrities.

Hollywood press agents are slowly recuperating from their Tia Juana trip and we are pleased to announce that there are no casualties up to the present time. Aside from the fact that Mike Boylan, Universal scribe, lost his family's Christmas money and a few articles of his own clothing on a certain Mexican mud pony that failed to show, the liabilities were also light.

HERBERT BLACHE, the talented Frenchman, has been assigned to direct Herbert Rawlinson in his next starring vehicle, temporarily titled, "Nobody's Bride." Since Blache's association with Universal several rumors of a sequel to such a vehicle has been speculating about who he would wield a megaphone for. At last it can be told!

We are informed that James Cagney has made a truly wonderful picture from Emerson Hough's remarkable story, "The Covered Wagon." The thrill, suspense, drama and romance of this epic of early days has not been excelled in photoplay say those who have witnessed an advance showing of this Paramount production.

Wausau, Wis.—F. T. Welter of Sturgeon Bay, has purchased the Grand opera house from Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Cone.

Drumright, Okla.—R. W. Eldred has purchased the Strand theatre which he will open on completion of improvements.
Paramount Announces
“Super 39”
Company Prepares Complete Schedule of Its Offerings for Next Six Months

It was just six months ago that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation made its remarkable announcement of the forty-one Paramount Pictures which it intended to distribute during the six months following August 1. This announcement was one of the most complete and far-reaching of its kind ever put forth by any company in the industry.

FOLLOWING a long period of business depression, felt as keenly in the theatres as anywhere else—a period of hesitation born of fear upon the part of the great majority of producers and distributors of pictures—this bold stroke by the world’s largest production company not only aroused keen public interest but it created a stir within the industry itself, because of the promises held forth for the future and the story of what actually had been accomplished.

The plans for that gigantic program of motion picture production had been conceived by Adolph Zukor, president of the company, and Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of productions, months before, when the industry as a whole was in the doldrums. It was no time for snap judgment, although the situation called for quick action.

“We will go to work at once,” said Messrs. Zukor and Lasky, “and in six months we will present to the exhibitors of America a program of productions which, if not all of them are complete, they all will be at least planned and provided for down to the last detail.”

And they did. The history of “The Famous Forty-One” is now nearly complete. As that first announcement awakened new hope and confidence in the future, so have the finished pictures fulfilled the promises made for them. The record is written in the box office results scored by “The Dictator,” “If You Believe It, It’s So,” “Nice People,” “Blood and Sand,” “The Valley of Silent Men,” “Manslaughter,” “The Old Home,” “The Burning Sands,” “To Have and to Hold,” “The Young Rajah,” “Clarence,” “The Impossible Mrs. Belkew” and all the rest.

Confident of the wisdom of their policy—a confidence which has been fully justified by the reception accorded those pictures by the industry and by the exhibitors—Paramount executives made no amendment of their previous action. Before the publication of the first of the forty-one on August 6 work actually had been started on more than a dozen of the Paramount pictures to be included on the program of the second six months starting November 1.

S O now come “The Super Thirty-Nine.” To ensure a continuation of the constant flow of “super pictures” to satisfy the demands of the trade, the resources of the Paramount organization were expanded and more perfectly systematized than ever before.

Despite the fact that the Paramount studios in California had been enlarged and production efficiency there had been carried to a point never before reached, it was found that even those facilities were inadequate. It was found necessary to reopen the company’s huge studio at Long Island City, which had been closed for many months, in order to accommodate the expanding production. This was done during the summer and both Western and Eastern producing organizations have been working virtually to capacity ever since.

The staff of writers necessarily had to be increased, for the rights to some of the most valuable literary and dramatic properties had been obtained for picturization. No effort or expense has been spared in order to raise the quality and magnitude of the production contemplated to a standard of realism and entertainment value never before approached.

Pola Negri, the wonderful European star of “Passion” and “Gypsy Blood,” was brought to America where she has made, under the direction of George Fitzmaurice, “Bella Donna,” Robert Hichens’ great story of the desert.

In order to obtain the exact atmosphere called for by Joseph Hergesheimer’s sensational novel, “Java Head,” Director George Melford and his entire producing unit were brought east from California and sent to Salem, Mass., there to film the important scenes right at the very locale of the story.

JULIA CRAWFORD IVERS, while vacationing in Hawaii, wrote a story, “The White Flower,” for Betty Compson. When it came time to make the picture, Miss Compson and the entire company were sent to the Pacific islands to work before the backgrounds the story described.

James Cruze had been assigned to produce a Paramount picture from Emerson Flagg’s epic of the Great West, “The Covered Wagon.” His entire unit, augmented by hundreds of extra players and supplied with trainloads of equipment and supplies, was sent first to Antelope Island in Great Salt Lake, where a real buffalo hunt was staged, and later to a huge ranch in Nevada where a thousand or more Indians had been marshaled for a reproduction of a battle between the savages and the heroic emigrants.

To provide the proper atmosphere for the screen version of Rex Beach’s great story, “The Negro-Do-Well,” Alfred E. Green, the director, Thomas Meighan, the star, and the entire company are off to Panama, there to film all of the exterior scenes right where the author gathered the material for his story and laid his plot.

These are but a few of the things that Paramount has done in order to provide America with a share of its entertainment; for the remainder of the picture season of 1923-24. Moreover, its own product will be augmented by a number of pictures produced by Cosmopolitan, all of which will be distributed through the thirty-six Paramount branch exchanges to the exhibitors and people of the United States.

Most of the “Super Thirty-Nine” either have been completed or are now in production. As for the rest, every last detail has been planned, even the players for the minor roles have been chosen, and the actual dates upon which they will first be shown to the public have been set.

Visual Sales Plan Is Accomplished

PARAMOUNT Featurettes Give Salient Selling Points of "Super 39"

Sidney R. Kent

Practical visual salesmanship of motion pictures is about to be an accomplished fact. Paramount's sales featurettes have solved the problem, and exhibitors everywhere will be afforded the opportunity of seeing on their own screens what they are asked to buy from the Famous Players-Lasky organization.

It is not always convenient, or even possible, for an exhibitor to attend a screening of a picture before buying it. Even less often is it possible for him to screen what he buys in his own theatre before signing his contract. Moreover, Paramount recognizes the fact that the best of salesmen cannot sell the exhibitor everything he ought to know or wants to know about a picture, especially the larger production that because of its very nature does not represent in its face the same stabilized value that the exhibitor knows that he is getting when he buys pictures with stars who have an established patronage at his box office.

That's the reason for the featurettes. Starting with the "Super Thirty-Nine," every Paramount salesman will carry with him a film of necessary length, which will tell the exhibitor, better than he can be told by words, what he would like to know about each of the season's big special productions. It is not a tabloid version of the feature—it is more than that. It tells him not only the picture story in abridged form but it visualizes to him the salient selling points connected with its productions. And in addition it shows glimpses of all the big scenes which have been introduced to lend box office value to the production.

Then follow glimpses of the big scenes, such as the departure from Westport Landing; the attack by the Indians on Fort Bridger, the buffalo hunt and the exciting fordings of the swollen river, together with the big intimate scenes more directly connected with the unfolding of the dramatic plot. Short subtitles give supplementary information concerning the cast and story as well as everything of advertising and exploitation value directly connected with it.

Been for yourself? is the implied slogan of the featurettes, and it is the opinion of S. R. Kent and other Paramount sales executives that they are going to revolutionize the business of film selling as applied to special productions.

SEVEN NEW BRANCHES: During 1922 seven new Paramount branches were opened, bringing the total to thirty-six and placing the company in a position to render more efficient service. Of the seven, six are fully equipped exchanges and the seventh is a shipping station. The entire system is under the direction of general manager of distribution S. R. Kent.

The new exchanges are: Milwaukee, 119-121 Seventh street, managed by G. A. Durfam and serving territory in District 5; Portland, Me., 263 St. John street, managed by J. H. MacColl and serving Northern part of District 1; Peoria, 113 South Monroe street, managed by M. M. Hirsch and serving Southern section of District 5; Columbus, O., 251 North Fifth street, managed by Harry W. Dodge and serving Central Ohio District 10; Wilkes-Barre, Pa., 62 North State street, managed by E. W. Schweigert and serving North Central Pennsylvania in District 3, and Sioux Falls, S. D., managed by A. B. Leek and serving Northwestern section of District 11. The shipping station is at Butte, Mont., 49 West Granite street, and facilitates distribution throughout Rocky Mountain territory, District 8.

PARAMOUNT DATE BOOK: Unique among advertising booklets is the PARAMOUNT DATE BOOK which has been prepared by the advertising department. Covered in limp cloth binding and printed in colors, this booklet contains a full-page or two-page illustrated announcement on each of The Super Thirty-Nine and these are followed by short illustrated official billings and brief synopses of all of The Famous Forty-One.

There are also brief seasonal announcements by Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky and S. R. Kent, but the main feature of the booklet is a complete exhibitors booking guide and cost sheet for the entire year 1923. Each page covers a week's bookings with ample space allotted for entries covering each day's feature, comedy and miscellaneous films; accessories, including lithographs, lobby displays, heralds, etc.; the cost of picture, cost of advertising and day's receipts.

This handsome and handy souvenir of the "Super Thirty-Nine" is now being distributed through the exchanges to all Paramount exhibitors.

World-Wide Interest In "Super 39"

Shauer Says Announcement Will Be Received With Gratification Abroad

That no announcement in the motion picture trade throughout the world will be received with greater interest than that given Mr. Lasky's production program for the remainder of the year 1922-23, is the opinion of Emil E. Shauer, assistant treasurer and director of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in discussing plans for world distribution of the "Super Thirty-Nine."

ALTHOUGH it will be several months before these forthcoming Paramount specials will be available for foreign distribution," said Mr. Shauer, "we are finding everywhere throughout the world a constantly increasing interest in the future production plans for Paramount pictures.

The foreign exhibitor is becoming more and more keenly alive to the development of the motion picture industry in this country, and announcements of the sort made by Mr. Lasky at the Los Angeles Paramount convention will be received with particular gratification the world over. Perhaps the most interesting feature of this announcement is the action of the production department in continuing the policy of producing the highest grade super specials. A number of the group of forty-one specials have been released in various parts of the world in the last few months and have met with the most enthusiastic receptions everywhere.

PERHAPS the most striking development in the foreign field during the last year has been the conversion of the leading exhibitors to the policy of screening special productions of the highest calibre. These exhibitors are learning, as has been the case in this country, that their patrons want nothing but the best in motion picture entertainment. For this reason the foreign department welcomes the opportunity to distribute through its own offices and through leading distributors elsewhere the splendid list of thirty-nine Paramount pictures promised by Mr. Lasky for the coming six months.

"During the past twelve months the foreign department has taken particular pains to enlarge its distributing facilities throughout the world to obtain the proper presentation of such great Paramount specials as 'Blood and Sand,' 'To Have and to Hold,' 'Manslaughter,' 'While Satan Sleeps,' 'The Old Homestead,' 'The Impossible Mrs. Bellevue,' 'Clarence,' 'Kick In,' 'The World's Applause' and others of the superb Forty-one. This policy will be continued during the coming year.

In France branch offices have been opened in Lille, Toulouse, Bordeaux, Strasbourg, Marseilles, Lyon and Nancy, and the same organization is distributing Paramount pictures from recently opened offices at Brussels, in Belgium; Basle, Switzerland; Algiers, Algeria; Cairo, Egypt, and Constantinople. Turkey, with Adolphe Osso of Paris in charge. In Denmark, Norway and Sweden arrangements were completed for the distribution of Paramount pictures through offices operated by Carl York and Walter LeMat in Copenhagen, Christiania and Stockholm. Ingvard C. Oes is Paramount's representative in these offices.

"On the other side of the world it has become necessary for the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., of which John W. Hicks, Jr., is managing director, to open exchanges at Singapore, Straits Settlements, and Batavia, Java, to take care of the increased demands for Paramount pictures. Recently offices were opened in Tokyo, Japan, under the management of Tom D. Cochrane.

"In Great Britain arrangements have been completed by John Cecil Graham, Managing Director of Famous Players Film Company, Ltd., for the immediate release of four Paramount specials, 'Saturday Night,' 'Bought and Paid For,' 'The Young Diana' and 'The Good Provider.' This policy has met with an enthusiastic reception on the part of the film trade and the public, as it forewarns the coming of the day when the British release schedule will be brought down to within six or eight months of the American schedule."
At the outset of its national advertising campaign which has done so much to sell motion pictures to the public, Paramount spent in the first year a sum of money which was regarded skeptically in some quarters as extravagant. Time has proved the falseness of that view. Paramount has kept on expanding the scope of its national campaign, and in 1923 the company will spend just about ten times as much in selling Paramount pictures for the exhibitor to the public as it did that first year.

M. BOTSFORD, advertising manager, with the co-operation of Henff-Metzger, Inc., advertising agents, has completed his plans for the national advertising of the “Super Thirty-Nine”—a campaign greater in magnitude than any company has ever before launched. As usual, the Saturday Evening Post, with its circulation of more than two million copies every week, will carry the message in greatest volume.

The Post campaign for the “Super Thirty-Nine” will start in the issue of January 13. This will be a full-page in colors, the Paramount trade mark dominating the illustration and the text being captioned, “The name that earned fame through thousands of hours of wonderful entertainment!” In a box at the right is text calling attention to the complete announcement of the “Super Thirty-Nine” to be found in the Post of January 27.

In the issue of the 27th, immediately preceding the initial publication of the six months product, the listing of all the pictures will be carried in a double-page spread in colors. Double-page spread in black and white will be run on each of the following six special productions set for day and date release, the advertisement in each instance appearing in the Post dated the day before the release of the pictures: “Adam’s Rib,” “Java Head,” “Hells Donner,” “The Glimpses of the Moon,” “Hollywood” and “Bluebeard’s Eighth Wife.”

COPY on “You Can’t Find Your Wife” and “The Rustle of Silk,” also day and date pictures, will consist of single pages in colors, while the big James Cruze production, “The Covered Wagon,” will be handled in a unique manner. Several weeks before the publication of that picture a series of the quarter-page teaser advertisements will be started, and they will culminate in a double-page spread in colors. Incidentally, color pages on “The Covered Wagon” will be run in many other national magazines.

Supplementing this production advertising in the Post there will be a page in color every four weeks. These will consist of good will copy and each will carry the complete Paramount schedule for the following month. The decorative and human-interest features of this copy in each instance will center around a great motion picture theatre, the best houses including, among others, the Rivoli, in New York; the Grenada, in San Francisco; Grauman’s Metropolitan, in Los Angeles; the Palace, in Washington; McVicker’s, in Chicago, and Newman’s in Kansas City.

In addition to the campaign in The Post, all the leading fan magazines will carry at least one full page in each issue, with two-page spreads on some of the bigger pictures. The Ladies’ Home Journal will also carry a page each month, while Pictorial Review will have a special advertisement on “The Glimpses of the Moon,” the story of which ran serially in that magazine.

The January issue of Pictorial Review, now on the news stands, has an interesting article by Nina Wilcox Putman, entitled, “What’s Right With the Movies,” embodying comments by Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, Samuel Goldwyn, W. W. Hodkinson, D. W. Griffith and other prominent figures in the picture world. Paramount has taken advantage of the fan interest aroused by this article and on the page opposite the start of the story there is a full-page advertisement, “Shopping for the Best Pictures.”

Exploitation

PARAMOUNT’S division of exploitation, under the direction of Claud Saunders, points to the fact that its slogan, “It Has Been Done,” has been lived up to in connection with “The Famous Forty-One.” Its record of performance therefor is cited as embodying the strongest assurance to exhibitors that they may expect the same kind of cooperation on “The Super Thirty-Nine.”

No story of the success of “The Famous Forty-One” is complete without at least a brief story of the activities of this department which maintains a staff of thirty trained showmen scattered throughout the country. The duty of these men is to see that the exhibitor takes in as much as possible on his Paramount productions.

For “Her Gilded Cage,” the exploiters developed a cheap and inexpensivelette work which transformed lobby fronts at little cost. This novel flash worked perfectly everywhere the picture played.

For “Nice People,” the exploiters sold the title to merchants of the town on the angle that “Nice People trade at this store,” and secured page after page of solid advertising.

Publicity

INFORMATION that keeps the public constantly apprised of Paramount’s activities comes in a steady flow from Paramount’s publicity department, headed by Charles E. McCarthy. The machinery of the department is geared to its highest development in situations where publicity is most needed. For instance, a tremendous publicity campaign has attended the American debut of Pola Negri. Comparatively little known before her arrival in America, this European actress has in a few months become one of the most talked of screen players in the world and her first American picture, “Bluebeard’s Eighth Wife,” is being awaited eagerly.

Moreover the half-hundred other screen stars, directors and leading players appearing in Paramount pictures are being kept constantly before the public in newspapers, magazines, theatre programs, and other forms of publicity.

Sheet music and books also are being utilized to bring them favorably to the attention of new audiences. From your piano Paramount players smile at you from the covers of such popular music as “Singed Wings,” “To Have and To Hold.”
The following synopses were written for the HERALD by the publicity department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

THE COVERED WAGON: For the amount of expenditures involved in a successful endeavor to make one of the great classics of the screen, for the number of people employed steadily from the start to the finish of the picture, for the difficulties encountered and overcome and for the mighty theme of the story, this James Cruze production exceeds anything ever before attempted by the Paramount producing organization.

The picture, "Hollywood Emerson Hough's wonderful story of the conquest of the great West was made in Nevada and Utah. Hundreds of people were transported to the huge Baker ranch in Nevada, consisting of 200,000 acres. The whole West was combed for every available prairie schooner still in existence and nearly 200 of them were procured. Their transportation, along with that of the rest of the vast amount of equipment, required thirty special trains. A thousand Indians were rounded up for the singing of the most realistic Indian battle scenes ever filmed, and special permission was given for the staging of a real buffalo hunt, in which the great herd on Antelope Island, in Great Salt Lake—the largest herd in existence—was used.

No printed page is sufficient to present an adequate description of the multitude of this picture, with the vast Western plains as the background for its thousands of people, 600 oxen, 1,000 horses and 500 buffaloes—produced without stint by the man who made "The Old Homestead." It is a picture of great historic importance, presenting a cast including Lois Wilson, Warren Kerrigan, Alan Hale, Charles Ogle, Ethel Wales, Ernest Torrence, Ully Marshall, Guy Oliver and John Foxx. The scenario was written by Jack Cummings.

HOLLYWOOD: Here is a picture! As something unique in the realm of the nema this one has never been equalled, is said. When Frank Condon submitted to Jesse L. Lasky the script of his novel "Hollywood, and the Only Child," Mr. Lasky was amazed by its poignancy, charmed by its story and excited in the contemplation of its wonderful possibilities.

Ask any motion picture fan which she would rather see, Hollywood or New York, and the answer will be, "Hollywood, if I can see everything and everybody when I get there." And "Hollywood," directed by James Cruze, shows "everything and everybody.

But make no mistake. "Hollywood" carries with it no propaganda, no exposé of the secrets of picture-making. It is not a motion picture tour of Hollywood. It is a real, fast-moving story of human love romance of a girl who wanted to get into the movies—and doesn't succeed. The heroine is the counterpart of a million American girls, with a consuming ambition to act in moving pictures. Like so many others she thinks her beauty will prove to the open world, but oddly enough, even her old-fashioned father, her maid aunt, her sweetheart and finally, her own twin children "beat her to it." As running through the plot are melodrama, love, mystery and humor, all in abundance.

And the cast—just a hint to everybody big that you can think of. Cecil B. de Mille has a prominent part—the first instance on record of a big director playing a role in a motion picture which is not of another director. Along with him is featured an array of stars that will make every other so-called all-star cast fade out of memory. The list includes, besides Miss Swanson, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels, Agnes Ayres, Jack Holt, Betty Compson, May McAvoy, Leatrice Joy, Lily Lee, Theobert Roberts, Conrad Nagel, Lois Wilson, Theodore Kosloff, George Fawcett, Charles Ogle, Walter Huston, John Jacoby, with who's names, when announced, will take your breath away.

ADAM'S RIB: Those who argue that there is nothing new in the photoplay are due for a surprise when they see Cecil B. de Mille's production, "Adam's Rib," which is another original story by Mr. de Mille. Adapted scenario writer, Jeanie Macpherson. This romance is played out for the most part, against a strange setting of skeletons of animals that lived somewhere around fourteen million years ago—probably the most unique setting yet used in a motion picture. These prehistoric creatures include prehistoric monsters are exact copies of those treasured in the American Museum of Natural History and the Smithsonian Institution. In connection with these curiosities Mr. de Mille has gone back farther than ever before in the making of scenes which represent how people lived, or might have lived, in the days before historic dawned.

"Adam's Rib" is all over the interest started in the modern girl by "Manslaughter" by giving the other side of the case—in other words, setting forth in her best light. Thus, Mr. de Mille is answering one tremendously successful and sensational picture with another, just as he answered "Don't Change Your Husband" with "Why Change Your Wife?" Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nilsson and Pauline Garon are the principals in a wonderful cast.

THE GLIMPSES OF THE MOON: Paramount was extremely fortunate in obtaining for picturization Edith Wharton's novel, "The Glimpses of the Moon," for which publication of the first installment of the story was published by D. Appleton & Co. simultaneously with the last installment and has been among the best sellers of fiction every month since.

The plot is quite unique. The heroine, luxury-loving and dependent entirely upon rich friends, and the hero, a poor but socially ambitious writer, with the understanding that should an opportunity present itself to either one to better himself financially socially, the other will not stand in the way. Here, sure enough is a theme with great possibilities.

The company has gone the limit on this production. Allan Dwan, who now perches on the top of the directorial ladder by reason of his production of "Robin Hood," staging D. W. Griffith, Fairbanks, was engaged to direct, and Bebe Daniels was chosen to play the leading role. Besides her is David Powell, while Nita Naldi is seen in a vampire role. Ruby De Remer and Maurice Costello are also in the cast. The picture breathes luxury and wealth, with thousand-dollar gowns by the score set off in lavish backgrounds.

GRUMPY: William de Mille has become prominent during the past few years for his masterly translation of stage plays to the screen. Witness: "Miss Lulu Bett," "Bought and Paid For," "Nice People," and "Clarence," among others. Now he has essayed "Grumpy," the wonderful play by Horace Hodges and T. W. Percyval, which provided one of the great character studies in the history of the modern stage. Clara Beranger wrote the adaptation of this play. The story is more than thrilling, involving an attempted diamond robbery, and throughout all runs a wholly satisfying thread of romance.

"Grumpy" first was presented at the Theatre Royal in Glasgow, in September, 1919. Later that same season it opened at Wallack's in New York, where it ran for 150 performances. All the next season it was in London and in 1915-16 it was brought back to New York for a return engagement. Throughout the two runs in New York and then the one in London, the quaint title character around which the play is built was played by Cyril Maude. "Grumpy" is made to order for Theodore Roberts, even more so than was the role of Uncle Joth in "The Old Homestead." Featured with him will be May...
McAvoy, with Conrad Nagel playing opposite.

ADAM AND EVA: Cosmopolitan has made a fine picture out of this play by Guy Bolton and George Middleton which was produced at the New Amsterdam in New York, and found its picture rights in brisk demand. Luther Reed wrote the scenario and Robert G. Vignola, who produced "Wings," is in Fool's Errand. It is the story of a man who turned his family over to a young go-getter and came back to find them changed; but it, like most good stories, is nothing more than a spectacle, as most stories of the past have been. The business that this picture has been doing at the Criterion theatre in New York and in several other leading cities where it has been playing long runs proves that "When Kainthool Wais in Flower" is one of the finest of the costume pictures.

It's a great story, this romantic novel by Charles Major of the period of King Henry VIII, and Miss Davies, under the able direction of Robert G. Vignola, rises to the level of her character never before attained. The sets, designed by Joseph Urban, are gigantic, substantially realistic and of great beauty. The picture was six months in the making and presents 3,000 actors, genuine antique armor and rare tapestries, costumes, furniture and paintings.

In the supporting cast are Forrest Stanley, Lyn Harding, Pedro de Cordoba, Ruth Shepley, Ernest Glendening, Charles Geraghty, Macey Harlam and George Nash.

YOU CAN'T FOOL YOUR WIFE: This is a George Melford production enough in itself to ensure its box office success. Waldemar Young wrote the story, basing it upon an original by Hector Turnbull. A most elaborate production has been provided for. The theme is a great one, that of the eternal triangle is given a new twist, Leatrice Joy who leap into the spotlight a few days ago will go down in history with her performance as Lydia Thomason. Nita Naldi, the alluring Dona Sol of "Blood and Sand," and Lewis Stone, one of the most popular of the actors on the screen, are the featured players.

MEETINGS SPENDS HIS DIME: In the mean time Paramount introduces a new star in the person of Walter Hiers, his entrance into the circle bearing in defence to numerous requests from exhibitors. The exhibition of his pronounced talent as a comedian, Dana Burnet wrote this story of a necktie salesman who spent his last dime and then found himself on a life of adventure and romance. The part was made to order for the jovial Walter. The story was published in Red Book and contains a surprise every minute and a laugh every second. Albert Shelby Le Vino wrote the scenario and Wallace Worsley directed.

VENDETTA: There is no piece of modern literature more wonderfully suited to the screen than Marie Corelli's novel. "Vendetta," is probably literally true that millions have read it for it is one of the most successful of all the stories by the widely read author of "Fool's Errand." "Passion Diana" and "The Sorrows of Satan." It is the thrilling story of a man, who, after his wife's death, returns with a fabulous fortune and wreaks vengeance upon his enemies. Cosmopolitan has given it a magnificent setting, fully worthy of the great story. It is directed by director Alan Crosland directed Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens are the featured players and the former, in the role of the hero, gives one of the screen's greatest portrayals.

WHITE HEAT: Everybody who reads the Saturday Evening Post is familiar with the stories of the steel mills by R. L. Stewart. The story is especially for Thomas Meighan and is the story of a young steel engineer who runs a small steel plant. There are scenes actual steel making, and the story. The story is a human one, depicting the rise of a worker through every obstacle, and it will have an appeal for everyone. The love element plays a most important part in the development of the theme and there is a lot of comedy. Percy Heath is the scenarist and Alfred E. Green the director.

Pola Negri in DECLASSÉ: Acknowledged by all as the greatest stage play in which Ethel Barrymore ever appeared, its picturization by George Fitzmaurice with Pola Negri in the chief role, is to prove a top-notch box office attraction. The play was written by Zoe Akins and was presented by Charles Frohman, Inc., at the Empire Theatre in October, 1919. There it played to standing room only for many months until it was necessary to move the piece to another production. Thereafter it played to records in Chicago and other large cities. It is the story of a beautiful and fascinating woman who is divorced without just cause by a brutal husband. Improvisation, she sinks almost to ruin but is sustained always by her love for a young man who is not entirely worthy. The denouement is tragic, the role being just the kind best suited to Miss Negri's wonderful dramatic talent. The scenario is by Ouida Bergere.

THE RUSTLE OF SILK: This is a George Fitzmaurice production, and tells just the kind of story that Mr. Fitzmaurice revels in producing on the screen. Cosmo Hamilton wrote it and Ouida Bergere adapted it.

It is a tale of a poor young English girl who falls in love with a famous singer, and at first appears destined in life being far above her own, she secures employment in his household as lady's maid to him, and thus wins his respect by the love of a worthy young man of her own circle, she resolves to win the object of her admiration. She dons one of the singer's old costumes and goes to the Savoy where she knows he is to dine, and there, through a ruse, secures an introduction to him. She continues her masquerading and at last succeeds in winning his attention and later his love. His wife discovers what is going on and the triangular situation develops most interestingly.

Mr. Fitzmaurice has directed both Miss Compson and Conway Tearle, the teaming of which brought great success, the former in "To Have and to Hold" and "Kick In", and the latter in support of Pola Negri in "Bella Donna."

CHILDREN OF JAZZ: This is a story by Harold Brighouse, bearing a title that in itself is enough to bring people to the box office in droves. Moreover, it is a talkie picture, to be issued as an Alfred E. Green production. Mr. Green has come rapidly to the front. His first picture, "The Bachelor Daddy," starring Thomas Meighan, enjoys the distinction of registering a full 100 per cent in entertainment and box office value in all the hundreds of reports from exhibitors, both the published ones and those received through confidential channels. Since then he has come through with the highly successful "Chill with Mexican as star—"Our Leading Citizen." "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" and "Back Home and Broke."

It tells of the adventures of the hero of the present younger generation and of those of the preceding one are contrasted when the children of jazz, some oddly mixed young conmen, is a man of median age, are cast upon an island where a ceremonious old gentleman is living alone in the memory of the past. And the fact is that the jazz babies are brought to their senses. In other words, it is a story of regeneration, underlaid with a rich vein of the humorous.

In the cast are Nita Naldi, Jacqueline Logan, Conrad Nagel and Robert Cain.

DARK SECRETS: After an absence of many months, Dorothy Dalton returns to the Paramount schedule in "Dark Secrets," a talkie production, in which region of admirers. Edmund Goulding, talented not only as an actor and director but also as an author, wrote the script for "Dark Secrets," and Victor Young is directing the action. The action carries the spectator from a magnificent Long Island estate to London and then to Cairo. A through line of mystery and danger is a young Arabian princess who is a heroine between Miss Dalton and an untamable Arabian horse whom she and other people try to catch. Robert Ellis is leading man and Jose Ruben shines in the supporting cast.

MY AMERICAN WIFE: This is another of the Sam Wood productions in which Miss Swanson has scored ever since she was elevated to stardom by Paramount. This picture is from an original story by Herttorn Swanson, who wrote "The Cheat," and the adaptation was made by Monte M. Katterjohn. It is the romantic story of a love affair between a rich young American girl and a young Spaniard from the Argentene, who are brought together through the defection of the latter's favorite horse race by one owned by the girl. There are some gorgeous scenes laid in the Argentine capital and fans are promised some of the best racetrack and race stuff ever filmed. Antonio Moreno, former Vitagraph star, plays opposite Miss Swanson and Walter Long is also in the cast.

DRUMS OF FATE: This picture affords Mary Miles Minter greater opportunities than ever before, it is said, to demonstrate that she is possessed of rare dramatic ability as well as beauty. It is an adaptation of Stephen French Whitman's novel, "Sacrifice," published by D. Appleton & Co. The story is described as thrilling in the extreme, the locale being Portuguese East Africa. M. B. (Len) Flynn, former Fox star, who scored so handsomely in support of Dorothy Dalton in "The Woman Who Walked Alone" is Miss Minter's leading man, while George Fawcett, Robert Cain, Carlos Fergoson and Bertram Grasby help round out a supporting cast which is hard to beat. Charles Maingot directed.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE: This Sam Wood production is from a scenario by Monte M. Katterjohn, based upon Charlton Heston's adaptation of the French comedy by Alfred Savoir. A year ago the play was presented at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, with Ina Claire as the star, and scored a tremendous success.

"Bluebeard" is a modern American millionaire who has been in Europe to wed a famous French singer. He has been married before no fewer than seven times, his first wife being having died and he having divorced all the others. But he meets another young French girl, becomes infatuated with her beauty and decides to marry her. The idea goes to who he is engaged. His attentions are not welcomed by the young woman, but her father and sister, learning of his intended wealth and title, always sets 300,000 francs a year on his wife, makes arrangements for the marriage, which eventually is consummated. As in the case of the millionaire tires of this one and seeks to divorce her, but she, even though she is not in love with him, decides obstinately to hold him—and does, by the most amazing stratagems imaginable.

The story calls for the ultimate in daring stunts and makes an ideal vehicle for Miss Swanson.

CONTRABAND: There is no present-day fiction writer who possesses more of the glamour of the human story than Clark Fitzmaurice, Bridgton Kelland, whose stories appear in "Red Book." This one was published serially, starting in the issue of May, 1923, and is the story of a woman who is charming, attractive but poor, who suddenly finds herself, through the death of an uncle, owner of a small-town newspaper. She moves to the city and runs it right, without fear or favor, thereby provoking the anger of a wealthy old bachelor who has a financial stake in the paper and is determined by loan or otherwise to own and control it. How Agnes Ayres, as Carmel Lee, confounds him and sets him where he belongs, makes great screen entertainment. The scenario is by Beulah Marie Dix and Paul Powell is the director.

THE WOMAN WITH FOUR FACES: "Setting a thief to catch a thief" or the regeneration of a clever girl crook who is a young amateur to bring to justice some powerful millionaires who are depraving the people of their rights, is the theme of this story by Bayard Veel, author of "The Thirteenth Chair," with its absorbing plot. Fine dramatic situations, well written, and surprising climax, its love interest and with Betty Compson in the title role, it comes close to perfection as screen melodrama. Among other big dramatic scenes it offers a chance spectacle of a convict escaping from prison by means of a rope lowered from an airplane.

THE EXCITERS: This adaptation by Julia Crawford Ivers of the play by Borzage directed it. Like all the other stories by Miss Hurst, this one carries tremendous human appeal and consequent box-office value. Three wonderful automobile pictures were seen, and one, directed by Colleen Moore, James Morrison and Eddie Phillips. . . .

RACING HEARTS: Remember those wonderful automobile pictures—"Too Much Speed," "The Roaring Road," "Excuse My Dust," "What's Your Hurry?" "Across the Continent," etc.—that Wally Reid made from the stories of Byron Morgan? Well, here you have Agnes Ayres risking her life in just that kind of picture by the same author. Like the others, it's a comedy drama with thrill following upon the automobile race track and boulevard. Some famous drivers take part in the race which Agnes wins in a most sensational finish. Paul Powell directed this one—one of those triple-guaranteed speed pictures that can't go wrong.

THE LEOPARDESS: Henry Kolker, producer of "Disraeli," in which George Arliss was the star, directed this picture which is an adaptation to Marx of a novel by the late Newlin Burt. J. Clarkson Miller wrote the screen version, which is a story of the Old South, which related how a strange woman which is being exercised by a wealthy and unscrupulous adventurer over a white girl brought up among the natives is broken by a worthy young friend of her tormentor Edward Langford is Miss Brady's leading man, while the chief comedy roles are filled by Robert Lowery. Other well-known people in the cast are Charles Kent, George Beranger and Margaret Foster. The picture was made for the most part in Florida.

THE TIGER'S CLAW: This is an original story by Jack Cunningham, one of the most talented of the Lasky studio staff of screen writers. Joseph Henabery directed and in the cast support of Jack Holt are Eva Novak, Bertha Kalich, Grace Geor, George Petrie, George Field, Aileen Pringle and Selby and others. Holt plays the part of an engineer in the jungles of India and is eventually greatly in love between the love of a true white girl and that of a faithless native with whom allows himself to become infatuated. The atmosphere is that of an actual Indian, with such interesting details as a tiger hunt, East Indian magic and a fairy tale. It is being supervised by experts who have spent many years over there.

THE GO-GETTER: Peter B. Kyne, author of "Cappy Ricks," "White Satan Sleeps," and "The Pride of Pahmar," wrote this story and it is one of which he recognizes. It is more widely read than any other story ever written by that popular American fiction writer. Its theme is most inspiring, relating how a young boy, finding many obstacles and finally got the thing he was sent for. The Cosmopolitan Cor- poration, which has given this splendid produc- tion, entrusting the various stages of the story to John Lynch and the direction to E. H. Griffith. A fine cast was chosen, headed by Clara Bow, Charles B. Seaton, Victor Varconi, Tom Lewis and William Norris, all of whom are featured.

PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS: Gloria Swanson in the role of a girl today who has revolted against the time-honored social conventions and ideals of conduct governing the Southern girl. This is that's "Prodigal Daughters," a Sam Wood production. The theme of the story is a romance which was adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn from the novel of the revolt of modern woman. A modern home is disrupted through the recklessness of its most industrious and hard-working woman who have cast aside the rigid traditions of propriety. A flapper, and a socially ambitious mother are caught up in a web of unrest and discon tent of their own making. There is a terrific punch in this picture with Gloria in the role of an automobile run-away locomotive. Theodore Roberts and Ralph Graves are in the supporting cast.

THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE: Mary Miles Minter is the star in this picture, which is a screen version of the immortal story of the feud country by John Fox, Jr., read and loved by millions. The scenario is based upon the stage adaptation by Eugene Wilks, who was chosen to direct the screen. "The Easiest Way," and Charles Maigne is the director. Miss Minter being a Southern girl, is at home in the type of dialect and role in which she has been presented, and it will be recalled that her greatest success was in "A Copper-colored Romance," a type of light general type. A great supporting cast headed by Antonio Moreno was chosen.

THE LAW AND THE LAWLESS: This is a story by Konrad R. Kallenberg, the Bohemian author whose writings are creating a furor in this country. A sequel of "Law and Order," it was first published in Pictorial Review and at- tracted wide attention. The setting of the story is unusual and picturesque, dealing with the story of a gypsy life. The character played by Dorothy Dalton is that of a gypsy woman, as fearless as she is beautiful, who recognizes no law save that of her own desire.

Enthusiasm Over New Distribution Channel
Is Voiced by Sennett

"An opportunity for me to make pictures just as big as I want to make them; to spend just as much money on their production as I want to spend; to produce just as good a picture as I know how to produce and then sell it in an open market on its individual merits as a box office attraction – these are all factors that I am recently still contracted with Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation means to me," said Mack Sennett, in commenting on his new distribution affiliations with the organization of which Hiram Abrams is president.

"And to the Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation, the new arrangement means additional product that they know is going to be salable product," Mr. Sennett continued. "It means that I am going to give them pictures that have had time enough and work enough and money enough spent on them to give them that quality which enables a distributing company to sell every picture it handles on its individual merit.

"Suzanna," which is my first release through Allied Producers and Distributors, is a genuine box-office attraction."

Will Distribute Series of Novelty Subjects in 1923

A series of twelve one-reel novelty subjects, "Novelties" as they are called, will be distributed by Agnes Egan Cohb, 1674 Broadway, New York City, beginning in January, 1923. The pictures show various parts of the world, with a story interwoven. There will be one issue each month.

New Hodkinson Feature Is Booked for Broadway
At Loew State, Jan. 29

"The Kingdom Within," the Victor Schertzinger production, distributed by W. W. Hodkinson, has been booked over the entire Loew circuit in New York and vicinity.

Nicholas Schenk signed the contract for the Loew interests and "The Kingdom Within" is scheduled to play the Loew State theatre, New York, on January 29.

"The Headless Horseman" or "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," the adaptation of Washington Irving's story featuring Will Rogers as Ichabod Crane, was the attraction of the Capitol theatre, New York, for Christmas week, where it played to pleased audiences.

Another theatre circuit to book the attractions on the Hodkinson program is the Fox theatre circuit, which has booked the melodrama, "Bulldog Drummond," to play in the Fox houses in New York and New Jersey. The Rialto theatre, New York, recently showed the first of the All Star comedies produced by C. C. Burr and featuring Charles Murray, Mary Anderson and Raymond McKe, as well as "Movie Chats," number 46. The Rivoli theatre has booked the Bray Romances and Bray Comedies.

This means, Hodkinson states, that three feature attractions and sixty per cent of its short subjects have invaded Broadway.

Whitney Haley Features in New Arrow Photoplay

Whitney Haley is a child of exceptional ability. She has been with the legitimate stage and the screen, and last season was with David Warfield in "The Return of Peter Grimes." He has just finished a successful engagement with Arrow's forthcoming picture, "Lost in a Big City," in which he has created quite a sensation. A great future has been predicted for young Haley owing to his versatility.

Forty-eight million newspaper readers learn about Paramount pictures each week from the news service issued by the Paramount publicity departments, this being the combined circulation of 500 newspapers who have requested a weekly news service.

The Paramount fashion bureau serves 210 newspapers with a mat service illustrated by the gowns worn in Paramount pictures.

Magazine editors are finding in the library of several hundred thousand photographs of Paramount players and productions of increasing value to illustrate their pages with circulation-building material.

The home office staff, consisting of Samuel D. Palmer, J. M. Jerauld, Austin Parker and Glendon Allvine, edit and distribute the photographs and text material prepared at the East and West Coast studios. E. W. Wingart handles the publicity matters at the Long Island studio. At studio in Hollywood publicity is handled by Adam Hull Shirk, Arch Reeve, Barrett C. Kiesling, A. D. Wilkie, Arnold Prince and James Fisher.

The publicity department works in close cooperation with the advertising department, headed by A. M. Bottsford, and with the staff of Paramount exploiters directed by Claud Saunders.

Educational Gets Second Series of Robert Bruce Scenic Wilderness Tales

Robert C. Bruce, who has spent the summer and fall in the Pacific Northwest, making the second series of Wilderness Tales for Educational, has returned to New York with this group of scenic dramas. Mr. Bruce believes he has done the best work of his career this season.

I believe," said Mr. Bruce, "that the critics will agree with me that some of my new pictures will surpass "And Women Must Weep." There is perhaps more of a story in each of my new subjects than there was in the pictures of the first group of Wilderness Tales. Still, however, they are all laid out of doors and I have found and photographed in my recent pictures our own most beautiful scenery I have ever found in the world."

One of Mr. Bruce's new Wilderness Tales is a direct picture. Another is a mountain subject. Still another is laid in a background of lake country. The subject is one that he has traveled well over 2,000 miles hunting for the proper background for this subject. Work of cutting and tilting the second group of the series has therefore been almost finished and early release is promised.

"Night Life in Hollywood" plays to Big Business at Erie, Pa., Arrow Reports

"Night Life in Hollywood," its big special, Arrow reports, got away to a flying start in Pennsylvania, when H. C. Simeral of Pittsburgh launched this production in the Rialto theatre. Manager John G. Rainey, in cooperation with a representative of Arrow Film Corporation, arranged an advertising and publicity campaign. In addition to the regular posting of twenty-four window displays throughout the city, they were obtained on tie-ups with various stores and for the display of oil paintings.

Perhaps the most interesting stunt thus far used on this picture was one worked out with the newboys. A sign was made to just fit the back of the coat of each boy and each Monday morning, but each one referred to "Night Life in Hollywood" and the Rialto theatre. Fifty and sixty newboys were on the entire winter's run throughout the city of Erie and covered every section of the town. Capacity business resulted. Manager Rainey was delighted with the showy success this has booked. "The Streets of New York," the Burton King special being distributed by Arrow, to play the week of December 10.

Novel to Be Written From Nigh's Screen Production

Striking evidence of the appeal of the title and theme of Weber & North's special production "Notoriety" was revealed when the producers of the photodrama were approached by a prominent publisher with an offer for the publication rights to the theme of the picture. This is something virtually new in the records of picture adaptation. The usual process is the publication of the story first, and its adaptation to pictures later.

In the case of "Notoriety," Will Nigh conceived and wrote the script first, and produced the picture from nothing but his own continuity sheets. Now that the picture is done, the publisher is anxious to create a novel of the theme, and negotiations will be hastened so that the book may appear in time to benefit the showing of the picture in leading theatres.

"Lorna Doone" Book Tieup Under Way by Publishers

A campaign in connection with Maurice Tourneurs "Lorna Doone," a First National picture, is being put on through the country by Motion Picture Company, publishers of Springfield, Mass. The Bradley firm is putting out a de luxe edition of Blackmore's "Lorna Doone," and is making bookstore displays wherever the First National is being shown. It is also putting out post cards to go with the First National posters and it is carrying on a letter campaign with schools and colleges.

This de luxe edition has an introduction by Tom Ince and on the cover is a portrait of Madge Bellamy. The Bradley people are distributing window cards which proclaim this as the Madge Bellamy edition.

Garson Starts Metro Film

Filmimg has started in Hollywood of "The Woman of Bronze," the stage play which will be pictured with Clara Kimball Young as the star. The photography is being produced by Harry Garson for publication by Metro. King Vidor is directing it.

Productions on Maescher List for Year Announced

Eugene Bradley Evans, general manager of A. B. Maescher Productions, announces the company's program of the year. The first production will be "The Rip-Tide," with an all-star cast from the novel by J. Grubb Alexander, which will be issued through Arrow. The cast of this includes J. Frank Glendon, Russell Simpson, Rosemary Theby, Stuart Holmes and others.

The second production will be "Teachery," a melodrama. This will be followed by "Felony." The fourth of the series of Maescher Productions will be taken from " Thou Shalt Not."
Above are three scenes from "Only a Shopgirl," the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation special in the cast of which are Mae Busch, James Morrison, Wallace Beery, Tully Marshall, Estelle Taylor and others. It is adapted from Charles E. B. Blaney's stage play.

"Village Blacksmith" Heads New Fox List
Film Based on Longfellow's Classic Had Month's Run at Broadway Theatre

"The Village Blacksmith," the Fox special production which received the acclaim of New York newspaper reviewers during its month's run at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, heads the list of the six new specials announced by Fox Film Corporation as a supplement to the original group already issued for the season of 1922-23. The new special is based upon the poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Booster Story Cast

It was directed by Jack Ford. Throughout the production Mr. Fox has installed the wholesomeness and classic virtues of the noted poet's work, it is said, and to accomplish this selected a cast including the names of some of the screen's most brilliant players. The cast is composed of William Walling, who scores heavily in the role of John Hammond, the village smithy; Virginia Valli, Bessie Love, Dave Butler, Pat Moore, Tully Marshall, Ralph Yeardley, Virginia True Boardman, George Hackathorne, and Lucille Hutton.

The story is characterized by a series of tense thrills and is replete, it is declared, with the action which makes a good picture, while the theme and appeal are of universal interest.

Smithy Ideally Portrayed

The swarthy, robust blacksmith of poetic tradition is brought to the screen by Jack Ford in a fashion which fulfills every idealistic picture which the American mind has had of the Longfellow character, according to those who have viewed the film.

D. W. Griffith Photoplay

Issued by United Artists

Publication of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" by United Artists' Corporation, in many states throughout the country is announced by Hiram Abrams, president. The Griffith picture may now be booked through United Artists exchanges for the following states:

Many Bookings Reported

By Vitagraph on Its New Special "Ninety & Nine"

Bookings of "The Ninety and Nine," Vitagraph's special, presented from the picture of Ramsay Morris, are being reported at the general offices in such numbers that it is predicted that the picture will top any of the recent specials offered by Vitagraph. Exhibitors for whom it has been screened are confident they have a box office attraction, a picture that the public will like from every angle. They say the secret of all good pictures, real heart interest and thrill, is in "The Ninety and Nine." The forest fire has been commended by critics and exhibitors at all of the exchange centres.

From the exhibitors' standpoint, "The Ninety and Nine" will offer unlimited opportunities, Vitagraph points out. It has exceptional exploitation features. The story is thoroughly modern in atmosphere and the train racing through miles of burning forest is one of the most thrilling scenes ever attempted in motion picture production. The hero, played by Warner Baxter, drives a locomotive through crashing timbers and the direction is so vivid that the audience is led right up to the blazing right of way.

Colleen Moore plays the leads. Besides Warner Baxter, others in the cast are Lloyd Whitlock, Gertrude Astor, Robert Dudley, Arthur Jasmine and Ernest Butterworth, Jr.

For Buddy Messenger

Century Comedy Star to Be Seen in Story of Slums—Edwards to Direct It

Buddy Messenger, Century's new boy star, is getting ready for his next picture after finishing "Boyhood Days" which was directed by Harry Edwards. It is understood that Edwards, who is in San Francisco on business, will direct the boy star again in a comedy of the slums. Until his director returns Buddy is appearing in "The Abysmal Brute," a Jack London story for Universal. Edith Grant will play the role of the big sister of the mischievous youngster to be depicted by Messenger. Miss Grant is a newcomer to Century.

Title Baby Peggy Film

The title of Baby Peggy's Spanish picture has been changed three times. It was first called "The Senorita," then "Sunny Smiles" and finally "Carmen Junior." In "Carmen Junior," which will be issued shortly, Peggy takes a dual role as a boy and as a girl vamp. It was filmed among the cloisters of the San Gabriel Mission to assure the Spanish atmosphere.

Franey in New Picture

Billy Franey, who has attracted favorable attention for his work in "Quincy Adams Sawyer," has been added to the Baby Peggy company now at work on a picture in which she is being directed by Raymaker.

A set represents Heaven. The gate which opens into the Milky Way are guarded by the giant Jack Earle, who plays the part of St. Peter. Billy Franey is a burglar who seeks admission and on being refused he picks the lock of the big gate and steps into a sea of clouds populated by angels who jass to the music of their harps.

Harold McGrath Novel to Be Filmed by Distinctive

The film rights of Harold MacGrath's novel, "The Ragged Edge," have been purchased by Distinctive Pictures Corporation, it is announced by President Arthur S. Friend. Immediate production is planned. Forrest Halsey is now engaged in writing the scenario. This will make the second picture to be made by Distinctive other than those starring George Arliss, the first all-star production being "Backbone," which is now in the making at the Biograph Studio. Harmon Weight, with W. E. Morrison as his assistant, will direct the new picture.

Prologue for Metro Film

At Capitol Presentation

When "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the S-L special produced by Herbert Lubin and Arthur H. Sawyer for Metro Pic-

NOTWITHSTANDING that we have been maligned by the yellow journals, dragged through the mire of vilification by certain ladies and gentlemen of constricted mentalities, and otherwise slamm'd, slough'd, and sledged we have managed to keep our heads high, our hearts keen, and Progress. The large number of unusually fine pictures that the year 1922 has given to the world give ample attestation of the inevitability of the screen and of its destiny. It has proven that it is too big to be kept down, too deeply entrenched in the hearts of the public to be destroyed or even halted in its advancement, only so long as we give our best.

The future of the motion picture business depends upon every man and woman who is a part of it, however small that part may be. Nothing can stop it as long as we continue to do our utmost to raise its standards, and we need have no fear of outside influences as long as we have our faith. When one considers the adversities we have had to overcome and the exceptional pictures that have been produced in the past year one cannot help but feel proud of the industry as a whole.

The achievements of the past year having been so stupendous, the question naturally resolves itself: "How much farther can we go?" This is difficult of answer. No one can foresee with any degree of accuracy what the future will bring in the way of screen development. But at the same time one would be narrow-minded indeed to say that we have reached anything like perfection or that there isn’t room, and much room at that for improvement. If the growth of the past year is any basis of prognostication the year 1923 should set some forward strides in the screen. Just what they will be is hard to say, but the standards will be raised. This is an industry where progress means life. We cannot stand still and point to the past.

Another thing which I hope the new year will bring is a basis of understanding between the producer, the distributor, and the exhibitor. It seems to me that the whole trouble is due to the fact that the other fellow's problems are not understood or appreciated. Lack of understanding is always a warrant of suspicion and mistrust which is keeping these three elements of the industry from getting together. With the ILS within the industry, and with all the elements that compose it standing together shoulder to shoulder there is no reason why the coming year shouldn’t see the antagonistic influences from without put to rout. Then and then only will the screen come into its own.
No Strings to Our Product, Says Pathe
Elmer Pearson, in Statement
To Exhibitors, Explains
Company’s Policies

In an official statement for the information of exhibitors, Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe Exchange Inc., clearly defines the Pathe policy governing booking of all its products. The main point emphasized in Mr. Pearson's statement is that there are no strings on any item of Pathe product binding it to any other item in booking arrangements.

Must Establish Own Merit

"Each and every picture on our list, irrespective of type and including all of the items of each weekly release program,” the statement says, "stands on its own feet. Each of them is issued on its individual merits, is required to establish its individual reputation and box office value, and may be booked on that basis without restriction or proviso respecting any other item. We refer to the exhibitor, 'As you like it'—book one or more or all, according to your conviction, regarding their value to you in each instance.

"We can assure the exhibitor that the rental price demanded for a costly product that has fully established its box office value places the credit of the particular picture exclusively; no standard item of comparatively new and untried production receives any advantage of support from the old. Under no circumstances, nor in any way affecting the exhibitor, is the one linked up with the other.

"News” Users Not Favord

"Another point upon which we are at war, that no doubt should exist is this: The fact that an exhibitor is a regular user of Pathe News, or Pathe Review, gives him no price advantage in booking other product, over the exhibitor who has not yet become a regular user of Pathe News or Pathe Review subscriber. This rule holds good all through the list of Pathe pictures. We believe that the exhibitors, such as the Our Gang and Snub Pollard two-reel comedies and the Leo McCarey comedies, are open to booking by any exhibitor at the rental based on their proved box office value, irrespective of his attitude toward any item of new or old product.

Arillis Film Gets Tieup

With Paper in St. Louis
An effective tieup with the St. Louis Times was effected by Homer K. Gordon, special representative of Distinctive Pictures Corporation during the run of the "The Man Who Played God,” starring George Arliss at the Del Monte theatre, St. Louis.

In conjunction with the newspaper, a "Kindly Act Week" was inaugurated, a scheme for the most kindly report being staged by the paper. Much valuable publicity resulted for the film. The same idea was effectively employed during the run of "The Artist's Mark," starring the Keith, Proctor, Moss theatres in New York.

Name MacDonald Story

Following the completion of "The Scarlet Lily," work is now being finished, Katharine MacDonald will begin production of "Refuge," a story of adventure, written especially for the star by Lois Zellner. Victor Sherzinger will direct. "Refuge."
Second National to Issue
Work of Bruce Barton in Series of Short Subjects

Bruce Barton, famous for his humorously philosophical editorials and well known to magazine readers, has entered the still broader field of expression provided by motion pictures. Second National Pictures Corporation is arranging for the immediate publication of the first of a series of one-reel photoplays visualizing and vitalizing the word pictures which, even in type, have given millions of hearty laughs and a warming sense of human kinship to readers of his work in three widely popular magazines.

The first picture, "Just a Little Late Club," was finished a few days ago by Better Day Pictures, Inc. Better Day Pictures was organized for the sole purpose of putting the Bruce Barton story-editorials into picture form, with Mr. Barton as president; Elmore Leflingwell as vice-president; Roy S. Durstine as treasurer, and James S. Brown in charge of production.

The one-reel subjects prepared for this series are said to be in Bruce Barton's richest vein of humor and philosophy, dealing with topics of vital and current interest to the general public.

Universal's "The Storm" Proves Popular in Europe

"The Storm," Universal production, is being received as enthusiastically in foreign countries as in America, according to Universal.

Reports of successful showings have been received at the home office in such theatres as the Oxford, London; Cine Max Linder, Paris; Strand, Colon, Panama; Palace, Hobart, Tasmania; Hoyt's De Luxe theatre, Victoria, Australia; Campoamor, Hanawa; Cine De Mundt, Amsterdam, Holland, and many others.

Popular Players Seen in New Jack Pickford Film

Many screen players well known to theatre-goers are seen in support of Jack Pickford in his new picture, "Garrison's Finish," an Allied Producers and Distributors feature.

Among those in the cast are Charles Ogle, Clarence Burton, Tom Prior, Ethel Grey Terry, Madge Bellamy, Audrey Chapman and Dorothy Manners. Arthur Rosson directed it.

Stages Dance With Film

Alexander Oumansky, ballet master of the Capitol theatre, New York, staged the medieval dances for the spectacular ball which is one of the high lights in the French episode of "Backbone," the all-star production headed by Edith Roberts and Alfred Lunt which Edward Sloman is now directing for Distinctive Pictures Corporation. Two hundred players were engaged by Director Sloman for the dance scenes, which are in the time of Henry the Second and Catherine de Medicci.

Name Montana's Next Film

"They Call It Dancing" has been selected as the title of the next Bull Montana comedy, according to information received at the New York offices of Metro Pictures Corporation, distributors of this series of comedies, made by Hunt Stromberg.

"The Hero" Is Issued by Al Lichtman

In the cast of this Preferred picture are Gaston Glass, Barbara La Marr, John Sainpolis, Doris Pawn, David Butler, Martha Mattox, Ethel Shannon and Frankie Lee.

The production, distributed by Al Lichtman Corp., is based on Gilbert Emery's stage play and is said to be one of the finest pieces of Gasnier's directorial work.

The story deals with two brothers, radically different in nature. The dramatic spots of the play are declared to have been enhanced in the screen version.
Six Companies Announce New Films

One Jewel for Each Month Included in Universal Schedule

Twelve Universal-Jewel productions, declared by the company to represent the most comprehensive aggregation of specials ever planned, constitutes a part of Universal's 1923 contribution to theatre product. Three of these are completed—six in production, the rest yet to be made. The pictures, Universal says, will employ its ablest talent in all divisions and constitute attractions of the highest quality.

The lineup, with outstanding facts in brief, is as follows:

"DRIFTING," stars Priscilla Dean. Adapted from John Colton's stage play. Matt Moore in leading male role. Direction by Tod Browning. To be issued in August.

"MERRY-GO-ROUND," an Erich von Stroheim which Rupert Julian is completing. Cast includes Norman Kerry, Mary Philbin, Wallace Beery, Maude George, Dale Fuller, Spottiswoode Aitken, Hay Holmcln and George Hackthorne. Issued in September.

"UP THE LADDER," stars Virginia Valli. Adapted from the stage play by Iwen Davis. Miss Valli's first starring role. For Universal. Hobart Henley, director. For October distribution.

Goldwyn States New American Releasing Group Realizes Aim Of Bigger Pictures

Goldwyn is another company emphatic in its statement that its program for the new year represents the biggest and best pictures which it has ever issued. Nine big productions are now completed or under way and these come nearer a realization of its policy of “bigger and better pictures” than any previous group, officials declare. This assertion is made despite the success of some of its fall and early winter pictures. Definite publication dates have not as yet been set on all nine of the new series.

The following Goldwyn product will be offered in 1923:

"THE STRANGER'S BANQUET." Marshall Neilan’s first production in association with the company. This feature is based on Donn Byrne’s novel. In the cast are Claire Windsor, Rockliff Fellows, Hobart Bosworth, Wallace Beery, Boardman, Nixie Barrie, Thomas Holding, Claude Gillingwater, Arthur Hoyt, Bensley Shaw, Stuart Holmes, and Sterling, Eugene Bessene, Lucille Richmond, Cyril Chadwick, Jean Hersholt, James Marcus, Edward McWade, Dagnor Godowsky, Lilian Langdon, and Jack Curtis. It will be published December 31.

"THE CHRISTIAN" is a Maurice Tourneur production of Sir Hall Caine’s novel. The cast includes Richard Dix, Mae Busch, Phyllis Haver, Claude Gillingwater, Cyril Chadwick, Mahlon Hamilton, Beryl Mercer, Joseph Dowling, and Garrett Hughes. To be issued January 28.

"GIMME," a Rupert Hughes production, to America. The cast are Helen Chadwick, Gaston Glass, Kate Lester, Henry B. Walthall, and David Imboden. Mr. Hughes wrote and directed it.

"LOST AND FOUND" is Carey Wilson’s first Goldwyn production. It is a South Seas story. The cast includes House Peters, Pauline Starke, Anthony Moreno, Rosemary Theby, George Seigmann, Mary Jane Irving, William Mong, and Carl Harbough.

"VANITY FAIR" is a Hugo Ballin production starring Mabel Ballin. Supporting the star are Hobart Bosworth, Earle Fox, Willard Louis, Eleanor Boardman, George Walsh, Robert Mack, William Humphrey and Tempe Pigott.

"SOULS FOR SALE" is a Rupert Hughes production, from his Hollywood novel. In the cast are Eleanor Boardman, Frank Mayo, Richard Dix, Lew Cody, Barbara LaMarr and Mae McDonald.

"BITTERNESS OF SWEETS" is another Rupert Hughes picture. In the cast are Colleen Moore, Anthony Moreno, William Ormond, Orpha Alba, Earl Metcalfe, Martha Mattson and Francis McDonald.

"TESS OF THE D'UBERVILLES" is a Marshall Neilan production and a screen version of Thomas Hardy’s novel. It is as yet incomplete.

"RED LIGHTS" is still another Marshall Neilan production, a screen adaptation of Edward E. Rose’s new stage play, “The Rear Door.”

A big block of special productions, with dates of publication, is announced by American Releasing Corporation. In this block, or second quarter’s output, are two features that have had pre-publication runs in large cities. They are “The Marriage Chance,” a Hampton Del Ruth comedy-melodrama with a cast including Alta Allen, Milton Sills, Henry B. Walthall, Tully Marshall, Mitchell Lewis and Irene Rich and, “The Prince and the Pauper,” Mark Twain production which played at the Capitol theatre, New York City. These two are now published.

Additional American Releasing product to be issued during the new year includes the following productions:

"THE BOHEMIAN GIRL." This is a Harley Knowles production. In the cast are Iver Novello, Elsie, Terry, Gladys Cooper, Constance Collier and Aubrey Smith. It will be published January 14.

"THE GRUB-STAKE" is a Neill Shipman-Bert Van Tuyl melodrama of Alaska romance. Miss Shipman wrote the story. The cast includes the stars, Alfred Allen, George Herrell, Hugh Thompson, George Hernandez and W. W. Van Auker. It will be issued February 18.

"THE DANGER POINT." Carmel Myers, Joseph J. Dowling and William Carleton are featured in this Victor Halperin production which was directed by Lloyd Ingraham. It has played at the Cameo theatre, New York. In "THAT WOMAN" is an A. C. Mims production starring Catherine Calvert. It is a stage story directed by Harry O. Hoyt. Issued December 31.

"AS A MAN LIVES" is an Achievement Films feature directed by J. Searle Dawley with a cast which includes Robert Frazer, Gladys Hulette, and Frank Losee. It also has shown at the Cameo theatre and is for distribution January 7.

"THE WEB OF THE LAW" is a western feature made by Gibson-Dyer production and directed by Tom Gibson. Issued January 21.

"MILADY" is a Henry Dimant-Berger production which is issued January 29.

"ONE MILLION IN JEWELS" is a John P. McGowan production written and directed by Mr. McGowan who also plays a prominent part. It is a short picture. Distribution is set to February 11.

"VENGEANCE OF THE DEEP This is an A. B. Barringer production made in Honolulu and California. It is a one-story. The cast includes Ralph Lewis, Virginia Brown Fair, Maida Vale Van Mattimore and Harmon Mac Gregor. It will be distributed February 25.
Advance News of 1923 Productions
29 Films to Be Made
By Cosmopolitan for Distribution in 1923

A big year is predicted for Arrow Pictures Corporation in 1923 by President W. E. Shallenberger. Before departing on a trip to the West Coast Mr. Shallenberger announced eight productions which his company will publish during the year. In offering this new theatre product Mr. Shallenberger declared that Arrow will continue to specialize in productions of the highest calibre, made from the works of well known authors or adapted from successful stage plays. Extensive advertising, of direct exhibitor value, is planned for the various features, he stated.

Interesting features of Arrow product are detailed in the following summary:

"NIGHT LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD," This is an A. B. Marxer production which enjoyed a successful preview at Atlantic City recently at the Woods theatre.

"THE STREETS OF NEW YORK." A Burton King special made from the famous stage play of the same name.

"MAN AND WIFE." This is an Elinor Fair production.

"SHYLOCK OF WALL STREET." This is another Burton King special.

"LST IN A BIG CITY." is a Blazed Trails Production featuring John Lowell and an all-star cast.

"JACQUELINE." is a Pine Tree Pictures production from James Oliver Curwood's story with an all-star cast. It was directed by Dell Henderson.

"THE BROKEN VIOLIN." This is an Atlantic Features special with an all-star cast which was directed by Jack Dillon.

"THE LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE." directed by John Adolphi, is a Martin J. Heyl special featuring a star cast.

The above listed productions will be known as the first eight Arrow "super-plays" and either are already completed or nearing completion.

Mr. Shallenberger points out that these productions had all been thoroughly tested and were, in his opinion and those of his associates, pictures which would undoubtedly prove tremendously successful from a box office standpoint.

Variety in Pathe Short Films

Wide range of appeal is found in Pathe's short subject program. This is indicated in the group of scenes shown here from some of the new productions.

At the left is Pearl White in a thrilling scene from her new Pathe serial, "Plunder," produced by George B. Seitz from the scenario by Bertram Millhauser.

Here is Harold Lloyd in a scene from his new feature-length comedy "Dr. Jack."

Will Rogers in "Fruits of Faith," three reel feature which is published December 24.

Leo Maloney in "His Enemy's Friend," new two reel Western in the Range Rider Series.

Scene from "Broadcasting," new two reeler in the Johnny Jones series which features children.

A scene from one of the new "Our Gang" Comedies which is entitled "Saturday Morning"  Snub Pollard and Marie Mosquini in the Pathe comedy "A Tough Winter."

Amusing moment in "Fair Week," the one reel Hal Roach comedy starring Paul Pratt.
Industry Not Responsible for Folly of Individual, Says Brisbane

Theatres are the targets of unpleasant criticism on occasions when certain individuals do not conform to what many people consider the proper social standard of living. Undoubtedly such attacks from the public have made exhibitors wish for a logical answer—one that will serve effectively in counteracting false impressions of the industry.

Arthur Brisbane, one of the country's most distinguished editorial writers, has given you that answer. In his "Today" column in the Chicago Herald and Examiner, he writes:

Mr. Wally Reid, who got thousands a week for a pleasant smile, takes to drugs and there is foolish outcry against moving pictures. They have nothing to do with it—the trouble comes from suddenly giving thousands a week to a lad not used to money.

A young banker inherited a huge fortune, played the fool, loaded his houseboat with uncertain females, named the boat "Chastity" and sailed away. Nobody in pulpit or press demanded suppression of banks. Everybody knew that sudden money was the trouble.

"Coal Oil Johnny" bathed in champagne, hired the opera house all to himself. Sudden money again. No one suggested censorship of oil wells. A majority of motion picture people, like the majority of bankers and oil men, stand prosperity well. Later they will stand it better.

Meanwhile the industry destined to add 1,000 per cent to human knowledge within fifty years should not be made responsible for the folly of an individual unable to digest prosperity.

That editorial merits reprinting in every house organ. If you can't do this devote space in one of your newspaper advertisements to it. It will pay in the end.

Favors Federal Censorship

The appended editorial, published in the Hamilton (Ohio) Daily News, is of interest to the trade, in view of the fact that it voices disapproval of state or local censorship, declaring that "if there is to be censorship let it be national." The editorial, forwarded to this department by Fred S. Meyer, reads:

Censorship of the motion picture is one of the problems which the people of the country soon must face. In many states today there is some attempt at control of the character of the films to be presented.

Opinion may honestly differ as to censorship. It has been declared by the national church organization as an un-American idea but at the same time probably a necessary one.

The management of the present day movie theatre, if he has vision and an eye to his future prosperity will not permit any film of questionable and salacious tinge to be shown; but there opinion may differ again, for no two persons will agree very often on the propriety and the impropriety of a picture.

If there is to be a censorship of the screen it should be a national one. An instance of this may be cited in Ohio at this time. "The Outcast" with Elsie Ferguson, had been booked by the Palace theatre here and by numerous other theatres throughout the state. The press notices were very flattering. Reviews by New York critics in some cases pronounced it the best effort of this popular star. The Ohio censors, after seeing it, rejected it for presentation in Ohio, after no small sum had been spent in preparation for its coming.

A picture that is good for one state should not be barred in another.

So if there is to be a censorship let it be national; it will, to put it on strictly commercial basis, save a huge sum to the industry.

Needs Program Pictures
KINGSPORT, TENN.—To the Editor: Apparently the policy of the producers for the coming season is to make nothing but big productions. Now as the small town exhibitor can stand about two days' lot special features per week—kindly advise where he is to procure program service for the remaining few days at a price that will cover the loss incurred on the high priced special, or if not obtainable, how long shall he figure on keeping his doors closed until the "special feature" will be available at a price that will allow a small margin of profit for himself?

At the present rate of rental, he counts himself fortunate if he can break even. Where then is he to get the money to meet current expenses? Of course, this sounds like "lunk" to the high and mighty producer, but when the small houses are eventually forced out of business by these methods, we predict he may sigh for "the good old days when the small towns really made his money for him."—Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.

Women Tour Globe Seeking Data for DeMille Picture
Cecil B. DeMille is sending two women half way around the world in search of authentic data for his forthcoming film production of the Ten Commandments. Clare West, who heads Mr. DeMille's costume department, will leave shortly for Paris to gain ideas for gowns to be worn by the Paramount stars in the modern sequences of the production, and Mrs. Florence Mehan, famous traveler and authority on ancient peoples and customs, sails immediately on a lengthy tour of Palestine, Arabia, Egypt, India, China, Ceylon and Bali to obtain costumes, properties and historical data on the places actually named in the Old Testament. These journeys constitute the first extensive search for cinema material ever attempted by Mr. DeMille who plans to make this production the most tremendous in film history.

Fairbanks Picture Draws Large Crowds at Boston
The premiere of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Park theatre, Boston, Mass., was marked by an overwhelming crowd that jammed the theatre to the doors according to reports from that city. Preceded by an exploitation campaign and with Mr. Fairbanks, Dickson, a member of the cast in person at the performance, police assistance was necessary in handling the crowds, the report states. Governor Allen T. Fuller, Mayor James M. Curley and many other distinguished citizens were in attendance.

Miss Clayton Starts Work On New F. B. O. Picture
Ethel Clayton has started production at the Powers studios on "The Greater Glory," with Malcolm McGregor in the leading male role. The supporting cast, engaged to date include: Wilfred Lucas, Richard Headrick, Albert Hall, C. Anderson Smith and Victory Bateman. "The Greater Glory" was written by Wyndham Gittens, who also made the screen adaptation. It is Miss Clayton's third production for F. O. B. distribution. James W. Horne has been engaged by General Manager Emil Offeman of the Powers studios to direct "The Greater Glory." The story deals with the romance of a war widow.

"Lend me $5, will you, old man?"
"Can't do it! I was just going over to Brown's to borrow a five from him."
"Make it ten, and I'll take half of it."—Waterbury Republican.

He who gives his friends a loan wins popularity. But when he wants it back again, then he alone will be— "Topics of the Day" Films.

"What a touchy man Jones is."
"Yes, he is one of the best little borrowers I know."—Portland Express.

May.—Is Frank a close friend of yours?
Ray.—I'll say he is—so close that you can't "touch" him.— "Topics of the Day" Films.

"Have you forgotten that $5 you owe me?"
"By no means. Didn't you see me try to dodge into that doorway?"—Boston Transcript.

Associated Exhibitors

Conquering the Woman, with Florence Vidor.—A good week's business considering the fact that it was the week before Christmas.—David Harding, Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—A 100 per cent attraction. The greatest comedy ever made. Not a kick. The whole town will be talking about it. Grab a W. A. winner.—H. C. Houston, Gem theatre, Sherman, Tex.—General patronage.

What Women Will Do, with Anna Q. Nilsson.—Good picture. Much better than I looked for. Will please most of them.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Sin of Martha Qued, with Mary Thurman.—Clean and interesting. A good lesson for parents. Drew and pleased a good house.—Maple theatre, Marion, N. Y.— Neighborhood patronage.

Lady Godiva, with a special cast.—Good picture, but not the kind of picture that appeals to masses. Drew very well.—V. J. Wilke, Liberty theatre, Burburnett, Tex.—Small town patronage.

FBO

Good Men and True, with Harry Carey.—Best Carey picture for F. B. O. More action. Makes them stand up in their seats. Fair business.—W. J. Wilke, Liberty theatre, Burburnett, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—They all liked it and with The Jungle Goddess serial it made a new record for Friday and Saturday.—Crosby Bros, Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—When it's all over they wonder what it is all about. Absolutely the worst conglomeration of film shots that I ever saw. Carey has always been a good bet for me, but this picture will put the "Skid" under him for some time to come. Absolutely "NG."—H. E. Swan, Crescent theatre, Kearney, Nebr.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—A first class Western feature, but paid too much rental. Didn't make any money on it.—J. Martin, Family theatre. Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Fairly good, but not near as much punch as Good Men and True. Fair business. Good business is almost a thing of the past.—W. J. Wilke, Liberty theatre, Burburnett, Tex.—Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with Johnny Walker.—Absolutely a high class photo play of merit that will please all if any ever will.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera house, New Glarus, Wis.

In the Name of the Law, with Johnny Walker.—Cutouts on corners of streets, other ad stunts. Went over good.—S. H. Borisky, American theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with Johnny Walker.—A good picture and will please the majority. Business fair.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with Johnny Walker.—Nothing extra, but is sure getting the crowds and everybody goes away pleased. Each night seems to be better for crowds, which assures that it is advertising itself. Tie up with officials and police department. Also newspapers will help you. A good bet.—H. E. Swan, Emerald theatre, Kearney, Nebr.— Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with Johnny Walker.—Business doubled and held up three days. Drawing power better than picture. Gets "em and are wonder why.—W. J. Wilke, Liberty theatre, Burburnett, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Seven Years Bad Luck, with a special cast.—My patrons did not care for it.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera house, New Glarus, Wis.

Colleen of the Pines, with Jane Novak.—Dandy Northwest picture. Good attractive lobby. Ran two days to fairly good business.—W. J. Wilke, Liberty theatre, Burburnett, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Conquering the Woman, with Florence Vidor.—Absolutely a high class photo play of merit that will please all if any ever will.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera house, New Glarus, Wis.

Colleen of the Pines, with Jane Novak.—Dandy Northwest picture. Good attractive lobby. Ran two days to fairly good business.—W. J. Wilke, Liberty theatre, Burburnett, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Beyond the Rainbow, with a special cast.—This is a very fine picture that will go anywhere and has an exceptional cast. With a picture that you can run on a Sunday and please 100 per cent.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Occasionally Yours, with a special cast.—A very poor picture. Nothing to it.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Billy Jim, with Fred MacMurray. Just a fair program picture, and film in bad shape.—S. N. Andress, Royal theatre, Ponca, Nebr.— Neighborhood patronage.

At the Stage Door, with a special cast.—Good program picture that pleased all.—L. M. Rothweiler, Palace theatre, Bison, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Sheik of Araby, with H. B. Warner. Very poor picture, for it is not the kind the people want to see. Leave it alone.—E. J. Walters, Gem theatre, Tren ton, Nebr.—General patronage.

Shams of Society, with a special cast.—The moral in this one is worth the price alone. Had many favorable comments.—L. M. Rothweiler, Palace theatre, Bison, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Cold Steel, with J. P. McGowan. A right good little Western that has just the right amount of comedy and thrills mixed in. We never like to knock a star, but that is about the only thing not in favor of this picture. Had this been Roy Stewart or William Desmond, it would have been a regular little K. O.—J. J. Kudla, Swan theatre, Northampton, Nebr.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Call of Home, with a special cast.—Just a fair picture which moves along very slowly until the last reel.—J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

First National

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—One of Norma's best. Pleased 90 per cent. Good attendance.—E. W. Warner, Warwick theatre. Kansas City, Mo.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—A handsome, well-directed production. Worth playing in anybody's house. Above all else, use the candle advertising. Worked right, it's a wow.—W. Ray Erne, Rialto theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Star Dust, with Hope Hampton.—Good picture, but not up to expectations; S. R. Peake, l'astique theatre, Maquoketa, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—My town has about 300 inhabitants, but I charged fifty cents and paid $50 for the picture. I barely squeezed through, but I am glad I played such a wonderful picture.—John Hamlyn, Center Point theatre, Center Point, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—When better pictures are made First National will distribute them and let's hope Norma is in them all. This picture should be shown in every house—Extravagant.—Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—Pretty picture. Don't let them change you more than a regular Talmadge picture, for if you pay more you are hooked.—J. V. Chest, Capitol theatre, Canajoharie, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cave Girl, with a special cast.—This feature has a story that will get by and hold a fair amount of interest, but the film's chief merit lies in the beautiful scenery.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

The Lotus Eaters, with John Barrymore.—Story is improbable, but it is a quite a good and entertaining picture.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Lotus Eaters, with John Barrymore.—Very good.—A. F. Kerb, Ogallala—Princess theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—General patronage.

The Woman's Side, with Katherine MacDonald.—Drew good houses, but we would not class it higher than a second average program picture.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—Good, though not as good as Tolable David.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—Very good picture. Richard very popular here and a nice little regular program picture. Ran it on Sunday and while it did not do as well as any regular, it was no fault of picture.—M. J. Babin, Fairyland theatre, White Castle, La.—General patronage.

Red Hot Romances, with a special cast.—As a comedy this gave only moderate satisfaction.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

The Primitive Lover, with Constance Talmadge.—Extra good.—A. F. Kerb, Ogallala Princess theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—General patronage.

The Primitive Lover, with Constance Talmadge.—Very good. Had many complaints about it, it being drawn Norma in this city. It's a good bet for any exhibitor. Advertise and you'll get them. H. E. Swan, Kearney, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Seventh Day and Tolable David, with Richard Barthelmess.—Both are good; Tolable David extra good.—S. R. Peake, l'astique theatre, Maquoketa, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—Good.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera House, NaLisa, Neb.—General patronage.

My Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—Our patrons thought it better than Peck's Bad Boy or Trouble. Fine picture. Jackie draws like a mustard plaster for us. You will make no mistake in playing this one if you can buy it at a reasonable price.—F. H. Baker, Home theatre, Fox Lake, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Question of Honor, with Anita Stewart.—A picture that holds the interest well throughout.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Penrod, a Marshall Neilan production.—A roar from start to finish. Real entertainment. Clean, wholesome fun. Price a little too high, but worth more than the average run of picture.—B. A. Aughinbaugh, Community theatre, Lewistown, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Penrod, a Marshall Neilan production.—Considered this a very good picture. Drew well for two days.—C. F. Kriegbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Fools First, a Marshall Neilan production.—A high class crook drama that pleased those who saw it, but it drew nothing.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Fools First, a Marshall Neilan production.—This little picture went over O. K. Will recommend it to all as being a picture we will suit our patrons in the opening stages in film rental on it. No fault of the picture, but the title kept them away.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Man, Woman, Marriage, with Dorothy Phillips.—A splendid picture that did more the second day than the first. Best of all, bought it at a reasonable rental.
Hayes Says Advertising Cannot Lie

Did you ever stop to wonder, stop to ponder, You add the losses up day after day. What it is that puts the movie business, And turns your hair from raven black to gray.

You buy a special feature at a darn, gross-awful price, You bill it like a circus ‘round the town. And when you try to sell it, why, your pop all turns to ice.

And you say the salesman certainly did you brown. And what about your patrons, who believe your horseshoes are gold. They trust you to pick good ones every day,

You pay them to fill your box with goods from the grand- mas to the lads. And as you leave the house you hear them say—

"Gosh, that picture sure was awful. Does he think we are fools?

Before it finished, why, I thought I'd die.

He neededn’t have raved over it, for months and weeks and days,

And finally heck us with this gosh-darned lie.

It makes you feel like saying, "Gosh dang it, what’s the use?"

I took their word for it that it was great.

And in many places heap me with a lot of vile abuse,

"I can’t apologize. It is too late."

It’s things like this that make things "blue nights" every week,

Program pictures beating "specials" everywhere.

Before you book a show now days it pays

You won’t find yourself in bad way.

On the level, now, Producers—does it get you anywhere?

You book us once or twice, I know, ’tis true;

But in the final cash-up we give you the money.

And play with those who know we are good true blue.

If you say a show’s a "special"—be right. Don’t over-advertise a single one.

For if by misadventure you get us in patronage away,

You’re going to reap that suffers, when all’s said and done.

LARRY HAYES,

the religious bigot accuses him as the grand old man of "the movies."—Crosby Bros. Lily theatre, Buffalo. N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince special.—A real honest-to-goodness special. Our patrons raved over it. Great picture for Sunday. Florence Vidor, The- odore Roberts and Madge Bellamy make real "all star" cast. Play this one if you can buy it right.—P. H. Baker, Home the- ate, Fox Lake. Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Swimmin’ Hole, with Charles Ray—This is a good one, but Ray is too big for the part he takes in the picture. Had Cicely Courtneidge in this picture would be a knockout, but Ray seemed to please them.—C. H. Simp- son, Pacific theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

The Wonderful Thing, with Norma Tal- madge.—Very good show with wonderful acting. Berth & Stecker, Pastime theatre, Kiel, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Clear Call, with a special cast.—K. K. K. style of advertising. Big lobby display as above. Good business.—S. H. Bosley, American theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Child Thou Gavest Me, with a special cast.—Excellent.—Clarence W. Lang- acher, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis.

19 and Phyllis, with Charles Ray.—A good Ray picture, but title had no drawing power. Pleased those who saw it.—L. M. Rothweiler, Palace theatre, Bison, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Molly O, with Gladys Normand.—A feature that can be heavily advertised without fear of disappointing your patrons. Can be classed as one of the best.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

The Splendid Hazard, with a special cast.—Title did not draw, but picture pleased those who saw it.—F. K. Kreighbaum, Paramount theatre, Roch-ester, Ind.—General patronage.

A Ten Dollar Rain, with a special cast. —A very good comedy drama offering. Story will hold interest from start to finish with several big scenes to help out the interest. We can’t get enough of these as many specials.—Tom Foster, Star the- atre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Molly O, with G. B. Carmine.—Picture very good, but did not draw as expected, although no fault of picture. Title will not draw very well.—H. C. Reinhardt, Village theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neigh- borhood patronage.

What Women Love, with Annette Kel- lerman.—Good program picture.—L. M. Rothweiler, Palace theatre, Bison, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Bob Hampton of Placer, a Marshall Neilan production.—Good.—Clarence W. Langacher, Casa Hoven, Ray Glarus, Wis.

Don’t Ever Marry, a Marshall Neilan production.—This did not draw at all well and we paid too much for it and lost money at thirty and forty cents, those who came out liked the picture very much. It bought at an ordinary program price would be O. K., but it is no special. —C. E. Hopkins, Capp’s theatre, Cot- ter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Lying Lips, a Thomas H. Ince produc- tion. This is a little mushy play but whole a picture that will please.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis.

Lying Lips, a Thomas H. Ince produc-EXTRA!!

"Bay Pay,"
Some say
"Nay! Nay!"

Did sell.
Went well.
Can't tell.

CHARLES LEE HYDE,
Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.

Late arrival of Mr. Hyde's contribution prevented inclusion of his candidacy in the context news bulletin on the first page of this department.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—Fair production, but did not get me a dime. Put up a lot of extra advertising, but the people would not bite. Those that did come seemed to be satisfied. Believe the title must be against the real drawing power of the picture. — Emporia theatre, H. E. Swan, Kearney, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—Absolutely one of the best Tom Mix pictures to date. Just the thing for small towns. It pleased, 1 believe, 100 per cent and caused lots of talk for days. Horse wonder. C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

After Your Own Heart, with Tom Mix.—Above average Tom Mix picture.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis.

Money to Burn, with William Russell.—We hadn't had any like this in theme for quite a while so it went over pretty good, with a Fox New. This is as to pleasing patrons, not at the B. O., which seems impossible with anything now.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Bar Nothing, with Charles Jones.—Good to fair Western feature. Will about average with other features with this star. —Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

The Yellow Stain, with John Gilbert.—Good picture with a good story and competent acting.—C. E. Keibbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Very Truly Yours, with Shirley Mason.—Shirley Mason's poorest picture. Attendance poor, not enough to pay house.—Elroy, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trotter O’Neil, with Charles Jones.—Just another Jones picture. All cut from the same pattern, padded with the same sawdust and sold to a suffering public.—B. A. Aughinbaugh, Community theatre, Lewistown, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Arabian Love, with John Gilbert.—Has everything I dig and I stepped on it hard, but icy weather conditions deprived me of the opportunity to cash it. It's the thing, though, and I hope bought for one-fourth the price of The Sheik, and I believe it's just as good a picture.—H. L. Hanson, Majestic theatre, Colfax, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—Mary Carr's work is perfect, but story, cast and direction lack that intangible "something" that puts over a picture. Not in the class with Over the Hill. That was the judgment of my patrons, any way, and I agreed with them. At that, it's a great picture.—P. G. Este, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—Drew the best houses for us in many months. Would class it as the best of the fame Grey features so far produced. Have the very best of satisfaction.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Silver Wings, with Mary Carr.—Mary Carr's work is perfect, but story, cast and direction lack that intangible "something" that puts over a picture. Not in the class with Over the Hill. five years of theatre experience. The pictures were good, there’s no question about that, but that didn’t draw me the extra business. I will in order to squeeze the mazuma out of your pockets, never, again for mine.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Kegyate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

A Rough Diamond, with Tom Mix.—A little different from Mix’s usual run of pictures and pleased better, as it has plenty of comedy mixed with it.—Russell Armbront, Fox theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Iron to Gold, with Dustin Farnum.—As a Western offering this feature will give fair satisfaction.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

And Going, with Tom Mix.—Good mounted police picture with the usual amount of comedy.—C. F. Kreighbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

And Going, with Tom Mix.—This is not a Western picture, but has plenty of action. Everybody pleased. Mix is there where he belongs on the Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pardon My Nerve, with Charles Jones.—A comic story picture offering this feature will give satisfaction.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Stackles of Gold, with William Farnum.—Good picture, but Farnum seems out of place in a picture like this.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—General patronage.

For Big Stakes, with Tom Mix.—Mix pictures are all good. The scene in which Mix, on horseback, dashes through a roaring, expensive prairie fire with a girl, is truly a real thrill.—Dan Conner, Piper’s Opera House, Virginia, Nev.—General patronage.

For Big Stakes, with Tom Mix.—Showed good drawing power and gave the best of satisfaction as a Western offering.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

For Big Stakes, with Tom Mix.—Fine. Pleased all. Mix always pleases here. Although I have care for his pictures, he surely does pull in the crowds.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Desert Blossoms, with William Russell. —A good picture to illustrate the Strength of the Pines.—C. F. Kreighbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

To a Finish, with Charles Jones.—A good program Western feature. Fair houses.—Tom Foster, Star theatre. Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee with Harry Myers.—This was the best comedy of the year. The price was right and we made some nice money on it. Ran it two days, attendance better second day. Every exhibitor should use it.—Tobin & Quinlan, Ideal theatre, Chateaugay, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee with Harry Myers.—A sure fire hit but was a money loser for me.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

A Connecticut Yankee, with Harry Myers.—A very good comedy which drew well.—C. F. Kreighbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Men of Zanzibar, with William Russell.—A good mystery story, better than most of this star’s production. Drew fair houses.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

The Roof Tree, with William Russell.—A fairly good program picture. Not exactly适合 for the better class, however, but will please the men folks. Awful looking cast.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ever Since Eve, with Shirley Mason.—A pretty program picture.—Lew Fischer, Bradley theatre, Eau Claire, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Queen of Sheba, with a special cast.—Spectacular, and I said a mouthful. Poor business on Foster, poor shows.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis.—General patronage.

Queen of Sheba, with a special cast.—Not at all bad. Drew average business. Therefore lost money, as I had to pay five house the rental of an average picture in Ruxton, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—General patronage.

The Primal Law, with Dustin Farnum.—A good Western program offering.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

The Ragged Heiress, with Shirley Mason.—A good program picture, in which the star is up to her usual standard.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Riding Moon, with Tom Mix.—Full of action and fun. A good attraction of its class.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

Goldwyn

Sherlock Holmes, with John Barrymore.—A fine picture which did a good business. Barrymore is well liked here, which helped.—C. F. Kreighbaum, Madison, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Come On Over, a Rupert Hughes production.—One of the nicest little pictures I have played here. Has any Irish people in your town be sure to get them out.—Russell Armbront, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Sin Flood, with Helene Chadwick. This went big with my patrons. The story that will affect all good Christian throughout. Supporting cast excellent. Business good.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Virginia, Wis.—General patronage.

Yellow Men and Gold, with a special cast.—An extra good program picture. Will please all you can get in.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Always the Woman, with Betty Compson.—Worst Goldwyn for a long time. They didn’t know what it was all about.—C. F. Kreighbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

The Dust Flower, with Helene Chadwick.—Here is a fine picture at reasonable rental and will certainly satisfy your patrons. Many took pains to tell me how good it was. I have no kick to register with Goldwyn pictures.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Theod ora, with a special cast.—In nine reels and should have had its run in spite of its small, long and dry for our people. Did not receive one favorable comment. Leave it alone.—J. M. Rothweiler, Palace theatre, Boscobel,—Small town patronage.

The Invisible Power, with House Peters.—A wonderful picture. It pleased those who saw it, but lost money on it.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—This picture is good, but not the special that Goldwyn would have you believe it is. Title a little misleading, but picture will please the majority. Domestic play.—C. F. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsmaur, Cal.—R. town patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—Gave best of satisfaction. A picture that should be bought right.—W. L. Beebe, Candor theatre, Candor, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Snowblind, with a special cast.—Get behind this one and you can make some money. Don’t be afraid of it as it pleased everybody who saw it here.—S. G. Hildebrand, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Northern Wind’s Malice, with a special cast.—Perhaps this was a splendid picture. No doubt, as it was a Rex Beach story, but the print was in such horrible shape that it was impossible to tell what the picture was like. Had about twenty Goddess Men, with a special cast—Excellent tragedy. Had I known just how good it was I could have cleaned up with it.—S. G. Ihle, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Goddess Men, with Helena Chadwick.—A sea story and a dandy. A very good lesson can be learned from this. Pleased 100 per cent. Don’t be afraid of it.—H. A. Felps, Comet theatre, Shelton, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Bunty Pull the Strings, with a special cast.—Not a very good picture. Just seven reels of film. Don’t run it unless you are compelled to. No entertaining feature about it.—H. A. Felps, Comet theatre, Shelton, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Officer 666, with Tom Moore.—Where this star is liked this picture should go exceptionally good. Very good picture, but Moore fails to get the money.—S. G. Ihle, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Officer 666, with Tom Moore.—Fair picture, but not as well liked as Made in Heaven or Hold Your Horses by same star.—H. A. Felps, Gem theatre, Wood River, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

A Voice in the Dark, with a special cast.—Play this with Goldwyn Sport Review and you have a good Saturday night program for small town.—L. M. Rothwell, Palace theatre, Bisco, Kans.—Small town patronage.

The Old Nest, a Rupert Hughes production.—It’s all been said. Read the reviews and act accordingly.—Will L. Beebe, Candor theatre, Candor, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Penalty, with Lon Chaney.—Splendid picture of the heavy variety. Bought at living prices, but the print we had had so many mis-frames in it the characters looked like jumping jacks.—F. H. Baker, Home theatre, Fox Lake, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Penalty, with Lon Chaney.—Good, but good part of audience will not exactly be pleased. A little too “creepy.”—Will L. Beebe, Candor theatre, Candor, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

The Branding Iron, with a special cast.

—Played two days to very small houses, but not fault of picture. It’s good.—L. M. Bubin, Palace theatre, Bisco, Kans.—Small town patronage.

Guile of Women, with Will Rogers.—Just fair program picture.—H. A. Felps, Comet theatre, Shelton, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Milestones, with a special cast.—Not very well liked. No business on this. Showed to a poor crowd.—H. A. Felps, Gem theatre, Wood River, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

The Girl With the Jazz Heart, with Madge Kennedy.—Just a fair picture. Nothing to brag on.—H. A. Felps, Comet theatre, Shelton, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Madame X, with Pauline Frederick.—A good picture and pleased all. Did a good business. Advantage strong on it. It will get you the money. Can boost price on this one.—H. A. Felps, Gem theatre, Wood River, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Just Out of College, with Jack Pickford.—A good picture and everybody seemed to like it.—H. A. Felps, Comet theatre, Shelton, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

The Song of the Soul, with a special cast.—A good picture. Pleased about 60 per cent.—H. A. Felps, Gem theatre, Wood River, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

A Tale of Two Worlds, with a special cast.—A good picture for those liking Chinese stuff.—H. A. Felps, Comet theatre, Shelton, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

Free Air, with a special cast.—One of the cleanest, best liked pictures we have ever used. Exploits it as it deserves and it will not disappoint. Ran it two days to good business.—Geo. K. Zinzis, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.

Free Air, with a special cast.—One of the best comedy dramas that we have got hold of in many a moon. Very realistic. And some of the prettiest scenery I have ever seen on the screen. The advertising possibilities are good on this, and this. Nick himself will not prevent your buying this picture if you once see the set of it. You owe the picture to your patrons. It is chock full of good comedy situations that are cleverly done, and some thrills in the picture.—J. J. Kudla-cek, the Arc, Swanton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Veiled Woman, with Margaret Snow.—Just six reels of motion picture. Saved the show by playing Keaton in The Fighting Kentuckian. Out well for it. This Goof is one of the best funny action comedies I have ever played.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

The Headless Horseman, with Will Rogers.—Here is a picture that will put any exhibitor up to his head the next day and say, “That’s the kind of house shows.” It is a positive knockout from every angle.—B. A. Aughinbaugh, Unity theatre, Lewistown, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

French Heels, with Irene Castle.—A good program picture. Irene draws well for me, but my patrons come to see her dancing and new gowns, and are not enthusiastic about her acting or beauty.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Married People, with Mabel Ballan.—Another of the cast dramatics which held the attention of our audience very well. Not big nor small. Just makes a good entertainment if short comedy is good.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—Didn’t see anything so mysterious about the rider, but it is a good picture and it drew well.—C. F. Kreighbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Camerom of the Royal Mounted, with Gene Autry.—Wonderful program picture. North west pictures I have played. Everybody satisfied.—E. J. Walters, Gem theatre, Trenton, Nebr.—General patronage.

Camerom of the Royal Mounted, with a special cast. A very good Northwest mounted police story. Very entertaining and photography very good.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

A Certain Rich Man (Hodkinson), with a special cast.—Another flat wheel. Lay off.—Lew Fischer, Bradley theatre, Pt. Edward, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Westerners, with a special cast.—A fast moving Western that has good meat in every reel.—J. J. Kudlacke, Swan theatre, Swanton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man of the Forest, with a special cast.—High class western in every respect.—Clarence W. Langaseker, Opera House New Glarus, Wis.

The Man of the Forest, with a special cast.—A very good program picture that gives good satisfaction and seemed to give the patrons the same.—J. J. Kudlacke, Swan theatre, Swanton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Spenders, with a special cast.—Our patrons liked it so well that we would like to have more on this order. Good comedy in the.—J. J. Leyers, Library theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Quincy Adams Sawyer, with Blanche Sweet.—One of the best office bets of the year. Quincy Adams Sawyer is one of the finest pictures yet.—Parkway theatre, Madison, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—This picture is very reasonable. Good dialogue, good acting works to make a perfect picture. Lots of humor. You can get a fair rental.—John Hamlyn, Eufaula, Okla. —Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—A rural drama that surpasses anything I have seen before. A much better picture than The Old Nest, and I consider it as good as Over the Hill. Rental very reasonable. Prints at ten and forty cents.—L. R. Creason, Palace theatre, Eufaula, Okla.—Small town patronage.

At the Stroke of Midnight, with a special cast.—Lay off one of this. I lost half of my patrons for two weeks. Finally, I got them back with a good picture. The good old-fashioned cast, the American, J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Stroke of Midnight, with a special cast.—Had a ball on this. Had it played one and took it off. My patrons left before the show was over, like rats from a burning building. A general loss last week. Had a much better time. But I'm to blame for booking it. I could not find any report on it in the Rochester Times. I must thank the salesmen for its good. But it was a humdinger, and so it was. Why are such specials made but as super-specials? I'm done without investigation.—Clyde Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—The greatest box office picture ever produced for any town large or small. The best films have been made in past five years at twenty and forty cents. My patrons praised this picture more than any picture I ever used.—L. R. Creason, Palace theatre, Eufaula, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Wonderful picture, but you fellows, in a Cooper County theatre, run your town only play it for one day.—J. Chest, Capitol theatre, Canajoharie, N. Y.—General patronage.

June Madness, with Viola Dana.—Didn't have time to see it myself. Too busy exploiting Orphans of the Storm, but I liked it and told me so. Not such business, though.—Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.

Camille, with Nazimova.—Poor print of photography on this one. Valentine very good. Many complained about it being too long. June Madness will please all classes. Business not so good as on other Murray pictures. Two days at ten and forty cents.—L. R. Creason, Palace theatre, Eufaula, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Conquering Power, a Rex Ingram production.—A great film. A good cast that drew the first night, but it failed the second night, for the people are not disposed to disagree, but not a box office value.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Paramount

Burning Sands, with Milton Sills.—A great special for the small towns. Pleased better than advertised. Declared by all, one of the best pictures of the year. Get this, Boys; it will get you the money and please.—C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with Betty Compson.—One of the finest pictures I have ever seen. Not only drew splendid business, but more than pleased everybody, in this town. Was an exhibitor, saw the picture three times, and enjoyed every minute of it.—S. C. Chapman, La Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with Tom Moore.—One of the new crop of Westerns with a dude cowboy. Got over but not too much interest. Just an ordinary good, fairly well done "movie."—Bet L. Morris, Elk grand theatre, Bellaire, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—From now on, Rudy, your name will ring through 100 towns with us. A hell of a picture, and we have lost less than 500 on it in three days. And oh, what a lot this cost. And they want extra for Blood and Sand. This is nothing extra and is a real value. Ray Custom theatre, Charlotte, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Above All Law, with a special cast.—This is not a small town picture. A foreign picture which flopped. Action very poor. Will not suit many, if any houses.—B. E. Hart, Detroit, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow, with Thomas Meighin.—Thomas Meighin always a hit. Miss Brady does her old stunt of escaping from an immigrant girl into a beautiful scene. It can't be done.—Ben L. Morris, Olynyk theatre, Bellaire, O.—General patronage.

The Man Unconquered, with Jack Holt.—Excellent picture with plenty of action. Fair business in these small farms. Ones who saw it pleased.—E. C. Reeves, Strand theatre, Cookeville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

Ebb Tide, with James Kirkwood.—Story too common. Acting good, and direction. But this picture is overrated and not worth the box office.—H. C. Houston, Gem theatre, Sherman, Tex.—General patronage.

On the High Seas, with Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt.—A good special and not too much business. Please every patron. They will go out taking for the future. This is the kind of pictures that build up the picture business.—H. C. Houston, Gem theatre, Sherman, Tex.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Good picture. No fault of picture, as it is very good.—S. R. Peake, Fastime theatre, Maquoketa, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Cecil B. De Mille's greatest picture. Acting and story wonderful. Please every patron. They will go out taking for the future.—S. C. Chapman, La Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Cecil B. De Mille's greatest picture. Acting and story wonderful. Please every patron. They will go out taking for the future.—S. C. Chapman, La Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—This picture should play and play and play. He draws a "customer" and others.—Clarence W. Langacher, Opera house, New Glarus, Wis.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—Extra good.—B. E. Hart, Ogdal's theatre, Ogdall, N. Y.—General patronage.

The World’s Champion, with Wallace Reid. — Pretty good Reid picture. W. J. Ferguson as the butcher is very good. — C. F. Kriegebaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind. — General patronage.

White and Unmarried, with Thomas Meighan. — Good program picture. Meighan is all there is to this show. Pleased his admirers. Ran Buster Keaton in The Boat and made an extra good program. — Johnson Bros., Johnsonian theatre, Ripley, N. Y. — Small town patronage.

Bought and Paid For, with a special cast. — A very good program offering. —

Clarence W. Langacher, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis. —

Find the Woman, a Cosmopolitan production. — Good mystery picture. You will find you get the right one. — C. F. Kriegebaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind. — General patronage.

Don’t Tell Everything, with a special cast. — Well received by the younger people, but the older folks not so good. Story rather thin. — Crosby Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. — Small town patronage.

Is Matrimony a Failure? with a special cast. — A real honest-to-God comedy drama that went over like a house afire. — Clarence W. Langacher, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis. —

The Lost Romance, with a special cast. — So slow and draggy that the half of the seventy-five people that were there fell asleep. The other half walked out. — J. V. Chest, Capitol theatre, Canajoharic, N. Y. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Loves of Pharaoh, with a special cast. — Absolutely as big as a box office picture. Booked it two days and took it off the second day. Pleased those who saw it. — H. C. Houston, Gem theatre, Sherman, Tex. — General patronage.

Our Leading Citizen, with Thomas Meighan. — Good picture where Meighan is — S. R. Peake, Pastime theatre, Maquoketa, Iowa. — Neighborhood patronage.

Miss Lulu Bett, with a special cast. — Excellent and the criticism on this, but all of my patrons liked it. Made me some money by using a Sennett comedy and charging ten and thirty-three cents. — S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan. — Small town patronage.

The Face in the Fog, with Lionel Barrymore. — The picture of the month. No fault of the picture as it is a fine crook picture. — Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill. — Small town patronage.

A Little Humor Now and Then

Do you not really think you’re forcing too many gems of poetic splendor from the pen of Messrs. Jenkins, Rand, and Meyer upon your un-Shakespearean readers? But for the fact it is none of our business, we certainly would inquire as to how the above gentlemen can spend the time from their poetic endeavors to overestimate and degrading thing as a picture theatre.

In passing, we might state that the Re-views coming from these gentlemen would be interesting but for the fact that most of them a very pictures are so short. We think any one of them would say “Fritz Leiber” blanket the community with those wonderful, inexpensive, business-getting "Scandal Sheets." See that they get into every home, office, shop, store, factory — everywhere. They will create a sensation — their snappy contents will arouse curiosity and start tongues buzzing all over town — they will make everybody curious and want to see the picture that started all the scandal —

Then-

offer to give every kid who brings his or her parents to see "Thelma" one of those handsome "Thelma" dolls. The kids will go crazy over these novelties, and you know that they can be had cheap enough to allow the exhibitor to use them in large quantities. Not only will they sell "Thelma" to the kids and their parents, but they will also build up lasting prestige for the theatre — arrange big window displays of the Jane Novak-F. B. O. edition of "Thelma" with the local book shops, stationers, etc., who handle Grossett and Dunlap books. These books, carrying a four-color portrait of Jane Novak on the cover, and illustrated with scenes from the picture, will form an excellent co-operative background for stills and announcements of your showing — dress the lobby with the gorgeous 40 x 60 oil paintings which we have prepared for exhibitors. These particular paintings are especially fine — exquisite in artistic design, vivid in color, dignified in appearance and carrying a ticketselling smash that puts them in a class by themselves. Also use the unusual colored lobby cards and other accessories.

Then-

use the marvelously compelling newspaper ads that you'll find in the press sheet—big and small smashes designed and executed by a staff of experts which no theatre could afford to engage—arrange the gorgeous fashion show as per instructions carefully outlined in the press sheet. You know the store that will be glad to furnish the gowns and models because of the advertising they get. Remember that this is a big picture and that you are out to break records—after the last of the big crowds have left and your friend, the exhibitor, is elated over his overflowing profits, just smile and say Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammer-stein.--This is one of her best. My patrons said it was worth fifty cents to see this kind of a picture, ("The star without a failure" is right).--C. H. Simson, a success theatre, Millen, Ga.—General patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammerstein.--It takes more than star to put this over--Deth & Stecker, Pastime theatre, Kiel, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Way of a Maid, with Elaine Hammerstein.--Pretty good picture and a few copies. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Palace of Darkened Windows, with a special cast.—A nice little program picture. I've ever a special.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Three Musketeers, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Small towns play it one day only, as it is an awful box office failure for more than one. I bought out the exchange to get it and lost money.—J. C. Chest, Capitol theatre, Canajoharie, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

The Storm, with House Peters.—Extra good lobby display, Did well. Third run.—S. H. Borisky, American theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Just what most of them say. Fine picture with a well nigh universal appeal. We advanced the admission a nickel and did fine business on two days where we usually play one. Have music fit the picture.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Is a fine picture, but did not draw a crowd. The canoe work on the rocky river is some real thrilling work and the Forest fire is good.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

The Long Chance, with a special cast.—Good program picture that will please. Good acting and good photography.—J. W. Andersen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Good program picture.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Black Bag, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Ran this with a Century comedy and heard no kicks nor praise. Personally thought it regulation stuff for a program. Nothing new about it, but just a good program to pass the time.—J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, Ivesdale, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Black Bag, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Not as good as some we have used. A sort of a mystery story—has a dozen fights or more. Very small crowd.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Paid Back, with Gladys Brockwell.—A very good picture, and the star does some wonderful work.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

Broad Daylight, with Lois Wilson.—Heroine's association with crooks and failing in love. With hero when he is brought in with a wonderful "jaz". coupled with her willingness to wed him. To have told his supposed father, altenates interest and sympathy. Poor direction and story.—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—This sort of picture is good for youngsters and they like it. Carey is class I as an actor. Most of his pictures are good, but this one is not.—M. L. Libby, Columbia theatre, Poynette, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Loaded Door, with Hoot Gibson.—A pretty good little Western. Hoot is getting popular.—J. Martin, Family theatre, Attica, N. Y.—General patronage.

No Woman Knows, with a special cast.—Very good picture. Should have more like this. W. J. Martin, Liberty theatre, Sherman, Tex.—General patronage.

Out of the Silent North, with Frank Marshall.—Good picture. Started from the idea of the author, but very different. Raged, badly worn.—S. R. Tiller, Lone Star theatre, Carthage, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trimm'd, with Hoot Gibson.—Fine Western. Hoot always Please and our patrons never pass up a Hoot Gibson picture. Hoot has never disappointed us.—Anderson, Liberty theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Caught Bluffing, with Frank Mayo.—Very good picture.—S. R. Peake, Patience theatre, Moline, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—This is a trap of a picture. Advise you to stay away. It's absolutely a flop.—S. R. Tiller, Lone Star theatre, Carthage, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Step On It, with Hoot Gibson.—A good Hoot Gibson picture.—A. F. Kent, Ogala Princes theatre, Ogallala, Neb.—General patronage.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stroheim.—Von Stroheim, big sets, some good photography and you have Foolish Wives in a nutshell with no business for more than one day for it thrives.—J. Y. Chest, Capitol theatre, Canajoharie, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Red Courage, with Hoot Gibson.—Just another one on the same lines, as his pictures always draw.—E. J. Watters, Gem theatre, Trenton, Neb.—General patronage.

Red Courage, with Hoot Gibson.—Very good Western. Hoot's first time here and he seemed to please well.—Prices, ten and twenty-eight cents.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Millionaire, with Herbert Rawlinson.—Good. Attendance poor.—A. L. Lighter, Orpheum theatre, Mellen. Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Marching Fools, with Marie Prevost.—Please about 40 per cent. Nothing to it but a string of pictures. Poor print.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Wise Kid, with Gladys Walton—
No finer picture will be shown this season than

WHEN LOVE COMES

Ray Carroll’s Masterproduction starring

HELEN JEROME EDDY

with Harrison Ford and a brilliant all star cast

Drama

With all the concentrated crash of a Jack Dempsey knockout! Not one big scene but a dozen with a kick in every foot!

Romance

That carries one back to green meadows and moon-lit nights! When love is young in Springtime—Heart-warming scenes of tenderest emotional appeal!

Thrills

That bring the heart leaping to one’s throat! The bursting of the great dam—devastating floods—villages laid waste!

Heart Appeal

When she presses another woman’s babe to her yearning bosom—when she drags the erring wife from the raging waters of the flood and begs God to let her live!

Suspense

That will play the Anvil Chorus on the Great American Spine! When her father dies—when the dam gives way—when her old lover returns!

The Same to You From All, We Are Sure

From time to time I have read in the reports, "Patrons walked out on the picture." Sometimes these selfsame pictures, but nobody walks out on a picture before the show is over at the Myrtle theatre.

Once in a great while when a patron leaves the theatre before the first show is over, on making inquiries I find either that they had seen the picture at some other theatre, or had an appointment.

I have often wondered why so many walk out on a show at other theatres, and why everybody sticks for the same picture that is about to come in. The conclusions I have come to. Boys, please do not make yourselfs—I am not trying to tell you how much of a showman I am, etc. What I don't know about this business would make a bigger book than what I do know.

But to get back to those conclusions:

At the Myrtle theatre, if a picture goes on the screen, it almost always stays on the screen in the form of a steady, clear picture, with plenty of light behind it, until the picture is over.

There is a good screen, the machines are kept in repair so the picture doesn't shake a shimmy, a double 15 amperes transformer is always on the light on the picture, and with two machines in good repair, with plenty of light behind it, until the picture is over.

It has occurred to me that perhaps some of the reasons why so many report patrons have run out at our show may be due to the fact that the pictures are shown to a poor screen, too little light on the screen, the use of only one machine making waiting necessary between reels—machines not adjusted properly—causing a jumpy picture—inexperienced operators—causing too many stops, etc.

An ordinary screen is properly projected, steady, plenty of light, without waste time. At the Myrtle theatre, shown with a good picture, with a poor screen. It is all but bore. I am glad that's off my chest.

I want to take this occasion to thank my fellow exhibitors who have given me so much pleasure week in and week out, also something pleasant to look forward to every week.

And now, Brother Exhibitors who meet from time to time—also to the staff of the "Exhibitors Herald"—I most sincerely wish you all a Merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

Vitagraph

You Never Know, with Earle Williams.—A first class program picture much like Wally Reid's Dictator. Mighty pleasing in every respect, and I certainly wish note was given to this picture up to this standard. A good bet in every respect.—S. C. Chapman, La Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fighting Guide, with William Duncan.—Tale of an old Navy film that pleased because it had a pretty good story, lots of humor and enough action. It even had a better-than-the-usual ending.—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Wild Irish Rose, with a special cast.—Planted Thanksgiving with Larry Semon in Golf and it was a great program and had many favorable comments. Play interesting, cast fine, and plenty of light on the screen measured up to this standard.—F. H. Baker Home theatre, Fox Lake, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gypsy Passion, with a special cast.—A picture enjoyed by the gallery. Do not be afraid of this one.—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

A North Country film that pleased because it was a good program picture, but not as good as some of her former ones.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prodigal Judge, with a special cast.—Weather conditions caused us to lose money on this picture, but neverless and all, I ran it. I do not believe that an exhibitor would make a mistake in booking this picture. It is different from the usual general run programs.—J. J. Kudla, Swan theatre, Swainott, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Men Are Men, with William Duncan.—Looked like an especially good one in this for a program picture owing to the number of good reports on same, but our patrons did not like it a bit and dropped it. Not enough material to help any, either. It may not be a poor picture, but it was the poorest we ran this year.—H. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, 1vesdale, III.—Small town patronage.

The Inner Chamber, with Alice Joyce. Very ordinary. We cannot get any money with Vitagraph pictures except Duncan. It seems that Vitagraph could get better stories for their stars as they have some good stars in their list.—C. H. Powers Strand theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—R. R. town patronage.

Received Payment, with Corinne Griffith.—Frontier far West picture, low cent, not getting. M. E. Acord, Literature theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Flower of the North, with a special cast.—We ran it as a regular program picture and while it is good it certainly is no more than a regular program picture, programs should be good without the 'super special' name attached to them with a special price. Curwood's name might be a drawing card here, but it isn't. The only appreciable patronage was from J. L. Meyers, Liberty theatre, 1vesdale, III.—Small town patronage.

Flower of the North, with a special cast.—Very poor night one of the best. Attendance off on account of snow and ice, but it pleased all who saw it. Personally we think it a very fine feature picture, and give your patrons a treat. Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Looks like Universal has emerged from its serial slump, as this is the only good one in the last five serials. The first part shows one has business and pleases every week.—Ben L. Morris, Olympic theatre, Belleair, Ohio.—General patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Now on the seventh episode and losing money for me each week. Absolutely no good for my town. Attendance dropped two-thirds in six chapters. I have booked the Orpheum theatre, Mellen, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Now on the seventh episode. Holding interest. This is the last serial, and the exhibitors say they won't want to miss a single episode. The best serial I have had for two years.—H. E. Swan, Crescent theatre, Kearney, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Now on the seventh episode. Holding interest. This is the last serial, and the exhibitors say they won't want to miss a single episode. The best serial I have had for two years.—H. E. Swan, Crescent theatre, Kearney, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Robinson Crusoe (Universal), with Harry Myers. I do not understand the knocks on this. I regard it as a big step forward in serials. Harry Myers is a superb performer, and the show is "live" enough for anybody.—L. M. Libby, Columbus theatre, Foynette, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Adventures of Tarzan (Serial Sales), with Elmo Lincoln.—Made money on every episode of this serial. We are not strong for serials but advise exhibitors to watch this one. Also look for new serial, "Prince of Persia," duPont. Price right and they are money makers.—Gayety theatre Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hurricane Hutch (Pathé), with Chas Hutcheson. —Have just run episode fourteen and will say that it has kept the people coming all the time.—A. K. Roth Crystal theatre, Bridge Creek, Neb.—Small town patronage.

When Douglas Fairbanks made Mark Of Zorro—his career as the biggest bet in screendom was assured.

Since that time the movies have progressed—better effects realized, and more daring stunts attempted.

Even Authors seem to have improved.

 Flesh and Blood (W. P. E. C.), with Lon Chaney.—Excellent. I consider this a good drawing card where Chaney is popular and the picture will stand up on its merits. —Hellman, Oriental theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

 Putting It Over (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—This boy is a wonder. My business increasing every time I play him. Book him and loan him and he will get the money for you. He kept the house in a roar from start to finish in this picture. C. H. Simpson, Princess theatre, Milken, Ga.—General patronage.

 Putting It Over (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—Like all of his pictures, this is a thrill in every foot of film, and Brother Win, H. Creel said it all when he said no one was doubting for him as a stunt actor. He can’t be beat. —M. A. Clark, North Dakota theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

 Why Women Sin (Wistaria), with Anna Q. Nilsson.—This is a picture well earned in Southern territory by D. McGhee. This is an extra good feature that everyone should see. It keeps the audience in suspense from beginning to end. And pleased 100 per cent. Only one kick on it.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

 Shadows (Lichtman), with Lon Chaney.—Slow, draggy. Every character overacts. Photography very lazy in spots. My audience gave this picture the razz. —J. V. Chest, Capitol theatre, Canajoharie, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

 What's Wrong With the Women (Equity), with a special cast.—A real box office attraction. Did a good business considering the time of the year.—Parkway theatre, Madison, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

 The Masked Avenger (W. P. E. C.), with Lester Cuneo.—This was shipped in as a substitute and after seeing the picture we were madder than ever. The photography is fine and the scenery is pretty and—well that's about the extent of the picture, so we'll quit. —V. L., Holliman, Castalia theatre, Castalia, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

 I Am the Law (Affil. Dist.), with a special cast.—Here's one that you should make money with. You can boost it to the sky for they seem to go for it. Wonderful snow scenes and photography. —L. M. Rothenweiler, Palace theatre, Bismarck, N. D.—Stanley. —Kan.—General patronage.

 I Am the Law (Affil. Dist.), with a special cast.—For a picture of the far North we would hardly say this was as good as The River's End, but it is a fine picture of its class, and the Northern pictures that have surpassed it are very few in number. It proved a good box office attraction and gave the best of satisfaction. —Tom Foster, Star theatre, Stanley, Wis.—General patronage.

 School Days (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Good picture pleased 100 per cent. Broke house record. Put out the paper and the picture will do the rest. —C. A. Moore, Auditorium theatre, Hume, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

 School Days (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Picture that pleased old and young alike. Cannot say too much for it. Unlimited exploitation, and the paper is good. Ran it two days and would have cleaned on it, but rain killed second day. —Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

 Kazan (Davis), with Jane Novak.—Very good story, dog and business. —Groshy Bros., Lily theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Satisfactory.

 Up in Mary's Attic (Fine Arts), with Eva Novak.—Nothing to it but a lot of girls running around in bathing suits until you get tired to death of seeing them. No plot; no nothing. Price right. Take it if fine, or better lay off this one. —F. H. Baker, Home theatre, Fox Lake, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

 Isabel (Davis), with Jane Novak.—This is a pretty good picture and very interesting throughout the six reels. The exchange made some very broad statements about this picture, and we were glad to hear this said. They said it was. That is rather unusual in the picture business. Several scenes are in Prisma colors and they are very well done. If you are in need of a right good Northern picture this is a good bet for you. There is not much rough stuff in this picture. —There is nothing new story told in pictures. —J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

 Pickle Women (D. N. Schwab), with Daisy Butler.—Pickle Women is such a poor name that nobody expected much, so were pleasantly surprised at the fine work of Butler. A nice comedy drama. Print in excellent condition. Price fair. We got this one by mistake, but were well pleased. —F. H. Baker, Home theatre, Fox Lake, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

 Why Girls Leave Home (Warner Bros.), with Anna Q. Nilsson. —We bought this on the strength of reports in B. O. Free. Very easy to see anything to it. Perhaps too dense to grasp it, but it did not please. Too slow for our patrons. Investigate before you buy.—Anderson & Weatherby, Capitol theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

 Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast. —Visually a special cast. —Last season has everything that a good picture should have—excellent cast, -short film direct. The average exhibitor will talk about their friends. Play it for a run. It's worth it. —R. T. Megibben, Capital theatre, Newport, Ark. —Small town patronage.

 Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast. —Pleased better by far than any of the last year's big mother pictures. Small towns will be sure to like this one. You are missing one of the best bets of the year if you don't. —C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

 Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight? (Equity), with a special cast. —Ran this on percentage basis with no guarantee, and лоселел the body at that for $5.00, played it three days, and on account of sleet and cold weather my share for the three days did not cover my expense account. The picture is good, but there is no use heralding this as any great special. A real good director could have gotten much more out of it. The picture lacks detail that real pictures are supposed to have. Those in the cast all do very good work. The transfiguration of the boy from a raw rural specimen to the equal of the New York man-about-town is unreal, and better direction much more needed when a picture is good action and thrill towards the end. The break is made by the convictions. The fight on the runway engine and the wreck are both good, the whole picture is good. Because of the appeal this picturization has to the youth of today, this is a good bet for the exhibitor's support. However, do not pay too much for the picture, and I would not advise raised admission prices. I wish I had not.—J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

 The OUTSTANDING WESTERN STAR
Short Subjects

Now or Never (Pathe), with Harold Lloyd.—This play with a two-reeler Johnnie Jones comedy, one-reel Rolin comedy and Pathe News. The combination of these comedies brought me the largest house I have had this fall. I love my people liked good comedy, but I never thought much of an all-comedy night until I ran this. This prompted me to try these at least once a month. If I am as successful with the following ones, I'll have found a good tonic for my B. O.—J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Pickaninny (Pathe), with Sunshine Sammy.—A good kid comedy.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Hard Luck (Metro), with Buster Keaton.—A very good comedy with a very good ending.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

A Nick-of-Time Hero (Educational), with a special cast.—Don't know why it is, but children in a comedy always spell success, and this was no exception.—V. G. Bollman, Castalia theatre, Castalia, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Number Please (Pathe), with Harold Lloyd.—Every time I play a Lloyd the crowd gets smaller. Personally I like his comedies but he never drew me any extra business and it doesn't look as if he ever will. Played to empty seats with admission of ten and thirty-five cents. If he draws for you don't pass this up.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Ryegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Boy and the Bear (Pathe), an Aesop fable.—We have been showing these tableaux for over a year, and this is without a doubt the funniest one to date. Some of our patrons almost had hysterics. If you don't expect to play but one, get this one.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cuba, the Isle of Sugar (General Electric Co.).—This comes free as an advertisement for the power use of electricity but they don't show their ads in any way and it is a truly fine scenic and educational reel.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Holy Smoke (Educational), with Jimmy Adams.—Our crowd told us this was the best comedy we'd had in a year, and judging from the racket they made, we were ready to believe them. This "Jimmy" fellow surely gets the laughs.—V. G. Bollman, Castalia theatre, Castalia, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

A Punctured Prince (Metro), with Bull Montana.—Good comedy. Mostly slapstick. It pleased, because they all laughed.—Dan Conners, Pipers Opera House, Virginia, Nevada.—General patronage.

The Boat (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—Had some of the aristocrats out on this and I positively know their red faces, when they came out, was because they were ashamed on account of having laughed so hard. It's a novelty in the comedy line and far above the average.—H. L. Hanson, Majestic theatre, Elroy, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Just Dogs (Universal), with Brownie.—Best two-reeler comedy I have run in years. Just made the kiddies go wild. Be sure to book it.—H. A. Felps, Comet theatre, Shelton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Oh, Promise Me (Educational), a Christie comedy.—Not very many laughs in this one.—W. E. Kinghbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

$1,750,000 Theatre
And Hotel Will Be Ready in February

Latest estimates of construction work progress on the LeClaire theatre and hotel, Moline, Illinois, point to the completion of this project some time in February. Barked primarily by theatre capital, the construction involves an outlay of $1,750,000.

The new LeClaire theatre and hotel under construction at Moline, Illinois.

DURING the Holiday period especially, and throughout the year generally, it behooves various branches of the industry to practice a policy of "Safety First" in prevention of fire and other hazards.

A warning note is sounded by Frederick H. Elliott, vice-president of Feaster Manufacturing Company, who inaugurated and directed the original "Safety First" movement in this country. In his message following Mr. Elliott points out some of the things that constitute fire risks about the theatre and directs attention to practices which are hazardous from a safety standpoint.

By FREDERICK H. ELLIOTT

Practice "Safety First"
Advice of F. H. Elliott

Throughout the theatre the "Safety First" slogan should be brought home forcefully to every employ, particularly in the projection room. In handling film, the greatest care should be exercised to avoid even the slightest trouble. Smoking when motion picture film is exposed is criminally negligent, prohibiting smoking, or even the carrying of parlor matches, should be rigidly enforced by the management.

It is the responsibility of attendants at thetres to exercise the greatest watch over the carelessness of smokers, owing to the habit of throwing matches, lighted cigarettes, and other articles, into the lobbies and theatre entrances. There have been many instances where panies have been created through such carelessness.

Should Instruct Employes

The attainment of good housekeeping conditions rests largely with executives whose first duty is to thoroughly instruct all employes concerning what is expected of them. They should be informed regarding the various proper and improper practices and warned that they must adhere strictly to the rules and regulations under pain of instant dismissal.

Particular attention should be given to the handling of crowds attending the motion picture theatres during the hol-day season; as the attendance by children is greatly augmented at this time of the year and the little folks all enjoy "the movies" and they are really the best little boosters "the movies" have.

The safety, comfort and convenience of theatre patrons should be the watchword and undue distance with a thousand of friends for the silent drama and the management of the motion picture theatres.

In the exchanges, laboratories and studios, the same care and diligence should be exercised to safeguard life and property. Motion picture film should be kept in approved containers at all times except when being actually handled or inspected.

Exposed Film a Hazard

The stacking of naked film is one of the most dangerous practices in the industry and should be absolutely forbidden. Such practice affords an opportunity for fire to spread; whereas containers or other protection retard the speed of fire.

The case of ignition can only be offset by an habitually careful and conscientious elimination of all possible causes by which film might be ignited, through contact with flame, sparks or heat.

Rubbish, scraps of paper under tables and desks and back of radiators, cabinets and other fixtures afford a starting place for a conflagration that might prove most destructive.

Many fires have their origin with the heating system because combustible materials, such as wood, paper and film, if left in contact with hot pipes or surfaces for a sufficient length of time, may igni-tate. Steam pipes and radiators are especially dangerous and should be properly guarded.

Nitro-Cellulose motion picture film handled with simple precautions, offers no real danger or hazard; nevertheless, those engaged in the industry should have a full knowledge of the characteristics of motion picture film and applying the correct methods of handling and storing, with an understanding and appreciation of the necessity of complying with the established rules and regulations for the protection of life and property.

Law Makes Offender Liable

Good housekeeping should be the motto of every one connected with the great cinema industry; for the art of good housekeeping consists principally of two things—order and cleanliness. The easiest, most effective, yet most neglected means of eliminating hazards is the exercise of this warning, which is a problem periodically solved in some branches of the industry.

In this connection attention is directed to the fact that in many communities laws or ordinances have been enacted providing that when a fire results from their non-observance, the offenders shall pay to the city the full value of the services of the fire department and any damages in person or property resulting thereto in extinguishing or attempting to extinguish such fire. There is already such provision in the charter of the city of New York, the state law of Pennsylvania and the cities of Portland, Ore.;
Newark, N. J.; Cleveland, Cincinnati, Ohio; Portland, Ore.; Austin, Texas.; Billings, Mont., and Newark, N. J.

These communities are, therefore, the leaders in the movement.
The NEW THEATRE, Easton, Maryland

The recently opened New theatre, Easton, Md., is operated by General Amusements Company. E. A. Plummer is manager.

Its seating capacity is 700 and in addition to the theatre the building houses a ball room with orchestra balcony.

A two manual Moller pipe organ, situated in a special chamber in the balcony is an outstanding equipment feature.

Remote lighting control system is used and the theatre is equipped with an inter-house telephone system.

In the ceiling is a large dome which acts as a ventilating exhaust. It is illuminated by concealed lights.

Exits lead directly to the street and are so arranged that the house can be emptied completely in one minute.

Newest Powers projectors are used. An even degree of temperature is maintained through automatic control.

Dressing rooms, comfortably equipped men's and women retiring rooms and full stage equipment are other features.
Every print deserves all the photographic quality that can be put into it.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

has the long scale of gradation that reproduces all the delicate halftones between high lights and shadows—it carries the quality of the negative through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

Walls of Old Theatre Retained
In Construction of New House

An interesting feature in connection with the completion of two new theatres is the fact that the walls of the old building were used to form a part of the new structure. At the $2,000,000 McVickers theatre, the side and back walls of the old structure were left standing, heavy reinforcements simply being added. A similar thing was done in the construction of the new Linwood theatre, Kansas City, Mo., where the old walls remain in the structure of the new building.

Foyer Is Added
By reducing the seating capacity on the lower floor by 100 seats space for a foyer that extends the breadth of the building has also been provided at the Linwood. This foyer is finished in circular walnut paneling with a marble base and illuminated with lights concealed in suspended baskets. However, the addition of loge balconies has more than made up for this sacrifice and brings the capacity to 1,400.

Every need and whim of the patrons has been provided for. The lobby is spacious, containing plenty of area for the announcing of coming attractions, eight mirrors for the vanity of "Mildy" and a box office in marble that easily is available, yet not obtrusive. Retiring rooms for men and women are on the balcony floor, as well as a second foyer furnished with lounges, easy chairs and stand lamps. Directly off of this foyer are loges with movable chairs seating 150 persons. The stage scheme is made up of pillars and trenched doors. There are two drops, one of attractive design on silk, the other of velvet. A special lighting system in three colors aids in the proper presentation of novelties in conjunction with the circus programs. This system has been embraced alike in the illumination of the main auditorium so that the theatre proper may be flooded with a number of color combinations. A manager's office with leads to the outside, to the lobby and to the auditorium balances a confectionery shop on the opposite side of the front.

Decorated in Old Rose
The decorative scheme is very elaborate and has as its predominating color a rich old rose. Contrast has been obtained by a liberal use of ivory and embozzemunts in polychromatic designs. The overhead work is especially artistic and makes a ventilating system of grills one of beauty as well as of usefulness.

Music has been well taken care of in the installation of a $20,000 Hope Jones Wurlitzer pipe organ. It is an orchestral organ of the latest model, played from a two manual, double touch console located directly in front of the stage.

The Linwood theatre is one of the most important additions to the circuit of theatres that Capitol Enterprises has acquired and its reconstruction involved an expenditure of $75,000. W. O. Lenthart, who has been appointed manager of the new house.

New Projects

Tulsa, Okla.—O Kubatzky, 1611 S. Rockford avenue, and J. B. McAnally, 1827 S. Quincy avenue, are partners in a new motion picture theatre to cost $50,000, which will be built at 1437 S. Peoria avenue. The house will seat 750 and will be known as the Alhambra.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Architectural plans have been completed and construction will be started in about sixty days on a new twelve story theatre by Turner, Dahmken and Langley, 200 Kneckerbocker building. The estimated cost is $1,250,000. It will seat 3,500.

De Kalb, Ill.—Work on the new theatre here which has been held up, is now under way again and it is planned to push construction through to a finish this winter.

Sanford, Fla.—Ground for the new Milane theatre has been broken and construction started. Officers of the company erecting the house are F. L. Miller, president; E. T. Lane, vice president, and C. L. Britt, secretary and treasurer.

Madison, Wis.—Plans have been made by Architect Phillip Dean for remodeling the Grand theatre here which has been purchased by F. W. Fisher and which will be renamed The New Madison.

St. Louis, Mo.—A five story theatre and building will be erected at Delmar boulevard near Kirkwood avenue, to cost $400,000 and have a seating capacity of 1,200. Those behind the project are Walter A. Hayes and Joseph Grand, attorneys; Harry Pruniski, owner of the Kingdel building, and Charles S. Bowman, president, Bowman Printing Company.

San Diego, Cal.—R. E. Hicks, owner of the Cabrillo theatre announces that he has completed plans for the building of a theatre to cost $600,000 in San Diego. It will be located at Fourth and E streets and be known as the Balboa.

St. Louis, Mo.—A remodeling project which calls for an outlay of $25,000 is involving the Drayton theatre, Macou, Ga., was started December 18.

El Dorado, Ark.—The Rex theatre, destroyed by fire, is being replaced with a new structure by M. J. Pruniski of Little Rock, and M. S. McEord of El Dorado.

Enid, Okla.—The Criterion theatre, one of the newest and largest houses in Enid, which was virtually destroyed by fire central week, will be rebuilt. It has been announced by George Billings, owner. The damage, about $18,000, was covered by insurance. The theatre was operated by L. Wel.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Manager J. Frank Benton of the Lyric and Jourel theatres, has announced that the Lyric theatre will be rebuilt next spring, making it much larger, and one of the finest theatres in Southern New York.

Openings

Evanston, Ill.—The new Evanston theatre, which has been completely rebuilt, was opened by Clyde E. Elliott on December 20.

Lackwell, Okla.—The Liberty theatre has been opened under the management of Dwight Schupp.

Bellefontaine, O.—Joc Silvestri has opened the Clifford theatre in Urbana.

La Grange, Ga.—The Metropolitan theatre was opened here by A. Ginsberg on December 11.

Iowa Falls, Ia.—The Petite theatre, which has been closed since last July, has opened its doors again.

W. Palm Beach, Fla.—The Garden theatre at Palm Beach was opened on December 16 by Carl Kettler and his associates who operate the Bijou and Rialto theatres, West Palm Beach.

Bartlesville, Okla.—The newly decorated and enlarged Odeon theatre here has been opened, an $18,000 pipe organ having been installed.

Ranger, Tex.—The Rex theatre here has been opened under the management of J. M. Palmer.

In the rush of studio activity between scenes is an ideal time to fix up Christmas packages and in a respite during the shooting of the B. P. Schulberg-Al Lichtman picture "Poor Men's Wives," Barbara La Marr, playing the feminine role, is shown giving Director Louis Gasnier a hand with his Christmas shopping.

Evanston Playhouse
Is Opened by Elliott High Class Entertainment to Be Policy—Personnel of Staff Announced

With a firm determination to offer nothing but the highest type of entertainment Clyde E. Elliott, exchange man and owner of the new Evanston theatre at Evanston, Ill., opened the playhouse last week. No expense has been spared in making the many improvements which the house has undergone and it now emodies finest equipment, combined with artistic decoration.

Will Install Big Organ

Music will be an important feature at the theatre and in this connection Mr.
Elliott has assembled a capable orchestra, which will be augmented by a huge pipe organ. Selection of the members of the orchestra is being made by Walter Blauflus and the group at present compries James Korak, who has been with
Mr. Blauflus for the past year, Ernest Wiley, member of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, John Zwiefel, Chicago Symphony orchestra, Henry Holmeister, cellist, Alfred Bushwitz formerly with the New York Symphony orchestra and others.

Miss Charlotte Allen, recently of Orchestra hall, has been engaged to play the Wurlitzer organ which is yet to be installed.

Points Importance of Players

"It is readily to be seen that this enssemble is of the very highest artistic value" says Mr. Blauflus. "This is absolutely necessary in order that a picture may be properly cued as to the various atmospheric situations and scenes which demand that members of the enssemble be musicians who produce music of the masters as well as music of the day."

Johnson Entertains
Film Folks at Opening

Quite a crowd attended the opening of the New Berwyn theatre at Berwyn, III., on Friday night. Earl Johnson, the owner, acted as host and everyone present had a good time. Luncheon was served at the Berwyn Club and the theatre was thrown open for their inspection in the evening.

Among those who attended the opening were J. J. Sampson and wife, Ed.
Johnson and wife and Louis Kramer, of F. B. O., L. Leserman, of Universal,
Walter Hyland, Universal, Nat Wolf of
First National. Ralph Crocker of Elgin,
Vern Langdon of Chicago. The theatre was opened to the public Christmas day with "The Sign of the Rose" as the attraction.

III. M. P. T. O. Members
Discuss Arbuckle Films

The announced return of Roscoe Arbuckle to the screen in comedies was the subject of discussion at a session of the Illinois M. P. T. O. last Thursday, at which L. M. Rubens, president, presided.

The motion picture theatre owners announced that inasmuch as Arbuckle had been acquitted of the charges of murder and manslaughter, he must now face the court of public opinion. His pictures will be shown and if they do not meet with approval of the public they will be withdrawn. No effort will be made to force them on the public.

George Getterman and his son Earl who run the Opera House at Genoa, Ill., had as their guests last week on a hunting trip Lew Dreher, booker of the Fox exchange, and George Dicke, proprietor of the Downer theatre, Downers Grove.

Senate and Freckles Give Joy to Children

L & T Theatres Entertain
Youngsters at Good Fellow Xmas

The Lubliner & Trine theatres gave between 3,000 and 4,000 children the treatry of their lives last week when youngsters from the Chicago Home for the Friendless and St. Mary's Home, hundreds of others were entertained at various of the company's houses.

The program called for the children was held at the Senate where Wesley (Freckles) Barry in Warner Brothers "School Days" was presented.

As the children entered the house, each was presented with Christmas candy by the management. The show lasted for three hours and a half. During presentation of the picture the youngsters cheered and applauded the antics of Freckles, who in the picture depicts the character of an orphan like many of the children in attendance.

All children being cared for by a Good Fellow manager were admitted to any of the L. & T. houses.

Scoop

The International Weekly News man was on the job when the old Polk street station went up in flames last Thursday afternoon. Forty-eight prints were shown in as many theatres throughout the city on Thursday night. Twenty-four hours ahead of the other news weeklies, it is claimed.

J. M. Jacobs, of First National sales forces, is spending the week in Buffalo.

Are Cohn, who has been handling the Fox publicity for some time, has resigned.
The Fox company is curtailing its publicity and checker departments.

The boys at the Fox exchange got their popular manager, Sid Meyer, a very pretty gift on Saturday.

J. Sichelman, manager of the contract department, of Fox Film Corp., paid the Chicago office a visit on Thursday.

Matt Cavanaugh, C. W. Vidor, A. W.
Parker, John A. Plonner and Tom Norman of Fox forces descended upon Milwaukee last week and cleaned up with a Fox special drive.

Through an oversight last week the printer left out the name of salesman R. V.
Nolan from the Pathe Christmas greeting.
Nolan is still on the job and batting around 300.

Dave Dubin is hitting the ball these days. Yep, just got Ascher Bros. on the dotted line for all the Educational comedies.

Santa Claus visited the Educational offices
I hear. The boys, D. Dubin, S. Bragen, W.
M. Schwartz and J. S. Posner, gave I Maynard Schwartz, manager, a handsome silk house coat and a traveling bag.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES
By J. R. M.

WELL, everybody had a Merry Christmas, I guess, judging from the smiles and the hearty handshakes all along the Row.

Edward Bowes, vice-president of Goldwyn Pictures, was a caller at the local office on Thursday and Friday of last week. Mr. Shower of the home office was also a caller at the Chicago Goldwyn office.

Jack Lynch, who looks after the exhibitors' needs in the Indiana territory for First National, is on the sick list.

George Ake, the well known humorist, attended the weekly screening of "Back Home and Broke" at the Paramount projection room and addressed the roomful of exhibitors following the showing.

We had Dan Roche, the Paramount exploiter, prematuring home from Charlotte, S. C. Dan didn't get home until the day before Xmas. Said the weather down South was fine for ducks but not for exploiters. Dan's going to spring something on us soon, as a result of his trip.

Al Pramer of Omaha, Neb., and H. William of the Park theatre, same place, called upon their old side-kick B. B. Reinhold, resident manager of the Goldwyn exchange, while they were in Chicago recently.

Chicagoans will keep their eyes on the sky this week, according to Walter Nealand, Goldwyn's publicist, for he has hired Nimmo Black, the aviator, to fly over the loop every day and distribute 100,000 cards advertising "Broken Chains," which opens at the Chicago theatre Jan. 1.

And speaking of "Broken Chains," Ben Reinhold tells us all the circuits hereabouts have signed up for the Goldwyn picture.

F. A. Flader, who looks after Universal Pictures Corp. theatre interests, is in town looking pictures at the Randolph theatre.

L. A. Rozelle, manager of Metro, gave a private screening of "Hearts Aflame" last week, and those who were privileged to see the film were immeasurably pleased with it and pronounced it a sure-fire box office attraction.

J. C. Stevens, manager of Vitagraph exchange, had a fine lot of mistletoe sent to him from down Oklahoma way. It's nothing to get a barrel of it on one tree down there, J. C. tells us.

Jack Barry, former salesman for Clyde Elliott Enterprises, has joined the American Releasing force, as sales manager. Chas. Casanave resigned last Saturday.

John Silha, of the Stadium theatre, Blue Island avenue, takes delight in showing his friends a good time. Hence the rabbit dinner staged by John last Thursday at the Renesseance restaurant on Milwaukee avenue. Those who enjoyed Silha's hospitality were: Ludwig Segel, Frank Mantzke, William J. Sweenny, L. H. Mason and J. Ray Murray.

Realizing that Jeff Lazarus has set him an awful pace, A. L. Sobier, First National's new exploitation man, purchased himself a nifty looking coat last week and we saw him looking at spots and a summer cane. So it looks like a lively contest when Gradwell Sears gets back from Saint Loie.

Howard Shipman, ten-year-old son of Nell Shipman, the actress, passed through Chicago last Thursday en route to New York to spend the holidays with his mother. Frank Mantzke, local manager of American Releasing, looked after the little fellow during his brief stay in the Windy City.

Joseph Schnitzer, general manager of Film Book Offices, paid the local exchange a visit between trains Thursday. Mr. Schnitzer was en route to New York from the West Coast.

There's a rumor going the rounds that that Polk Street theatre fire was just one of Louis Kramer's advance guns for his "The Third Alarm." Personally we don't believe it, but you never can tell.

And reverting back to Kramer, you ought to see the stack of letters he has from fire chiefs throughout the Central West volunteering to kick-in and help put over "The Third Alarm." Why, you could paper the F. B. O. offices with them if one wanted a lot of helmets for decorations.

Frank Fliberty, Fox salesman, made a flying trip to South Bend last Friday, and from Frank's smile he musta brought back the bacon.

And Jor Lyon, old reliable, mingled with the Greeks of Gary, Ind., last week. Of course he didn't mention Fox pictures. Oh, NO.

"Chick" Keppler, Pathe salesman, said it with photos this year, making beautiful gifts to his father, mother and wife of enlarged pictures of each.

The Pathe boys as usual played good fellows and furnished several poor families with complete Christmas dinners. The girls at the exchange had their delight in trimming a tree.

The sales force, Pathe, presented Manager H. O. Martin with a very handsome silver finished photo and frame.

Speaking of presents, I. Lefferman, country salesman Universal, and F. O. Neiman, received handsome pen and pencil outfits from the "U" boys, and Herman Sterk, city sales manager, was given a beautiful desk set.

Up at First National, Santa Claus brought a beautiful Hamilton watch to C. E. Bond, manager, and a humidor, filled with cigars, for W. W. Brumberg, country sales manager.

C. E. Bond, by the way, has been on the sick list.

The First National boys were all wearing happy smiles the day before Christmas, having been informed that they would all stay in town Christmas week. A little house cleaning will be accomplished by Jack Schwartz, Phil Dunas, J. N. Howland and others during the lay-off.

W. W. Brumberg is spending the holidays at his mother-in-law's home in Burlington, Iowa.

Gradwell Sears grabbed a rattler for St. Louis and M. Whitmer is spending his holidays at Columubus, Neb., visiting his mother.

The Opera House at Catine, Ill., which has been closed for some time, will open Jan. 6 with "The Silent Call."

The Columbia Theatre, Indiana Harbor, was destroyed by fire on last Friday night.

The FLIRT

BOOTH TARKINGTON'S MASTERPIECE

A HOBART HENLEY PRODUCTION

Remarkable! Says Reeland Reviews

"It is a picture that will be remembered for a long time. A remarkable motion picture. It is a pleasure to state that 'The Flirt' as a picture is quite as good as 'The Flirt' as a book—even a little better, perhaps."

First Rate! Says N. Y. Globe

"A REMARKABLE piece of work in every respect. First rate entertainment. Hobart Henley has handled the Tarkington story with rare skill and intelligence. I hope Mr. Tarkington writes Hobart a letter and tells him so."

Powerful! Says N. Y. Eve. Mail

You'll Like It! Says N. Y. Eve. World

"We thoroughly enjoyed the whole show. It must be said for 'The Flirt' that it has everything in it a movie ought to have, and that's a strong statement coming in these days of thrills. We enjoyed 'The Flirt' and think most movie goers will agree with us. We think you'll like 'The Flirt'; we did!"

A Big Box Office Attraction! Says M. P. World

"One of the most intensely human stories ever presented on the screen. Every one of the characters seem real living persons. Strikes home. Exceptionally well selected cast. Should appeal to every class of spectator. Should appeal to every type of audience, and prove a big box-office attraction."

Good for Any House! Says M. P. News

"ADAPTED to the screen, it (The Flirt) retains its values—its charm—its human appeal, and all its lifelike incident. Good for any house in any locality."

A Big Hit! Says N. Y. Journal

"THE FLIRT at the Rialto makes a big hit. A significant production. A serious and commendable effort to interpret honestly a good piece of literature."

Excellent! Says N. Y. World

"EXCELLENT! All who like Tarkington's works may find this picture worth their while. Most of it is excellent."

For Every Family! Says Photoplay

"LISTED as one of January's seven best pictures. Of a family, for a family. It might be the slogan of this picture. For every family, in fact!"

Wonderful Exploitation Possibilities! Says Ex. Herald

"DELIGHTFUL entertainment. Worthy of extra effort on the part of every exhibitor who plays it and has wonderful exploitation possibilities. No doubt about its appeal in any theatre."

One of the Best! Says N. Y. Daily News

"ONE of the best we have seen in some time. Go to see it on our say-so. This photoplay is distinctly worth your while."

"The Sweetest Romance Ever Screened"
Any feature is new,—if it hasn’t played your house

Take advantage of that fact and make more money

The exhibitor who only considers recent features when booking for his house, is greatly limiting his chances for getting the best pictures that have been made and is depriving his audience of the opportunity of seeing many pictures that have made history.

Any feature is new, if it hasn’t played your house.

A first class feature, some time released, with a fine record of success, is better for your business than an ordinary new feature.

Pathe has had many fine features; fine not merely because Pathe thought them so but because the whole business thought them so. Out of the many, fifteen have been judged worthy of revival, because in stories, casts, stars, direction and production they are far above the average. Because they are not “new” they are offered you at very reasonable prices.

Thus you can get real attractions at a nominal price, give your audiences fifty cents worth for every quarter, and make real money for yourself.

You’ll find the fifteen’ on the other side of this page.

THE MONEY-CHANGERS: an amazing drama of crooked politics and the underworld; from the novel by Upton Sinclair; directed by Jack Conway; star cast with Robert McKim, Claire Adams and Roy Stewart; produced by Benj. B. Hampton.

“I cleaned up with it. A mighty good story full of action.”—H. W. Poole, Liberty Theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore.

THE RIDDLE: WOMAN: from the big stage success; the sensational side of a loving woman’s life; starring Geraldine Farrar; a wonderful cast; directed by Edward Jose; produced by Associated Exhibitors.

“Went over big and more than pleased. Farrar a wonderful actress and story sure the goods. Whole cast superb.”—Mrs. J. A. Dostal, Ideal Theatre, Omaha, Neb.

THE SAGE HEN: the supreme cry of a mother’s soul in the stirring old frontier days; an Edgar Lewis production, personally directed by Edgar Lewis; Gladys Brockwell, Lilian Rich and Wallace MacDonald; story by Harry Solter.

“Big crowd, everybody enthusiastic. Never had so many compliments on a picture before. It pleased immensely.”—Alvin S. Frank, Jewel Theatre, Lafayette, Colo.

THAT GIRL MONTANA: a Western classic, the story of a girl’s fight for her honor; from the novel by Marah Ellis Ryan; starring Blanche Sweet, with Mahlon Hamilton, Edward Peil and Claire Du Brey in the cast; directed by Robert Thornby; produced by Jesse D. Hampton.

“Has the punch. Had many good compliments from patrons.”—H. J. Longaker, Howard Theatre, Alexandria, Minn.

THE KILLER: from the novel by Stewart Edward White; positively one of the most exciting pictures ever made; star cast with Claire Adams, Edward Peil, Frank Campeau, Jack Conway and Tod Sloan; directed by Howard Hickman; produced by Benj. B. Hampton.

“Excellent. Played this to a full house. Went over big.”—Mrs. D. C. Turney, Miller Theatre, Bonstell, S. D.

WHAT WOMEN WILL DO: the stirring drama of a woman’s regeneration; starring Anna Q. Nilsson with Earl Metcalfe, Allan Forrest, George Majeroni and Wm. Riley Hatch. Directed by Edward Jose; produced by Associated Exhibitors.

WHEN WE WERE TWENTY-ONE: from the famous stage success by H. V. Esmond; a drama of the hot blood of youth; starring H. B. Warner; cast including Claire Anderson, James W. Morrison and Christine Mayo; directed by Henry King; produced by Jesse D. Hampton.

“A good picture. Will go anywhere and please.”—G. L. Deady, Palace, No. Rose, N. Y.

"The Inner Man"
Syracuse Motion Picture Co.—Five Reels
(Reviewed by Glenn Walkers)

Going into widely different fields for its second contribution to the industry, the Syracuse Motion Picture Company has made an enterprising production based on a stirring story laid in the Blue Ridge. Wyndham Standing and Dorothy Mackall again top the well balanced cast and both put over convincing interpretations. Miss Mackall proves she can act in this picture and is an attractive mountain maid. Mr. Standing is a sterling actor and can always be depended upon for something worth while. The stars are fortunate in having a fine supporting cast.

There is much action in the picture, especially when it gets under way in the mountain locale. The “bad men” of the district, in which the hero owns a mine, set out to frighten away the youth, but instead they set off the spark of manhood and there are some stirring heroic and gun battles.

There is an amusing scene introduced when the hero on his first night in the mountains, has a weird dream and we are shown glimpses of maidens dancing on the greensward and then follows our hero clad in pajamas, running through the snow with the wolf pack, brought into play to bring out the laughs.

The hero makes such a success of running things for father that the lad is made general manager of the mine and after Sally, the Blue Ridge belle is clad in one of millady’s modern gowns, love springs forth and in the end all is happiness. During the action of the piece the audience is treated to some fine natural scenery. The photography is flawless.

The Story—Thurlow Barcley is a young man more given to deep and scientific study and mundane sports than he is to business and his father is much put out because of this fact. In, however, succeeds in getting him to take a vacation and go to inspect Dad’s mine, in the Blue Ridge. On his arrival there he meets up with real life, has a list of thrilling adventures and is made into a real man, ending up by marrying a fair mountain maid.

Classically—A comedy-drama possessing several melodramatic moments and some stirring mountain gun battles.

Production Highlights—The attractive natural settings “in the Blue Ridge.” Wyndham standing’s interpretation of the role of the man who is made over by contact with real life. The kidnapping of Sally by Jud and the ensuing gun play attending her rescue. The plot between Jud and Thurlow. Dorothy Mackall’s convincing portrayal of the mountain maid.

Exploitation Angles—This one has a cast of solid players. Use the names big in your trade. Might put a man on the street dressed in conspicuous golf suit, large horn rim glasses, large hat, and appropriate sign on back coat. All about "the inner man has nothing to with the Inner Man at the Strand theatre next."

Something Wrong

A certain inequality of things that runs pretty much through human life is conspicuously prominent in the film business at this time: In a number of outstanding instances big exhibitors who are operating at a large profit are in a position to dictate practically what they shall pay for film. Their margin of profit is so great that they could easily pay twice their present scale of rental prices, yet, being in a position to dictate, they keep prices down to the lowest possible level.

On the other hand, there are the smaller exhibitors whose margin of profit was never great and who, under the conditions of the past year and a half, have been compelled to meet a loss in operation. These are the little fellows who need the lower rentals but are in no position whatsoever to enforce a lowering of the scale. And the distributor, being unable to force payment of what is due him in the case of certain big exhibitors, finds himself collecting exorbitant charges where he can.

The condition is inequitable and unjust. Some means of correcting it must be discovered and put to work.

Distribution Iills

Mr. Charles C. Burr, viewing with considerable alarm the adverse conditions which now confront many distributors, believes that unless a radical change is effected under which there will be a more equitable marketing of pictures the inevitable result will be a limited number of booking companies, probably two, which will send pictures out over circuits in the manner that is now being done with stage attractions.

There can be no denying that certain conditions must be changed and the evolution and development of the business, backed by the earnest and faithful support of the responsible men in the business, will bring these about. But we do not believe that the film business can ever be so controlled that a booking arrangement of the type Mr. Burr refers to can be put in effect.

The thing that distribution in this business needs most right now is a uniform contract which, when once signed, will enable the distributor to know what he is going to get and when he is going to get it. The long-delayed uniform contract also will afford the exhibitor similar benefits.

The only one who will suffer under a properly worked out uniform contract is the distributor or the exhibitor who wants to cheat when the opportunity presents itself.

The uniform contract will eliminate many of the conspicuous ills which now affect distribution.

A Bad Bill

A bill has been introduced in Congress which is aimed to eliminate the type of inflammable film stock now in general use. Specifically the bill would make illegal the transportation of such film which would, of course, amount to an elimination of it.

The reason for the introduction of such a measure at this time, if it is to be assumed that the representative acted in good faith, is not clear. Every reasonable and possible safeguard now surrounds the transportation and exhibition of the kind of film now in use. Theatres and booths are so equipped as to render negligible the danger from a film fire.

The passage of this measure would accomplish no practical good. It would, however, put the industry to an expense expertly estimated by Mr. Jules E. Brulatour of $20,000,000 a year.

Exhibitors should watch this matter carefully and should overlook no opportunity to lend their influence to assist in having the bill rejected.

Better Business Is Reflected in Admission Taxes

(Washington Bureau, Exhibitors Herald)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3.—A prosperous year for all branches of the motion picture industry is forecast by recent tax collections from the theatres of the city. For some months the collections from the admission tax have been climbing—one of the truest indications of returning prosperity—and, although the Government’s revenue from that source is still something like $1,500,000 a month below that of 1921, there is every indication that the people again are patronizing the theatre frequently and steadily.

Tax collections for the month of November, as reported by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, amounted to $5,884,790, against $5,306,401 in October. In November, 1921, however, the admission tax returned to $6,995,375.

Serial Thriller Costs Life of “Stunt” Man; Was Doubling for Star

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—Jean Perkins, probably the most daring “stunt” man in motion picture work in this city, met an untimely death near Riverside, Cal., last week when attempting to drop from a speeding aeroplane to the top of a 400-foot high tower. The daredevil was doubling for William Desmond, the Universal actor, at the time of the accident.

Perkins, with other members of the company, was working on a serial near Riverside. The film plot called for a transfer in mid-air from the plane to the train, and according to report the pilot of the aircraft was unable to bring his plane directly over the top of the passenger coach.

Perkins dropped, missed the train entirely, and crashed to the earth suffering injuries that proved fatal.

Smith Asks Censor Repeal In Message to Legislature

Immediate Action by Democratic Senate Expected

In Answer to Executive’s Appeal—Best Government Governs Least, He Says

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., January 3.—Motion picture censorship is to be repealed in New York State. That is, if Governor Alfred E. Smith has his way, and in view of the fact that the senate is Democratic, there is little question but that censorship will soon become a thing of the past in the Empire State.

Effort to Be Made for Immediate Repeal

What is more, an effort will be made to repeal the present law immediately. There is every indication that the New York State Motion Picture Censorship Commission will find itself out in the cold, cold world, within a few weeks.

In his annual message to the legislature on Wednesday, January 3, Governor Smith had this to say in regard to motion picture censorship:

“Recent legislation in our own state has aimed at serious restriction of personal liberty. For several years, we have been drifting away from the fundamental ideal of the Declaration of Independence, and the document that was intended to give it force and vigor, the Constitution of the United States. Throughout the Declaration, there are related the abuses to which the American people were subjected by tyrannical government.

Tells Principles of Declaration

“The imposition of taxes without consent of the citizen is interference with trade and commerce, and with the personal liberty of the citizens were set forth as the principal reason for a Declaration of a fundamental principle of government that has burned its way through the literature of the world right up to our own time. Inquisitions, spy systems, rules and regulation for personal conduct not prompted by the ten commandments are an unnecessary interference with the freedom of a people.

“It has frequently been said that the best government is the one that governs the least. In monarchies, the people exist for the government. In a democracy, the government exists for the people, and every move should be the expression of their will.

Throughout the Constitution of the United States, there was sounded the note set forth in the preamble, which said that the purpose of the document was ‘to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.’ In our own state, the opening sentence of our Constitution is the expression of our gratitude to Almighty God for our freedom in order to secure our blessings, we establish a Constitution.

Should Be Convicted First

“As all crimes are predicated on sins, no persons should be held guilty of this offense until the law to which they may be convicted of a crime. The bill of rights throws every possible safeguard around the individual and the fullest possible presumption of innocence is constitutionally established until the contrary is proved beyond reasonable doubt. The danger to the future of our liberty lies in our apparent willingness at times to compromise with this principle. Once this avenue is opened, nobody can, with any degree of certainty, predict where it may lead.

“Censorship is not in keeping with our ideas of liberty and the freedom of worship or freedom of speech. The people of the state that has declared that every citizen may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being held responsible for the abuse of that right, and no law shall be passed to restrain or abridge liberty of speech or of the press. This fundamental principle has exact application to all methods of expression.

Films Open New Avenue

“The spoken drama has always had its place as an influence to educate. In many countries it is sustained as a national enterprise. In early days, it was used to give expression to biblical history. Nobody will dispute that the invention of moving pictures opened the way for a new avenue of great education as well as amusement. We have looked too lightly on guarantees of freedom of speech and of the press, when we select from among our citizens three people who before the facts have the power to declare what is, and what is not a violation of the statutes enacted for the protection of the morality of our people.

“Carrying this policy to its logical conclusion, everything written or spoken could be subjected to censor-ship by public authority. We have abundant law in this state to jail the man who outrages public decency. If we do not, just as we have jails enough, to hold him after his conviction. I believe that the enactment of a statute providing for censorship of the moving pictures was a step away from that liberty which the Constitution guaranteed and it should be repealed.”
New York Rivoli Celebrates Its Fifth Anniversary

Past Twelve Months Have Been Important Both Pictorially And Musically, Says Hugo Riesfeld

(Special to Exhibitors Herald).

N E W Y O R K, January 3.—The Rivoli theatre is five years old and this week it is presenting its anniversary program, with the Paramount production, "My American Wife," starring Gloria Swanson, as the principal screen attraction.

NINETEEN twenty-two was an important year for the Rivoli, both pictorially and musically, and during the year a number of innovations were offered under the supervision of Hugo Riesfeld, managing director.

Early in 1922 Mr. Riesfeld presented his creation of "film opera"—Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen." In presenting this, Mr. Riesfeld edited a long film in such a way as to synchronize the action of the screen with selections from Bizet's opera.

Later, in the year the managing director introduced a Plasticin picture in Prisma colors. When viewed through red and green filters the effect of a third dimension on the screen is given. Van Doric Kelley, creator of the Prisma process, invented the Plasticin device.

Following is an interesting resume of the number of appearances of Paramount stars at the theatre:

Thomas Meighan appeared in five productions, Wallace Reid in five, Gloria Swanson in four, Betty Compson in four, Agnes Ayres in three, Bill Rogers in one, Dorothy Dalton in one, Valentino in four, Marion Davies in two, Elsie Ferguson in one, Pola Negri in one, Lila Lee in two, Leatrice Joy in two, Lois Wilson in two, T. Roy Barnes in one, James Kirkwood in one, Tom Moore in one, May McAvoy in two, Jack Holt in two, Lionel Barrymore and Scena Owen in one, Bebe Daniels and Conrad Nagel in one and Jannings, Wegener, Liedtke and Daggv Servaes in the one Lubitsch production.

Here are the comedies presented by Mr. Riesfeld during the year:

Next Week

In the PUBLIC RIGHTS LEAGUE next week a detailed plan of the work being done by W. P. Cuff of Chillicothe, Mo., in combating reform activities will be published.

Mr. Cuff has originated a new plan which could effectively be adopted by other theatre owners.

Charles Chaplin revival of "Carmen" with special burlesque music.

The musical programs prepared by Mr. Riesfeld were as rich in entertainment and fine interpretations as the pictorial programs, and introduced many new artists to the music-loving public.

The orchestral selections ranged from the classics to jazz, the syncopated compositions being orchestrated and interpreted with the same fine musicianship that was devoted to the great writings of the past, Mr. Riesfeld himself taking up the baton to conduct the classic jazz selections at the Rivoli.

Under the direction of Frederick Stahlberg, conductor, and Emanuel Baer, assistant conductor, more than fifty different overtures and orchestral selections were played by the Rivoli concert orchestra, and more than 100 vocal and dance numbers were given.

Screen Actors to Ask For an Eight Hour Day

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Motion picture actors, through the Actors Equity Association of which many are members, will place before Will H. Hays a plan calling for a forty-eight hour week.

Pathe Representative

Reports Conditions in Europe Are Improving

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Following a brief visit with the Pathe officials in this country, Maurice Gaillot who represents the firm abroad, has sailed for Europe. He reports that the future looks brighter than it has for some time past and that the demand for American films and the business of the film industry in France, Italy and Belgium is improving.

"In France," said Mr. Gaillot, "the picture business has been poor for some time past, reflecting conditions of general business. Latterly there has been improvement in an encouraging degree, which seems likely to continue.

France produces only about 20 per cent of the pictures shown in its theaters, and must rely to a very great extent on American product, he said.

Louis Eytinge Freed to Accept Literary Work

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

PHOENIX, ARIZ., Jan. 3.—Louis Victor Eytinge, author of "The Man Under Cover," which was produced by Universal Pictures Corporation, has been granted a parole from the Arizona state prison where he was serving a life sentence.

Governor Campbell said in granting the parole that Eytinge had been offered a position with a publisher at $6,000 a year and that the parole was made in order to accept the offer. While in prison, Eytinge was in charge of the motion picture entertainment.

Dancer "Find" May Be Paramount Film Star

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—The terpsichorean grace of Orlando Cortez, combined with the fact that he possessed those qualities of feature conspicuous in successful screen players has landed a five-year contract with Paramount for the dancer at the Ambassador hotel.

Cortez attracted the attention of Jesse Lasky while the former was dancing at the hotel and when Mr. Lasky's "bunch" there was a man with big possibilities, films were born out by Adolph Zukor, who happened to be dining in the hotel at the time, the signing of the contract followed.

"Hall of Fame" Draws Humorous Essay From Pennsylvania Exhibitor
By JOSEPH GRAY

Manager, Tru Art Theatre, Spangler, Pa.
(With apologies to Peter Finley Dunne)

"Hinnissy," said Mr. Dooley, abandoning his task, at the entrance of his friend. "Hinnissy, I see be th' papers where th' industry has a new Organ-izashun called 'Th' Hall iv Shame.' Th' ideals be which th' great benny-factors iv th' industry git thair statchoose in this here new Organizashun is wurthur some considerin', Hinnissy. "In th' furst place, Hinnissy, it will be well to bear in mind that this great picshure industry is founded on th' principals iv Eucalyptrees, and as sich is subject to mathematical demonstrashun, fur instance:

"Let B equal th' Industry
"Let 103 equal B

\[ x = \text{equals th' facts and } y = \text{equals the figures} \]

Therefore, Hinnissy, 'B' equals wan hundred and three; minus X, minus Y equals th' facts and figures. Or, in plain American, th' picshure industry is 103 percent Bull.

"Wan iv th' glintsh a be th' walls iv th' Hall iv Shame' wance made a picshure iv that benevlynt society that murther a man if thay don't like th' color iv his shoes; and it appears, accordin' to offic- shall statistics, that th' maker iv th' 'cuko clon' picshure gits six hundred and ninety nine votes out iv a total iv wan hundred fur his advancement iv th' industry. Another gentleman gits foive hundred and sivinity two out iv th' same wan hundred votes fur thryin' to carther th' whate market and causin' exhibitors to ate nothin' but ice cream and cake the rist iv their lives; and strange to say, Hinnissy, another wan be the name iv Laemmle gits wan vote for fightin' and resistin' th' high idees and fraternal methods of th' other most bennyfitted th' industry in general be cornerin' th' market at both ends and in th' middle.

"How did Laemmle git that wan vote? If you was runnin' fur president iv th' Hall iv Shame' which Heaven forbid, Hinnissy, you wad git at least wan vote, providin' you was a duly qualified elictor. Well, Hinnissy, that's how Laemmle got wan vote, to be shure.

"Irv'y wan iv these great benny-factors gits his statchoo into the 'Hall iv Shame' for makin' a hundred thousand more peepul patronize th' picshures than did so before. If all the hundred great benny-factors are gittin' thair statchoose in th' Hall iv Shame fur makin' wan hundred thousand more picshure show fans than there was before, then, Hinnissy, there is somethin' mysterious about why you shill ow eight months electric light and power bill and have failed to pay your poor-tax since nineteen twenty. Wan hundred times wan hundred thousand makes th' million patrinos iv your picshure theatre, Hinnissy, and thim's big numbers. But th' great artists and authors and monopolists and deflec-tors and sich like noble genious who air entitled to say whose statchoose air to go into th' Hall iv Shame' prove it be sayin' so, and as Bertha M. Clay wance said to me 'that's an end on it.' So you see, Hinnissy, th' rason you can't buy cough drops this winter is that ye air too busy gatherin' up th' dimes that the tin million patrinos iv your house air throwin' at ye while they air yellin' and clamorin' to git inside.

"Be th' way, Hinnissy, had they let this votin' fur candy-dates to th' Hall iv Shame' up to me and you, Hinnissy, do you know who I'd iv voted fur? Think, now, Hinnissy. Well, I'll tell ye. Look on page sixty sivin iv the December thirteenth, nineteen twenty two Exhibitors Herald and read what a fellow be th' name iv Frank Forrest, of Forrest's theatre, Boonville, Indiana, has to say. Now, turn to page sixty nine iv the same issue and rade again what that fellow Forrest sez.

"Believe me, Hinnissy, there's a gentleman that knows his sauer-kraut from evaporated milk and he certainly can spake a mouthful. And so, Hinnissy, I'm votin' for Mr. Forrest as the pioneer bennyfactor iv th' industry."

Lewis J. Selznick Turns Over Business to His Sons

Retires from Active Part in Enterprises—Myron and David O. Head Organizations

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—One of the industry's pioneers and an outstanding figure in its progress and development for many years—Lewis J. Selznick, president of Selznick Enterprises and Select Pictures Corporation, last week retired from active part in the affairs of these companies, turning the reins of the enterprises over to his sons, Myron and David O.

At a meeting of the board of directors, Myron Selznick was elected president and David O. vice-president of both companies. Mr. Selznick will continue as chairman of the board of directors, acting in an advisory capacity.

A. George Volck was elected vice-president in charge of finance of both organizations and John S. Woody was made vice-president in charge of sales of Select.

"There's been a rest coming to me for a long time and I'm going to take it," Mr. Selznick declared in commenting on the change. "I've been building up my business for my sons—and I've been building my sons for the business. I am confident that Myron and David will do as well, if not better in the future with both the Selznick and Select companies, than I have done in the past." * * *

Both of the younger Selz尼cks have been in training for the posts they will now fill. Myron started in an exchange, being at first a film cutter, inspector, shipping clerk, salesman and purchasing agent, later switching to production as general manager of Norma Talmadge productions and production manager of the Olive Thomas unit. His most recent works have been "Reported Missing," "Love Is an Awful Thing," and "One Week of Love." He was called in from the West Coast to the meeting last week where he was engaged on "Rupert of Hentzau" and "The Common Law."

David Selznick's experience has been similar to that of his brother, and he is now in charge of the production unit making "The Easiest Way," starring Theda Bara, and also has charge of Selznick News.

Mr. Volck joined the Selznick organization about six months ago as assistant to Myron Selznick. He had previously been identified with important financial and railroad interests.

John S. Woody became field sales manager of Select five years ago, resigning to become sales manager and later general manager of Realart, after which he returned to Select as general manager.

Burns Agency to Aid In War on Film Theft At Exchange Centers

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Action has been taken by the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors whereby the Burns detective agency will cooperate in every exchange center, as it has in New York in the industry's war on film thefts.

A film theft committee has been appointed. Membership is composed of one representative from each of the companies in the M. P. P. D. A. A plan of junking film at one central point also is under consideration by members of the Hays organization.

Prosperity Dinner Mystery Explos

Aspiring Film Salesman Says Publicity on Event Was Premature

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The “Welcome Prosperity Dinner” and its promoter, David R. Hochreich, are no longer mysteries. It and he have been discovered. The dinner has been called in last week’s Exhibitors’ Herald, and David R. Hochreich is a film salesman, who travels in New Jersey and who has large aspirations.

Shortly after Will H. Hays was inducted into office as the head of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Mr. Hochreich conceived the idea of giving a big dinner to introduce him to the industry. This was given at the Hotel Astor by the Motion Picture Directors Association, with Mr. Hochreich managing the affair.

Movement Is Sanctioned

Mr. Hochreich is an optimist and believes that if prosperity is talked, prosperity will be brought about. Being something of a psychologist also, he figured the time was propitious for a great prosperity movement, so the idea of the “Welcome Prosperity Dinner” was conceived.

Many large men of affairs were approached and a number of them not only sanctioned the movement, but authorized the use of their names on the committee. Among these were Charles M. Schwab, Jules S. Bache, James Montgomery Flagg, Governor George S. Silzer, Franklin Simon and others.

Mistake Is Made

Everything was moving along so fast until the mistake was made of getting out the stationery showing the names of men on the committee. These included Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, William Randolph Hearst and a number of others in the film industry, which Mr. Hochreich evidently thought would serve. The breakdown of the whole plan came when this film company heads announced that their names were used without authority, and they knew nothing about the dinner and did not want to know anything about it.

A grave mistake was made, said Mr. Hochreich, in giving publicity premature to the affair. He said he was gone ahead with plans for the dinner which would be held later and would be representative of other lines of business.

Declare “Shadows” Is “Exceptional” Picture

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Indicate that “Shadows,” the new preferred production distributed by Al P. P. D. A. Corporation, will meet with the favor any audience was seen in a vote taken at a special showing at the Town Hall, the audience voted on grante points of the feature. Out of 258 responses, 166 voted “Shadows” as an “exceptional” picture.

The audience also took occasion to make additional comment in the form of praise for Director Joseph Lezin and the acting of Lon Chaney. That it is a picture appropriate for all type of audience was also indicated by the votes.

Exhibitors Are Urged To Support Bill Which Would Cut Gift Tax
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—In a letter sent out to all state presidents of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Giles L. O'Reilly, president of the M.P.O.T. of New York, urges exhibitors to use every effort in enlisting the support of the congressmen of their state in the cause of bill 13,736 which would eliminate the tax on all admissions of twenty-five cents and less.

The bill, which was announced in the Herald of December 30, is introduced by Congressman W. McGregor of Buffalo. In his communication Mr. O'Reilly says "There can be no question that, under present economic conditions of the country, the admission tax is retarding our business. If this bill becomes a law it will remove the admission tax on all tickets under twenty-five cents and under, and will affect eighty per cent of the exhibitors of the country. We have assured him congressmen that the exhibitors of the country will support his efforts to move this burdensome tax."

Questionnaire Shows Arbuckle In Disfavor in Missouri

Hays Appeals to Public Through Kansas City Press—Carl Laemmle Supports Producer Chief

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., January 3.—With Will H. Hays making addresses before the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, the Kansas Country Club, the Missouri Motion Picture Association and the Kansas City organization announcing the result of questionnaires sent throughout the state, and the M. P. T. O. Kansas voicing its stand, Kansas City has heard nothing but "Arbuckle" for the past few days. A summarization of all opinions seem to indicate that the comedian is far from having won his way back into the good graces of Missouri and Kansas exhibitors and patrons.

In his talk before the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Hays, who was attending a national convention of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, did not dwell upon the Arbuckle case, but confined his talk to the motion picture industry. It was through the Kansas City exhibitors that he appealed to the public to start the New Year without any yesterday, adding that this did not constitute a reinstatement of Arbuckle, but merely meant that he would not stand in the way of the comedian's chance to go to work and make good.

But with the M. P. T. O. Missouri the situation is said to be much different. Questionnaires received from exhibitors of the state show that sentiment is against the exhibition of Arbuckle films, according to Lawrence E. Goldman, secretary-counsel. At a meeting of the exhibitors in Kansas City early in January action probably will be taken to continue the ban on Arbuckle productions, Mr. Goldman said.

"With questionnaires showing that a big majority of patrons in Missouri are opposed to Arbuckle films, there is nothing to do but prohibit them," Mr. Goldman said.

Richard G. Liggett, president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas, takes the following stand on the question:

"As far as the official reinstatement of Arbuckle is concerned, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will have the final word, for it is in their theatre that the pictures must be shown; they will look to their patrons for an answer to the question. The attitude of Kansas towards Arbuckle, I believe, is an entirely different one. He was acquitted by the courts, but he has not yet been acquitted by the motion picture patrons of Kansas, if prevailing opinions can be taken as a barometer."

With a new state administration about to take office, the statement of the Kansas State censor board was a guarded one. At the time of the Arbuckle trial, each member of the board asserted that the comedian's pictures never again could be shown in Kansas with the consent of the censor board.

"I feel that any action taken by us now might embarrass a new board in case of a change," Dwight Thatcher Harris, chairman of the board, said. "I can say, however, that Arbuckle still is out of favor with this board. It is doubtful if any Arbuckle films will be presented to us for review before the administration changes."

James J. Larkin, Kansas City censor, said that Arbuckle films will not be barred in Kansas City.

"Legally, I have no right to stop any film in which Arbuckle is shown," Mr. Larkin said. "If the picture is clean and does not violate any section of the city ordinance regarding motion pictures, it is for the man to keep it up. The betterer of Arbuckle pictures is up to the public for a decision."

Getting back to Mr. Hays, it was a rousing, cheering gathering that rose to greet him in the Francis I room of the Hotel Baltimore, as he returned from a sightseeing trip over the city. His talk is said by exhibitors to have carried a greater weight in favor of the film industry than any address ever made in Kansas City.

"The motion picture carries a silent call for virtue, honesty, ambition, patriotism, home protection, and Mr. Hays said to us: 'Above all else is our duty to youth. All pictures cannot be made for the kind of a 14-year-old child, but there are certain standards of taste, conduct, moral and common decency that must, and shall, be preserved.' The press has arrived at its great present position of stability as the fruit of six centuries of development. From the Gutenberg Bible to the newspaper and magazine of today is a long and easy road of invention and development. What John Milton did in the fight for the freedom of the press; what Benjamin Franklin did, when he was done by Geree, Dana, Pulitzer, Watters, and the great Col. William R. Nelson all counted in the long pull for a finer and better press."

"There is one place where evil in motion pictures can be eliminated, and that is the point and the time when the pictures are made, by the men who make them—not political censorship. There is no zone of twilight in the matter—right is right and wrong is wrong. The corrections can be made; real evil can be stopped. The ban and censorship standards of art, taste and morals can be achieved, and it is primarily the duty of the producer to do it," concluded Mr. Hays. "Please don't call me a movie czar. I am not a czar."

Hays Right, Says Laemmle

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Declaring that Roscoe (Pappy) Arbuckle is as innocent as those "who rush into print to damn him forever," President Carl Laemmle of Universal, who appeared before the court, has issued a statement in which he praises Will H. Hays for his action in lifting the ban on Arbuckle pictures.

"The public can rest assured that Will Hays knows exactly what he is doing when he lifts the ban that he himself placed upon Arbuckle. He does not act hastily. He does not break faith with the people. He is the soul of honor. His great achievement as head of the film industry is one of the few in the world today that one can denote as public service."

More Food for Thought

William D. Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss., is typical of the small town exhibitor who must depend largely upon the trade paper for advice in the buying of his pictures, exploiting them and generally conducting his playhouse. However, a busy man in a small town exhibitor is, yet he, like hundreds of others, considers it his duty to write to the HERALD with his experience of the BOXOFFICE, a pictures, money-making ideas he runs across and tips on theatre management. Why? Because he profits every week from the tips and ideas other exhibitors write to the HERALD.

To those within the industry who do not realize the great cooperative service given to exhibitors by the HERALD, Mr. Webb's letter on page 64 will prove both interesting and informative.

Selznick to Increase Production on Coast
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—Before his recent departure for New York, Mr. Selznick announced that he would formulate plans while in the East for the addition of another unit to the two companies now working at the United Studios here. The new unit will be of the same magnitude as the organizations now working.

When Mr. Selznick came to West a few months ago, he announced that he would take only the big feature, "Rupert of Hentzau" but later began another all-star picture, "The General's Daughter," now in its fifth week of filming. It is widely rumored that the producer will make Hollywood his production center and at even greater activity will reign at local quarters in the not distant future.

Valter Hiers to Wed
in East On Jan. 12
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—Valter Hiers will be the East on Sunday evening for a very important personal mission, headed "Syracuse, N. Y., where on January 12 will be married to Miss Adah McWil- liams, daughter of famous Mr. and Mrs. William of Syracuse. Immediately after the ceremony the couple plan to return to New York, where they will spend several days before returning to Savannah, Mr. Hiers' home town. They will be back at the studios about January 24, and will take a honeymoon trip with a wedding gift from Jesse L. Lasky and Paramount organization.

Before he leaves here Hiers will have completed his first starring picture, "Mr. Hings Spends His Dime."

New Williams Company Will Market Independent Films
Organizes Under Corporation Name of the "Ritz-Carlton Pictures"—Will Not Establish Exchange System at Present

Ritz-Carlton Pictures, Inc., is the name of the new J. D. Williams enterprise.

According to an announcement last week at the headquarters of the new Williams organization in the Strauss building, New York City, the new company and the forthcoming product are to bear the name of the famous New York and London hotels.

"Ritz-Carlton" Chosen Because of Distinctive Meaning

It is the idea of the Williams organization that the name, "Ritz-Carlton," has come to have a distinct quality meaning and for this reason it was selected out of a long list of suggestions that were considered.

Nothing definite in addition to the name of the new company has as yet been disclosed. Mr. Williams is in Los Angeles and plans to remain there some time. It is known that he is in almost daily conferences with prominent personalites in the producing end of the business and he has let it be known that it is his intention to make certain product announcements within the next few weeks.

Plans No Exchanges Now

It is understood that it is Mr. Williams' idea to create an independent distribution system for the marketing of product of independent producers, directors and stars. It is not believed that at the outset, at any rate, that he will establish his own offices in the various exchange centers but rather that he will effect distributing arrangements with local exchanges already organized.

It has been learned that certain important financial groups in New York have undertaken to finance the new Williams undertaking on a large scale and that the aim is to handle product of outstanding importance. It is the intention to distribute only a very limited number of pictures and each of these will be pictures comparable with the best the market affords.

First Publication Sept. 1

Mr. Williams has let it be known that he expects to have the new enterprise in actual operation by March 1 and that publication of the initial subject will take place about Sept. 1.

"Notoriety" Plays to Big Houses in Week's Run at Newark Strand
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 3.—An unusually successful week is reported by the management of the Strand theatre for the Christmas week period when the production "Notoriety," produced by Will Nigh for Weber & North, was the feature attraction. Doors opened at 10 o'clock in the morning and throughout the days the theatre played to big houses, despite the rush of Christmas shopping in progress. City officials, the press and others evidenced great interest in the feature, and prior to its opening at the Strand, Essex County officials requested it be shown to inmates of the Essex county prison where the Mayor and city dignitaries attended. In exploiting the picture, the newspaper broadsides were handed out as newspapers by newsboys and small books entitled "Famous Victims of "Notoriety"" issued, the booklets being used in department stores where they attracted much attention among women.

Product of Two Units Of Louis B. Mayer to Be Published by Metro
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Assignments have been completed whereby the Reginald Barker productions presented by Louis B. Mayer will be distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation as well as the Fred Niblo productions also presented by Mr. Mayer.

Reginald Barker picture to be issued by Metro will be "Hearts Afire" based on Harold Titus' novel "Timber," with Frank Krenan, Anna Q. Nilsson, and others in the cast. The Famous Mrs. Fair" is the initial Fred Niblo feature to go through Metro. It is the James Purnell stage play and features an all-star cast.

Louis B. Mayer was one of the organizers of Metro as well as its first vice-president, and a member of the board of directors for several years.
Wisconsin Exhibitors Credited With Many Achievements

Adverse Legislative Measures, Sunday Closing Attempts Are Successfully Combatted

(MILWAUKEE, WIS., January 3)—Wisconsin organized exhibitors may look back on 1922 as anything but a year of inaction. Achievements of the state organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin detailed in a review of the year by Walter F. Baumann, executive secretary, show a year of heightened activity on behalf of the association's members.

In his report on the year's activities, Mr. Baumann says: "During the past year the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin have sought to fight in the court the first, as well as many other attempts, of the W. C. C. to close up the theatres on Sundays. The first skirmish in this light was at Lancaster, Wis., which lasted through a fourteen-day jury trial and resulted in a victory for the association. Incidentally the theatre manager implicated in this trial at the time was not a member of the association but appealed to us he was in trouble and didn't know where else to look for help. In such cases have come up since and each one thus far has been successfully combated and Wisconsin thanks the efficient work of the organization which is today singularly free from strict observance of the Sunday closing obsolete blue law. Only a very, very few isolated spots has the Sunday closing law been observed. "During the past legislative season the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin through its joint legislative committee, successfully sought nine adverse legislative bills which included censorship, Sunday enforcement, regulation of admission prices, the S. R. O. bill including state and city license, tax and other pernicious measures, and only during the past two years has been successfully blocking the move of operating opera in the city parks of Milwaukee. It has successfully battled to and some of the bills of the state to resist evil through rigid legislation regulating carnivals and street affairs, etc. All the complaints between the exhibitors and film exchanges and producing elements have been handled by the association during the past year. All the complaints between exhibitors and film companies have been satisfactorily adjusted, which cases involved the actual return or adjustment of over $7,500 in deposits and approximately $1,500 in disputed claims, which are still undetermined due to circumstances over which the association has no control which individually the exhibits would probably never gotten.

"The most noteworthy step of far-reaching influence that the association has taken is the work and effort it put forth which has resulted in impressing the legislature of the state with the knowledge that the exhibitors of Wisconsin have an organization that is efficiently working. That is an effective organization that must be given consideration and recognition. The association has likewise by its effort on behalf of those exhibitors and exchanges which serve its members that the exhibitors have an organization. It has impressed the exchanges and distributors so forcefully that in 90 per cent of the film exchanges they have taken a decided change in the attitude assumed toward our exhibitors.

"Having been variously called upon from our national headquarters to bring pressure to bear on state legislators and congressmen from the State of Wisconsin, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin have definitely impressed those who were members of the state legislature with the fact that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin were efficiently organized. We believe that the association's work has made a valuable contribution to the national association through the channels of national legislators and has thereby contributed in a very real way toward making the M. P. T. O. of America a powerful good and protection to its members, to the papers of the public, and a great benefit to the industry at large.

"In recognition of the services which the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin is rendering the public in general, the state, the newspapers of the state, and especially the city of Milwaukee, where the headquarters of the association are located, in the majority of cases have been very liberal in their support of the policies of the association and have given rather more space to its doings and its messages than ordinarily is customary among daily papers.

"Last but not least, the association has gradually assumed that standing in the eyes of the individual exhibitor of the state that commands his respect and has always stood for fair and square dealings on the part of the individual, a fifty-fifty break for all concerned. It is through strict adherence to this policy that the officers have been able to establish an organization which the exhibitors of the state realize and feel is of real value and real worth to them and it has grown from

Closer Relationship Between Theatre and Exchanges Is Sought

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, addressed a special meeting of the Chicago F. L. M. Board of Trade at the Association headquarters on Friday, December 29th.

Mr. Pettijohn discussed various matters of trade interest and asked the cooperation of the Chicago exchanges in various matters aiming to establish better relations between exhibitors and exchanges.

Schenck Gets Screen Stories While Abroad

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3—Three new picture stories were acquired by Joseph M. Schenck while he was on a vacation in Europe and he now has enough material to keep Norma and Constance Talman busy for some time. Following a completion of "Wisdom in Law," Norma Talmadge will appear in another Robert Hitchens story, "The Garden of Allah," one of Mr. Schenck's new acquisitions, and "Ashes of Vengeance," which he also acquired while abroad.

"Madame Pompadour," a French comedy-drama, is another of his purchase in which Constance Talmadge will be starred.

Files Lien on House Under Way at Albany

They had a Christmas tree n'everything at the holiday party held at the home offices of W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. According to members of the organization—and nobody missed the event—there was nothing lacking, not even Santa Claus who came in with a big bag of presents. The festivities were opened with a delectable dinner served in the reception room, one of the company's All Star Comedies, "A Social Error," being filmed prior to the banquet. Assistant Advertising Manager Gallup sprung a surprise in the form of a minstrel show declared to have been on a par with Lew Dockstader's or George Primrose's famous performances.

SOMEONE is always doing something to "Rudy" Valentino. It was generally supposed that he had been through bother on his last trip to Hollywood by Paramount and a United States Supreme Court judge, who enjoined him from appearing in pictures, staying on screen anywhere or anything else, any time or place, and a few other things during the period of his contract with Paramount. But now there is something else yet again. According to information dealt out by Valentino himself, a pretender to the throne is in operation. Following is "Rudy's" letter telling about it:

Editor EXHIBITORS HERALD
1476 Broadway, New York City.

Dear Sir: I am informed that one, Antonio Muzii, of 506 West 112th street, N. Y. C., has been representing and holding himself out to be my brother. I feel it my duty to inform you that the said Muzii is in no way related to me.

You are requested to take no advertising or other consequence of any kind toward Muzii and that is under the name of Valentino.

Very truly yours,
Rudolph Valentino.

"Rudy" says he has but one brother and that he is now and always has been in Italy.

The idea of Valentino's perturbation is that a young man giving his name as Valentino is working as an extra in a picture being made by one of the large film companies.

And an interesting thing brought out by Valentino's letter is that he has changed the spelling of the first section of his name. When he first commenced to gain fame on the screen his name was "Rudolph." About a year ago or a little less, urgent notices were sent out by Famous Player-Lasky that on the authority of Valentino himself the name was not "Rudolph," but "Rudolph" and had always been "Rudolph." The explanation was that when he first entered pictures some casting director mis-spelled his name, and that since then he had gained a modicum of fame, he desired that posterity should know him in his true colors, as it were, and this could only be done by knowing him as "Rudolph."

The above letter, which investigation disclosed was signed by the good right hand of the languid layer of the screen, bears the signature "Rudolph Valentino." So it is to be presumed that as he knows how to spell his own name, it must be "Rudolph."

It is to be hoped if some one is preparing to chisel a name below Valentino's niche in the hall of fame, Valentino's wishes are the mainstay of the front end of his name will be taken into consideration.

Or maybe Valentino aims to get so far away from Paramount that he won't even have the same orthography.

So you can help yourself to either "Rudolph" or "Rudolph."

GORDON WHITE, of Educational, in writing the synopsis of "Hazel from Hollywood," one of the new ChristieComedies, says:

"Movie-struck Hazel Nutt was only a wiregirl in a New York studio but her betters to Mother led Zeka, her sweethearth, to think she might marry Wally Reid or Bull Montana. The true love of her own home town sent Zeka to bring her back home.

Governor Al. Smith's induction into office had to struggle along as best it could without the prestige of the presence of Howard Dietz and Eddie Bonis, the "Gallagher and Shean" of the film industry. At the last minute they decided not to go to Allany for the inaugural ceremonies.

Bonis indignantly denies that the decision not to attend was reached after he had read in the newspapers that Izzy Einstein had taken a battalion of seventy-five prohibitionists to Albany for the purpose of making that city an arid Sahara. In spite of the handicap the inaugural was pulled off with a fair degree of success.

WILLIAM A. BRADY, former head of the N. A. M. P, lectured last Saturday at Wanamaker's Auditorium on "Great Actors I Have Known." He has known Mr. Brady does not contemplate a lecture on "Great Picture Producers Who Have Known Me."

The Associated Booking Corporation will, this week, move its offices from 220 West 42nd street to 1650 Broadway. One member explained the move by saying that Lou Blumenthal was getting weary traveling from his office at 1650 Broadway to the A. B. C. offices, and wanted the latter nearer home.

And speaking of the A. B. C, there are rumors that a few of the members are dissatisfied with what they have been asked to pay for "Tess of the Storm Country," which was looked for the entire association. It is not unlikely that a readjustment of prices will be asked. So far as known the A. B. C. has closed for but the one production.

And the two largest holiday wreaths Broadway has even known hung all last week on the fronts of the River and Richthofen. Each is more than fifteen feet in diameter and is decorated with colored lamps, presenting a brilliant effect.

"We have very well put a Christmas tree in front of each theatre," said Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, "but we did the best thing. And believing there is as much greenery in those wreaths as there is in a pretty big Christmas tree."

HARRY BURRMAN has been touring the safety deposit vaults to see where he can find and rent the largest box. And the why for is that all of the members of the force of the district manager for Paramount got together and presented the popular "Bux" with a Christmas present of a chest of 800 pieces of silver. Thomas Meighan made the presentation speech. Harry says he thinks so much of the chest of silver that he has to stand guard over it, and wants a safety deposit box to put it in occasionally while he grabs off a few winks of sleep.

Someone really ought to chide a big fellow like Will Page for picking on a little fellow like Pete Smith. "When Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" opened in New York, Pete ran an ad in all the papers under a "Personal" heading, announcing that a $100 bill picture still returned to the theatre would pay $50 for five seats to the opening night. And it sure showed that seats were in demand. Now comes along all the newspapers, a letter for seats for the opening night of Nazimova's "Salome" at the Criterion.

And come to think it over, Jack Lloyd pulled the same thing on the opening of "Orphans of the Storm," so it is to be hoped they all get a new one.

JOHN SPARO.

Reginald Barker

REGINALD BARKER, noted as a director who has never produced a failure, has made his biggest dramatic spectacle in "Hearts Aflame," his first all-star special for Louis B. Mayer.

Mr. Barker's name has always stood for big pictures, such as "The Storm," "The Old Nest," and "Godless Men." Part of the credit for this may be due to his Scotch ancestry. When he starts on a big project he keeps at it until it is completed, and he is not afraid to tackle anything in the picture-making line. With the tenacity of the Scot, he establishes a grip on his work that nothing short of supernatural power could break.

Although born in Winnipeg, Canada, Reginald Barker became a resident of Scotland before he was four months old. After nine years, during which time he attended private schools and was tutored in Bothwell, his father brought him to California, where he completed his education.

He became an actor at the old Burbank theatre in Los Angeles at the age of 15. At 16 he wrote, produced, and starred in a play of his own. At 17 he was stage manager and actor with a traveling repertoire company. At 18 he directed his first big play, and his 19th birthday found him stage manager for Henry Miller in New York. With this remarkable foundation for the years of stage experience that followed, it is little wonder that Mr. Barker acquires the dramatic and technical knowledge which have won him recognition as one of the foremost directors in the motion picture industry. He began his study career with Thomas H. Ince. Among the stars who have made their screen debut under him are Frank Keenan, George Beban, Jesse Hayakawa, William Hart and Willard Mack.—J. S.
New Year Brings Its Usual Harvest of Censorship Bills

Industry in Missouri, Idaho, Nebraska and Other States Will Be Called Upon to Wage War Against the Reform Element

Nineteen twenty-three will not be without its troubles and its difficulties.

The new year brings with it the convening of legislators in a number of states and this naturally means the renewal of the industry's fight against reform measures, such as censorship, blue laws, tax legislation and the like.

Organizations Prepared to Combat Reform Activities

Early reports from legislative centers indicate that censorship again will be the most important question for the industry to solve. In many commonwealths state organizations already have their machines in readiness for immediate action. Live campaigns have been mapped out and in many instances these have been launched.

A bright spot is found in New York, however, for Governor Alfred E. Smith, in his message to the legislature on January 3, urged immediate repeal of the censorship law of that state. The fact that the senate is Democratic lends optimism to the situation.

Reports on the censorship situation in other states follows:

Idaho Fears Enactment

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SPOKANE, WASH., Jan. 3.—Idaho will have a strict censorship bill introduced in the next state legislature this winter, with strong probability that it will pass. Barring press dispatches from all sections of the state.

All women's clubs of the state have been called upon to support the bill, sponsored by the united women's clubs of Boise, the capital. As Idaho has always leaned toward reform legislation, regardless of its freak nature, passage of the bill is feared by exhibitors of the state.

The bill is modeled after the measure passed by the Nebraska legislature and is more than ordinarily strict and has more than broad wording. A state board would be formed to pass on all films, with a fine of $50 to $500 and sentences of from one to six months provided for exhibitors showing films not approved by the board or showing pictures including scenes which have been censored.

Exchanges Plan Action

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ST. LOUIS, MO., Jan. 3.—The impending danger of state censorship was the subject of a special meeting of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade on Friday, December 29.

Will H. Hayes' action in the Arbuckle case has burst the censorship issue wide open in Missouri and the State Sunday School Association, the Committee of Fifty and various other organizations have seized the opportunity to boost state control of films.

At Freemont meeting the exchange managers decided to have each man wire his home office officials informing them in detail of conditions here. Similar wires will be sent to Hays and his organization.

Today the danger looms up more threatening than at any time in the state's history. The new legislature convenes early in January and the Committee of Fifty already has drafted a censorship bill for presentation to the lawmakers.

In the meantime the reformers are canvassing every legislator and have urged every church member affiliated with their organizations to make the senators and representatives demanding censorship.

Socialists Oppose It

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

FITCHBURG, MASS., Jan. 3.—All forms of censorship are opposed in resolutions adopted at the national convention of the Young People's Socialist League, meeting here.

Executive Frames Bill

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LINCOLN, NEB., Jan. 3.—Lieut. Gov. P. A. Barrows, who goes out of office this week, has framed a censorship bill which he expects to have introduced in the state legislature this session. Barrows was the running mate of Governor S. R. McKelvie, who vetoed a censorship bill two years ago.

DeMille Rescues Aid When Boat Blows Up

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—A thrill that will not be a part of any picture was experienced by Cecil B. DeMille, Paramount director general and his mechanic, Al Fear, when back fire from the carburetor of a speed boat they were using to look for a pilot boat that was reported six miles away from Los Angeles, spread to the gasoline tank, and both men were hurled into the water. The mechanic lost consciousness and was saved by Mr. DeMille, who held him up until help arrived.

The boat was entirely destroyed. Fear, who regained consciousness shortly afterward, was found to be uninjured, while Mr. DeMille's eyebrows and eye lashes had been burned off. They were preparing for a race to be held under the auspices of the California Yacht Club.

Buys Trimble Pictures

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 3.—Rights for this section to the two-reel Arthur Trimble features from the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., of Hollywood, of which Morris R. Schlepke is head, have been acquired by Harry Charnos of Standard Film Service Company.

Twelve of these short subjects constitute the series.

“Teleview” Gives Appearance of Depth in Film

Company Owning Device Plans to Equip Theatres in Some of Principal Cities of Country

(New to Exhibitors Herald)

New York, January 3.—New York got its first view last week of the Teleview, a patented device which gives the third dimension to motion pictures—in other words applying the old time stereooscope principle to the screen.

The Selwyn theatre, which had been closed for the past two weeks for the purpose of fitting the house up with the device, was opened to a large invitation audience last Wednesday.

As a novelty the Teleview is a remarkable invention and produces some startling results, but many picture men who have attended the showings at the Selwyn, fail to see that it has a place in the general run of motion picture theatres.

The Teleview is a device containing a rapidly revolving shutter. It is about six inches in diameter and is attached to the side of the seat by a flexible cable which permits of its being adjusted in front of the observers’ eyes. The observer views the pictures through a small window in the Teleview, large enough to allow free view with both eyes.

The pictures shown are made with a camera having two lenses, and the effect when thrown on the screen is the same as in a still picture when the object has moved. The Teleview brings these two outlines together in the same manner as did the old fashioned stereoscope, causing the objects to appear startlingly near, or far away, according to their relative position in the picture.

It is said not to be the intention of the inventors or the company owning the device, to attempt to apply it to the picture industry as now existing, but that Teleview theatres will be established in several of the principal cities of the country.

The fact that films made for the Teleview cannot be shown by ordinary projection, coupled with the cost of installation of the device, in the opinion of many film men, will prevent the device from being applied to general use.

Bray Nature Pictures and Magazine Sold in Two Eastern Districts

(Ne w to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Distribution arrangement for the Bray Magazine and Bray Nature Pictures, in the New England and New Jersey territories have been acquired by Bray Productions, Inc. The film will be issued by Motion Picture Distributing Corporation, Boston, of which George M. A. Fecke is president, in the New England territory. Rights for the New Jersey district have been acquired by Renowned Pictures Corporation.

The Bray Magazine will be published every two weeks and the Bray Nature Pictures every four weeks. Prominent scientists are preparing scenarios for the Nature pictures, it is said, and these are being photographed under their direction.

According to the company much interest has been aroused and many inquiries from territories received on both subjects.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By C. W. Glass
(Star Theatre, Trenton, Tenn.)

I read every week the “Money Making Ideas” by exhibitors. So I decided to try a stunt:

The school children seldom come to my show except Friday and Saturday nights. So in order to get the children interested, I give free a 5-cent school tablet. I have a boy to hand out the tablets when the ticket girl takes up the ticket.

I buy the tablets with the movie stars on the back and buy them in quantities of 300 so I can get an extra low price of 2½ cents each. I have been doing this every Tuesday night and I find that the kids all need a tablet and get their parents to come with them. I only charge 10 cents and find that my business is getting better each week. I believe the tablets are doing the work. I use a serial and a five reel feature on this night.

By R. D. Trautman
(Ethel Theatre, Ethel, Mo.)

When the dark clouds gather and the rain comes pouring down and everything is blue, meet your patrons with a hearty smile and a warm welcome. Make them feel that you are interested in them. Never show yourself blue or out of sorts although you may lop. Conquer those slow nights with a smile and keep smiling.

“IF Winter Comes” to Open in New York Soon Says Fox Corporation

(Ne w to Exhibitors Herald)

New York, Jan. 3.—Fox Film Corporation announces that its screen version of A. S. M. Hutchinson’s dramatic open, “IF Winter Comes,” will open at a Broadway theatre soon, the exact date to be given within a few days.

The major portion of the scenes of this picture were taken in England under the direction of Harry Millarde, who was assisted by the author. It is said that the picture is a faithful version of the book.

Neilan Author of His Next Goldwyn Picture

(Ne w to Exhibitors Herald)

Los Angeles, Jan. 3.—“The Ingrate,” written by Marshall Neilan and adapted to the screen by Carey Wilson, will be Mr. Neilan’s second production in association with Goldwyn. Hobar Bosworth and Claire Windsor, Bessie Love, Raymond Griffith, George Cooper and Tom Gallaher have all already been chosen for the cast.

The story of “The Ingrate” is said to be a study of the physiology of the physician’s work and his service to humanity. The director will rehearse the complete picture before beginning to film it—an unusual method of procedure in the industry.

Universal Signs Kerry To Five-Year Contract

(Ne w to Exhibitors Herald)

Los Angeles, Jan. 3.—Norman Kerry, actor, received a five-year contract from Universal as a Christmas present, which marks his ascent to stardom.

Kerry, who came to the coast from New York to enter an Universal’s production of “Merry-Go-Round,” finished his work in the big special recently. He will shortly begin work in “The Hunchback of Notre Dame,” in which he will essay the role of Phoebus.

Selznick Departments Move to Home Offices

(Ne w to Exhibitors Herald)

New York, Jan. 2.—Offices of the advertising, art and publicity departments of Select Pictures Corporation have been moved from the Hooven Building to the fourteenth floor of the home offices of the company at 729 Broadway.

This will bring Randall M. White, L. F. Guimond and George W. Bonte into closer contact with the organization, first therin a plan of intensive efforts on new productions.

Heads Goldwyn Sales In Eastern Territory

(Ne w to Exhibitors Herald)

New York, Jan. 3.—David Rosen gartner has been named Metropolitan sales manager of Goldwyn Pictures by S Eckman, Jr., district manager, with supervision over exchanges in New York, Albany and New Haven.

For ten years Mr. Rosengartner was supervisor in the Brooklyn district for Fox Film Corporation.
4. Staff Morale

On Christmas Eve, off-night of the theatre year, we denied ourselves the warmth of the Yuletide fireside to mend an unavoidable break in our picture observations by viewing "The Sin Flood," at a neighborhood theatre. Our Christmas spirit was severely jolted when the projectionist, no doubt with prospect of performing seasonable ceremonies belatedly, calmly omitted the third reel of the feature, hastening his leavetaking possibly ten minutes.

Familiar with the situation, we found it possible to forgive the projectionist personally, and to condone the early retirement of the house manager which had made it possible, but the majority of those present simply judged Goldwyn's picture hopelessly rotten and departed in disgust.

Neither Goldwyn nor the theatre deserve the ill repute into which the projectionist brought them with these earnest picture followers. Yet it is very clear that the fault lies less with the projectionist than with the management that had failed to supply the training which would have prevented the occurrence. It is with this training that the fourth blank in this better theatre platform is concerned.

It is notable in the history of nations, as of all institutions, that the successful leader has been the man whose followers have supported him through love of service, through union of interests, rather than for compensation. It is well known that the really successful exhibitor is backed by a theatre personnel as keenly interested in the welfare of that theatre and as jealous of its good name as the exhibitor himself.

Had the management of the theatre visited on Christmas Eve given to its personnel the slightest consideration beyond the payroll the third reel of "The Sin Flood" would not have been omitted. Several regular patrons would not have suffered insult to intelligence and future Goldwyn pictures would not have been regarded with asham and possibly shunned.

Various prominent exhibitors conduct staff schools, classes in management and techinic. These are half-way measures, good in the degree of their influence but probably handicapped by their obviousness. The truly successful exhibitor does more than preach to his staff—he takes its members into his confidence, makes his interest their interest, tells them merely what to do but why. He is not a boss: he is the chief employee of the public whose their staff members are made to understand employs all of them.

Such an exhibitor may leave his theatre on Christmas Eve or at any other time, for an evening or a month, with perfect confidence that his interests will be guarded as carefully as though he were present. More showmen of this type will mean more friends for the theatre and motion pictures.

HOW MUCH IS ENOUGH?

How much is enough to do for a picture? Is anything enough? Harry Van Noord (Riviera theatre, Anderson, Ind.) used one of the best lobbies ever produced for "Manslaughter," but did not consider it enough. The story of the additional things that he did is a momentous one in itself.

His "Theatre Letter," upon a subsequent page, tells about it.

BETTER ADVERTISING NEEDED.

Newspaper advertising is better than at any previous theatre period, yet it is not good enough. There is no "good enough" in theatre advertising.

This week "The Theatre" inaugurates a new service in a double page spread of newspaper advertisements selected from the newspapers of the nation. All readers are invited to use this service to the best possible advantage and to contribute to these pages.

ANALYSIS PAYS POPULAR.

Owing to the warm reception accorded the Exploitation Digest published in "Newspictures" last week by exhibitor readers a similar summary is offered in this issue.

SPACE WORTH WHILE.

Balaban & Katz used three columns, page deep, in Chicago newspapers to wish the populace a Happy New Year.
MILWAUKEE’S FAME, dimmed by constitutional amendment, is perpetuated to a degree by the splendid advertising of Sax’s Strand. The above is a five column ad for the opening of the theatre, the advertising being for Pathe’s “Dr. Jack.” The picture is receiving exceptional treatment everywhere it is shown. The Strand ad is no exception. The copy warrants reading. Note the schedule of starting hours under Harold Lloyd head.

All the space registers in Stanley N. Chambers’ advertisements for the Miller theatre, Wichita. Reproductions above show a two-column strip for Paramount’s “The Cowboy and the Lady” and a three-column upright for Metro’s “June Madness.” No one spots up white space with outline cuts more effectively than Mr. Chambers and no one writes more fitting copy. For the Paramount bill a pretentious tone is carried throughout, while the Metro program, frankly a jazz confection, is described in the jazziest of jazz phraseology. “When you’re west of the Mississippi it’s the Miller” is Mr. Chambers’ favorite house line, and his advertising bears it out.

ORIENTAL ATMOSPHERE is pungently present in the four-column ad of the Kinema, Los Angeles, for the Al Lichtman feature, "Shadows," yet cast and author do not forfeit prominence.

BIG EXPENSE INVOLVED in the construction of such an eight-column flat as is reproduced above, used by the Columbia theatre, Seattle, for Universal's "The Long Chance," is justified by the prominence gained when, as in this instance, the ad is given the bottom of an important page which is dominated emphatically. The Columbia follows through on the indicated policy, giving exceptional house exploitation as well to the picture and exercising extreme care in presentation.

ANNOUNCING A CHANGE OF PRICES BUT NO CHANGE OF POLICY

A STATEMENT BY THE CIRCLE THEATRE MANAGEMENT OF IMMEDIATE IMPORTANCE TO THE PUBLIC

It had to come!

We are faced with a condition—not a change! Rather the statement of the facts, the situation to be faced, the figures to be submitted, the facts and figures were submitted but a change was necessary.

Then the procedure of the Circle, it has always been, is part of the policy. It is a practice, as it is a principle, that the newspapers are used to the extent that a page can be devoted to a feature. We at least try to make the page work as a page. The change itself is justified, it is an expense, and it is a necessary expense.

The page is designed to look as it is. It is not for the sake of the page itself. It is not a change of the policy that we wish to announce. We wish to announce that we are making a change in our policy, that we are making a change in a matter of absolute necessity, that we are making a change in order to properly present the pictures of that nature and to make them look as they are designed to be seen.

The argument was made that the page was not going to look as it was intended to be seen. The page was not going to look as it was intended to be seen. The page was not going to look as it was intended to be seen. The page was not going to look as it was intended to be seen. The page was not going to look as it was intended to be seen.

We are not going to make the page look as it is. We are not going to make the page look as it is. We are not going to make the page look as it is. We are not going to make the page look as it is. We are not going to make the page look as it is.

COMPOMBOARD, PAINT AND SKILL produced this front for the run of "Lorna Doone," First National, at the Orpheum Pocatello, Idaho. The front was constructed of compomboard, only the cutout in mid-distance being from stock material. The whole was treated with gray paint, kalsomine being used for the floor, with black lining indicating stone effect. The big lettering for the title of the picture was in red. The structure was placed half way between the street line and the entrance to the theater proper, the box office setting out in front. The essentials listed above as responsible for the display are invaluable lobby requisite.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN! signs adorned each entrance to the Strand, Knoxville, Tenn., while the lobby housed this setting for "The Fast Mail," Fox. Through a triple tie-up an automobile dealer loaned a car for display in the millinery window also advertising the picture. The lobby piece was done in brilliant colors and the ticket booth was trimmed to represent a railroad station.

A THREE-WAY TIE-UP by which an Oriental dealer who wouldn't lend his window was persuaded to supply materials to a department store that would, resulted in this display for "The Young Rajah," Paramount, obtained by Russell Moon, exploiter, for the Bijou, New Haven. An old Mid advertisement provided the frame for the Valentino cutout. A Christmas tree light set was used to illuminate the arch.
ST. PAUL STOPPED AND LOOKED at the Capitol float for "The Prisoner of Zenda," Metro, a photograph of which appears above. The prison was eight feet long by five feet high and cutouts were used for the reproduction of the duel scene from the picture which is depicted. Street units of this class present a strong argument for the development of quality exploitation.

ALL OVER PORTLAND, Ore., the Majestic theatre hailed "Dr. Jack," Pathé, with the 24-sheet street car shown the above illustration. The Majestic lobby display during the picture was shown in this department last week. The paper is exceptionally well designed for the purpose.

FOUR THOUSAND SHEETS announced the coming of "The Prisoner of Zenda," Metro, to the Palace, Dallas, five sheets being devoted to this spread running from street to street. All who traveled the street visible at the right had an obstructed view of the spread. An available wall suitable for such treatment regularly should be secured by contract.

Personal Accounts of Constructive Showmanship
Contributed by Readers of "Exhibitors Herald"

Exploits Good Ones by Quotes
From "Herald"

Exhibitor reports to "What the Picture Did For Me" are used by Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill., himself a regular contributor, to designate specifically his really good pictures. His letter and pictures tell how.

THEATRE EDITOR, Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

I am enclosing pictures taken showing comments cut from Exhibitors Herald and used to advertise pictures. It certainly helps a lot, for it convinces all that it is a really good picture. I only use it for the really good ones and everybody realizes it is that way.

It helps to thank Exhibitors Herald for the many helps and interesting reading it has given me. I consider it the best of three magazines that I take.

Bert Norton,
Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.

DEAR MR. NORTON:

We are very glad that the reports serve you so adequately in the important office of emphasizing the really good pictures. Certainly you have hit upon the proper occasion for applying them, as too common use of the quotations obviously would reduce their effectiveness.

The photographs are reproduced in this issue and undoubtedly will serve as a model for other showmen who adopt your plan. — W. R. W.

Van Noy Backs Motor Disaster Lobby Display

Harry Van Noy, Riviera theatre, Anderson, Ind., contributes a steril lobby display for "Manslaughter" to the present issue, an event in itself important, then writes a description of a supporting campaign adding the touch of the truly progressive showman. Mr. Van Noy believes in following through. His letter reads:

THEATRE EDITOR, Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

I am sending you separate cover photos of "Manslaughter" stunt under marquee in front of theatre. The Buck people, Mr. Waddell, furnished a new W-5. We made a demand, borrowed a motorcycle and made two signs reading:

The Driver of This Car Did Not Drive Carefully, She May Be Convicted of Manslaughter.

We started this Saturday morning and from the time we put this stunt to working we had a large crowd around all day. Also all day Sunday, the play date, with crowds looking this over. This proved to be a wonderful stunt.

Had cards, 22x28, printed, reading: "Through reckless Driving You May Be Charged With Manslaughter. Three Children Run Down in One Week. One Killed. Drive Carefully. City Ordinance. Drive Carefully."

We put this over the city on telephone posts and around the schools and tied up with a police tape. In some places we were able to put them all over. This city will not allow cards on posts, but they allowed this one.

Had 1,500 stickers, circle, reading: "Reckless Driving May Mean Manslaughter. Drive Carefully." Put these on the windshield of 1,500 cars. Everywhere you looked you could see a "Manslaughter" sign.

We mailed 1,200 letters on this picture, with 300 postcards. Also had a big banner across the street reading in big letters: Manslaughter. Drive Carefully. Went over fine.

Harry Van Noy,
Riviera Theatre, Anderson, Ind.

DEAR MR. VAN NOY:

There's been a great deal of picturaceous exploitation done for "Manslaughter," but we don't think anybody has produced a more tragic looking lobby. It's not at all queer that the crowds came, looked and bought tickets. But it is for the follow up, rather than the big individual bit, that we believe most credit is due you. A great many would have regarded that lobby as such client unto itself and rested there. Only a dyed-in-the-wool progressive would have gotten to the lengths you did in supporting it. Congratulations. — W. R. W.

“Can’t Afford It” Plea Fails Hayes Patrons

"I can't afford it" is undeniably the most formidable excuse for non-attendance that a patron may offer an exhibitor. Patrons of the Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich., pleaded poverty to Larry Hayes, manager, but without avail. He simply removed the poverty. His letter tells how.

THEATRE EDITOR, Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed is one that may help some of the boys. There is no limit, of course, to the amount of film used or how low the price may be set. In my case, however, my regular price is 30 cents and I figured that a lot of folks were getting out of the habit of coming to shows as they felt they couldn't afford it.

Tonight, the night after a double holiday and usually a blue one, we did a nice business, had a good bunch of people in, and I'm wondering if price doesn't cut a figure after all.

At many films, this, and if it will solve some other fellow's problem they're welcome.

Happy New Year.

Larry Hayes,

DEAR MR. HAYES:

Unquestionably your letter will solve some other fellow's problem. One fellow in particular is Philip Rand, who complains in a report to "What the Picture Did For Me" this week that he can't get them in, even with double programs. Certainly your stunt looks like a logical one for him and others similarly bent to try out.

At any rate, it's patently a good idea, and we thank you for sending it along. The same to you, W. R. W.

Browne Policy Takes Care of The “Kiddies”

Care of the children's entertainments requirements is a fixed item in the theatre policy of Frank L. Browne, who tells of fifteen years' experience in the following letter. If there are any who still doubt the child's claim to theatre consideration, his persuasion is merely matter of reading this letter and scanning the accompanying photographs.

THEATRE EDITOR, Exhibitors Herald.

Dear Sir:

Well, my "Kiddies" Thanksgiving Part is over and it sure was one grand and glorious success. Everyone interested

Introducing

"COMMUNITY NIGHT"

Community Life coming Tuesday, Dec. 26th, and continuing as long as the advertising limits allow that they can be played. Theatre people have noticed that the more the community life is central to the show the more they are enjoying the “Community Night” feature. This is, we believe, what makes the show of this type so much better, and which makes it more likely that the show is going to succeed.

A. L. MIDDLETON, Grand theatre, DeQueen, Ark., tells in his letter, this week, how he exploited a Universal serial against a tent show with big ballyhoo and street band and made a big opening. The picture shows his emergency squad, an aggregation any live showman can duplicate.

COMMUNITY NIGHT announcement used by Larry Hayes, Dawn theatre, Hillsdale, Mich., described in his letter herewith, "Outcast," Paramount, as the feature.

A. G. MILLER exploited a substituted Paramount picture, "Chickens," so well that it made money, and tells how in this issue and his letter.

"WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME" reports from this paper are used by Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill., to emphasize his big attractions, in the above cases First National's "Smith Through" and "Alan, Woman, Marriage." His letter tells how his people have come to know that when reports are posted the picture is considered by him one of the really good attractions.

IT LOOKED LIKE A TRAGEDY to Anderson, Ind., pedestrians, who stopped, investigated, and found it to be Harry Van Noy's exploitation for "Manslaughter," Paramount, showing at the Riviera. Mr. Van Noy's letter tells how he got the display, as well as how he followed it with intensive additional advertising. Other showmen can use the same methods.
the project was extremely happy and satisfied.

The theatre received 22 stories since Nov. 7, 20 of them on the front page. I am sending you under separate cover the stories which appeared the day of the party and the day after, which together with the others I sent you pretty near gives you all the particulars. Total free publicity received, 165 inches.

I am also sending you several photos taken of the event. The attraction was Strongheart in "Brawn of the North," and it goes without saying that my week has been a banner one. How could it be otherwise with all the publicity I received? The business has been so big that I am holding it over for another week.

In addition to the publicity received on account of the "party" I put out 100 regular half-sheet cards and 100 small "special" 5x8 window cards and just a small amount of newspaper advertising, believing that the party publicity would about let everyone know all there was to be told. It worked out just as I suspected.

These Thanksgiving parties are a regular thing with me and I get a lot of pleasure out of them and the theatre gets a lot of publicity and good will. Whatever theatre I happen to be running or whatever city I have happened to be in I have always arranged to take care of the kiddies. This one was my Fifteenth Annoyance Party, although at various other times when the show or occasion permits I give some sort of a party along the same lines.

FRANK L. BROWNE,
Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal.

To: DEAR MR. BROWNE,
If after fifteen years of attention to the little folks' happiness you are still convinced that the theatre should be so managed as to care for their entertainment needs properly, surely not even the most persistent of that dwindling minority who preach an "adult-only" doctrine can longer tenet the opposite position. Some such statement as yours has been needed for a long time, for more argument weights not against the pre-judice of this element.

But that is really beside the point, the essential point being that you managed a big undertaking in a big way and collected the big returns merited. The story is excellent, even if we are rarely in presenting it, and we thank you for it, as well as for the photo of that big "Eternal Flame" sheet that we have reproduced to complete your former letter. We are anxiously waiting to hear what you did for the Christmas-New Year holiday.——W. R. W.

Contributors,
Make Room for Brother Lyman

Joseph Lyman, Princess theatre, White Hall, III., this week joins the ranks of "Theatre Letter" writers.

Welcome, Mr. Lyman.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

DEAR Mr. Lyman:

Hereewith enclosed find photo of window I used on "Slim Shoulders." It's the window of a department store across the street from the Princess.

FRANK L. BROWNE, Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal., who produced one of the biggest original sheets ever prepared by an exhibitor for "The Eternal Flame." First National, supplies the photogaph from which the above cut is made. A letter on the campaign was a big feature of a recent issue.

If it's worth while I would like to see same in your splendid HERALD.

JOSEPH LYMAN,
Princess Theatre, White Hall, Ill.

DEAR MR. LYMAN:

Your window photograph is reproduced here with. Indeed it is worth while. When men showmen use such methods, in the smaller cities as well as the large ones, business will be better all around.

Glad to have your initial contribution. Must we not have more, regularly?——W. R. W.

Miller Scores Knockout Over Old Man Gloom

"Old Man Gloom," inseparable companion of the last minute film substitution, went down to ignoble defeat at the hands of A. C. Miller. Miller Theatre, Atkinson, Neb., in a one round bo TRAFFIC WAS KNOTTED when the Junior Naval Reserve parade headed by Wesley Barry, star of Warner Brothers' "Heroes of the Street," reached the entrance to the New York Strand. Several hundred members of the organization marched and various notables figured in the welcoming exercises. An invitation screening of a feature picture in the Reserve makes duplication of the stunt at other points practicable.

Serial Policy Brings Results
For Middleton

A. L. Middleton, whose chatty letter follows, is a regular reporter to "What the Picture Did for Me!" and knows picture values. He uses serials and exploits them profitably. His letter is of great value at a time when opinion as to the commercial status of the chapter play as a theatre investment is at wide variance.

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD.
Dear Sir:
I had "The Jailbird" booked, and at the last minute they substituted "Chickens." In order to get out a crowd I painted a banner hung on the chicken car. Did it get results?
I'll say it did. Enclosed find snapshot taken of car.
A. G. MILLER,
Miller theatre, Atkinson, Neb.

EAR MR. MILLER:
That's resourcefulness. Resourcefulness is America's specialty. Ergo: That's the American spirit, that spirit will take care of the American theatre, even reformers, freak legislators and all and any attacks. Keep us in touch with what you're doing regardly. And here's hoping you always do as well.
W. R. W.

CHRISTMAS WINDOWS are best, doubtless, so the Rivoli theatre, Los Angeles, obtained use of this one to advertise "East Is West," First National, being the tie-up on a confection of Oriental name.

I said, "All who want to see the first episode of this serial come to the theatre immediately after school Monday afternoon." They came and fought over me to see what I wanted them to do. The band from the tent show was playing on the square. I held them with banners hoisted in the air until the band quit playing, then gave one a bell, one a megaphone, and several others heralds, and with two boys on horses with banners started up the street. Before we had gone many blocks at least fifty of them had picked up old tin pails, buckets, etc., and put, rocks in them and we made some noise.

Up one street and down another until 3:45. Lined them up on the square, gave them their free tickets, taking plenty of time to attract all passersby, and at 4:15 a hundred were in my lobby and at 4:15 o'clock they could not get where they could even see the screen.
I enclosed a picture of my School-Kid-Tin-Can-Jazz-Band, which I use only when in a fight. I find the kids properly handled are the greatest asset to exploitation in the world, so I save them for emergencies.
Incidentally, I have run the fifth episode of this serial and it is holding up fine, though I expect it to flop for it hasn't got the stuff in it to hold up 18 weeks unless it gets better.
After doing everything else I knew to do on "Fool's Paradise," I got an old hard-looking mule, put a sign on either side of him reading: "Everybody Will..."

"Manslaughter," Paramount, at the Victory, Kokomo.

"My Wild Irish Rose," Vitagraph, drew this lobby.

"A Fool There Was," Fox, was exploited as above

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," Arrow, looked the part.
Due to the warm reception accorded the "Exploitation Digest" offered by this department in last week's issue the scheme is followed out again herewith. New Year's, making the second successive short week, is responsible for omission of analysis on some newsmfilm editions of the week.

The matter included in this digest will be found in all editions of the newsmfilm concerns, territorial specials being omitted from discussion.

DIGEST of PICTURES of the WEEK

THERE is quite a lot of interesting little news to start off the new year with. For instance the recent decision of those Ohio film censors. They want to bar all films that picture the eternal triangle love interest scenes. What a sight a lot of the pictures will be when the censor board gets through with them if that decision holds good. It's a good thing Shakespeare and those other playwrights who were so fond of the triangle plot sold their stuff early in the game.

England is congratulating America upon having a Will Hays in the picture industry. The Kinematograph Weekly says: "We are not overlooking the fact that Hays has done a great deal to enhance the standing of the American industry with the better classes of the public, and that the reputation of our own theatres with that class could easily be greatly improved. If we can devise a method by which to improve it, exhibitors certainly ought to take their share in the work and the cost, as much as they would derive the chief benefit by a vastly increased public. . . . There are perfectly plain reasons why whole classes of the more intelligent public remain outside the cinema. The films are not good enough for them. The music is not good enough for them in a large proportion of halls. The advertising matter and methods of most establishments are calculated to repel intelligent people. It does not take a Superman to suggest remedies; all that is needed is the general application of the commonsense which has kept a certain proportion of the halls nicely filled through the worst of the slump. Better films, better management and better publicity will not be created by a new association, nor a figurehead, but by individual enterprise to which a constitutionally appointed body such as the Trade Council can certainly give a useful lead, through a properly organized exploitation and publicity department."

"THE BEAUTIFUL AND DAMNED" (Warner Bros.) founded on F. Scott Fitzgerald's popular novel makes capital entertainment. The story is good and well told and the whole is well acted and carefully directed. You have good talking points here, the author's name, pretty Marie Prevost capably supported by Kenneth Harlan, Tully Marshall and other well known players.

"LOVE IN THE DARK" (Metro) presents Viola Dana in a crook reformation story that differs but slightly from hundreds of other similar tales. It was directed by Harry Beaumont, from a story by John Morosco. "Page 4 Tim O'Brien." It has comedy touches and not a little pathos. An excellent cast assists Miss Dana.

"MINNIE" (First National) is one of those "different" screen plays that Marshall Neiman excels in. It holds the interest throughout its seven reels by reason of being a well directed, evenly balanced little "ugly duckling" tale that touches the heart. Beatrice Joy and Matt Moore have the principal roles.

"THREE WHO PAID" (Fox) is a mildly interesting Western story, full of sudden deaths, strenuous fights and a fine finish. Dustin Farnum is the featured player with Bessie Love, Frank Campeau, Fred Kohler and Robert Agnew in support. Adequate locations and some beautiful features mark this Colin Campbell production.

"THE INNER MAN" (Playgoers) is a good program feature based on a novel by Charles Mackay and featuring the cast Wyndham Standing, Dorothy Mackail and J. Barney Sherry. With comedy and drama ably interwoven it should prove satisfactory entertainment. It was made by the Syracuse Motion Picture Company and the locale of the story is the Blue Ridge Mountains.

"PAWN TICKET 210" (Fox) is an entertaining little feature, adapted from an old play by David Belasco and Clay M. Greene. Shirley Mason, as a whimsical little waif, has the leading role, and a small but competent cast appears in support. It will delight the Mason fans and no disappoint others.

"THE POWER OF A LIE" (Universal). As a whole this offers agreeable entertainment, has a good cast and is well staged. It is a story of society folks, of a poor young man and his attempt to raise money from his friends, who, fearing a scandal turn against him. George Archainbaud directed.

"ENVIRONMENT" (Principal Pictures) is a crook play, built around the adventures of a cabaret girl who joins a band of thieves and ultimately reforms. It was directed by Irving Cummings and was written by Harvey Gates. Milton Sills, Alice Lake, and Ralph Lewis appear in the lead.
SPECIAL CAST IN THE BEAUTIFUL AND DAMNED
(WARNER BROS.)

An engrossing story of New York society life, adapted from F. Scott Fitzgerald's best seller of a year ago, successfully transferred to the screen. The entire cast is good, fitting perfectly into their parts, it is lavishly mounted and well directed. Our advice is to book it. Directed by William A. Seiter. Seven reels.

You've got a ready-made audience for this picture. It consists of the thousands of readers of F. Scott Fitzgerald's popular novel of last year. And if properly advertised it should draw many thousands of others interested in bright, well-made society plays.

It is one of the most interesting stories of the season, telling in a direct, forceful manner the engrossing effects of wealth upon a young married couple who are powerless to extricate themselves from the slough of despondency and poverty into which their inexperience and indifference plunges them.

Beautiful sets, much splendid acting and careful direction mark the film and a refreshing atmosphere of humor runs through the story. The Fitzgerald story has been changed somewhat, especially the ending, but who will say that it has not been improved immeasurably thereby. It is a strong preachment against the evils of wealth and the injustice often done the children of the wealthy.

Throughout the acting is excellent. Marie Prevost proves that she can do other things besides posing as a bathing girl or acting the flapper twenty-four years a day. In this picture under Mr. Seiter's direction she shows marked ability. Kenneth Harlan, as Anthony, was the "Tony" of the book. A splendid role well handled. Tully Marshall scored also as the grumpy Adam Patch, Tony's wealthy grandfather. Harry Myers rendered good support in the role of Dick, as did Louise Fazenda as Muriel, Cleo Ridgeley as Dot, Emmett King as Mr. Gilbert, Walter Long in the role of Hul, Clarence Burton as Blobeckman, Parker McConnal as Murry, George Kowa as the Jan servent and Charles McHugh as Shuttleworth.

The story briefly concerns Gloria and Anthony, an engaged society couple, who romp through life without responsibilities. Tony is waiting for the day when his grandfather shall die and leave him a snug income, and he hastens to Tarrytown to the Patch mansion whenever the report is printed that grandfather Adam Patch is about to pass out. Finally he marries Gloria, and they settle down after a fashion. At a wild party which Tony stages in his flat, the grandfather unexpectedly appears and thereupon cuts Tony off without a cent. His death occurs soon afterward and the young couple are almost destitute. After a two years' fight, however, the courts decide in Tony's favor and break the will, and the two who have stuck together, despite other temptations, find happiness at last.

SPECIAL CAST IN THE POWER OF A LIE
(UNIVERSAL)

A fairly entertaining picture with a good cast. It will appeal principally to lovers of society dramas and those not too critical who overlook the weakness of plot. Made under the direction of George Archainbaut. Five reels.

After witnessing "The Power of a Lie," the feeling persists that it is much ado about nothing. In this day and age when honesty is recognized as the best policy, the sight of a business man going back upon his bargain doesn't impress one greatly and only creates a feeling of disgust for all concerned. The picture lacks plausibility, although it has been carefully cast, and it moves along smoothly from one incident to another with the interest moderately well sustained until the final scene. Story by John Howard.

As a whole it offers agreeable entertainment with David Torrence, Maude Phillips, Sallie Price, Mabel Juleene Scott, June Elvidge and Earl Metcalfe in the principal roles.

The story concerns a young and struggling artist who has two friends endorse a note for him. John Hammond, one of the endorsers, is a wealthy business man, Jerry Smith, the other, is a rounder. The artist is engaged to the wealthy man's sister. Following a wild party at Burton's studio, Smith meets a tragic death, and fearing a scandal Hammond denies he ever endorsed Burton's note. A trial follows and there is the usual eleven hour confession, which berks Burton of the charge of forgery and brings about the happy ending.

Dustin Farnum as John Hammond; Mabel Juleene Scott, is Betty Hammond, Earl Metcalfe the artist, Phillips Smalley is Jerry Smith. The latter was the best characterization of the entire cast.

DUSTIN FARNUM IN THREE WHO PAID
(FOX)

A five-part Western of average interest. Advertise it as a Western, full of shootings, with Farnum and Bessie Love and it may attract the Farnum fans. Story by George Owen Baxter. Direction by Colin Campbell.

This is the story of a desert law that he who leaves his partner behind to die of thirst shall also meet sudden death, hence when Hal Sinclair's three desert companions, Quade, Lowrie and Sanders, declare they cannot take him with them, following an injury caused by the kick of a burro and later, after finding water, return and find him dead, they make up a story and—then fail to stick to it. It is then Riley Sinclair comes upon the scene and while investigating the story of his brother's death meets up with the three. Lowrie, the coward, shoots himself as Riley approaches, but confesses before he expires. Quade is killed when he tries to shoot Riley from ambush. The third member of the trio is sentenced for some crime and a romance springs up between Riley and a little school mistress, who has been posing as a man to avoid a villainous husband from Montana. The husband finds out and is cast in a hotel fire and the third man confesses before he dies.

Dustin Farnum has had stronger vehicles than "Three Who Paid." Bessie Love masquerading as a man and being roughly handled by Quade and Riley is not a convincing bit. The exteriors are beautiful and Colin Campbell's direction adequate, with the usual western finish.

Dustin Farnum in a scene from "The Beautiful and Damned," Warner Brothers production.
SPECIAL CAST IN ENVIRONMENT
(PRINCIPAL PICTURES)
A crook picture built about the adventures of a cabaret girl who joins a band of thieves and later finds redemption through love. Well directed by Irving Cummings and should make money.

"Environment," the latest production offered by Principal Pictures on the states right market, is an exceptionally interesting picture based on a story by Harvey Gates. Director Cummings selected for this production a cast that in itself insures recognition, among the well-known names being Milton Sills, Alice Lake, Gertrude Claire, Richard Headrick and Ralph Lewis.

The picture presents many exploitation angles besides that of an exceptional cast and should prove to be a good box-office attraction, especially where crook stories are liked. It is in six reels.

The story is based on the adventures of a cabaret dancer who joins a band of crooks and becomes a thief. With one of the gang she leaves Chicago and goes to the south where he robs a farmer's house against her protest that they should seek bigger game and not steal from a hard-working family. The girl is captured, while her pal escapes. The case comes to trial and the young farmer refuses to prosecute. She escapes a prison term and is paroled to the people she has helped to rob, on condition that she work for them for one year to repay them for the money they have lost.

The clean and happy life in the farmer's family so impresses the girl that she resolves to go straight, but later ships and joins her old companions in crime. The young farmer goes to the city to search for her, finds her and aids her to escape the police, but is himself taken as one of the gang and sent to prison.

This test of his love brought about the girl's reformation and together they return to the country where both find peace and happiness.

VIOLA DANA IN LOVE IN THE DARK
(METRO)
A fairly entertaining film drama of the crook reformation type. It possesses enough suspense and heart interest to intrigue the average picture fan and it abounds in comedy touches typical of Miss Dana's work. It was directed by Harry Beaumont from John Morosky's play "Page Tim O'Brien.

Six parts.
An attempt has been made to invest this crook story with comedy touches and heart interest. The comedy subtitles are somewhat forced in this respect.

Mary's role of Mary Duffy, a little Irish girl who becomes nurse maid to the baby of a couple of crooks, gives her usual whimsical performance and over a opportunity to register playfulness. Cullen Landis plays the young crook, Tim O'Brien, who has a peculiar eye and can't see in the day time. Arline Pretty is the lady crook and Bruce Guerin a cute, natural baby. "Red." Ed Connelly plays Dr. Horton; Margaret Mann is Mrs. Horton; John Har- ron, the son Robert Horton, and Charles West, Jimmy Watson.

Mary Duffy is left to care for "Red" O'Brien, when his father and mother are forced to make a quick get-away. Mary finds a home with an old minister for herself and "Red" and she is instrumen- tal in saving John the son, from disgrace, when funds are stolen from Dr. Horton's safe. Tim O'Brien returns after the death of his wife and marries Mary, thus making a home for little "Red."

SHIRLEY MASON IN PAWN TICKET 210
(FOX)
Fair entertainment in this latest Shirley Mason starring vehicle. It tells in straightforward manner of a little girl left at a pawn shop by her mother and how she finds her father after many years. Love interest and suspense aplenty. Directed by Scott Dunlap. Five parts.

This is an adaptation of a play by David Belasco and Clay M. Greene, ac- cording to the press book, the Belasco play having been produced many years ago. Never having seen the stage pro- duction we cannot say how closely it follows it, but it occurs to us that the master stage craftsman has improved somewhat since it was produced.

It is the simple story of a child left at a benevolent pawnbroker's for fifteen years, by a distraught mother, who is subsequently confined in an insane asylum. She receives the ticket given her for her baby and finally returns to claim it. The pawnbroker, having lost his wife, when she closed with another man, has grown to love Ruth. Through a series of coincident she has gone to live with the man who ran away with the pawn- broker's wife, but who later proves to be her own father. There is a final straightening out of the tangle and Ruth is claimed by Chick Sax a taxi driver and ex-pickpocket.

Shirley Mason as Ruth is as bewitching as ever and is rendered good support by Robert Agnew, as "Chick"; Dorothy Manners as Mrs. Levy, Fred Warren as Harry Levy, and Jacob Abrams as Levy the pawnbroker. Irene Hunt appears as Ruth Sternhold, while the player of John Sternhold does not appear in the cast, although a well played and important part of the story.

One of the many elaborate scenes from the Principal Pictures Corporation special "Environment" in the cast of which is Alice Lake, Milton Sills and other players of note.

WYNDHAM STANDING IN THE INNER MAN
(PLAYGOERS)
This feature is built along familiar lines but as a whole it carries a goodly amount of entertainment. While not an especially strong offering it should give satisfaction. Mostly outdoor action, and en- acted by an excellent cast. Directed by Hamilton Smith. Five reels.

"The Inner Man" is good program entertainment, maintaining an average interest. The story tells of a young man who is inclined to be a book worm and, in short a "sissy." Scolded at by his father and sister he proves that he has the makings of a real man when he takes over the operation of his father's mine in the Blue Ridge mountains and saves a girl with whom he falls in love from being harrassed by an unwelcome suitor. The production was made by Syracuse Motion Picture Company and was adapted from a novel by Charles Mackay.

African Hunting Film to Be Published January 8
The "Hunting Big Game in Africa pictures that had their world premiere at the Century theatre, San Francisco, will be nationally presented at special week showings, opening at the Lyric New York City, January 8. They were made by Director H. A. Snow of the Oakland, California, Museum of Natura History, whose African expedition returned the current season after three years work and 60,000 miles travel in the Dark Continent.

The resulting pictures show more than fifty kinds of big game, in vital action, intimate forest life, or deadly grapple with invaders.
A typical Neilan comedy, directed and written by Marshall Neilan (with Frank Urson, director, assisting) and told with many original touches which raise the production to a high level as screen entertainment. A very capable cast surrounds Leatrice Joy, who has the titular role. It is 6,966 feet in length.

Here's a whimsical little tale about a comely little girl who, in her knickers for immorality and virtue, meets a newspaper reporter as unlovely and unloved as herself, and the two ultimately find happiness together.

It allows Leatrice Joy unlimited scope for fine acting and she takes full advantage. Her adeptness makes a very character of Minnie and it is probably the best thing she has ever done. Everything in this picture is done in the best possible taste. The leading lady is Eva Moore, as the forgetful newspaper woman who throws over the chance to write big human interest story to save theWyndham and get only love. Raymond Griffith was good as the gun salesman, George Barnum excellent also Minnie's step-sister. Sam Crowell typical hard-hearted step-mother. Helen yynch plays the role of the step-sister; Dick Wayne was the young doctor, Tom Wilson the janitor and George Dromgold the town "cut-up." Much good photography is credited to David Kesson and art direction. Some pretty exteriors lend the proper atmosphere to the story and the interiors were adequate though not showy.

Minnie, heart broken because she is without a suitor, invents one and sends letters and flowers to herself. She gets away with it until her step-sister discovers one of the unfinished letters and when she is threatened with exposure unless she produces the letter before Saturday night, she goes to the morgue and "iden"s" a body as her sweetheart. The lOv3l story and story assigns a sin to it. He proves to be sympathetic when she confesses the whole story and he tears up his manuscript. There's no more to the story, but it ends on a happy ending, with an added punch when her father comes into h£ delayed success through the inven-tions of his daughter. She is aovy machinery located at distant points, rough the air. One of the high points of humor of the story is the gag of the automobile. When each explains he has run out of gas and asks Minnie for a kiss. She walks off home early the third time as a pair of old shoes to save her white slippers. It is full of comedy and not a lie pathos and makes an interesting story for any program.

Lloyd Comedy Draws Crowds

"Dr. Jack" Plays to Big Business in Run At the N. Y. Strand

Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack" had a great run at the Strand theatre, New York, Christmas week and according to reviewers the star is still "batting a thousand."

Two New York newspapers were hosts to children at special performances during the period, and it is estimated that 3,500 youngsters from charitable institutions and homes were present at these showings.

Manager Joseph Plunkett presented "Dr. Jack" with an attractive prologue, including a "Dr. Jack" song written by himself, which was sung by the Strand male quartette. The Strand management's exploitation of this Harold Lloyd attraction was dignified and free from any "stunts," and it is thought that the children's exploitation of the show served better than any other form of advertising.

The New York newspaper reviewers of "Dr. Jack" were liberal in their praise as the following excerpts from their comment indicates:

The evening Journal said: "The comedians' best work is important because it is even funnier than his preceding five-reeler, 'Grandma's Boy,' which is another way of saying that it is extremely funny."

Evening Telegram: "With Harold Lloyd as the jester, all are at liberty to enjoy merry-making fit for a king, and most inexpensively. His fun-making in 'Dr. Jack' brings forth a wealth of hearty laughter; his Christmas gift to the world is a ray of sunshine that will penetrate all its desolate corners."

The Herald: "We hasten to advise our readers to join in the fun at the Strand theatre, where the splendid Mr. Harold Lloyd is dispensing large doses of good will through the medium of his latest picture, 'Dr. Jack.' You will find that 'Dr. Jack' is as gay, scintillant and spontaneous a comedy as you ever saw in your life."

Daily News: "If possible take a youngster with you to hear his laugh. Take the whole family and hear them shriek. For Harold Lloyd is still batting a thousand, 'Dr. Jack' is every bit as good as 'Grandma's Boy,' since people will compare, and in some ways better."

Evening Mail: "Harold Lloyd must be a disciple of Mr. Couse. One can imagine him repeating every night: 'Play by play, in every way. I must do better and better.' And the wonder of it is that he does. No screen actor has made more consistent and steady progress. 'Dr. Jack' is just a little the cleverest, most original, most amusing picture he has ever made, and is saying a good deal."

Evening World: "All we can say about 'Dr. Jack' is that it is Harold Lloyd at his best and working his hardest. What more could one ask than that?"

Globe: "Harold Lloyd's latest five-reeler, the Strand's feature in a bill of Christmas specialties, is a triumph of sheer fun."

A scene from the Playgoers picture "The Man Who Waited," presented by Associated Exhibitors. It is said to be a real Western thriller with Frank Braidwood, Inez MacDonald, Vonda Phelps and Jay Morrey in the cast.

Franey and Jamieson Are to Appear in C. B. C. Comedies

Bud Jamieson and Bill Fraey have been added to the company making Hallroom Boys comedies for C. B. C. Film Sales distribution. The two comedians were signed after acquisition of Jean Havez to edit the short subjects.

"ONLY A SHOPGIRL," the new C.B.C. special, played to a week of big business during the period just preceding Christmas, according to word received by Lamme Film Distributing Company from A. T. Simmons, Allen theatre, Akron.

Many bookings in the Cleveland territory resulted from the success of the picture in Akron. C.B.C. announces. In other instances where the picture was booked for the week preceding Christmas, theatres reporting big business despite the slump during that period.

"HOLY SMOKE," number 11 in the series of Hallroom Boys comedies, bases its comedy situations upon the desire of the Hallroom Boys to become firemen.

Noel Mason Smith directed the comedy.

Universal Joy Week Brings Record Bookings

By a happy combination of Universal Joy Week, the holiday period in which Universal puts its sales and exploitation power behind short subjects, and Carl Laemmle's annual contribution to the New York American Christmas Fund, Universal short subjects went over the top in the metropolitan district with the largest volume of booking ever recorded, according to the company. The short subjects drive, because of its holiday and Christmas fund attributes, had the impact never before the company could experience, as evidenced by the many exhibitors as ever before. The combination was a winner, and resulted not only in film booking records, but in record funds for New York's needy poor.

"Joy Week," as announced by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, was chosen primarily to be a period in which short subjects should reign supreme. Included in the publication program were the following: "The Baby," "Leo Moran, Neel Edwards, Johnny Fox, Lewis Sargent, Queenie and other comedies. As officially decreed, the Joy Week period was to be December 24 to 30.

Each year Mr. Laemmle gives a percentage of one week's receipts at the "Big U" exchange. When the "N. Y. American" learned of the proximity of Joy Week to the Christmas season, it was decided to tie up the Joy Week idea with the drive for the Christmas Fund.

Technical Magazine Reviews

"Via Radio," Educational Film

Scientific American, the monthly journal of practical information, in its January issue reviews at considerable length educational's latest special "Via Radio" for the benefit of its many readers interested in the popular sciences. The picture is described as "a single reel film which tells in fifteen short minutes what earthen wave tubes can do in the field of radio."

"It is surprising," the article, with what ease an intricate subject is explained, even to the veriest layman means of motion pictures. "Via Radio" boldly unfolds the principles of communication, whether by means of light waves, electric waves or radio waves.

The film solo takes us into radio-so on, indeed, that we are comforted with radio methods even before we have had opportunity of becoming shy. And soon learn, as the film story unfolds, that there is nothing formidable about it, after all.

All in all, "Via Radio" tells the story and tells it well. The action was along smoothly and at no time is there too much explanation or petty detail. Yet the film is not to be considered superficial, for all that is really necessary for a general understanding of the subject will be found in the film. This is the best proof that the film sustains interest throughout. It is fine before one expects it to finish, although the story has been completed.

"BE YOURSELF," the latest Christie comedy delivered to Educational, has a lot of unusual merit. Neal Burns is featured, and opposite him, as his facetious sweetheart, is Charlotte Merriam. Two fathers in the picture are played by Lincoln Slumer and George Hitch. Henry Murdock, who is being buried in another Christie Comedy now in production, has a prominent role as a taxi driver, and Babe London is a fair fat girl in the factory who is spoken of as a perfect forty-eight. Ward Caulfield is the factory foreman, and the society dance is played by Natalie Johnson.

"BE YOURSELF," which was directed personally by Al Christie, is built around the strike of the girl workers in a shirtwaist factory.

Many Dramatic Moments In New Baird Production

"When Civilization Failed," featuring Leah Baird, had its first eastern showing before executives of Associated Exhibitors recently. Miss Baird herself made the screen adaptation from the stage play by Dorian Neve and "A. E." officials declared it a "photoplay full of punches."

There are said to be four big punches in it. One comes when a somnolent volcano suddenly breaks into eruption. The other is when the surface of the sea between a man and a shark, a shipwreck and a tropical typhoon.

"The Face on the Barroom Floor" Is Listed by Company

Included in the six special productions announced for January and early February publication by Fox Film Corporation, is "The Face on the Barroom Floor," a melodrama which is said to contain extraordinary entertainment value.

Directed by Jack Ford, with a cast of such actors as Henry B. Walthall, Ruth Clifford, Alma Bennett, Walter Emerson and Frederick Sullivan, "The Face on the Barroom Floor" is built around a theme which admits of strong dramatic treatment.

How a man compelled to renounce his love in order to save the honor of his name, his brother gradually loses his hold on all the worthwhile things of life and drifts into the depths, to be redeemed finally through the love of his former sweetheart, is told in a gripping way.

Director Jack Ford has handled the story with rare skill and sympathy, it is said. He has avoided all clumsiness of treatment that might make the picture preachy. Instead it vibrates with action, and through it runs the silver thread of a charming romance, solved happily at the end.

Robert Stevens, an artist (portrayed by Henry B. Walthall, remembered among other pictures as the Little Colonel in D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation") is engaged to marry the lovely Marion Vlcek (Ruth Clifford). While he is painting in a picturesque fishing village he meets the attractive little fisherman, Lottie (played by Alma Bennett). Lottie is about to be married, and and he concentrates on a picture that attracts considerable attention among his friends.

Dick Vlcek (Walter Emerson) meets Lottie and is madly infatuated with her. He is not man enough to face the consequences, and he leaves Lottie pleading pitifully with him not to desert her. Stevens is accused, and Marion breaks their engagement.

Then it is he takes to drink in the hope of forgetting his troubles. From bad to worse, until he lands in jail, where, during a prison uprising, he saves the governor's life, escapes to sea in a skiff. He lands at a light-house, and here it is, by lighting the light, he saves the crowded ship. This is the tremendous climax.

The governor pardons Stevens, but still he goes his drinking way. When an itinerant artist comes into the saloon, Stevens takes his palette and draws "The Face on the Barroom Floor." At this moment Marion enters with the ex-governor, and Stevens, otherwise steering his drinking away, reforms and finds his happiness in marrying Marion constitute the concluding scenes in this powerful story.

Principal Pictures Launches Extensive Program for 1923

One of the most extensive production programs announced by any independent concern has been prepared for 1923 by Principal Pictures Corporation. Expenditures on advertising and exploitation will run well into six figures, the aim of Sol and Irving Lesser and the firm of Warner being to keep the name, "Principal Pictures," before the trade and public constantly.

Exhibitors and exchange men may judge the caliber of the company's future product, according to officials, by the past two publications. "Environment," starring Alice Lake and Milton Selig, and "The World's a Stage," starring Dorothy Gabor. Rights on popular plays and novels have been obtained. + + +

The company announces also that following the Jackie Coogan picture now in production, this star's product will be available to the independent exchanges. Supplementary announcement relative to the time of production is expected soon.

Four units will be in production within the next three weeks. Frank Lloyd, who directed Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist," has been signed to assist Mr. Lesser. Negotiations are expected to be concluded shortly whereby Principal will gain the services of six prominent stars. A talented boy actor will be brought to play an important role in "David Copperfield," the Charles Dickens story. + + + Principal Pictures production forces at present time are concentrating on filming of the two Harold Bell Wright pictures, "The Eyes of the World" and "The Shepherd of the Hills." They will be published in the spring.

The company has prepared its extensive production plans because, according to executives, "Principal Pictures is now more active than ever before that the independent field is just now coming into its own. We believe that 1923 will tell a story that will prove a blessing to every independent. We have the confidence and support of exhibitors who demand good pictures irrespective of who produces them."

Trisch Friganza returns to the screen in the third Principal picture, "Mind Over Motor." Ward Lascalle directs it.

Bring Joy is Christie Aim

While the Christie comedy program for 1923 will contain some departure from the usual procedure of amusing films in that there will be more of the scenic educational factors combined, the dominant aim will be to spread joy and cheer and wholesome good will, Al Christie has announced. In fact the policy is a sort of new year resolution with him, as he considers it in line with a statement by Thomas A. Edison recently, in which Mr. Edison pointed out that these features were the first duty of the motion picture.

A Christie unit completed a new comedy, "A Hula Honeymoon," while in Honolulu recently.

Present Group Gets First Run Bookings At Kunsky Theatres

The names of twelve of the eighteen popular novels and stage plays scheduled for Warner Brothers production for next season are announced by Harry M. Warner. Six others are yet to be named.

Mr. Warner also announces that Monte Blue, Harry Meyers, Marie Prevost, and Grant Carpenter, a scenario writer, have been placed under long term contracts.

The production of the eighteen features has necessitated the enlargement of the Warner coast studios, and nine and a half acres of ground now comprise the studio grounds.

JOHN H. KUNSKY, of Detroit, has contracted for the entire series of Warner Brothers productions after seeing the Harry Rapo production, "Heroes of the Street," featuring Wesley Barry.

Kunsky will give the Warner pictures a first run at the Capitol, Madison and Adrian theatres in Detroit. The productions contracted for include, in addition to the Wesley Barry feature, "The Beautiful and Damned," with Marie Prevost, "Little Church Around the Corner," "Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce directed by Sidney Franklin, and the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Main Street," directed by Harry Beaumont.

FLORENCE VIDOR has been engaged by Warner Brothers to play the part of Carol Kennicott in the picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Main Street." Under the direction of Harry Beaumont. Other players added to the cast include Louis Fazenda, Noah Beery, Robert Gordon, Josephine Crowell, Harry Meyers and Monte Blue, who plays the lead as Dr. Kennicott.

THE FIFTH of the current Warner Brothers group, "Little Church Around the Corner," is announced for January publication by Harry M. Warner. The photoplay was written by Olga Printz, based on the stage play by Charles Blaney and the novel by Marion Russell. Chaire Windsor heads the cast.
New Selznick Special Ready

Executives in East
See Owen Moore's "Modern Matrimony"

Owen Moore's newest starring picture for Selznick, "Modern Matrimony," has been completed and screened for executives in the East, who laud it highly.

This new Moore opus is a Victor Fleming production. The story also was provided by the director. Supporting the star is Alice Lake. The cast also includes Frank Campenau, Mayme Kelso, Kate Lester, Douglas Carter and others. "Modern Matrimony" is said to be considerably different from recent Moore pictures in that it is not a broad farce, but rather a comedy of the more refined type. The story deals with adventures of a young couple who start married life on the "dollar down" payment plan, and Selznick officials, in announcing that it will be published in the near future, declare it the best picture in which Owen Moore has yet appeared.

MYRON SELZNICK has selected the cast for another big feature which the company will put into production. It is "The Common Law," Robert W. Chamber's story. Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle and Elliott Dexter are to be co-starring. Other players named are Hobart Bosworth, Bryant Washburn, Doris May. Miss DuPont, Harry Myers. Phyllis Haver, and Wally Van. George Archainbaud has been assigned direction. It is being made on the West Coast.

HAROLD J. MCCORD, of Selznick's staff of film editors and cutters has left New York for Los Angeles to assist in work at the studios on "Rupert of Hentzau" and "The Common Law." He will edit and cut the latter picture as it is being produced, remaining at the plant several months.

AN INTERESTING special poster, evolved by an Omaha, Nebraska, theatre in the exploitation of "One Week of Love" co-starring Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle is reported by Selznick. The poster used read: "Coming. Not Three Weeks—but Just One Week of Love."

New Goodman Film Finished

Daniel Carson Goodman has completed the filming of his second production for Equity Pictures, to be distributed by them on the independent market. Production was carried on under the working title of "Something for Nothing," but the picture will be issued as "Has the World Gone Mad?" This title was selected by a committee of Equity officials, state right buyers, and exhibitors.

In "Has the World Gone Mad?" Mr. Goodman presents a society drama, enacted by an all-star cast which he wrote and which was directed by J. Searle Dawley. Robert Edeson and Hedda Hopper are featured players.

“Westbound 99” Is Latest Johnson Film for F. B. C

Emory Johnson, producer of "The Third Alarm" and "In the Name of the Law" for Film Booking Offices, has commenced production on his third for the company, "Westbound 99." The story was written by Mr. Johnson's mother, Emelie Johnson, author of the producer's first two F. B. O. pictures.

Clare McDowell, Ralph Lewis, Johnny Harroun, Taylor Gravez, Wedgewood Nowell, Red Kirby, Jane Morgan and Ella Hall comprise the cast. Mr. Johnson will direct.

J. L. SCHNITZER, vice-president of F. B. O., announces that five of the two reel "Fighting Blood" series have been completed and publication date on the first will be made known soon. These pictures are based on H. C. Witwer stories. There will be twelve in the series and each will be a complete story.

GEORGE O'HARA has the leading role in the series.

EMIL OFFMAN, general manager R-C studios, has completed the cast of Ethel Clayton's new production, "71 Greater Glory." Latest additions to the cast are Carrie Ward Clark, Clari Selwyn, Fred Esmonst and Albert I. Malcolm McGregor plays the male lead. Others in support of the star are Richard Headrick, Albert Hart, Anderson Smith, Wilfred Lucas and Victoria Baron.

CAPITOL THEATRE at Detroit in the house, has booked the F. B. O. feature, "Thelma," stars Jane Novak. This is a Chester Benton production. With this picture F. B. O. has launched its new billboard campaign.

Lupino Lane in Five Part Film Comedy on 1923 List

"A Friendly Husband," second on the list of six new special productions with Fox Film Corporation recently announced as a supplement to the original set of eight for the season of 1923, stars Lupino Lane, comedian of two minutes, in his first multiple-reel feature. Singularly, this is the first feature comedy that Fox has published as a sequel for the past two years.

Jack Blystone directed "A Friendly Husband." It will be issued early in 1923 following the preparation for distribution of "The Village Blacksmith.

Changes Name of Film

"Thundering Dawn" is to be the screen name of "Bavu" or "The Man of Dr. Felix Bantu," the play written and staged by Earl Carroll which Universal is producing.
10 First National Units Busy

“Robin Hood” Is Privately Screened for Coolidge

By special request, “Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood,” now playing at the Lyric theatre in New York, was screened privately for President Coolidge, members of Harding’s cabinet, the senate, the house and the diplomatic corps at Washington, D. C.

The feature was screened at the home of Mrs. Edward B. McLean. Two projection machines were used and music was furnished by an orchestra of eighteen pieces. Among those present and who expressed their enthusiastic praise of the picture were:

Charles E. Hughes, secretary of state, and Mrs. Hughes; Secretary of the Interior Fall and Mrs. Fall; President Lasker of the shipping board; Lord Godde, the British ambassador, and Lady Godde; Jules Jusserand, the French ambassador, and Mme. Jusserand; Senator Richard Ernst of Kentucky and Mrs. Ernst; Senator New and Mrs. New; Attorney General Daugherty; Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, General John J. Pershing, Secretary of the Navy Denby; Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of war; Congressman Nicholas Longworth and Mrs. Longworth, and Senator David Elkins of West Virginia.

Hodkinson Corporation Films Meeting Widespread Success

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation comes and feature length pictures are taking strong and meeting with widespread success.

C. C. Burr’s All Star Comedies, feauring Charles Murray, Raymond McKee and Mary Anderson, have been booked to the Lubliner Trinz circuit in Chi-ago. Booking contract covers the complete series of the film.

R. E. Peckham, branch manager at Detroit, has closed practically all the cities in his territory on these contracts, it is reported. Hodkinson officials are gratified with the success of this series.

MILTON CRANDALL, who exploited “Slim Shoulder” through the South, has gone to Philadelphia for an extensive campaign on Hodkinson’s “The Headless Horseman,” which will play the Arcadia theatre there. It is expected that this will duplicate the success he had in promoting the Irene Castle film in the South.

THE KINGDOM WITHIN, another Hodkinson product, has been given a trade showing at Cleveland by Manager C. L. Peavey. The showing was well attended and many enthusiastic comments were received, says Mr. Peavey.

JONES, LINICK & SCHAEFER of Chicago have booked “Bulldog Drum-mond.” This announcement follows on the heels of the booking of the picture by the Fox chain in New York and vicinity.

Hughes Picking Big Cast For New Goldwyn Picture

Rupert Hughes is going after the largest cast record. “Souls for Sale,” his story of motion picture life, will have thirty-three principals to say nothing of a “motion picture crew” of eleven beautiful girls.

Lloyd Starts New Talmadge Picture; Stahl Now Casting

Ten independent producers are busy on the East and West Coast making pictures for First National.

Frank Lloyd has started directing the Schenck production “Within the Law” with Norma Talmadge starring, and with Margaret Leaby, Talmadge British prize winner, in important role.

John Stahl is casting for another Louis Mayer production, “Money, Love and the Woman,” which is from an original story. The cast will be announced shortly.

Maurice Tourneur is filming Captain Marriott’s “The Isle of Dead Ships,” making his headquarters at the Levee United Studios. Constance Talmadge is busy getting her gowns ready for the production to follow “East is West.” The story, written by John Emerson and Anita Loos, has no title as yet.

Katherine MacDonald already has made for First National, “Money, Money, Money,” and “The Scarlet Lily,” and she at present is making “Refuge” under the direction of Victor Schertzinger for the B. P. Schulberg company.

Buster Keaton’s “The Balloonatic” has been finished; the smileless comedian is at work on another fun maker, said to be a five reeler.

Edwin Carewe, making Edwin Carewe productions, will begin filming soon the Belasco play “The Girl from the Golden West.” Ten featured players, while selected, have not been announced.

Dick Barthelmess is in Cuba making “The Bright Shalow,” under the direction of John S. Robertson. The story was written by Joseph Hergesheimer.

The Thomas Ince studios are busy on several productions. His hilarious horse racing story, “The Trottenlot,” has been published by First National. He will follow this with “Bell Boy 13,” “What a Wife Learned,” and “Man of Action.”

Arthur Trimble and Jane Murfin are working on another for First National. At present it is called “The Sign.”

Fox Issues Two in Jan.

Fox Film Corporation publishes January 1, “The Footlight Ranger,” starring Charles Jones. It was directed by Scott Dunlap and is from the story and scenario by Dorothy Yost. Fritz Brunette supports the star. On January 14 Fox will issue the first of the 1923 Dustin Farnum series of new pictures, “Three Who Paid,” from the story by George Owen Baxter, and directed by Colin Campbell.
With the Procession in Los Angeles

By Harry Hammond Beall

THE Ballins, Hugo and Mabel, are week-ending in Santa Barbara where they are visiting friends. The noted pair have completed the production of "The Valentine Fair" and are enjoying a well-earned vacation.

Ed Roberts, recently indicted for sending his publication, "The Sims of Hollywood" through the mails, has asked for further delay in pleading to the indictment. He was indicated a demurrer might be filed. The government asserts the publication is obscene. Roberts is out on $5,000 bond.

CREIGHTON HALE, noted star of stage and screen, has become a full-blooded Hollywoodite. Hale will be remembered for his characterization of "The Happy Hooligan" in "Way Down East." Recently he has been appearing on the legitimate stage in San Francisco, filling an engagement in "Little Old New York." Just Supposed, both of which proved great successes in the Northern city. He will remain here indefinitely.

LOUIS BURSTON has taken quarters at the Metro studios where he will produce a series of specials, the first of which is titled, "Desire," a powerful dramatic story by John B. Clymer and Henry R. Symonds. The cast members chosen up to date who will interpret the novel to the screen are Marguerite de la Motte, John Bowers, Estelle Taylor and David Butler. Other equally important players will be signed by Burston shortly.

Accompanied by his beautiful wife, Alice Terry, Rex Ingram, the director of many screen successes, will arrive in Hollywood January 15, from the East and he will immediately take up his work on the production of "Secrets," we are informed. Ramon Navarro will also be a member of the party.

BUSTER KEATON has purchased an attractive new home in the Wilshire district, one of the most fashionable communities in Los Angeles. He says it is so large that he is going to install a bell-boy system for the convenience of his family and guests.

We are told that Hal Roach hopes to bring back with him upon his return from New York, shortly, Will Rogers, famous comedian of stage and screen, whom he will feature in a series of two-reelers. Rogers has been "knocking them dead" in the Follies for the past few months but it is understood that Roach has succeeded in getting the popular star to place his "John Hancock" on the dotted line.

After several months of producing "on his own," King Vidor has signed a long-term contract with Goldwyn and will soon begin work on a series of big specials at the Culver City studio of the concern, the first of which will be an adaptation of a well known stage play. Vidor is doubtless one of the youngest featured directors in motion picture work.

The Sacramento Film Company, a recently organized producing unit with quarters at the United Studios, has signed Mildred Davis, erstwhile leading woman for Harold Lloyd, to a contract which stipulates that she is to be the featured player in a series of big dramatic productions. The initial picture in which Miss Davis will be starred is titled, "Temporary Marie." Lambert Hillyer is to direct. In the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Myrtle Stedman, Tully Marshall, Stuart Holmes and Maude George.

IRVING V. WILLAT, who recently completed the direction of the Metro production of "All Brother's Were Valiant" is sojourning in Florida taking a long-deferred vacation. He is visiting the folks in his "old home town," and, incidentally, is giving the fish of the Florida waters an unhappy time.

Harold Lloyd has a new leading woman. She is Joelna Kelton, formerly a musical comedy star in George M. Cohan's, "Two Little Girls in Blue," and more recently in Ned Wayburn's revue which she left to appear in Parrott comedies. "Hal" witnessed the work of the young lady on the screen and immediately tendered her a juicy contract, it is said. And by the way, Lloyd has finally secured a "giant" for his forthcoming picture. For a while it looked as though the comedy star was going to be up against it in the matter of securing an eight-footer, but the freak has at last been signed.

Royalty is in our midst! His serene highness, Prince Sasha of Thurn and Taxis is having the time of his life at Universal.

The Pacific Coast Showmen's Association, with a membership of theatrical people the stage, studios and outdoor amusement field, gave a monster benefit ball last week from which a substantial sum was realized. The money derived from this event will be employed in establishing a sick and indigent among profession.

BILLY ARMSTRONG, formerly comedian in his own right, is appearing in support of "When Knights Were Bold," his most recent production for Metro.

Every Day in Every Way—

Dr. Coue's theory of autosuggestion, with reversed methods, forms part of the plot for Alice Brady's latest Paramount picture, "The Leopardess." Instead of getting better and better in every way every day Miss Brady, as Tiara, falls under the spell of a wax image, regarded in the South Seas as an evil omen, and becomes the complete slave of Scott Quaill (Matsagau Love), an eccentric millionnaire whose hobby is taming women and birds.

Through fear in her own mind and through suggestion that if she does not dance as says the curse of the wax image will crush her, Tiara lives a life of complete submission. Every time she has a thought of rebellion the image is flashed before her. She is convinced of the power of the wax figure and by constant autosuggestion her Dr. Coue's fashion, she believes explicitly that she must do as commanded. "The Leopardess," with a screenplay by J. Clarkson Miller from Katherine Newlin Burt's yet unpublished novel of the same title.

City. He arrived in the city a couple of weeks ago to study American motion picture production methods and according to report he is making splendid headway. The Prince will return to Czechoslovakia to produce pictures according to American standards.

GEORGE LANDY, publicity representative for Richard Walton Tully for the past year has severed his connection with this producer to join the West Coast forces of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., in similar capacity. Coincident with this announcement comes word that Clifford Bush has been retained as cost supervisor of a productions made here for the distributing organization. Mr. Butler has in the past been associated with the Louis B. Mayer studio and with other producers such as John McCormick, Western representative for Associated First National, is responsible for the above announcement.

"Cliffy" Elfordt, well known independent producer, has started work on a series of Western pictures featuring "Cow-Warner and Eddy, the Sterling Space," which has been taken by the new concern at the F. Arts studio and production is being run forward.

HAL REED, well known exploitation producer, formerly associated with the T. & D. circuit in San Francisco, has been engaged by Sid Grauman as exploitation representative of Grauman's Hollywood Egyptian theatre.
The Roll of Honor
Exhibitors of Missouri who are sponsoring the "Educational Day" movement, which is wider in scope than anything of this nature launched heretofore, are to be praised in the highest terms for their sincere efforts to keep the motion picture screen free from reform dictates.

IF WE'RE WRONG—TELL US!
Two pictures, "Outcast" and "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," supposed to have been shown at the Palace Theatre last month, were put in mothballs by our Board of Censors at Columbus.

We haven't seen "Outcast," but in New York, where a so-called Motion Picture Censorship exists, this picture PASSED OFFICIAL INSPECTION.

The other film is being shown (to the best of our knowledge and belief) everywhere—except in Ohio. Why? Is the State where most of our Presidents hail from, so much more in need of reform than other communities? And if not, just what qualifications are necessary to obtain a position of Movie Censor?

We agree that many pictures should be censored, but NOT AT COLUMBUS, but by the Parents, by local organizations who will work in co-operation with theatre managers, as exemplified last month, during "Better Films Week."

Of course we all know that there's nothing crooked about Politics, but one of these days Ohio is going to follow the example of Massachusetts, and the sooner we do it, the better it will be for all concerned.

Fair-minded, thinking people agree with us; others are cordially invited to set forth their views. If we're wrong, tell us.
Fred S. Meyer, Editor.

OHIO'S CENSORS, two young women, I believe, barred "Outcast" and "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew" from the screens of that state. These two pictures played in other states having censorship. This glooming example of the absurdity of censorship was brought to the attention of the public in Hamilton by Fred S. Meyer, Palace theatre, in the foregoing manner. Again Mr. Meyer illustrates his faith in making a direct appeal to his patrons through his program magazine.

Criticising ministers and others who seek to close all places of business and amusement on Sunday, the Rev. Matt J. Allen, evangelist, said: "The work of the Christian minister is to lead souls to Jesus Christ and not to the police station. Think of Jesus calling on the sheriff or chief of police to close everything so that he could get an audience."

Increased Activities for Free Screen Need at Convening of Legislators

ALL EXHIBITORS:
Many legislatures are convening this week or will convene soon.
There will be the usual batch of adverse bills offered by the reform element. Lobbyists will be stationed in every state to force these bills through, if possible. The industry will be called upon to new a fight it has had for the past ten years and more.
A new condition of things, however, should make the victory over the reform element more decisive, and easier won.
State organizations are more secure, and in this respect fortified against the onslaught of the radicals. During the past twelve months state exhibitor organizations have been active in winning public support—in creating a spirit of confidence and co-operation between the industry and the theatregoer.
This condition creates a barrier which the reformer will find it difficult to penetrate.
With the legislatures convening, however, this activity on the part of exhibitors should become more pronounced. Every facility at the command of the exhibitors should be utilized in further cementing the amicable relationship between the public and the theatre.
Massachusetts maintained freedom for its screen because the public demanded it. This victory might not have been won, however, had not the public been appealed to intelligently and convincingly.
The Bay State victory is an example of what other states may accomplish. The time is opportune for other states to prove the value and effectiveness of public co-operation.

The exhibitor has his screen, his program and his newspaper space as mediums for crystallizing public sentiment in support of a free screen. There is no better time than now to use these sources of information. Massachusetts did it and won.
Let Missouri, Idaho and many other states do it.
IN NEW DALTON PHOTOPLAY

The colorful life of Southeastern Roumania—the home of the Tartar and gypsy—has been filmed for what is claimed to be the first time in "The Law of the Lawless." Dorothy Dalton's latest Paramount picture, Konrad Ber- covici, Roumanian author, has written the original story for the screen from his own experience in his native land.

Greetings

Every twelve months it comes round, ushered in with joyful sound. It's a day for fun and cheer.
Again we say, "Happy New Year!"—"Topics of the Day" Films.

Flub—Have you decided on your New Year's resolutions?
Dub—No; it all depends on how my last batch of home brew turns out.—New York Sun.

Speedo—January was appropriately named after Janus, the Latin deity with two faces.
Peppo—Why is January appropri ate?
Speedo—Well, he probably saw double after something to quench his thirst on New Year's.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

May—Do the Mexicans start the New Year making resolutions?
Say—No, kiddo, they start it with revolu tions.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

Traveler—The Chinese make it an invariable rule to settle all their debts on New Year's day.
Stay-at-home—Yes, but the Chinese don't have a Christmas the week before.—Boston Transcript.

Japers (holding out glass)—Happy New Year, Bobbles!
Bobbles—Sober up, oldtimer, you mean Happy New Year.
Japers—Don't correct me—this is New Brew Beer.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

Who comes dancing over the snow, His little soft feet all bare and rosy?—Open the door, though the wild winds blow; Take the child in and make him cozy. Take him in, and hold him dear. He is the wonderful New Year.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

—North Shore Breeze.

Anthony—Suppose we get married on New Year's day.
Adie—Why, dear.
Anthony—Well, if we break our wedding day resolutions, we can make new ones every year.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

PURITY PERSONAL

Interesting news about exhibitors and people with whom they come into direct contact. Readers are invited to contribute items for publication, and we will address them to "Purely Personal."

Edward H. Crawford, who has been managing the Lincoln theatre, Troy, N. Y., since its opening in September, has resigned and is understood he will re ceive the management of a New York theatre where he formerly was associated with Loew interests.

Fred L. Cornelwell, of the Del Monte theatre, St. Louis, who has been ill at St. Luke's hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home. His friends are hoping that he will be back on the job soon.

W. E. Lusk has left Cleveland for Washington, D. C., where he will take charge of the First National exchange. Geo. W. Emond, formerly assistant manager, has taken his place in the Cleveland office.

Harry Greenman, manager of the William Fox Liberty theatre, St. Louis, was host to the St. Louis Safety Council and hundreds of children gathered at the theatre and heard an address on safety first, Dec. 23. The theatre is donated annually for these meetings.

Nat Barach, Goldwyn manager at Cleveland, is the proud father of a pound baby boy. Both mother and baby are doing fine at Mt. Sinai hospital.

Sam Werner of United Film Service has obtained the Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri rights to "Notoriety."

Richards & Flynn have leased the Empress theatre, Kansas City, Mo., for the presentation of "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight?"

American Releasing

Man's Law and God's, with a special cast—Good action picture. Drew well and satisfied all.—W. J. Wilk, Liberty Theatre, Burbank, Ill.—Small town patronage.

My Old Kentucky Home, with a special cast—A very interesting picture. It lacks nothing to be called a "special," but is dandy program picture. Do not raise your admission on it, but is worthy of noting.—W. L. Landers, Gem Theatre, Stevieville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Jan of the Big Snows, with a special cast—A very well produced Curwood story, though the lack of any well known actors hurts its drawing power. Played very ordinary Saturday business, but it earned its profit.—J. B. Stine, Wonder-land Theatre, Clinton, Ind.—Mining town patronage.

The Belle of Alaska, with Jane Novak. Just an ordinary program picture, but as sold as such, and will please the average audience.—W. L. Landers, Gem Theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Belle of Alaska, with Jane Novak. Good picture, but ending entirely too abrupt. Merely tells the ending with a semblance so as somewhat miss the business.—A. B. Gribble, Elec-tric Theatre, Drain, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Very good, come on it you want to rake in more dough. It's sure a good picture.—C. H. Scymon, Electric Theatre, Drain, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Is it the biggest rental ever paid in this town. Went the limit on advertising and ants and it was a life saver. Bucked a revival and fair and come out ahead. All bet on it by Dr. Jack.—Howard K. Al- ron, Rialto Theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Hall town patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Is it a bird, a good drawing card, but I received was in such poor shape that I failed to show the last scheduled show. Had ten breaks on my last show—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Don't pay too much for this one. Lost money for me.—Frank M. Farrow, Apollo Theatre, Seattle, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

F. B. O.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast. Great picture and one the small fellow can buy and get some money. Played it one day. Will stand two days. Go after it.—L. L. Connor, Victory Theatre, Cambridge, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Played this with Larry Semon in The Huck Thanksgiving to nice business. Put on ballyhoo with seventy boys wearing caps and badges carrying cut-outs, banners, etc., about town. Many favorable comments.—Howard Varing, Royal Theatre, Spirit Lake, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Good audience picture and box office value is there. Put it over with the accessories.—Frank M. Farrow, Apollo Theatre, Seattle, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—You don't have to hide when they come out on this one. Good enough for anybody. More like it needed.—G. Carey, Dixie Theatre, Wynne, Ark.—Small town patronage.

If I Were Queen, with Ethel Clayton. Very good picture for the high ups, but paid too much for it. Did not make any money on it.—W. D. Patrick, Cozy Theatre, Florala, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Snowshoe Trail, with Jane Novak.—A fine picture that seemed to please Sunday audience.—Chas. Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Colleen of the Pines, with Jane Novak.—Good picture of its kind and should be classed with the Curwood brand for reading ability. Did fair business.—E. D. Keenan, Grand Theatre, Topoka, Kan.—General patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Just a good program picture. Nothing more and they are selling it as a special.—C. S. Ford, Princess Theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Kick Back, with Harry Carey.—Just a Carey picture, no better nor worse than some of his former ones.—Chas. Born, Elks Theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Up and At 'Em, with Doris May.—A good little program picture for any audience.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial Theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Eden and Return, with Doris May.—Very light. Film was in excellent condition, but it is very light stuff—mostly nonsense.—C. H. Powers, Strand Theatre, Dunsmuir, Cal.—R. R. town patronage.

Son of the Wolf, with a special cast.—Now that the pic is up to the picture unless you like good scenery, and there is a great deal of it in this picture.—C. S. Ford, Princess Theatre, Reinbeck, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Beyond the Rainbow, with a special cast.—Regular form is not big enough to say what I would like on this fine picture. 1st, Billie Dove is superb and can take her place with the best, bar none; 2nd, story intensely interesting, comedy-drama 30-30—both 30's extremely good; 3rd, photography is about the best I have ever seen, clear as crystal. I would say you would be safe to raise your price on this. It surely is all any one could wish for.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand Theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

The First Woman, with Mildred Harris.—Good program picture spoiled in many places by poor lighting effects, but as a whole gives fair satisfaction.—A. L. Hepp, Idylhour Theatre, Greeley, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Duke of Chimney Butte, with a special cast.—Oh, man, if you are looking for a real good entertaining Western, get this five-reel picture and tell your patrons.

Canada New Contestant For Laurel

Canada, represented by Ralph Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., this week enters claim to the distinction of fathering the "Poet Laureate to "What the Picture Did For Me."

you've got a Western they will all like, for they will.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sheik of Araby, with H. H. Warner.—Fair picture. Good story. Fairly good business.—Roy McMin, Capitol theatre, Superior, Wis.—General patronage.

Two Kinds of Women, with Pauline Frederick.—Good picture. Star has no drawing power here.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Vermilion Pencil, with Sessee Hayakawa.—Rotten. Leave it alone. Had plenty of walk-outs. Print was also terribly rotten. Besides usual advertising put out mailing list. Business fair but sure jipped my patrons with this piece of junk.—J. A. Bailey, South Side theatre, Greensburg, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Black Roses, with Sessee Hayakawa.—It is hard to figure out just what to say in relation to this picture. Pleased part of my people, but as for myself, thought the story rather weak. Will not try as a program picture.—Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.

Seven Years' Bad Luck, with Max Linder.—One of the best comedy features we have ever shown. Good drawing title.—Heasly and Brooks, Gem theatre, Calico Rock, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

First National

Minnie, a Marshall Neilan production.—A very fine production, as are all of Neilan's. It is good anywhere. Given proper publicity it ought to do a very big and satisfying business. I made a mistake in playing it Monday and Tuesday right before Christmas.—Lindon theatre, Freeport, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Woman Conquers, with Katherine MacDonald.—Good Northern stuff. Her Stranger Than Fiction O. K.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Skin Deep, a Thomas H. Ince production.—This is one of the best pictures I have ever shown. Put it on with the Allen if Legion so did good business on it. Everyone liked it. You can't go wrong if you book it.—David Hess, Iris theatre, Monte Vista, Colo.—General patronage.

Skin Deep, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Excellent picture with absorbing story that will please even those who sometimes tune down a picture with too much action. It will stand plenty of publicity.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, III.—General patronage.

Penrod, a Marshall Neilan production.—Just as good as a picture can possibly be made, but this doesn't mean anything unless you can get them in. We certainly didn't do any business. Fair the first night, nothing from second. Picture pleased, but failed to draw—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Penrod, a Marshall Neilan production.—A very good, clean picture. Credit to any house that shows it. Kids specially liked it.—David Hess, Iris theatre, Monte Vista, Colo.—General patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Talmadge.—Very good. The Primitive Lover satisfactory; Polly of the Follies O. K.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—Small town patronage.

East Is West, with Constance Talmadge.—One of the best pictures that anybody has to offer for the best Sunday and Monday's business of the year. First National pictures the best bet for me. Paper all good. Book it and go after big business. You can get it on this one.—J. F. Hileman, Broadway theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—Another excellent picture that will please all kinds of people. Has excellent drawing power.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post.—Excellent picture well acted, but a poor drawing picture in small town.——Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Trouble, with Jackie Coogan.—About the best story that this star has appeared in. Drew all the kids, but some adults had the impression it was strictly a kid's picture. It will please adults beyond a doubt, though, if you get the book in.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

The Wonderful Thing, with Norma Talmadge.—A really good picture, but Norma's are all good and we don't usually have to worry about the weather when we work on her. —A. A. Harlow, Majestic theatre, Richland Center, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Rosary, with a special cast.—Should have been a bigger story. Faintly seemed restless during its showing and I heard some patrons pat the hero and kick because the older the story is, the worse.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and College patronage.

May Be plastt with Jackie Coogan.—Very good. Will make you money and please.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oak land, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Rosary, with a special cast.—The very good show should go over any where. Had good attendance at five and thirty cents.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Beautiful liar, with Katherin MacDonald.—Whoever made up all the recommendations on this picture sure was a "beautiful liar" as far as being pleasing picture for a small town was concerned. My patrons were rather disappointed.—Howard K. Allen, Rial theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Seventh Day, with Reilah Bartholmes.—Very weak compared to T unbelievable David, but will draw some Bartholmes' name, although it will displease some.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

I Am Guilty, with Louise Glamm. Very good picture and well liked by people.—J. L. Tidwell, Kozy theatre Moroni, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Crossroads Western, with E. L. Kessett production.—First-rate mel drama relieved by good comedy incident. The rental exceeded the drawing power in this town by about four hundred bucks.—E. L. Franke, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ar.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trust Your Wife, with Katherine MacDonald.—A good program picture who was spotted for us by a poor print.—Harley and Morgan, Star theatre, Spindlev Spindly Neb.—Small town patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—As a production, good, but maybe show at the house of the day; not Virden, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—All that has been said about this picture is true. Pleased 100 percent.—H. Fuller, Auditorium theatre, Tid New.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Perfect Crime, with a special cast. I find this is a very good comedy-drama and pleased all. Noticed some poor parts on it, but found pictures M. R. Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Home Talent, a Mack Sennett production.—It's great, boys. Best fun-making of season. Slap-stick comedy. Go sit on advisory and tell em just what they are going to see.—Iva Shields, Queen atre, Tyler, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Unseen Forces, with a special cast.—Fair program picture.—H. A. Lar, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

It's Much Like U. S. In Canada

The enclosed effort was done on the spur of the moment. It seems to me that a showman should be able to do anything anyone else can do and do it better if the "Herald" wants for anything.

Since writing the above I feel you will all admit that Cowper, Burns, or any of those beginners, have a lot to learn.

Ralph R. Griddle
Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont.

As I sit upon my office chair
I fret and fuss and wonder
How I can keep things running fair
And keep from going under.

There are so many other things
That work against the show,
From January's frothy cold that shows
Up to December's snow.

It starts off with all hockey bent,
And then the skating party,
Then comes the storms, bad roads and Leet,
And cold, like freezing party.

And when at last Spring's here again
Thoughts turn to love, as all well know,
All youths and maidens go leaping,
Forgetting all about the show.

All town folks get the garden crape
And how from dusk to dark;
The farmer has not time to lose,
He's got to make his mark.

And then the Summer comes again,
The weather, well, it's hot as h—
The farmer's working at his grain
And never stops to take a spell.

Hurrah! At last here comes the Fall;
The colors are turning brown.
This is the time I'll fill my hall.
With every color in the town.

The skating has not started yet,
The stuff? O, it's cold outside.
This is the time we're flying high,
It's nice and dark. Their hands they hide.

The temperature is down quite low,
The farmer's crops are now all in,
The way they're looking good.
Is surely fine. In comes the tin.

So we take the good, also the bad,
This year's no same as others, all is fair;
So wear a smile and be not sad.
You will surely then come out ahead.

Don't thing you must surely know,
If you're trying to run a movie show.
Exhibitors Herald, (don't make any mistake)
And then you'll be certain to make your stake.

It's Much Like U. S. In Canada

The Master Mind, with Lionel Barrymore.—A strong, interest-holding melodrama with a good cast.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—A star you won't be afraid will make a missstep after you buy the picture, nor make you wish the preacher wasn't in the audience. You can boost it to the limit, also the price.—A. S. Rockwell, Orpheum theatre, Fort Armstrong Center, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—One of the very best pictures we have run this year. If you have not played it, Fox Patrons, Opera House, Thurber, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart.—One of the very best pictures we have run this year. If you have not played it, Fox Patrons, Opera House, Thurber, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Half Breed, with a special cast—Draggy and uninteresting. We call it a poor picture.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthelmess.—An extra good picture. Drew the best crowd that I ever had. Everybody played it.—With one mixer the moose was good.—Auditorium theatre, Carthage, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthelmess.—This is a real picture. One that you can boost to the limit. It will please any audience. I did not make anything on it as I paid too much for it.—J. W. Andrensen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthelmess.—All I can say on this one is that I ran it with the others who have reported on it. It is good entertainment and most of my patrons liked it.—Howard K. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Sowing the Wind, with Anita Stewart.—An excellent picture, but a very poor print.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Rose of the Sea, with Anita Stewart.—A good picture. Though its action and dialogue are not such as to get much of a talking about it, in the theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Mother o' Mine, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Everyone says this is good, but don't want to pay the price.—E. L. Griddle, Grand theatre, New Amsterdam, Ont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Men of Zanzibar, with William Russell.—Good. Please most every one. Run with Al St. John comedy. Small Town Studios, which was extra good. R. D. Troutman, Ethel theatre, Ethel Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Friend, the Devil, with special cast.—The Gem of the summer. A sudden conversion to faith in God (in manner done) and long-drawn-out scenes.

The Crusader, with William Russell.—Fair program picture. Did not do very well as Russell has never been a card here.—Will R. Winch, Wigwam theatre, El Paso, Tex.—General patronage.

The Yellow Stain, with John Gilbert.—If all plays were as good as this we would have more patronage. This is a northern Michigan lumber town story with exceptionally good plot and well acted throughout. It took well here on Saturday night. Claire Anderson reminds one of Jane Novak. Book it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

A Self-Made Man, with William Russell.—All Russell pictures seem to please and this was no exception. Bought at a fair price and it did a fair business.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Trailin', with Tom Mix.—One of the best and most satisfactory Westerns ever played here. Pleased almost everyone. A lot of comedy and thrills.—M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, William-burg, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lights of the Desert, with Shirley Mason.—I can't understand why the people don't take to this star. As a rule, her pictures are good. This one especially good and yet they won't come to see her. We barely got film rental and please all Tom's admirers. I am held up for such a high rental on Mix that it is seldom one of his pictures shows up, but this one actually did.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Without Fear, with Pearl White.—Just a very ordinary program picture. Not much to it. Had many dissatisfied patrons.—S. C. Chapman, L. Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Perjury, with William Farnum.—Strong crook play. Two murders. Absorbing. Much better than I expected. Not best kind of entertainment, however. Farnum's acting superb. This is by no means a special and never should have been released as such. It is in nine reels. Should have been condensed into seven. Price is too high. We lost twenty-five dollars on poorest attendance in December. One night at 30 and 15 cents, regular price.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Chasing the Moon, with Tom Mix.—My patrons are still wondering what this was about. The story is crazy and the action foolish. The goof that wrote the subtitles has done it again. The only good one he wrote was the final wording, "The End."—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Chasing the Moon, with Tom Mix.—This picture has that much story as an ordinary News Weekly, but Tom Mix draws them and seems to satisfy, so why kick?—R. C. Stine, Neighborhood theatre, Greeneville, Green, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sky High, with Tom Mix.—Different Western. Some swell shots of the Grand Canyon. Not as good as some Mix pictures, but pleases.—Frank M. Farrow, Apollo theatre, Seattle, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Strength of the Pines, with William Russell.—Picture very good. Russell does not draw well here.—Frank F. Mic hante, Veteran Star theatre, Durham, Ontario, Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Strange Idols, with Dust in Farnum.— Fox has finally succeeded in killing Dust in Farnum's popularity by handling him with a series of about the poorest stories any capable actor ever drew. My gross receipts paid the rental.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Strange Idols, with Dust in Farnum.—

—This seemed to be a rather good pic ture, but the film was too poor shape that we could not see all of it.—Otis Lomon, Auditorium theatre, Elmwood, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Another rapid production running the promotion with.—S. C. Chapman, L. Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Strange Idols, with Dust in Farnum.—Very good. Book it and advertise it strongly as you have with this star better in this picture than he ever was in any other picture he ever made.—J. B. Stine, Neighborhood theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Strange Idols, with Dust in Farnum.—No good. Brothers, leave it at the exchange.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Rough Diamond, with Tom Mix.—Not a Western picture, but sure there with the goods. Full of pep and action. Everyone liked it.—H. G. Stebbins, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Shackles of Gold, with William Far num.—Not Farnum's class of pictures. Just as He pleases, but should be in out-of-door pictures.—L. L. Connor, Victory theatre, Cambridge, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

For Big Stakes, with Tom Mix.—Not up to Mix's standard. Only a mediocre Western. Failed to please.—S. C. Chapman, L. Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Extra, Extra, with Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker.—Poor. Did not please. Very poor ending.—R. D. Troutman, Elbe theatre, Ethel, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lady from Longear, with William Russell.—Very ordinary. An English type of picture and pleasing enough, but will it satisfy the average theatre patron of the small town. Business very bad.—C. H. Powers, Strand theatre, Dunsman, Cal.—R. T. town patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—They certainly have a lot of nerve passing a thing like this off as a special. Just an ordinary Western. S. C. Chapman, L. Salle theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Up and Going, with Tom Mix.—The usual Mix picture. Makes an average theatre pay. It brings them in for us.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Stage Romance, with William Farnum.—Costume picture. Did not please. Patrons walked out. It couldn't be called entertainment. No good for my place.—O. W. McClellan, Dreamland theatre, Pekin, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Stage Romance, with William Far num.—They killed Farnum for us when they put him in this kind of a play. C County plays do not play in our burg. Auditorium theatre, Carthage, Ind.—Small town patronage.

A Stage Romance, with William Farn um.—One of the dreariest pictures ever filmed. Will certainly ruin your receipt. Please no one.—S. C. Chapman, La Sa theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gleam o' Dawn, with John Gilbert Some like this picture, while others not. I would not urge anyone to buy it.—C. Starkey, Starkey's, Monte Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

Gleam o' Dawn, with John Gilbert No good. Lost the money.—J. B. Stine, Ca rthage, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Vaucluse Suggestion Is Favorable

I played a show the other night.
That's all.
I wanted to get up and fight
And tear my hair again.

Twas Goldwyn's "Prisoners of Love"
They were good.

The guy was sure no turtle dove.
Who shipped that snow to me.

The ratchets-holes were all torn out
Would jump from scene to scene.
And then T'would turn and b'link out
And shimmer across the screen.

I wouldn't give three cents a pound
For a film like that, by heck,
For it jumped clear out and wrapped around the operator's neck.

He picked up chunks of film enough
To fill a good-sized hat.
And it's no wonder he took it.
With a damnedoldfilm like that.

I can't be nice, keep sweet I mean,
This truth I'm free to tell.
And watch a picture on my screen
When the print's allbottomed.

NOTE: Bro. Lynch of the Northern Theatre, Pororia, Ill., wants to know if I am the same chap who used to knock up such a fuss in the town where I am now nan."

Ye, I'm the same guy; they haven't got me in jail yet.

That vaudeville stunt he suggests sounds good to me.
Come on Rand and Meyer, Keith, Pan-ama and the Orphens are looking for us.

You've gotta guys stop picking on me.
I haint dun nothing.

liked it. Hodkinson average plays are weak. Have had bad luck with most all except the Zane Grey—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Slim Shoulders, with Irene Castle.—A good picture of a type generally favored by public—clean, airy, easily understood and good entertainment. Our patrons liked the picture and the booked. Went over nicely.—Rosenfeld, Hopp & Company, Fort Armstrong theatre, Rock Island, Ill.—General patronage.

Silm Shoulders, with Irene Castle.—Exceptionally fine production. The last word in class. Interesting every second and more than pleased.—J. B. Laughlin, Bar's Meeca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Mysterious Rider, with a special cast.—All Zane Grey stories make good here. Good clean pictures.—Heasley & Brooks, Gem theatre, Calico Rock, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Light in the Clearing, with a special cast.—I did not see this, but reports were bad. People said it was poorest picture we have ever run. The second night there were cut this condition.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

Other Women's Clothes, with Mabel Bond.—Bought at a very reasonable rental, but lost money for us. I can't get them interested in a Hodkinson picture—though usually the pictures are good and this one was above the average. Appeals to the feminine contingent only.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—Mining town patronage.

The Gray Dawn, with a special cast.—A good picture, well directed. While no one got excited about it, our patronage seemed to be satisfied with the entertainment value.—C. C. Patterson, Opera House, Thurber, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Gray Dawn, a Zane Grey production.—As entertainment this picture says about 30 cents to the ton. It lost me money and served me right. Anyone that believes all these pictures has good morals and thereby misleads his patrons should lose.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Partners of the Tide, with a special cast.—This is a very good picture, but the line of advertising does not draw. I thought it would not when I first saw the photos on the subject. It seemed to please all who saw it.—J. J. Kudlack, Swan theatre, Swanton, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

Keeping Up With Lizzie, At the House of the Jack O' Lantern, Cameron of the Royal Mounted, Lavender and Old Lace, Rip Van Winkle.—Here are some of the pictures that are sold at a reasonable price, give excellent satisfaction, and every one brings in a nice balance to the good at the box office. Never lost a dollar on Hodkinson pictures.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—General patronage.

Metro

Enter Madame, with Clara Kimball Young.—A very good picture, well liked by patrons. A long lron, seven reels, but good entertainment. 100 per cent better than Hands of Nolda and should go a long way toward putting this star back where she belongs in the public's favor.—George K. Zingg, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—An excellent picture which pleased all classes. Good business first night, slow the second; at advanced prices.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production.—This is a good feature. Not a flaw to be found so far as we can see. The patrons liked it, but we paid too much money for it, or there is not the pull in the picture there should be. Anyway we lost money on it and a tip is, do not allow your enthusiasm for a good picture to overbalance your good judgment. The money does not seem to be in this type of production for the country town houses this section.—Arthur Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Cannot speak too highly of this picture. Can truthfully say that it gave as much, if not more, general satisfaction to our patrons as any picture we have run.—C. C. Patterson, Opera House, Tremont, Texas.—Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production.—Rex Ingram, with his perfect cast and a real hold-your-interest story, should do well here. All the scenes are far good, wholesome entertainment. While business was not satisfactory it was no fault of the offering, as conditions are very hard, with lots of special features, such as charity fairs and basket ball games. Rex Ingram, I am for you, as I believe that you give honest entertainment.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

The $8 Baby, with Viola Dana.—Very good. Please all. A dandy Christmas picture. Jewish and Irish story.—Frank M. Farrow, Apollo theatre, Seattle, Wash.—Small town patronage.

Sherlock Brown, with Bert Lytell.—Silly stuff. Too bad to make Lytell do it. He did the best he could, considering he had nothing to do.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

Seeing's Believing, with Viola Dana.—A dandy picture.—W. D. Patrick, Cozy theatre, Florala, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

I Can Explain, with Garrett Hughes.—Nothing much to this picture, and no story whatever. Did not satisfy many of the patrons.—Otis Lomon, Auditorium theatre, Elmon, Ws.—Small town patronage.

Kisses, with Alice Lake.—Very good program picture, clean and pleasing to ladies, but hardly had enough pep to succeed.—Saturday night picture. Alice Lake usually very good.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric theatre, Greenville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Kisses, with Alice Lake.—Good little program picture. Should please all. Not a big drawing card, but a sweet comedy drama.—Hedda Hopper, Riverview, Iida.—Small town patronage.

The Four Horsemen, a Rex Ingram production.—Plays to huge houses in the coldest weather and it got the crowds. Words cannot express how good it is. I am not the one who's been out long enough so all should know it's good.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Little Eva Ascends, with Garret Hughes.—Good. They left on this or something from ear to ear in the selling. No one is as good.—Herzog Bros, Select theatre, Havesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Absolutely a good one, classy, and we please most people. Seems to have some setting and acting.—Reis & Miller, Lake theatre, Lake View, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Homestead, with a special cast.—A picture that built up each night. Everyone pleased and big business.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid.—This is a good picture, but not as good as some of Reid's pictures. He seems too slow in this one.—Dan Russ, Star theatre, Edinboro, Pa.— Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—An A 1 production in every line.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Wonderful picture. One of the best of the year. Deserves the largest houses.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—About half the business of The Sheik. Think Valentino has lost his drawing power. They should let him play it more in the Hollywood manner.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Valley of Silent Men, a Cosmopolitan production.—A Curwood story. Very interesting and from a scenic point of view one of the best of its kind. A good drawing for a Monday night.—Chas. Born, Elks theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Valley of Silent Men, a Cosmopolitan production.—Best northern story ever played here. The star made new picture boosters for us. Scenery wonder- ful.—Chas. A. Swanson, Opera House, Wahoo, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Burning Sands, with Milton Sills.—A great picture in every respect.—Dan Russ, Star, Tonawanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Border, with Betty Compson.—An extra good picture. For snow this time of year nothing better. A picture that they talk about on the outside. All say, "Good, give us more like it."—Auditorium theatre, Carthage, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Borderland, with Agnes Ayres.—Fine picture well put together. Makes them think we will improve your standing. Helps educate the people to a higher standard of small town stuff. If we of the small town shows are to survive we must keep the chap who tells us to feed "em westerns" and get our patrons coming on real stuff. This one will make a big mark in this direction.—J. H. Cooper, A-Muz-U theatre, Scottville, Mich.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—Showed on Saturday night crowd with The Timber Queen. Seemed to please the majoritv.—David Hess, Princess theatre, Del Norte, Colo.—General patronage.

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow, with Thomas Meighan.—This picture is a pecu- liar one. The action fine and the stars popular. The trance angle gets some unfavorable comment from the people who do not like dreams or trances mixed up with their pictures, but comments were largely favorable and the run successful. Leatrice Joy is rapidly springing into a position like Meighan and Rob- erts being already there. Country busi- ness for some reason is only fair. Taxes should be paid by farmers only once a year, then they would forget and loosen up in between. As it is we find them very, very hard to bring in.—Arthur Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Dictator, with Wallace Reid.—A big premiere picture. Not a special.— Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Green- ville, Mich.—General patronage.

The Dictator, with Wallace Reid.—Great Fair business, the little liked comedy-drama. Walter Long as funny as Reid. Pleased old and young.—Frank M. Farrow, Apollo theatre, Scatt'e, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

To Have and To Hold, with a special cast.—Good entertainment, the kind our audiences seem to want. This picture had good stars and the things they wanted, action. The fact that the novel was very popular years ago helped the attendance, although our run was not very successful from the financial end.—Arthur Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbus City, Ind.—Small town patronage.

The Beauty Shop, with Raymond Hitchcock.—Anyone that would enjoy this picture is certainly easily entertained. I know Hitchcock is good on the stage, but why in the name of Adolph Zukor don't they leave him there? This picture wasn't comical, it was pitiful.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—Story, star and cast make good entertainment as program offering. Star can always be depended upon to give good performance.—O. Stokes, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopolitan production. Splendid. In fact you wouldn't want to see better ones. Failed to draw however, but pleased all that came.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—Best ever. Patrons much pleased but did not make any money for me. Other doings in town and deep snow. Can't go wrong on this picture.—J. A. Weisbeek, Liberal theatre, Aiken, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Gave excellent satisfaction. Had many very good comments on it. Believe it will suit any audience.—A. L. Hepp, Idylhour theatre, Greeley, Neb.—Small town patronage.

Fool's Paradise, with Cecil B. De Mille production.—Splendid picture. Will satisfy any audience.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Wake Up

Babin Urges Exhibitors

I think "What the Picture Did for Me" published every week in "Exhibitors Herald" is one of the best methods and ways for all exhibitors to see and get an idea on what pictures are doing all over the country. Why don't every exhibitor wake up to the fact of this opportunity extended by the "Herald"?

I, for one, have very much benefited by it, as I get reports on pictures before I book them. If the average reports on any picture do not stand up I do not show it. Rather pay for it and never show it. The "Herald" has given me the reputation of showing a good picture every night. I have paid for some pictures that reports were not favorable from other exhibitors.

Brother Exhibitors, Wake up. Report a picture responsibly, if it is punk, and this way we will be able to avoid the junk—and the producers will also take note of these facts.

Don't Tell Everything, with a special cast.—Wallace Reid and Gloria Swanson make a pair. Good cast. Direction by Sam Wood was exceptionally fine. Picture gets a little spicy in spots, but it hasn't this the spicy age.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Great Moment, with Gloria Swanson.—A picture not a "movie". They all think it is a "picture". They all their friends to see it. The men liked it.

Rub it so did the women. Boost it strongly. Do not forget Milton Sills, Advertise him. He is really a good artist; he is a bear man at the B, O. The women all like him and he is the actor type that does not need, thechorale intelligences. He is the sort men like to see themselves.—H. H. Cooper, A-Muz-U theatre, Scottville, Mich.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid.— Don't be afraid of this one. Book it, bill it big. Did a very nice business. Reid always goes over big with us.—A. H. Brollier, Majestic theatre, Mt. Gilead, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Ghost in the Garret, with Dorothy Darr.—It hasn't the drawing power as "Ribs and Miller, Lake View theatre, Lake View, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ghost in the Garret, with Dorothy Darr.—It hasn't the drawing power as "Ribs and Miller, Lake View theatre, Lake View, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Husband's Trademark, with Gloria Swanson.—A classly elaborately pieced story that pleased Gloria's admirers but I don't seem to have enough of them in this town to make her pictures pay. Two days to very ordinary business, War-time rental and peace-time business.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.— Good sea picture. Plenty of action with a good fight throw. Good. Well liked.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, la.—Small town patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.— Good sea picture. Plenty of action with a good fight throw. Good. Well liked.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reinbeck, la.—Small town patronage.

The Siren Call, with Dorothy Dalton.— Fairly good Alaskan story. Have seen Dalton in love scenes. Good Hess, Princess theatre, Del Norte, Colo.—General patronage.

The Sheikh, with Rodolph Valentino.— A top picture that drew a good crowd and seemed to please all. Some very fine scenery.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Gloria Swanson.—Story not unusual, but the picture is dolled up like a million. Please the ladies, a little too much scarf and smile but it cost me too much to leave a fair chance for a fair return on the investment.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

The Affairs of Anatol, a Cecil B. De

“Penrod”

The poetic virus has overstepped the bounds of the immediate trade in Millen, Ga., and invaded the Chamber of Conmmerce. The following rhymed review of “Penrod,” First National, distributed by W. R. Critt, secretary of that organization, and dedicated to C. H. Simpson, manger of the Princess theatre, who forwarded same.

Ah takes an hour or de other day An' went ter see or picture play. De story wuz o' youth so bright An' over'w' time w'en its rite wuz right. It tol' o' games an' pranks day played Dat brought back thought dat rite rade O' times w'en all de worl' seem'd young An' life wuz but er song unsmart.

Dem kids wuz all jus' normal boys Wiz mongrel liz'ne an' pantaloons. Dey played de game as we have played An' looked at life all unsmart. Dey had dere share o' troubles too Dat seemed ter make de story tru. Wid women who in de busy stree. Fop'got dat youth comes once in life.

Dem kids wuz all like yours an' mine An' only wid us fo' or time. Hap'pier hard lives don' stamped us all Till we jus' can' ter take de time. As de yere life toward sunset turns An' youthful fire no longer wurn's. Let's profit by dat "Penrod", play An' give our boys or brighter day.

Mille production.—Better than we expected. Ladies enjoyed it—most men did not. Definitely interesting, lavish and contained worlds of stars. Reid and Roberts mis-cast. Will not probably please average house or average small town. We are, however, rather glad we played it. It failed to draw the second night. We charged fifty and twenty-five cents with extra line music.—Philip Rand. Rex theatre, Saloon, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Charm School, with Wallace Reid. —Good light entertainment. Will please major and minor people. Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

The Charm School, with Wallace Reid. —Bought this for half what World's Champion cost and made twice as much money as "Weekly". Has plenty of action and will entertain. Although a little old it is a good bet if you care for the better type.—Ribs & Miller, Lake View theatre, Lake View, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Good Provider, a Cosmopolitan production.—A fine picture that did a fair business the first day and will flat the second. The hay-rackers don't care anything about a picture of this type, but a highclass man and woman surely enjoy it.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

Travelin' On, with William S. Hart.— We exhibitors are inclined to call a picture poor or ordinary depending upon the condition of the weather. This is a mistake. Hart generally draws like a mustard and against a snowstorm gave us a poor attendance on this. Yet we are fully convinced that the picture took very well.—Horn and Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GORHAM
Not Hart's best by any means. Don't invite your ministers to see this one.—Howard Varis, Royal theatre, Spirit Lake, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman Who Walked Alone, with Dorothy Dalton.—A rather unusual story that seemed to appeal to the fans. Had better business second day than the first. Good comedy element. Dalton does fine work, and Milton Sills renders excellent support.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas Meighan.—Played seemed to start quite slow, but after second reel very interesting. Pleased fair crowd, but they did not think it anything extra.—Reis & Miller, Lake View theatre, Lake View, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Exuse My Dust, with Wallace Reid.—Anything, almost, that "Wallie" does is good. So was this one. Theodore Roberts is deserving of much credit, as well as Reid. They both put 'em over. Good attendance.—Clady Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.

The Right to Love, with Mae Murray.—This is an old one but will please if let film enough to show it. I had seen this one so I booked it knowing what it was. The last I received had lost most of its titles and a good deal of the show.—W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Anita, la.—Small town patronage.

Huckleberry Finn, with a special cast.—This one will go well with the kids. Who were very much in evidence, although the adults were scarce. Old "stuff" but a good picture.—Clady Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.

Forever, with a special cast.—The strangest thing about this picture was that a few people actually liked it. Famous Players should either pull this lemon off the market or else book it gratis. It would have lost money for me even at that price.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Clinton, Ind.—Mining town patronage.

Heliotrope, with a special cast.—Splendid picture. Will please everybody.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Time-Patience, with Paulette Goddard.—Entertainment value only fair. Not censor proof. Star not liked here by many patrons.—C. O. Stokes, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

At the End of the World, with Betty Compson.—This is a really good interesting program picture.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reeseville, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Cradle of Courage, with William S. Hart.— Came as near to pleasing the entire audience as any we have played. It is not a Western, but a good clean picture with a moral that will make them like old Bill Hart.—M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—Not the best Hart picture out, but it's good and will bring them out.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reeseville, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Buried Treasure, with Marion Davies.—A lot of good settings and photography wasted. This kind of junk hurts a small town show. Not a single comment, but several walkouts. Prices ten and twenty-five cents.—Full house.—J. M. Garner, De luxe theatre, Spencerville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The City of Silent Men, with Thomas Meighan.—As good as they make them. Will play our audience. Clean as a whistle.—Unique theatre, Briceylin, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rent Free, with Wallace Reid.—Good drawing card and fairly well liked, but not as well as some he made before this one.—C. S. Ford, Princess theatre, Reeseville, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

The Gilded Lily, with Mae Murray.—Good enough to average about 100 per cent.—Unique theatre, Briceylin, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Lies, with David Powell.—Very good picture. You won't send them out raving, but you will satisfy them if you play this out one.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Cosmopolitan production.—Boys, you will make no mistake in booking it. Everyone was pleased with this one.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark Theatre Co., Ozark, Ala.—General patronage.

Male and Female, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—It doesn't matter what the area they have, play it.—Clarence W. Langacher, opera house, New Glarus, Wis.

The Prince Chap, with Thomas Meighan.—One of the best pictures that I ever had. Struck hard weather and had small house, certainly pleased.—A. K. Kott, Crystal theatre, Upper Creek, Neb.—Small town patronage.

One Glorious Day, with Will Rogers.—A splendid program picture. Our people liked it.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malver, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with a special cast.—Philadelphia, L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Ladies Must Live, with Betty Compson.—Will go over with heads of most small town theatre audiences and do play it.—Clarence W. Langacher, opera house, New Glarus, Wis.

The Princess of New York, with a special cast.—Nothing to it. Advise all exhibitors to lay off foreign made productions.—H. L. McDonald, Royal theatre, Malver, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, a Cosmopolitan production.—Just a fair picture.—A. F. Keen, Opera house, Ogallala Neb.—General patronage.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid.—Wallace Reid capable of better acting than his cheap Western productions.—Owens O. K.—L. M. Libby, Columbia theatre Poynette, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lane That Had No Turning, with Agnes Ayres.—A good picture, but the hunch back character is repulsive. People way over the age of forty don't like the freak acts. M patrons like ordinary human. Picture pleased with this one exception.—W. F. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—Better late than never. The picture is good and ranks as one of the year's best.—H. L. Hanson, Majestic theatre, Elroy, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—It draws like a mustard plaster and it pictures will satisfy. It good business at fifteen and thirty cent.—S. N. Andress, Royal theatre, Pocen, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three Word Brand, with William S. Hart.—If Bill would make more like that one nothing would stop him from heating the list. It's a real product of a star. The dual role is good and Bill's bathiness in one or two instances gets a lane from the audience. A worth while production.—H. L. Hanson, Majestic theatre, Elroy, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Testing Block, with William Haines.—A fairly good western drama. You will probably hate Hart fans. M patrons don't seem to like Hart. Bouncing poor.—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre Clinton, Okla.—General patronage.

The Good Provider, a Cosmopolitan production.—A wonderful little picture. By all means play it.—Clarence W. Langacher, opera house, New Glarus, Wis.

After the Show, with a special cast.—In every way truly a good picture. Lot of good comments. Fairly good business but due to the weather couldn't build it with a splendid cast.—W. F. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Wild Goose, a Cosmopolitan production.—Society drama giving very good satisfaction.—Tom Foster, Star theatre, St. Walburg, Neb.

The Sims of Rosanne, with Ethel Clu...
BLOOD AND SAND (Paramount) with Rudolph Valentino.—Played one week to good business. First four days cleaned up, and then fell flat. Played day and date with Capitol at Davenport, Ia.—E. R. Cummings, Fort Armstrong theatre, Rock Island, I11.

Realart

The Little Clown, with Mary Miles Minter.—Good show, especially for the kids. It is a circus story and Mary Miles Minter is good in it. Have many comments on this one.—W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Anita, Ia.—Small town patronage.

A Truthful Liar, with Wanda Hawley. —This picture is fairly good, but not for a feature.—Dan Buss, Star theatre, Towa- wanda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

South of Suva, with Mary Miles Minter.—Picture not liked. Story not good for one star, who has built up her following in sweet, simple stories.—C. O. Stokes, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Sturdy Oak, with Wanda Hawky. —This finishes my Realart contract and out of about forty features I consider this the poorest of the lot. My best patrons gave me the laugh going out.—A. E. Wilcox, Unique theatre, Brimly, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Selznick

Shadows of the Sea, with Conway Tearle.—This was a very good picture and ought to take an place.—R. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.

Shadows of the Sea, with Conway Tearle.—Good program picture. Star is always good. Please most everybody.—Herzog Bros, Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

The Man of Stone, with Conway Tearle.—This picture is almost as good as The Sheik. Don’t be afraid of this one. Boys.—Mr. Seymour, Electric theatre, Drain, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man of Stone, with Conway Tearle.—Good picture. Please most everybody.—Herzog Bros, Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Packed ’Em In at Strand, Newark Only A Shop Girl favorable.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Poor SImp, with Owen Moore.—This did not take with my crowd. I promised a big rip-roaring comedy, but this doesn't get many laughs.—J. M. Garner, De Luxe theatre, Spearville, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Chicken in the Case, with Owen Moore.—A fine comedy, and did fair business.—George Murphy, Majestic theatre, Ft. Sumner, N. Mex.—Small town patronage.

Is Life Worth Living? with Eugene O'Brien.—Good picture. On that should please most of them.—Reis & Miller, Lake View theatre, Lake View, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Red Foam, with a special cast.—Very ordinary picture.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

John Smith, with Eugene O'Brien.—Everyone enjoyed the picture. Has a story and one of the star's best numbers.—Charles Born, Elk's theatre, Prescott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Reckless Youth, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Good program picture that will please the young folks. It is a little spicy but not bad enough to put away.—W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Anita, la.—Small town patronage.

Handcuffs or Kisses, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Very nice program picture which will please your people.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Safety Curtain, with Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien.—A real picture—one you can't go wrong on. Pleased them all. When you have this pair together you have got all that you need.—Herzog Bros., Select theatre, Hawesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

The Girl from Nowhere, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Fairly interesting story. Nothing to rave about for a star who is so good.—Reis & Miller, Lake View theatre, Lake View, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Forbidden City, with Norma Talmadge.—Very fair offering. Although old, it was about as good as lots of the new pictures.—K. J. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.

By Right of Purchase, with Norma Talmadge.—A good revival, but not as good as the others which she has played here.—Hering Bros., Selct theatre, Hawes- ville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots, with Constance Talmadge.—Film in poor condition, so killed the picture, but didn't think much of it as a whole.—K. J. Bechtold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.

United Artists

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith produ-duction.—A picture that pleased as near 100 per cent as they make them. Played on percentage and made a little money. —Britton & Lundgren, Melba theatre, Alexis, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith produ-duction.—Truly a great picture. Played it two days. Fairly good business the first night, but fell down the second, owing to severe weather, not the faults of the picture by any means. Considerable advertising done, but "love's labors lost." Didn't make any money on account of the weather.—Clyde Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.

The Three Musketeers, with Douglas Fairbanks.—Costume pictures don't go here. Had more people walk out on this one than any picture we ever ran. Have been in the business five years and this was the first time that I went to fix the furnace fire to avoid the crowd as they went out.—Britton & Lundgren, Melba theatre, Alexis, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Disraeli, with George Arliss.—This is an English story and was no good for us. Played two days. Very poor business.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ruling Passion, with George Arliss.—One of the best pictures I have shown this season. Acting flawless, good story with worthless title. I lost money on it.—France Brothers, Spirit Lake, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fair Lady, with Betty Blythe.—Just about as mediocre a production as it has ever been our luck to tell them "It is good show. Don't know yet what I am going to do, but it didn't give satisfaction. The picture left no impression with the audience. Looked as if they were doing so unconsciously advertise the picture for the second night.—Arthur Harius, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Universal

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dea—

Exceptional. Truly all Universal it is, and they didn't pay as much on rental either. Patrons all liked it as said Miss Dean was wonderful. We stand extra boosting—Howard K. Alle Kuhn, theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Sm.
town patronage.

Human Heats, with House Peters. Not bad, but full of the old hokum stuff. —Announce this, and people will not come.—A. J. Loflin, theatre, Martinsville, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters. Played this on Thanksgiving and proved this was a right day. Greatly pleasing all classes. —W. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Caught Bluffing, with Frank Mayo. Just the kind of a show for Mayo. We please the Western fans, and some well tell you that they don't like Western pictures.—Appleton Bros., Art Theatre, Appletone, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Broad Daylight, with Lois Wilson.—good picture and will please. Star go in this.—J. W. Andresen, Kialto theatre, Canton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Top o' the Mornin', with Gladys W. to-

on. Another good comedy drama. Picture quality excellent. Gladys a favor here. Book this and you will have a hit in it.—A. S. Rockwell, Orpheum theatre Richland Center, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Top o' the Mornin', with Gladys W. toon. This is a good comedy for everybody. Used a "C" comedy news. I use one "Nine" every week.—J. E. Higgins, Majestic theatre, Cull, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginal Denny.—On the order of Checkers, or better. Production good. Budgeted a lot, and staged in Kentucky.—B. Parius, Princess theatre, Prosser, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ridin' Wild, with House Gibson.—Gibson sure can ride and, to his class pleasure will be in this one.—L. L. Coon, Victory theatre. Cambridge, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl Who Ran Wild, with Gus Wilton. Very good. Please well.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Ozkib, Ind.—Small town general patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.—We surely please and has a following when while properly advertised.—George Britton, Major theatre, Cambridge, Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Loaded Door, with Hoot Gibson—

Like all of the Gibson pictures, is good and there is a lot of it.—K. A. Bechtold, Opera House, Maryville, Ill.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson. As always, good, and drew a good crowd in spite of the cold.—H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Lone Hand, with Hoot Gibson.
Scene from "Milady" a Henry Dimant-Berger production which will be distributed by American Releasing Corporation January 28. It is from the Alexander Dumas story "Twenty Years After."

news to me.—H. G. Stettmum, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

The Single Track, with Corinne Griff-—A very good show and will please the majority. It is an out-door picture and paper is poor on it. Ran Larry Semon in The Saw Mill with this and the comedy is knockout.—W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Anita, Ia.—Small town patronage.

Flower of the North, with a special cast.—Good picture. Pleased audience. Played against bad weather. Many comments.—J. A. Bailey, South Side theatre, Greensburg, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Single Track, with Corinne Griffith.—A good program picture at a decent price for small towns.—E. D. Patrick, Cozy theatre, Florala, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Prodigal Judge, with a special cast.—An excellent story of the South about 1853. Maclyn Arbuckle gives us a characterization of the old judge which will be hard to beat. His side kick, Mahafey, runs a close second and his little son is a fine little actor. This picture should be run in every theatre.—Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

No Defense, with William Duncan.—Very good picture. This star gets the business for us. We have never received a poor picture that this star made.—Geo. J. Kress, Hudson theatre, Rochester, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Where Men Are Men, with William Duncan.—Vitagraph doesn’t seem to care a rap how bad a picture gets. The film was in such a shape that it was impossible to tell what the picture was. Patches that jumped about every foot. There was an operator on hand from New York State visiting me at the time, and he made comment as to how very bad this film Rich Men's Wives (Lichtman), with a special cast.—A fine picture in every respect. Superb acting and a heart appealing story of great merit. We want more like this one, where children play an important role.—Chas. A. Swanson, Opera House, Wabob, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rich Men's Wives (Lichtman), with a special cast.—An exceptionally well acted and well produced picture that will please the feminine patron 100%.- Drew fairly well—Chas. Born, Elks theatre; Preseott, Ariz.—General patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Excellent picture. Really the best Barry has done. It's filled with laughs and its burlesque melodrama makes it unique. I picked a poor week for it, however, and did mighty poor business. Just before Christmas is always a hoo-doo in Topeka.—E. D. Keilmann, The Grand theatre, Topeka, Kans.—General patronage.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry—This is Wesley's best so far and I've run them all. Entertaining from start to finish. Great exploitation possibilities. For the first time succeeded in a window tie-up on "Penrod Clothes" with the biggest department store in town and found this very profitable.—Iva Shildes, Queen theatre, Tyler, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Ten Nights In a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—This is a good drawing card. I believe you should run it two nights if you can. There is where I missed it. A Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ten Nights In a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—Good picture, but failed to draw here. Luckily I played on percentage basis.—A. G. Hauge, Happy Hour theatre, Walnut, Iowa.—Local patronage.

Ten Nights In a Bar Room (Arrow), with John Lowell.—I believe this is a safe bet wherever there is a screen to show it out. We had three days to business, though usual big specials hold up but two days. It's all entertainment and pleases 100 per cent.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Chinton, Ind. School Days (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Placed all. Picture has real box office value and should be shown in every town, city and "tank" in the U. S.—Capitol theatre, Superior, Wis.—General patronage.

School Days (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Whoever rated this one as a knockout (and it has been so rated and reported) is dizzv. This picture had the atmosphere of always trying to be funny, when in our audience's opinion it was just a freek-faced, hard-hearted kid with nothing to do but try to make us laugh. Will Nigh was the director and we would say that he well nigh runned what picture there was. If he had mended any of this same kind they will be serenaded before buying. The sympathy of the audience was with the star in the first reels, but the director did not hold them. It is a picture it ranks as being made by an amateur.—Arthur Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—Small town patronage.

So This Is Arizona. (Smith), with Franklyn Farnum.—Drew very fair business and gave fair satisfaction. Plenty of action and some good comedy, but cannot be called high class.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

So This Is Arizona. (Smith), with Franklyn Farnum.—If your patrons want good Westerns, here is one that will keep them laughing. Everyone said it was good.—J. G. Varnell, Princess theatre, Piedmont, Ala.—Small town patronage.

Ashamed of Parents (Warner Bros.), with a special cast.—This is a good picture, but cannot class it a special, but above the regular run of pictures.—W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Broken Silence (Arrow), with a special cast.—Very well produced Curwood story. Played two days to average business and seemed to please.—J. B. Stine, Wonderland theatre, Chinton, Ind.

Isobel (Metro), with Wilson Novak.—One of those good Northerns that pleases the people, Good drawing power.—J. L. Tidwell, Kozy theatre, Moroni, Utah.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paried Curtains (Warner Bros.), with a special cast.—Just about an average program picture, but used Clyde Cook comedy in action, which is a good program. I would advise any exhibitor to use two reel comedy, if you use on "special" night, as I did.—W. L. Landers, Gem theatre, Batesville, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

What's Wrong With The Women? (Equity), with a special cast.—Broke all records of the house. Patrons all were well satisfied with this picture.—Lincoln theatre, Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Flesh and Blood (W. P. E. C.), with Lon Chaney.—Best Chaney feature since The Penalty. Pleased everyone, sure bet for small town exhibitor as well as city. If they like Chaney, hook this one.—Iva Shildes, Queen theatre, Tyler, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Silver Spurs (W. P. E. C.), with Lex- ter Cunco.—People were greatly dived on this one. Some said it was very poor and a few thought it was a good one. Personally I thought it was just fair. This is our first Cuno and will report on the next one soon.—M. D. Foster Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kans.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Dangerous Adventure (Warner Bros.), with a special cast.—The kind that attracts and pleases the masses. Regular circus paper with wild animal 'n everything.—W. H. Harman, Strand theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond the Crossroads (Pioneer), with Ora Carew.—Fair program picture. Think it will go over in almost any small town.—K. A. Bechtold. Opera House Martinsville, Ill.

Fightin' Bill (Pioneer), with William Fairbanks.—These snappy Westers gets over great and are good value.—J. I. Laughlin, Barr's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Girl From Nowhere (Pioneer), with a special cast.—Just a fair offerin. Nothing big in this.—K. A. Bechtold. Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.

Serials

White Eagle (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—I run two serials a week. Been in the show business fifteen years. This is the third of the mystery serials, what the people like.—S. B. Callahan, Arrow theatre, Broken Bow, Okla.—General patronage.

Get 'Em Hutch (Pathe), with Charles Ogle.—We ran this serial for five weeks and the last episode of this serial last week and must say we have run every serial Hutch has made except The Whirlwind, and this is the best to date. Not a dead episode in this picture from the first reel to the last.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Get 'Em Hutch (Pathe), with Charles Ogle.—This serial is a good one, but if I were making money any man could get my patrons interested.—New theatre, Manila, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Have played serials from Neal of the Navy up to present time, and can honestly say this is one of the best I have run. Have shown eight episodes and interesting increase in each one. Please the adults as well as kids. Just enough history to hold interest and make your patrons return to see next episode. If you run serials this is a sure bet.—Iva Shill, Queen theatre, Tyler, Tex.—Small town patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Opened this with School Days to very satisfactory business. First week they remaining on 200 for one week, light due to severe weather.—Ray McMillin, Capitol theatre, Superior, Wis.—General patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—I have run this serial for the past 200 weeks, and I am confident every one of these weeks and better each week.—New theatre, Manila, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Bought this on the strength of reports in this department. Have only used the first episode and it opened to more business than any serial we have started in the past two years. Ruth a favorite here and we expect to have good business for weeks.—H. S. Stemb, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—One of the best serials I have ever run. Am on the ninth chapter and getting better each week.—New theatre, Manila, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—On sixth episode. Fully believe this is the best serial we ever used in our house. Story good and many thrilling scenes.—Horn & Morgan, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Showed third episode Thursday with Lloyd comedy and News. Best serial that Ruth has made. Keeps them coming. Book it.—Sigma theatre, Junction, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—About as good as a fellow could want. Am on the ninth episode and it’s holding up fine. Never a few people walk out on it than any serial I have ever shown. Kids eat it up.—Howard K. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

Big V Comedies (Vitagraph).—The small owner who has to watch carefully his expenditures for short stuff will do well to look into these two reelers. I have been using all of them and they have a much higher average of comedy than a lot of heavily advertised stuff. They are purely slapstick. The team of Montgomery and Rock put out some knockouts.—J. H. Cooper, A-Muz-U theatre, Scottville, Mich.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—This is a real tear jerker just as much for these as the first series and they’re worth it. Can’t think of words to describe them. They’re exceptional and as a saying goes, we must have a Howard K. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Made a little money on last card well to break even on these. Round Seven is good and brings out a few extra patrons. Good laughs and they ask too much for them.—George K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—General patronage.

Convict 13 (Metro), with Buster Keaton.—Pretty good comedy, but nowhere near same as Home Wrecker, brings a few good laughs.—M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamburg, Kan.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Boat (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—One of the best comedies that we have had of Keaton, and many new jokes.—Otis Lomon, Auditorium theatre, Elmwood, Wis.—Small town patronage.

His Enemy’s Friend (Pathe), with Leo Maloney.—Have been showing these two reel Westerns with our Thursday serial, and they get better each week. If you play one you will hook the entire series, as there is more comedy in Westerns. They are all full of action, clean with a good story.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dodge Your Debts (Pathe), with Harold Lloyd.—One of the one reel reissues and a pretty good one at that.—C. E. Hopkins, Hopkins theatre, Cotter, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Robinson Crusoe, Ltd. (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton.—Caused the ghouls to laugh and I would pronounce it a comedy for all seasons. It is a novelty in itself and took the best of any Educational comedy we have run. Wish more exhibitors would comment on comedies.—Otis Lomon, Auditorium theatre, Elmwood, Wis.—Small town patronage.

High and Dry (Educational), with a special cast.—A splendid comedy with something done all the time.—Otis Lomon, Auditorium theatre, Elmwood, Wis.—Small town patronage.

A Gasoline Wedding (Pathe), with Harold Lloyd.—This was an old reel, but am sure I have a better reeler than this has made. Everybody went away laughing.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Going Straight (Universal), with Mary Pickford.—O. K. for an added attraction. Failed to draw.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic, theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Why Pick On Me? (Pathe), with Harold Lloyd.—Here is a last one real comedy, loaded with gags and slapstick. Great for kids.—Frank M. Farrow, Apollo theatre, Seattle, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

Love’s Outcast (F. N.), with Ben Turpin.—A good comedy. Very original and got the laughs also. Bright-eyed old Ben Turpin gets the laughs nearly every time.—Ralph D. Griffin, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pop Zuttle’s Movie Queen (F. B. O.), with Dan Mason.—Shame to put such flim flam and expect to get a rent out of it. The lighting is almost a failure in a greater portion of it. I pulled it off after running it twice and substituted a old emergency comedy that was charged for damaging 30 feet $1.50. By right for this amount I should have been paid $15 for that run, for those that run this after me, I will have 30 feet less of no good picture.—1. H. Hepp, Idelhour theatre, Greely, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Little Rascal (Universal), with Baby Peggy.—Baby Peggy is pleasing my patrons better than comedies that have been here the past few weeks. The call for Baby Peggy is S. A. Berger, City theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Two Explorers (Pathe), Aesop Pictures, with cast together, and Grand pic was together in this one. They discover the North Pole. Very good moral: Ad versity is the test of true love and friendship.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pool Days (Fox), with Al St. John—Good. Has Napoleon, the monkey in it. This comedy will be great for use it kids’ matinees. A boisterous on Stock Days.—Frank M. Farrow, Apollo theatre, Seattle, Wash.—Neighborhood patronage.

By Heck (F. N.), a Mack Sennett production.—Good comedy of the slapstick variety and made them laugh.—Ralph Griddle, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Nearby patronage.

Some Class (Universal), with a special cast.—This is some comedy. Do n’t think you will make a mistake by running the Century comedies.—S. A. Berge, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hale and Hearty (Pathe), with Sn Pollard.—Snub in his old age look back upon the past of his younger da but much when we are them a smile. It will entertain. Don’t for it.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Palæst (F. N.), with Bus Keaton.—Not the best of Keaton’s any means, but will get by.—Ralph Griddle, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Nearby patronage.

Hard Luck (Metro), with Bus Keaton.—Buster Keaton is pleasing all A little. I had a few young fellows stay till to hear something, but the stage theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), v.A good comedy, if a little standard, still it’s a good comic.—C. F. Kriehbaum, Paramount theatre, Rochester, Ind.—General patronage.

Springtime (Vitagraph), with a spell
You'll get many happy returns when you play "The Third Alarm". Masterfully created by Emory Johnson, featuring Ralph Lewis. Distributed by F. B. O.

Remarks

The Rainmaker (Educational), with Lloyd Hamilton—One of the best comedies of the year—Clifford L. Niles, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny—Best subjects in two reels ever made. A novelty, clean and entertaining. My patrons keep asking for more. Played this series every Thursday, Friday and Saturday—A. J. Meyers, Knickerbocker theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.—General patronage.

A Sailor Made Man (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd—Good—Clarence W. Fullerton, Opera House, New Glarus, Wis.

The Unhappy Finish (Paramount)—Why do they do it? Many customers told me how poor this comedy was. Did not even get through. Charles Lyle, Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—General patronage.

Educational Comedies.—These one and two reel subjects are good.—A. L. Eighmer, Orpheum theatre, Mellen, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Great American Author Series (Hodkinson).—They fit into a program nicely as a good clean single reel. Has an educational value and yet is sugar-coated with a clever little story and good photography.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

The Gumps (Celebrated Players).—A good little reel that pleases my crowd. Priced right and fits into my program.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Pathe News—I consider this the best news of the year. Have tried the last three years. It is always a full reel and always interests me, and I have others speak about it better than my previous news reels.—Charles Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Urban Movie Chats (Hodkinson).—People like these. Have used them for six months now.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Rough Going (Pathe), with Leo Maloney.—For real clean entertaining. Werdens these two-reelers cannot be beat. They please, as they have a lot of action without the usual shoot-em-up. If you run Westerns try these.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Drifter (Pathe), with Leo Maloney.—As usual, this was up to Leo's better two reel Westerns. If you ever run one, you'll play them all. There is nothing better for a filler for your program. We are using these short subjects with our Saturday serial and they draw as much as the serial at the box office.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinith, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fool Days (Fox), with Al St. John.—Good comedy. Fox has some mighty good comedies.—Benton Theatre, Jackson, Mich.—General patronage.

A Sailor Made Man (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Run this as a feature and cleaned up. I ran an all-comedy, but would not advise other exhibitors to do likewise. Two reel Western would be much better.—J. J. Felder, Jr., Clinch theatre, Proctor Proof, Fla.—Small town patronage.

Punch the Clock (Pathe), with Snub Pollard.—A very laughable comedy that will please those who like comedy.—Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinith, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pardon My Glove (Educational), a Christie comedy.—A howling success, and the people had more good laughs at this than they had in many days.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

My Wife's Relations (F. N.), with Buster Keaton.—You can't go wrong on this. I rank this next to The Bowery & Charles Theatre Circuit, Vad- Wash.—General patronage.

Fearless Fido (Pathé) an Aesop Fable.—When Paul Terry drew this cartoon, he certainly meant for those who saw it to laugh themselves sick, and this is about what it amounted to with this show. Don't fasten too much on this.—B. L. Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinith, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Ladies' Man (Metro), with Bull Montana.—A fair comedy that gets better as it finishes. The third reel saves it.—H. J. Longaker, Howard theatre, Alexandria, Minn.—General patronage.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Semon always good for here. Went over like a house afire.—S. R. Peake, Pastime theatre, Maquoketa, la.—Neighborhood patronage.
Declares Davies Film Is Great Historical Record

Dr. Francis Trevelyan Miller, noted historian and author, in commenting upon Marion Davies Cosmopolitan picture, ‘When Knighthood Was in Flower,’ said: ‘When Knighthood Was in Flower’ is a picture that makes history. Gibbons in his ‘Roman Empire’ or Macaulay in his ‘History of England’ do not more vividly preserve historical events for the generations than does Miss Davies in her epoch making production.

‘I am, in truth, beginning to believe we historians must soon confess that these picturizations of world events in dramatic action are more important records for posterity than our cold type and scholastic researches.’

Bricker Starts Work on New Frankie Lee Comedy

With Frankie Lee’s latest two-reel comedy drama, ‘Robin Hood, Jr.,’ for East Coast Productions, now on its way to New York for production, Clarence Bricker, director, announced that his next production will be a two-reel comedy drama founded on Bess Aldrich’s story, ‘Last Night of the Blanche Thompson,’ originally published in the American Magazine.

Director Bruce Mitchell has signed on for O’Dea, considered one of the best comic heavies, to support ‘Fatty’ Karr in his new comedy, ‘Long Skirts,’ for the same company.

Fifty Sets Used in New Niblo Picture for Metro

Fred Niblo’s production of ‘The Famous Mrs. Fair,’ requires fifty sets to keep pace with the extravagant phases of the story, Metro announces. In addition to his work on the stages, Mr. Niblo is filming exterior scenes for the picture in Santa Barbara, Jel Monte and Pasadena.

The Famous Mrs. Fair,’ is picturized from the J. Frank O’Dea novel, considered one of the best comic heavies, to support ‘Fatty’ Karr in his new comedy, ‘Long Skirts,’ for the same company.

Call ‘Spider and Rose’
Good Box Office Title

Sid Grauman, Abe Warner, Mr. Rosenberg, Louis Hyman and C. C. Burr say that ‘The Spider and the Rose’ is a great box office title, according to B. F. Zeidman, who is producing the feature at United Studios.

Twelve star screen players are featured: Alice Lake, Gaston Glass, Robert McKim, Noah Beery, Frank Campean, Joseph Dowling, Edwin Stevens, Otis Harlan, Alec Francis, Andrew Arbuckle, little Richard Headrick and Louise Fazenda. ‘The Spider and the Rose,’ is a published magazine story by Gerald Duffy.

Burr Arranging Run on Broadway for New Film
Of Eugene Sue’s Novel

C. C. Burr is completing arrangements whereby "Secrets of Paris," will be shown on Broadway within a short time. "Secrets of Paris," a screen version of Eugene Sue’s widely read novel "The Mysteries of Paris," was produced by Whitman Bennett, directed by Kenneth Webb and is said to be a thrilling story of the underworld of Paris. An all-star cast is one of the outstanding features of the production. Numbered among the well known players are Lew Cody, Gladys Hulette, Montague Love, Dolores Casinelli, J. Barney Sherry, Walter James, William Collier, Jr., Rose Coghlan, Effe Shannon, Harry Sothern, Bradley Barker and Jane Thomas.

"Secrets of Paris," when shown on Broadway, will be surrounded by a carefully selected program of short subjects and musical numbers. Mr. Burr is now completing arrangements whereby one of the offers for the presentation he has received will be accepted.

Production Is Started of Second Bruce Barton Film

Work has been started at Better Day Pictures for the shooting of the second Bruce Barton one reel subjects, "Unhappy Husbands," which will be offered for booking by Second National Pictures Corporation as soon as completed. The first of these picturizations of the famous magazine editor’s humorous philosophy, "The Just a little Late Club," is now being booked. Second National reports many inquiries regarding the booking of "Wasted Lives," a December publication.

Cruez Calls It
His Greatest

"The best picture I ever made!"

James Cruz can truthfully say this, according to the Lasky studio executives, with regard to his new Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon," for the daily runs of the film now in process of editing prove that the scenes are of such a character that production experts can easily visualize from them the aspect of the combined sequences. Jesse L. Lasky and others are unanimous in the opinion voiced by Mr. Cruz.
THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

ACTIVITIES IN REVIEW

Facing the New Year

Late months of 1922 saw the beginning of a strong wave of business in the motion picture building and equipment field. Every indication points that this healthy business will grow and continue through the major portion of 1923. Business at the box office has quickened. Money is coming in. It is also being spent. The market is a receptive one to every worthwhile product. The order books of many firms who are going after business on a recognized business-like basis proves this.

Nineteen twenty-three will reward fighters on a ample scale for their efforts. The buying tide is already with them.

Reviewing the building situation Architectural Forum says: "We have every reason to believe that manufacturers are increasing production facilities and that, with conditions undisturbed the supply of materials will be adequate to meet the demand next year, with a return in the cost index at least to the low level of the early summer of 1922."

A Novel Innovation

Operators of projection machines, long confined behind dismal walls with only meager port-holes giving them a view of the audience and the world outside will step out of oblivion when Harry Crandall's new Tivoli theatre at Washington, D. C., is opened. In the Tivoli the projection room will have a fireproof wire-glass window opening directly into the mezzanine. The operator will have a sweeping view of the theatre and the patrons will be able to see into that necessary chamber from which its entertainment emanates.

Atmospheric and artistic decorations in the projection room is becoming a vogue. Undoubtedly this is a move in the same direction. What may we expect next?

How the Garfield Theatre Keeps Its Records

Accounting methods, a problem of long standing, has been solved in various ways and made to conform to individual requirements of the theatre. Methods for checking box office receipts, recording admission tax on sales, keeping weekly reports and the like have been worked out by exhibitors and undoubtedly many of these are performing the necessary work satisfactorily.

Reproduced herewith are three forms adopted by the Garfield theatre, Chicago, which are used by Manager Charles Ryan in handling the business of the house. They are especially worthy of study because of the compact manner in which provision is made for the various items that must be taken into consideration. Exhibitors who are not working on the highest basis of efficiency in this end of the business will find them of interest, and in all probability, be able to adopt some of the ideas contained in the forms to their own needs.

The theatre, as any other business institution, functions at a handicap unless it has evolved a satisfactory ledger or accounting system. The scope covered in the particular method used is, of course, an individual matter. Many theatres have found it policy to provide separately for such items as cost of film, express, advertising, fuel and electricity, income from slides, program advertising, rent, etc.

In a forthcoming issue this department will publish a finance ledger worked out by Elbert I. Conroe, Conroe's Playhouse, Conroe, Texas. Mr. Conroe has found the system he has evolved especially advantageous, and it is believed other exhibitors will find it of value.

While the method used at one theatre may not be the kind another exhibitor would care to adopt in its entirety for his house, it is apparent that an exchange of ideas and forms in use, would be valuable in containing many suggestions that may be overlooked by some. The importance of the highest efficiency possible in keeping these records is apparent and in view of the fact the Theatre Construction and Equipment department invites your further comment as a recital of experience from other exhibitors, explaining systems and forms which they have found to be practicable in the conduct of their business. The subject is an important one and is worthy of every consideration. Watch future issues for further illustrations.

Hurn Returns After Conference in East
Reports That Hodkinson Has Splendid Lineup for New Year

H. H. Hurn, Central division sales manager, has just returned from a trip to the home office, New York, where he has been going over the new Hodkinson output for the coming season with home officials.

Feature Opens at Orpheum
With the new C. C. Barr series of two reel comedies, the "Fun from the Press," sweeping the country, and a new series of "Col. Ezrali" cartoons, Mr. Hurn feels Hodkinson has a splendid lineup of short subjects. The feature products are especially noteworthy and the season already has opened up with a number of good bookings for "The Kingdom Within" and "Bulldog Drummond." These are to be followed by even bigger pictures, Mr. Hurn states.

To augment the sales staff in the Chicago territory, Milton Crandall, special representative of Hodkinson, has been assigned to this territory, to do special exploitation work for "Bulldog Drummond," which opens for a two-weeks' run at the Orpheum theatre, Jan. 31. Mr. Crandall will also exploit "The Kingdom Within" and several other features during his month's stay.

Goldwyn's Go-getter

As Goes to Detroit

The Hodkinson special representative has a long list of successful exploitation stunts to his credit, having put over "Mickey," Clara Kimball Young's series, and conducted a personal tour of Theda Bara's. His latest was the fashion show with Irene Castle which was shown in connection with "Slam Shoulders," another Hodkinson feature. He toured the Southern States with this show.

Mr. Hurn left Thursday for Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and will return to New York City.

Two Madison Street
Theatres Change Hands

Two of Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Madison street houses changed hands with the new year—the Alcazar and the Rose, both located in the Morrison Hotel Block—C. E. Beck of the Castle theatre assuming the new leases. They will continue to be run as popular priced houses until the new operators have added admission. It is said that "Trilling Women" is the attraction at the Rose this week and an old Doughboy Fairbanks feature is playing at the Alcazar.

Goldwyn Company Has Returned to Studios

Director Rupert Hughes and the members of his company, who have been at Palm Springs, Cal., taking exteriors for his screen version of his latest novel, "Souls for Sale," have returned to the Goldwyn studios where the interiors are now being photographed.

Three more players have been added to the already notable cast. They are Roy Atwell, George Morgan and Eve Sothern.

HOLIDAY RECEIPTS OF $18,000 ARE STOLEN
Robbers Make Way With Safe
And Contents of the Pantheon Theatre

Burglars entered the rear door of the Pantheon theatre, on Sheridan Road, early Tuesday morning and carried away a heavy safe and $18,000 in cash, the receipts of the Pantheon and the Lakeside theatres, both houses belonging to the Lubliner & Trinz circuit.

The Pantheon played to heavy business Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and the receipts of the two houses ran into thousands of dollars, following a midnight show New Year's eve.

The loss was discovered early Tuesday morning when Manager Martin Sacks entered the theatre office, and noticed the safe gone, also the rug of the office.

The father of Lila Lee, Charles Appel, who manages a hotel at North Clark street, Chicago, was also robbed of $7,700 in the hallway of his apartment at 820 North Clark street. Two burglars stood in cash and a diamond pin valued at $1,000. Mr. Appel was about to go to the bank to deposit money when he was robbed.

Arbuckle’s Return

The recent decision of Will Hays to allow Fatty Arbuckle to return to picture work seems to have stirred up more than the usual amount of interest among readers of Chicago dailies. The "People's Forum" columns have been flooded for the past week with letters commending the Chicago Tribune's editorials, and deploring Mr. Hays' action. An occasional dissenter is doused out by the dozens of letters asking for fair play.

Gettelson in Chicago

I. Gettelson, former district manager of Universal at Minneapolis, and more recently the Washington Booking Manager for Film Booking Offices, has been placed in charge of country sales under managers J. J. Sampson of the Chicago office. Mr. Gettelson is well known in Chicago, and welcomes the opportunity to again establish his family in the Windy City.

Fox Managers Meet

Clyde Eckhardt, assistant general manager Fox Film Corp., arrived in Chicago on Wednesday from New York and called a meeting of all the Central West and Southern branch managers at the local exchange offices on Thursday, a campaign for Fox Week was outlined which has already been put under way in Chicago.

Goldwyn Company Has Returned to Studios

Director Rupert Hughes and the members of his company, who have been at Palm Springs, Cal., taking exteriors for his screen version of his latest novel, "Souls for Sale," have returned to the Goldwyn studios where the interiors are now being photographed.

Three more players have been added to the already notable cast. They are Roy Atwell, George Morgan and Eve Sothern.

JEFF PASSES THROUGH

Jeffrey Lazarus, former First National exploitation man located at Chicago, but now one of Sid Grauman's staff at Los Angeles, passed through Chicago on Saturday enroute to California, to take up his new duties.

STEVINS DIES IN WEST
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)
LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—Edwin Stevins, for many years an actor on the legitimate stage and of late years appearing in pictures, died here today of pneumonia. Mr. Stevins was 60 years of age.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By J. R. M._

EROY W. ALEXANDER, Universal manager at Kansas City, visited his parents in Chicago over the Christmas holidays. Roy is looking particularly fit and says he is gradually getting acquainted round K. C. * * *

FRANK ISMAIL, the Metro city salesman, is all set for a lot of ice along old Lake St., and a good time. Frank has built himself an ice Ford speeder, which is guaranteed to do 35 miles an hour on the rightaway, and he's waiting for a long old spell to try it out. * * *

G. E. Bond, manager of First National exchange, is back to his desk after a week's illness. A cold and nervous breakdown kept the First National go-getter indoors. * * *

"Bill" Cook took the boys out sightseeing the other evening with his $100—recently copped in a salesman's contest—and according to reports both the First National salesmen who went along and the hundred ad a good time, although the latter looked a little the worse for the trip. * * *

ED LANSING, Fox salesman out of Minneapolis, spent the holidays in Chicago with relatives. * * *

Sid MAYER and his force of salesmen Grohe, Lyon, Delany, etc., are determined to let every exhibitor hereabouts know about Fox Anniversary week—Jan. 28-Feb. 3. They put in 250 calls over the phone last Tuesday and fixed everybody up with play dates and Fox features. * * *

HARRY BURCH, Fox news cameraman, has resigned. * * *

The local office of Paramount sent flowers to Max Ruse Doolittle's funeral at Minneapolis. Mr. Doolittle was one of the best known exploitation men Paramount has on its list. * * *

DAN ROCHE, the Paramount exploiter, after spending Christmas with his family, immediately hiked back to Charlotte, S. C., to get his covered wagon in readiness for its long trip to New York. Dan is sprouting whiskers and learning to ride a horse it is said. * * *

BIL DANZGER, who served in the well known cavalry of the U. S. Army, and therefore can ride a horse, has to stay in Chicago on account of the hi, as it were. However, Bill is consoling himself with the fact that he put over a good "cute sayings" contest at Rochester, Ind., for "A Bachelor Daddy." * * *

And by the way exhibitors booking Paramount pictures hereafter should put on their walking shoes, for that exchange will be located at 14th street and Wabash avenue shortly. Everything's all set for the moving. * * *

Last week we reported Jack LYNCH, the F. B. O. salesman, as on the sick list, but through a slip said he was with First National. No, he's still with F. B. O. and he's back on the job and every day in every way growing better 'n better. * * *

HARRY MELCHER, the Hodkinson exchange man, Omaha, was called to Chicago and was in conference with central division sales manager H. H. Hurn last Friday. * * *

WATTSER R. ROTHACKER, of Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., found a handsome gold wrist watch in his stocking on Christmas Day. Nobody gave him any lavenders, he said, but he has a birthday soon, and has hopes. * * *

AL PARKER, not to forget the Rothacker plant, and Doug. ROTHACKER, are back in town after a two months' sojourn in St. Louis. * * *

O. S. WHITAKER will travel the Iowa territory for Hodkinson. * * *

ROBERT BALYSTINE, who conducts three theatres in Northern Illinois, visited his sister in Chicago over the holidays, and called on friends along the Row. * * *

HERMAN STERN and Louis Laemmle, of the "U" exchange, were in Freeport, Ill., last week with "Under Two Flags" their talking point. * * *

Among the Christmas gifts we forgot to mention last week was one to Louis Laemmle. The Universal boys presented him with a gold pen and pencil set. * * *

EDGAR HOFF was seen looking at engagement rings during the Xmas holidays. Yes, they make a nice gift, too, Edgar. * * *

And GERTIE, Universal's obliging phone girl, is wearing a beautiful white gold wrist watch, which comes in handy when she wants to keep tabs on a certain young man around the exchange building at 531 S. Wabash ave. * * *

JOE LYON, the Fox Greek salesman, is proudly displaying a new winter top on his Hip. * * *

The Illinois M. P. T. O. will meet the Operator's Union officials this week, to discuss a wage scale for 1923. The present agreement expires Jan. * * *

AL SOBLER staged a Jackie Coogan Club contest at Ottawa, Ill., and put over "Olivever Twist" at the Gately theatre recently. A special prize was given the kiddies.

The KINGDOM WITHIN
Will Stir the Hearts of the World

M. P. NEWS: It's a good audience picture, finely staged, and carrying a plot which holds the interest all the way. The acting is splendid as contributed by Russell Simpson, Pauline Starke and Ernest Torrence. Good for any type of audience and should draw most everywhere.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: "The Kingdom Within" should be well received in places where sentimentality is enjoyed. The story is melodramatic and works up to a good climax.

EXHIBITORS HERALD: Excellent direction of capable players in a dramatic and all absorbing story stamp this feature as one of more than ordinary entertainment qualities. Swift-moving, unaltering in interest, with its genuine appeal to the emotions it is rare entertainment of a substantial variety founded on a beautiful thought. Thoroughly convincing dramatic production. Type of picture that is not readily forgotten. It is the type of picture that should make friends for the cinema among the more fastidious of a community.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: A powerful drama of life in the timberlands; the direction throughout is excellent and so is the acting of the featured players as well as that of the supporting cast.

"The Kingdom Within", a title, by the way, that is replete with meaning, should prove absorbing to any audience.

FILM DAILY: Effective dramatic moments and a satisfying dramatic entertainment generally. For those who like a rather strong dramatic entertainment and favor a theme which makes faith all powerful, the picture should prove wholly satisfying.

M. P. JOURNAL, N. Y.: Excellent drama, based on a strong story, together with a well chosen and capable cast, including Pauline Starke, Gaston Glass, and Ernest Torrence. First runs indicate tremendous box-office possibilities, if exhibitor will advertise his booking. Picture may be included among the best of winter season, and is a big program special. Sure money winner.

M. P. WORLD: Intensely dramatic is the story of "The Kingdom Within," the Victor Schertzinger production which is being distributed by Hodkinson. It is a production which tells a gripping story and holds the interest throughout.

It is a picture which is quite different from the usual run and because of this and its strongly dramatic story, wealth of spiritual insight and acting of a fine cast, should prove welcome in the majority of theatres.

'The TOWN THAT
Heralded as a Masterpiece

Evening Mail:—

"There are two outstanding features in the new William Fox picture at the Astor Theatre. One is a superlative performance of a small boy and the other is a marvelous storm and flood effect... It is a masterpiece of realism, so vivid that one expects the theatre to be swept away in the path of the raging torrent. It is a tremendous thing—that storm—with an entire town, built for the purpose, completely destroyed by the flood... This picture is done with real power. One's tear ducts must be particularly dry to resist the appeal of some of the scenes in it."

Morning Word:

"We have been proceed on the theory for some months that we were storm-proof, as the motion pictures were conceived. But at the Astor Theatre last night for the first time we got up and yelled for someone to rescue Lillian Gish in War Down East, we were fixed face with a cinema storm so terrifying, so catastrophic so beastly real that we shoved in our boots, and actually regret that such a thing as a motion picture camera ever been invented. If there ever in a scene of fury pictured on cinem a screen, here it is in the storm of storms. It will get you, too."

— EVENING MAIL

FORGOT GOD
by New York's Leading Critics

Tribune:
If we were William Fox we owned a deluge such as he is presenting at the Astor Theatre, a picture called 'The Town That Forgot God', we surely could use it in every picture we have. A flood has no place on the stage, no matter how old it is. We thought there was a marvelous storm in 'The Old Homestead', and again we thrilled at the storm in 'One Frightening Night', and again in 'The Sin Flood', but all these together would just about match the deluge in 'The Town That Forgot God'.

Evening World:
"In presenting 'The Town That Forgot God' at the Astor Theatre, William Fox has given Broadway one of the most powerful photodramas yet seen. Viewed from every angle the film is practically faultless. The play finds a fitting climax in one of the most spectacular flood scenes yet filmed. In 'The Town That Forgot God', William Fox has lived up to his reputation for the spectacular and heart-touching melodrama. It is well worth a trip to the Astor."

"The Man Who Waited" is a reliable, rattling good western with an abundance of action, mystery, suspense and romance which stamps it far out of the ordinary. Its hero is a youth whose one aim is to find and punish the man who wronged his father. But even after he penetrates the villain's disguise, he finds it a job to capture the rogue; and between chasing the villain, keeping secret the location of his mine and winning the heart of a girl, who proves to be the daughter of the bad man, the hero is on the jump every minute of the feature's five reels.

Edward I. Luddy, who wrote and directed "The Man Who Waited," started off excitement by staging a rousing good fight at the beginning and kept the picture geared up to a high dramatic speed. The surprise climax comes after a thrilling race from the isolated gold mine to the nearest town to file a claim. The villains are in the lead and the hero brings some spectacular riding to beat them to it.

Frank Braidwood, in the title role, has a decidedly attractive personality and can ride a horse like a jockey. You can guarantee genuine thrills whenever he brings into the saddle. Inez MacDonald is pretty in everything expected of a dashing, spirited Western heroine. Jay Morley is a thorough bad man.

Play up "The Man Who Waited" as a Western thriller and ballyhoo it to the limit. Make a play on the title in your advertising and exploitation. Send one man in a Western outfit with a bag on which is printed: "I'm a stranger in town and missed 'The Man Who Waited' at the depot. Will someone direct me to the . . . . . . . theatre?" Bill the feature as "A Drama of Stolen Gold and Stolen Hearts" or "A Thrilling Tale of Fortunes Made, Lost and Regained."

Use the following copy in your newspaper advertisements; go and see track down his father's enemies and frustrate their dastardly plot against himself. The terrific explosion of a gold mine—hundreds of miners trapped. A wild race on horseback over hills and plains, a spectacular thrilling the rescue by an intelligent horse. It's a western drama of thrills and action—"The Man Who Waited."

CROWDS AT CHICAGO
SEE "BROKEN CHAINS"

The Daily News $10,000 Scenario Brings "Greatest Day" to Loop Theater.

200,000 ARE EXPECTED

BY PAUL R. LEACH.

"Broken Chains," the photoplay produced by Goldwyn from the $10,000 first prize winning entry in The Daily News $20,000 scenario contest has taken Chicago by storm. Throughout yesterday, from 11 a.m. until the closing of the Chicago theater last night and again today, record-breaking crowds stood in line before the theater. Those who had seen the thrilling story of Teddy Wyndham's regeneration from cowardice to-day, were still there at 5:30, the crowds were intense.

"Broken Chains" literally packed the theater from opening to closing of the doors.

Story Won $10,000 Prize.

The play is the Allen Holubar production (a Goldwyn picture) of the story by Miss Winifred Kimball of Apalachicola, Fla., who won the $10,000 first prize in The Daily News $20,000 scenario contest, to which amateur and professional photoplay writers in all parts of the United States sent their best efforts. The film features as stars Colleen Moor, Claire Windsor, Ernest Torrence as Malcolm McGregor.

In addition to marking the rise to fame of a young, talented photoplay writer, "Broken Chains" has been warmly received as a photoplay of the highest merit.

When the theater was opened at 1 a.m. yesterday there was a long line of eagerly expectant picture fans. The box office, which seats 2,000, was quick to fill. From that time onward there were crowds outside. At 1:30 there were two lines of patrons extending from the theater entrance to Lake Street and Randolph Street in North State Street. The size of this line ebbed and swelled as the successive runs of the play were completed and seats were made available. At 3 o'clock, again at 5 o'clock and a little after, the crowds were intense.

"Broken Chains" takes us to the theater from opening to closing of the doors.

Now in Chicago, directed by Allen Holubar.

If you could gain the whole world by digging a twenty-mile ditch in the sand, would you do it? You would!

A great man once got the earth's biggest ditch in the sand—the Suez Canal—by a bloodless fight with his enemies. He had courage and power. Those same qualities enabled Distinctive Productions to make one of the world's master films, based on the life of this man and bearing his name as a title:

Disraeli

There is more satisfaction and real fun in working than ordinary men realize. There was more satisfaction and fun in the film story which proves this point than screen fans usually get. The picture was Distinctive's

The Ruling Passion

If you work hard you'll be happy. If you can, in addition, put your heart in your work you'll be much happier. You then will get as much solid pleasure in life as screen patrons got from the Distinctive film based on this idea. The film was

The Man Who Played God

The qualities depicted in these films are the qualities which typify the company responsible for them. Distinctive has had courage and power to plan distinctive pictures for the pictures' sake . . . Distinctive believes in working long and hard to get results . . . Distinctive knows that the pictures which make the public happy are the ones which entertain through heart interest . . . Distinctive has put its heart in the task of pleasing the public by its product.
DISTINCTIVE PROMISE

DISTINCTIVE PICTURES CORPORATION promises that its future productions will possess all the qualities of its past ones.

It further promises that its executives will never be content to put out a picture merely "just as good" as the previous one. It will have to be better to please them. They have put their minds and hearts to the accomplishment of this task. The first new Distinctive picture will be

Backbone

Here is a story of never-dying love, of criminal plotting, heroic counter-plotting and powerful conflicts. Clarence Budington Kelland wrote it for the Saturday Evening Post. Every motion picture producer in the country was in on the bidding for it. Distinctive got it! Edith Roberts and Alfred Lunt head a distinctive cast, with Edward Sloman directing. Backbone will be ready soon. Next will come

The Ragged Edge

Based on Harold MacGrath's novel of the South Seas. A wonderful girl, her soul chilled to terror by heartless environment, struggles to escape. A boy, tormented by his New England conscience, seeks to bury himself in the life which appalled the girl. They meet, and solve each other's problem. How? This picture will reveal to you a new and strange story. Harmon Weight will direct it.

Just the Beginning

These two great stories are the forerunners of others. Distinctive will put into the filming of them all those qualities which go to the production of great pictures.

Buster Keaton in this release keeps up his good record for turning out snappy comedies, full of humor and clever situations which are sure to bring laughs from the most hardened spectators. It starts off like a burlesque on "The Village Blacksmith," but soon branches off. The way in which Buster "sells" a fancy pair of shoes to a beautiful white horse, going through exactly the same stunts as a shoe salesman would do for milady is a scream. The magnet stuff is good, so is the way in which he and his boss manage to utterly wreck a new auto. The stunt where he is caught on the railroad track and runs in fright after he discovers the train has stopped just behind him will surely bring laughs. In fact, it is filled with sure-fire, laugh-producing material.

Robert E. Sherwood, one of America's foremost film critics, in selecting this list, says in part:

In examining this All-American Eleven, I find that no less than seven are spectacular costume plays; one is a rural drama, one a fantastic comedy, one a broad comedy and one a so-called "educational" picture (I hate that word).

This proves one thing: that size and romance are distinct assets to a moving picture. The simple, straightforward story of modern life may achieve greatness, but only in unusual instances. "Tol'able David" is emphatically one of them.

"Oliver Twist" gave Jackie Coogan the chance to fulfill the tremendous promise which he made in "The Kid" and "My Boy." It also served to establish Frank Lloyd as a great director.

"The Eternal Flame" was another evidence of Frank Lloyd's ability.

This list, of course, is limited to feature photoplays; but I cannot pass calmly over the shorter films as though they did not exist. In fact, brevity has proved to be a distinct asset on the screen, and there have been plenty of two-reelers which deserve flattering mention. There were any number of Buster Keaton comedies.

Here's the answer to a puzzle—

We often wonder why certain pictures go over so big. Pictures like "Humoresque," "Miracle Man" or "Over the Hill." Many of the greatest hits are without famous stories or famous stars. Why do they break box office records?

The answer is—

They make people feel what the screen doesn't show

Such pictures are rare but Edwin Carewe's "Mighty Lak A Rose" is one of them. It is from Curtis Benton's original story of high society and low society.

It has a title the whole world loves.

Gov. Smith's Address

Every person identified with the motion picture industry and particularly the exhibitors, who are the industry's first line of defense, should have at hand for ready reference a copy of the inaugural address of Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York which was pronounced last week in Albany.

Gov. Smith with uncompromising sincerity and keen logic dealt all censorship and particularly motion picture censorship a blow from which it is not likely to rise again in the Empire state, at least during the present generation. The declaration of New York's chief executive will have a nation-wide effect on the question of censorship. It cannot be passed over lightly by even the most zealous advocate of legalized censorship.

Gov. Smith knew what he was talking about. In his state, under his own observation, censorship after having been put to a practical test proved a failure. And added to this eloquent fact he recites many unanswerable arguments proving the unjustness and inequality of this infringement of personal liberty.

Keep the address of Gov. Smith in your files for future reference.

Five Reels

The average feature production should be forced back within the limit of five reels. Despite the suggestions, pleadings and demands of exhibitors, whom the producers profess to serve, feature pictures have been getting longer and longer. An outstanding motive of directors seems to be to elaborate rather than condense.

Brevity, conciseness and the elimination of extraneous matter never has hurt any picture. But, on the other hand, examples are numerous of pictures that missed being satisfying entertainments simply because of excess footage.

The artistic aspect, however, is not the only one that is entitled to consideration. The exhibitor's revenue, regardless of the merit of his program, is to a great extent dependent upon the length of his show. Chaplin's "The Kid" was a great attraction from every standpoint but it was a phenomenal money-maker for the theatres because of its comparative brevity.

The public's interest in short subjects, in various kinds and varieties of novelties compressed within limits of five hundred feet, one thousand and two thousand foot lengths is great and it is constantly increasing. The exhibitor must meet the demand that this interest creates. In order to do this he must have feature pictures that do not run to extraordinary lengths.

It is only the unusually big subject that cannot be most effectively done in five reels. To try to put an ordinary subject in the big picture class by stretching it out is jeopardizing its fitness to be shown at all.

Five reel lengths make many pictures better entertainment, save the producer thousands of dollars and give the exhibitor a better chance of profitable operation on ordinary subjects.

Crooked Exchanges

The film business, nor any other business, cannot aspire to commercial perfection, but its resignation to this fact should not permit it to be content to carry certain piratical independent or state right distributors that now infest various of the territories.

Several of these state right exchanges have been going on for years with a code of business practice that unquestionably would have had them in jail in any industry where stricter methods prevail. Thousands, and perhaps millions of dollars, have simply been stolen by these exchanges by a system no more subtle than merely refusing to render an accounting to producers on funds collected.

When the producer who is a partner of the exchange under this arrangement is deliberately and consistently robbed, it is easy to see what treatment the exhibitor gets.

Censor Repeal
Bill Introduced
In N. Y. State

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 9.—A bill calling for the full repeal of the New York censorship law was introduced in the Assembly today by Assemblyman Louis Colville of New York City. Recommendation that the law be abolished was made only last Wednesday by Gov. Alfred E. Smith in his message to the legislature.

Wabash, Ind., Blues Are Ended by Mayor

WABASH, IND., Jan. 9.—"Those Wabash Blues" will be no more. Mayor Wil- liam has announced that the Sunday "blue w" will not be enforced here in the future. The mayor said he was convinced at sentiment was opposed to the "blue w" and that, inasmuch as he was work- ing for the betterment of the city, it had been decided that the restrictions would be lifted.

The mayor's announcement follows:

"When this agitation against Sunday moving picture shows began, strong press-ure was brought to bear on Sheriff Summer- land to close the shows on Sunday. I asked over the situation carefully and de- cided that the people of Wabash must have a closed city. There was much agi- tation for a 'blue Sunday,' and much against it. I had no way of finding what majority wanted without trying a 'blue' Sunday for awhile and waiting the reac- tion. I favored a referendum vote on the subject, but this seemed impractical and expensive, so we tried 'blue' Sunday an experiment.

"I find that a majority of the people of the city do not want 'blue' Sundays. I am re-quired to administer the city's affairs in keep- ing with the law and the wishes of the majority. Hence I have no alternative but to remove the restrictions imposed some weeks ago."

Negotiations Will Give Paramount Complete Control
Of Big String of Houses in Southern States

NEW YORK, January 9.—Some time this week, negotiations will be closed whereby the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will acquire complete control of 175 theatres in Southern states owned, leased or booked by S. A. Lynch and his exchange partners.

The deal involves several millions of dollars. Included in the theatres which pass to the ownership of Famous Players will be many of the finest playhouses in the South, scores of well built modest theatres, and dozens of structures of the variety generally referred to in the trade as "shooting gal- leries."

Michaelove To Be Retained; Franklyn in Charge

Daniel A. Michaelove, general manager of the S. A. Lynch theatres, will be retained in this capacity, it is generally understood. The entire group, however, will be coordinated with other Paramount organizations. This move was called for under the general supervision of Harold B. Franklyn, recently placed in charge of theatres by Famous Players.

The Lynch chain of theatres extends into all of the Southern states and into practically every city of important size. Many of the houses are located in small communities and run programs but twice a week.

Some of the Cities Served

The Paramount exchanges affected by the deal are located at Atlanta, New Or- leans, Dallas, Charlotte and Oklahoma City. Mr. Lynch has controlled the distri- bution of the Famous Players-Lasky product from these exchange centers for a number of years.

It is understood that the personnel of these branches will remain virtually in tact under the Famous Players-Lasky banner.

Storm Center in Business

The Lynch chain has been a stormy petrel in the motion picture industry for years. At various times individual Southern theatre owners have charged the Lynch organization with unfair com- petition and "starving out" methods of acquiring playhouses.

The famous "Patterson Convention" called in Chicago three years ago by Willard Patterson was for the purpose of enlisting exhibitors from all parts of the country to assist the Southern independ- ent exhibitor to fight Lynch. It was the forerunner of the Cleveland con- vention at which the Motion Picture Thea- tre Owners of America was formed.

The M. P. T. O. A. opened its career with a series of violent attacks on the Famous Players-Lasky Company and Lynch. For more than a year there were charges and conferences, which ended in a truce.

Federal Body Probes Situation

The Federal Trade Commission has been studying information against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, charging unfair competition and restraint of trade, and as co-defendants Lynch and several other thea- tre chain owners, in whose theatres Famous Players was financially inter- ested.

More recently, Lynch was made one of the defendants in a suit brought by Vitagraph, Inc., against Famous Player- ers-Lasky Corporation for $6,000,000 on a charge of restraint of trade.

Paramount Controls 850 Theatres?

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is generally believed to control approxi- mately 850 theatres. Early last summer it took over the Alfred S. Black New England theatres, in which it had been financially interested.

It owns the Radio, Rivoli and Crite- rion theatres in New York City and plans a fourth large house in the heart of the theatre district. It is financially inter- ested in the Stanley theatres of Phila- delphia, controlling theatres in Pennsyl- vania, Delaware and New Jersey. It also has extensive interests in St. Louis and on the West Coast.

To Quit Film Business

It is understood that Mr. Lynch in- tended to draw out of the film business entirely, although he will retain his large stock interest in Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Among his many other interests in the South is included the "Tank" Com- pany, which many of his executives will transfer their activities.

Hit by Coal Shortage

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 9.—Motion pic- ture theatres in northern New York are complaining in many instances these days about poor business brought about through low water conditions prevailing in the mill towns. Some of the houses are finding it a hard matter to secure coal sufficient to heat the places.
“Third Alarm” Brings Cheers From Broadway Patrons

New F. B. O. Special Given Premiere at Astor Theatre; Growds Turned Away at Opening

By JOHN S. SPARCO

(N.York Editor, Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, January 9.—Two things were demonstrated at the Astor theatre last night. One is that the clang of the fire engine and the hoof beats of the fire horses in their wild dash to a fire strikes a sufficiently responsive chord to bring cheers from an average Broadway audience. The second is that Emory Johnson has made for F. B. O. distributing a film offering which brings these cheers not only once but many times.

The occasion of the demonstration was the premiere of “Third Alarm,” which the F. B. O. officials have pat forward as their most pretentious production.

The enthusiasm of the big audience would make it appear that the judgment of the distributors has not been misplaced. The production is prolific in exploitation angles and these had been used to such good advantage by Nat G. Rothstein and his aides that the theatre was filled and many persons turned away long before the beginning of the showing.

Many in the audience were familiar firemen who have heard the fire gong and answered it for many years. Many others were leading exhibitors from this section of the country and New England to whom the gong sounded like the jingle of cash in their box offices. The remainder of the audience was made up of just plain people who received an hour and a half of excellent entertainment, interspersed with enough thrills to last them for some time.

Monday night was a big night for F. B. O., an instant company in the so-called infant industry, which has been able in the short period of ten months to reorganize and offer such special productions as “The Third Alarm.”

Cobe Directs Presentation

Among the crowd that filled the Astor theatre to over-flowing long before the commencement of the evening’s entertainment was Fire Commissioner Thomas J. Drennan, and many other fire department officials who saw depicted on the screen deeds of valor similar to those performed in the actual work by firemen.

The presentation, under the direction of Andrew J. Cobe, was worthy of the production. The prologue was a firehouse scene with a quartette singing appropriate songs. This was interrupted by the ringing of the alarm and the scene faded into the opening of the film with clanging gongs, hoof beats of horses and the cracking of flames accompanying the feature.

The remainder of the program consisted of a Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven comedy, “A Ringer for Dad.”

Lichtman Organizing Special Field Force To Assist Exhibitors

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A special force of sales representatives to work in the field and act as aids to exhibitors when such need may arise is being developed by A1 Lichtman Corporation. The force, at present, consists of five men, all of long experience in the motion picture sales methods. They are Leon D. Netter, Edward Grossman, Foster Moore, Joseph Klein and A. D. Netter. The last two have just been added to the company.

These special representatives will have duties taking them into every section of the country.

Netter is in the Iowa-Nebraska territory, where A. H. Blank controls Lichtman distribution; Grossman is in St. Louis, where the Skouras Brothers own the franchise; Moore is in Chicago, where Celebrated Players handle distribution; Klein has been dispatched to Cleveland, the headquarters of the Charles organization, while Whitaker’s first assignment will be Washington and, ultimately, Atlanta and New Orleans.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, Jan. 9.—Robert Epperson, who started as a poster clerk in the Universal branch here six years ago, has been appointed manager of the exchange by Edward Armstrong, assistant general manager. He is probably the youngest manager of a Universal exchange in the country.

Mr. Epperson succeeds F. L. McNamme, who is returning east.

First National Gets New Coogan Produc “Daddy” and “Toby Tyler” to Be Booked on Open Market Basis

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—Jackie Coogan’s productions will continue to some time to go through First National all rumors to the contrary.

Predicts Large Grosses

Sol Lesser has just announced consummation of negotiations whereby the new Coogan features, “Daddy” and “Toby Tyler,” will be handled by First National on an open market bookings basis. Each of these spectacles should gross $750,000, says Mr. Lesser.

“Daddy” was made from an original story which was directed by E. Mason Hopper. It will be published in March. “Toby Tyler” is based on the world read circus story and was directed by Edward Clive, who handles the megaphone on all of the Buster Keaton comedies. This latter picture will be published in June.

Irving Lesser Goes East

The deal for these two new Coogan productions was entered into during the recent First National visit to the East Coast and was completed immediately upon the return of the company’s executives to New York.

Irving M. Lesser has returned to New York where he will handle the general distribution for the new productions as well as pilot distribution for all of the former Coogan pictures.

United Artists Export Official to Go Abroad

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Because foreign business of United Artists has developed so rapidly that additional facilities for distribution of product must be handled the megaphone has been assigned to H. Wayne Pierson, assistant general manager of the foreign department will sail from Seattle Sunday night, bound for the Orient on a tour of inspection of foreign offices.

His itinerary will include Russia, Japan, China, the Straits Settlements, India, South Africa, Egypt, The Philippine Islands, and other points. Its quota of prints to the Orient has doubled within the year United Artists Corporation declares.

Pathe Serial Chief to Make Business Surve

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—E. O. Brook manager of Pathe serial sales has left New York for an extended visit to Pacific Coast key cities to be gone ten weeks, or longer. He will make a detailed investigation of trade conditions in these territories.

His headquarters during this period will be the Pathe branch offices at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. He plans to confer with leading exhibitors of those sections.
Music Tax Plan Not Unfair Competition, Declares U. S.

Federal Trade Commission Declines to Act on the Complaint of President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners

(Newspaper article dated January 9, 1923)

NEW YORK, January 9.—Licensing a theatre playing music of members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is not an unfair method of competition in commerce.

This is the decision of the federal trade commission in considering Sydney S. Cohen's complaint on behalf of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America against the A. S. C. A. P.

President Cohen's Next Move Is Problematical

Just what President Cohen's next step in connection with the "music tax" situation will be is problematical. He has his music department in the M. P. T. O. A. under the direction of A. J. Moeller. Effort supposedly is being made to amend the copyright law to bring the relief desired by the exhibitors.

One can only conjecture as to the results to be realized from these two movements.

In replying to Mr. Cohen's complaint, Willard F. Hudson, chief examiner of the federal trade commission, said:

"We have carefully considered the facts, as stated by you, and examined the decisions of the courts applicable thereto, with the result that it has been concluded that the case is not one calling for the exercise of the commission's compulsory powers.

Royalty Claim Not Unfair

"The chief reason for this conclusion may be stated as the fact that the making of a claim for royalties, apparently in good faith, cannot be said to constitute an unfair method of competition in commerce; it cannot be said to be unfair in the sense in which the word is used in the commission's organic act, and is merely an assertion of a supposed legal right which is fully determined by the courts; and it is not a 'method of competition' because the parties to the controversy are not in any way competing with each other.

"It is regretted that we are unable to aid you in this instance."

Must Go to Congress

As stated in the Herald in the December 30 issue, "it is the general opinion in Washington that the copyright law is sufficiently clear and that the action of the courts in regard to the 'music tax' adequately deals with the matter. If any relief is to be had, it has been pointed out, Congress is the body to approach for legislation to amend the copyright law."

First Woman Jury in S. Dakota Disagrees In Exhibitors' Trial

(Berkeley, January 3.)—Two exhibitors, M. B. Ryan and E. W. Kundert, who operate the Empress theatre have the distinction of being tried by the first jury composed of women in the state of South Dakota.

Messes. Ryan and Kundert were arrested recently on a charge of violating a city ordinance against operation of a theatre on Sunday. They demanded a jury trial, which was held last week and which resulted in a disaggreement.

A re-trial has been set for January 16 at the request of bill law advocates who are active in pushing the fight against the theatre owners.

Churches Continue to Wage War on Theatres

(Richmond, Ind., January 9.)—Despite a published statement by Lawrence A. Handley, mayor, that he would not interfere with the operation of motion picture theatres here on Sunday, pastors representing nineteen churches today asserted they would continue their fight to close the theatres on the Sabbath. It is expected they will file affidavits against violators of the "Liturgical Law."

The ministers issued a statement in which they said the mayor promised to close the theatres on the first Sunday in January, but that he changed his mind and gave his statement to a newspaper without previously having informed the ministers of his decision.

State Censor Board Is Sponsored for Indiana; Legislature in Session

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 9.—The church Federation of Indianapolis has drafted a resolution recommending that a state censorship of motion pictures be established. The state legislature now is in session.

The federation also noted "with interest and satisfaction the very general disapproval on the part of the public" of the actions of H. H. Hays in relighting "Faust." Rev. C. H. Winders, secretary of the federation, said that the members of the commission did not feel that the present enforcement of motion pictures was sufficient. "A state censorship is our ultimate goal," he explained. "That is finally to be an ethical censorship, which we hope to accomplish through the states."

Charles Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors' Association, Inc., while stopping over in this city expressed himself as doubting that the Indiana legislature would enact censorship law. "Motion picture censorship can be effected very well under the recent Indiana laws covering the showing of immoral or bad pictures and literature," he said.

Mary Pickford to Make "Faust" as Photodrama

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—With herself in the role of Marguerita, Mary Pickford announced her intention of producing a motion picture version of "Faust." The film is to be made under the direction of Ernest Lubitsch, German director, who recently came to America; and who has been engaged to direct the pictures of both Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

Mary Pickford is also said to have purchased the "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" under Lubitsch's direction.

Shipman Agrees on Percentage

Ernest Shipman has received from the publishers of "The Man from Glengarry" company, which opened at the Grand Opera House, London, Ontario, for a three days engagement, the following wire, reporting receipts of the first day: "Gross on day $3,350 with hundreds turned away. All previous records broken. Minimum of 3,000 assured."

"The anticipated minimum, of $3,000," says Mr. Shipman, "according to the contract, which is a 50 per cent basis, will give us a net profit of $1,350 after all expenses are deducted. All previous bookings in this city through regular motion picture company give a fixed price of $162.50 for the first run—some difference! This is not an isolated case."

"Vac-Cleat Hill of 1,000 population, usual rental $20 for two days, grossed $56. "The Man from Glengarry" is collecting the money. "If anyone has the picture the percentage plan is best. I cannot do otherwise in the face of these figures."
Distinctive in Market With Five Initial Productions

Friend Announces Titles of Two Pictures—Three Additional Subjects to Be Ready in May

NEW YORK, January 9.—Distinctive Pictures Corporation has launched production activities on a comprehensive scale. In an announcement just issued from 366 Madison avenue, Arthur S. Friend, president, states that between now and the middle of May five specials will be ready for the market.

RESIDENT FRIEND stated that the aims of the company was to give the public pictures which are 100 per cent entertainment. To achieve the public’s satisfaction are those which are 100 per cent entertaining. To give the public such films, it is necessary for the producer to buy his stories carefully—and buy on merit alone; then get a scenario which will bring out the full film power of that story; then to plan the action and the setup of the picture under the best direction obtainable; and, finally, to work patiently, painstakingly all of the time, to insure a technically perfect job.

"Courage to discard poor workmanship and constant vigilance to detect it—those are two of the cardinal principles in making better films. But unfortunately, our critics believe that producers are personally responsible to the public for every film they put on the screen. It is true that, in the making of the Distinctive pictures, a lot of the producers will bear that in mind during every day of the making of the Distinctive pictures.

Mr. Friend is one of the producing minds of the motion picture industry, having been one of the organizers of the original Lasky company, and its treasurer. He was one of the moving spirits in the formation of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and held an important position of control in the enlarged corporation until he resigned in 1920 to resume the practice of law.

He did not remain long away from the motion picture fold, however. In 1921, Distinctive Productions was formed, with Mr. Henry M. Hobart, formerly of Cosmopolitan Productions, as president. This company put out "District." Soon after this it became known that Mr. Friend had been associated with Mr. Hobart in the enterprise.

The company next made "The Ruling Passion" and "The Man Who Played God," and the aim of these two productions is to produce pictures of no lesser merit than the first three. The statement issued by Mr. Friend is as follows:

"Distinctive Pictures Corporation has announced that its first two productions of 1923 will be "Backbone," based on Harold MacGrath's absorbing novel of the South Seas. Harmon Weight will direct this picture from a scenario by Forrest Halsey. Apart from the many surprises of the story itself there will be other surprises in "The Raging Edge" production, according to those familiar with the detailed plans of Distinctive.

Three more productions will be ready by the middle of May. Detailed work on these soon will be put in the hands of individual directors, while Mr. Friend and Henry M. Hobart, vice president of Distinctive Pictures, will devote their attention to arranging for the production of the others. They now are cogitating for several unusual stories.

Mr. Friend and Mr. Hobart won distinction through the artistry of their first production, "District." They kept up the good work in "The Ruling Passion" and in "The Man Who Played God," and the aim of these two productions is to produce pictures of no lesser merit than the first three. The statement issued by Mr. Friend is as follows:

Hobart, vice president of Distinctive Pictures, will devote their attention to arranging for the production of the others. They now are cogitating for several unusual stories.

Mr. Friend and Mr. Hobart won distinction through the artistry of their first production, "District." They kept up the good work in "The Ruling Passion" and in "The Man Who Played God," and the aim of these two productions is to produce pictures of no lesser merit than the first three. The statement issued by Mr. Friend is as follows:

"Distinctive Pictures Corporation has announced that its first two productions of 1923 will be "Backbone," based on Harold MacGrath's absorbing novel of the South Seas. Harmon Weight will direct this picture from a scenario by Forrest Halsey. Apart from the many surprises of the story itself there will be other surprises in "The Raging Edge" production, according to those familiar with the detailed plans of Distinctive.

Three more productions will be ready by the middle of May. Detailed work on these soon will be put in the hands of individual directors, while Mr. Friend and Henry M. Hobart, vice president of Distinctive Pictures, will devote their attention to arranging for the production of the others. They now are cogitating for several unusual stories.

Two Selznick Organizations To Migrate to West Coast

Will Be First of Larger Companies to Maintain General Offices and Distribution Away From Country’s Metropolis

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, January 9.—Within the next few months Selznick Pictures Corporation will move all its activities from New York to Los Angeles. This will include general offices, all studio activity, and distribution, according to information given out at the Selznick offices.

This announcement, following so closely on that of the turning over by Lewis J. Selznick of Selznick Pictures Corporation, the producing organization, and Select Pictures Corporation, the distributing company, to his sons, Myron and David, was the most startling subject of discussion in film circles during the past few days.

Official Says Move Will Be Made in Spring

Just when the New York offices will be closed and the activities transferred to Los Angeles is not known, but according to one of the officials of the companies, the move will be made “in the early spring.”

It is said that the Los Angeles move has been under consideration for a long time and the decision was reached at the same sessions of the boards of directors which elected Myron and David Selznick as the heads of the two companies. At this election A. George Volck, formerly connected with the Shipping Board, was selected as a vice president of each of the companies, in charge of finances.

“Plan Economically Sound”

It is said that Mr. Volck agreed with the Selznick brothers that it was an economically sound move to concentrate all the activities of the companies in one city.

This will be the first attempt of any of the larger companies to maintain general offices and distribution away from New York, and is looked upon by many film men as an experiment which will be watched carefully by the other large film companies.

Duncan May Arrange Serial Deal in East

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—William Duncan and his wife, professionally known as Edith Johnson, have left for New York, and it is said that a big serial deal is hanging in the balance. It is known that he has been negotiating with two big producing concerns but his personal representative, Ed. Moriaty, who preceded him to New York, states that the star has not closed with anyone as yet.

Duncan’s present Vitagraph contract is a particularly lucrative one, it is said, and it will expire some time in March. The star went to New York as the result of negotiations on hand making his presence there seem timely.

Canadian Company to Handle Distribution of Shipman Subjects

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—An alliance with Canadian Educational Films, whereby that company, with headquarters in Toronto and other points throughout the Dominion will handle the physical distribution of all the Ernest Shipman Canadian-made productions has been arranged by Mr. Shipman.

The selling forces will be headed by William Cranston at Toronto and by Miss Burpee and West at Montreal.

The contract includes all the future productions to be launched under the Shipman banner, with “The Man From Glengarry,” “The Good-fer-Nothin’,” “The Rapids,” “Blue Water” and “Latin Love” already in hand. Nearly all bookings to date, it is reported, have been upon the basis of a percentage of the gross.

Owner Gets Injunction On “Snooky's” Pictures

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—In a temporary injunction granted John Rounan by Justice Geraghty in the Supreme Court, against Clare L. Chester, C. H. Chester Corporation and Chester Pictures Corporation, the defendants are restrained from distributing or offering for sale any films featuring “Snooky,” the monkey screen player.

The defendants are also restrained from using the name “Snooky, the Humane” or offering any picture in opposition to “A Jungle Romance,” in which the monkey, owned by Mr. Rounan, is featured.

New Story Named for Pola Negri

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The next picture in which Pola Negri will be seen for Paramount will be “The Cheat,” produced originally almost eight years ago by Cecil B. De Mille. It was written by Hector Turnbull, and was produced on the stage by William A. Brady, and two years ago produced in grand opera at Paris.

George Fitzmaurice will direct the feature and Miss Negri will be supported by Jack Holt and Charles de Rochef in the leading male roles. It is being adapted by Quinetta Berg and production will start January 22.

‘Peppy’ Announcements Call Ohio Theatre Men To January Conference

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 9.—The second annual convention of motion picture theatre owners of Ohio is going to go down in exhibitor history of the state if advance efforts of Martin G. Smith, president of the league, is any criterion. Mr. Smith’s latest appeal to exhibitors is in the form of a snappy broadside illustrated by drawings that presage one of the live conventions to be held.

In the upper left hand corner of this bulletin is an alarm clock with the process of ringing and opposite his are the words “Exhibitors! Wake up! Another drawing of a smiling personnel beating a bass drum carries a caption reading “New Brass Band! All business.” In the lower right hand corner is a picture of a dashing figure hieing for the convention. Throughout is an effective “sales talk” on the value of the organization to the exhibitor with past accomplishments interestingly pointed out.

The convention is scheduled for January 16 and 17 at the Chittenden Hotel, Columbus.

George Hernandez, 59, Veteran Player, Dies

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—George Hernandez, veteran motion picture actor, passed away at the Glendale sanitarium, ear here, last Sunday. He had been ill about fourteen weeks.

Mr. Hernandez, who was 59 years of age, had been a character actor in motion picture work for many years. He began his career on the stage and played with Nance O’Neill, Mme. Modraska and many other celebrities. He began his career with Selig in 1910, when he played the leading role in “God’s Crucible.” His most recent pictures were, “Just Out of College” with Jack Pickford, and “In Arabia,” with Omar Mnx.

Paul Bern Joins Staff Of Universal Writers

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—Universal has engaged Paul Bern, formerly scenario editor of Goldwyn studios, as an associate scenario editor.

He will supervise the scenario writing of The unit in the department of which Raymond D. Schrock is editor.

KANSAS CITY, MO., Jan. 9.—E. C.冷冷, First National branch manager Kansas City, again is back on the job after undergoing an operation for appendicitis.
1923 Will Be One of Greatest Film Years That Is Confident Belief of Sol Lesser—Conditions Bright, He Says
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9—Sol Lesser, producer, distributor and exhibitor, is optimistic. This is what the vice-president of West Coast Theatres, Inc., looks forward to during 1923.

"I feel that 1923 is going to be one of the greatest years in the history of the industry. I do not say that this year, nor did I permit myself to be quoted in words to that effect two years ago."

Women of Kansas City Will Boycott Theatres Showing Arbuckle Film
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO., Jan. 9.—The first move in an attempt to influence Kansas City public sentiment against the showing of Arbuckle films was made Thursday by the Kansas City Athenaum, a civic organization of women with 100 members, who have pledged themselves by resolution not to attend any show in which Arbuckle films were exhibited. The club also announced that it would endeavor in every way possible to extend the Arbuckle boycott. The Athenaum is one of the most powerful women's civic bodies in Missouri.

The resolution read: "Whereas, Will Hays, chief of the motion picture industry of the United States, permits the re-storing of Arbuckle films to the screen to be viewed by the young people of our country. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Athenaum emphatically opposes this movement of giving Arbuckle a chance to remind the public of his salacious conduct and of the murder of which he was accused and further, that we publicly announce that we, as a club, refuse to attend any shows where his pictures are exhibited and that we will endeavor in every way possible to influence others to join with us in the stand we have taken."

Paramount Adopts Cue Sheets by Mintz
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—Beginning with pictures published in February, Paramount has adopted thematic music cue sheets, under an arrangement just closed with M. J. Mintz, president of Cameo Music Publishing Company. The music cue sheets are said to be particularly valuable to musicians in the presentation of a picture.

Zane Grey Drops Suit
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9—The suit of Zane Grey against Benjamin B. Hampton, E. F. Warner and the Zane Grey Production Company, has been dropped by Grey and the ease has been settled out of court. Grey has released Hampton and Warner of all charges and the unpublished novels and stories published by the corporation have been returned to the author to dispose of to any producer he may select.

Grainger Is Off on Country-Wide Tour
Will Visit Goldwyn Branches and Prominent Exhibitors During Trip
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—James R. Grainger, vice-president and general sales manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, left here yesterday for a four-weeks' tour of the Goldwyn branches and other exchanges. While circling the branches he also plans to confer with many prominent exhibitors.

One of the purposes of the trip is to acquaint Goldwyn managers with the caliber of productions offered by the company this year. These include "The Christian," "Vanity Fair," "Souls for Sale," "Los Angeles," "The King of the West" and other pictures which are either finished or nearing completion. "The Strangers" and "Goldwyn's New Wonder," opened at the Capitol theatre Sunday to what is said to be the biggest two days' business in the history of the theatre.

Mr. Grainger expressed himself as being delighted over the success of the pictures issued by Goldwyn for the first three months. Grainger and other pictures are either finished or nearing completion. "The Strangers" and "Goldwyn's New Wonder," opened at the Capitol theatre Sunday to what is said to be the biggest two days' business in the history of the theatre.

It is not apparent that there is a particular demand for any special type of pictures, "I have been receiving reports that exhibitors are depending less on famous names and more on excellent stories, well produced pictures. This healthy condition and gives producers just the incentive they need to turn out pictures that will win on their merits. Goldwyn distributed players for its stock company and stars of the first magnitude are engaged for leading roles, but first and foremost comes the story."
Here is Benjamin Warner, the "Dad" of the Warner brothers, taking his first lesson as a cameraman during his first visit to the West Coast studios with his son, Harry M. Warner. Warners now have several films in production.

Baby Bruce Guerin will tell you Irene Rich makes good chocolates. Baby Bruce plays a part in Warners "Brass."
The WEEK in NEW YORK

THE members of the A. M. P. A. are going to eat. Not that they don't indulge in that pleasant exercise on regular schedule, but placed on the release list two special eating occasions.

The first of these is on January 23, when the "Installation Dinner," will be held at Cafe Boulevard. This event is running something like the Long Island railroad trains since the snow came—quite some late. The dinner was held last year, and this month they are to have the "Installation Dinner," at which time the officers are really inducted into office.

Of course they have all been serving for several months but a little thing like that doesn't count with the advertisers when balanced against an opportunity to have a dinner. The chief reason for the delay in pulling off the dinner has been the frequent and long court-martial of the President John Flinn from the city. First Paramount sent him with Pola Negri to the coast, and then a long trip to Mexico to straighten up that bent-backed republic on the matter of allowing certain films to be shown to our neighbors on the south.

The second (and last) occasion is the annual "Nood to Truth" dinner, which will be given this year in April—exact date and place of execution not yet selected.

And in the meantime the advertisers will cat on schedule—especially every Thursday.

HARRY LEWIS, art director of Pathé, was the "barker" of the day and his selection for speaker was James Montgomery Flagg. The celebrated artist was heartily greeted by the advertisers who think they know something about themselves—more probably speaking, thought they did until Mr. Flagg got through with them.

After telling them that "there is a difference between art and painting a kitchen floor," Mr. Flagg said:

"Be sure you have a competent and able artist between the first thing you do for the love of Boticelli give him a chance to show you what his brains are good for! He knows more in a minute about how to make the thing right than you do in a century! And if he is an advertising artist—Grade A—let him earn his money. You, after all, they do get money, those fellows. He knows more than merely how to draw! When you advertising barons got it firmly in your minds that there is a difference between a Grade A advertising artist and a sign painter you'll start getting better results. That's sure. Some of you do know—that is evident by the improvement in the work. But a lot of you will go plodding on in the old dumb way till you wake up some cloudy morning and find you have Rip Van Winkles and the procession has passed you, hours ago!"

CAPTAIN "JIMMY" LOUGHBOROUGH, who has been handling the Douglas Fairbanks picture in New York since leaving First National, has joined the Al Lichtman Corporation in the capacity of director of advertising and publicity. Maurice Kahn, who left Film Daily several months ago due to change of the Lichtman publicity, has returned to that publication.

HARRY DURANT, who has been head of the play reading and scenario department of Famous Players for the past three years, has resigned. His future plans have not been announced nor has the name of his successor.

MONTE BLUE, who, in spite of being a good screen actor has as many fans as a regular human being, has departed for the coast after spending the holidays in New York. He will at once begin work in "Main Street" one of the big Warner Brothers comedies.

Accompanied by WESLEY BARRY, Mr. Blue spent the last few days of his stay in New York saying good-bye to friends. Blue and Barry are great admirers of each other and the long and short of it is that they are quite chummy. Monte is 75 inches in length and Wesley is 24 inches longer than a yard stick.

GORDON WHITE, of Educational, wants to correct the impression that "The Natural Born Liar," one of the Robert C. Bruce, "Wilderness Tales" which is being shown at the Capitol, is built on the life and work of a press agent.

THOMAS MURPHY is always doing something to make someone happy. The latest nice thing chalked up against the popularity of Paramount star is the presentation of a projection machine and full equipment to the Actor's Fund Home on Staten Island. The old actors and actresses now living at the home are now enjoying each week a special presentation of new pictures, the films being contributed by Famous Players-Lasky.

PAUL SCARNO, eminent author and director, will not sail for England on January 23 to produce pictures for a British concern, as has been announced. The deal was on and almost—but not quite closed. The difference which caused the proposition to fall through is said to have arisen over the placement of one cipher in the embodiment clause of the contract. Another rumor is that the difference arose over one side talking dollars and the other side pounds.

TOM GERACITI, manager of Famous Players studio in the East, has left for the coast where he is expected to remain during the summer, devoting his attention to the studios in Hollywood.

LOUIS J. GASNIER, who is under contract to direct special productions for B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, for release through the Al Lichtman Corporation, has been actively connected with the picture industry for more than twenty years. Gasnier is a native of France where he was associated with Pathe Freres for seventeen years, first in capacity of general manager and later as vice president. He came to America as an executive of that organization when this country superseded France as the world's production center. The serials featuring Mrs. Vernon Castle constituted his early work here.

Gasnier's work is characterized generally by a wealth of pictorial beauty, luxurious mounting and expert handling of the large casts. His best known work is perhaps the film production of "Kismet," the play in which Otis Skinner starred for a long season on Broadway some years ago and later enacted in picture form.

Society dramas have also offered Gasnier a field for success. "Good Woman," a featuring vehicle for Rosemary Thelby, was one of his early essays of this type. His first work with Schulberg was of a similar nature. The first special Preferred Picture was the Gasnier Production "Rich Men's Wives."

Gasnier's second work this season is the picturization of Bertha M. Clay's old romance "Thorns and Orange Blossoms." The setting of the story offered opportunity once more for Gasnier's continental knowledge.

Work has recently been completed by Gasnier on Gilbert Emery's play "The Hero," another early Preferred release. The story depicting post-war life in a small American town marks a deviation from the kind of material to which Gasnier has previously been assigned. He is now making a film sequel to his first Schulberg product, this to be called "Poor Men's Wives."—J. S. S.

Midnight Show Draws Crowds

(Palco to Exhibitors Herald) PITTSBURGH, PA., Jan. 8—Everybody worked overtime at the Cameo theatre on December 31.

With the conclusion of what is ordinarily the final performance of the evening it was decided to stage a midnight showing of the program, which featured a Goldwyn production, "Brothers Under the Skin." When the doors were opened at 1 o'clock the house coast to the last ticket of tickets having started at 11:30.

At the close of this performance another show was staged at 3 o'clock and played to equally big business.
Will H. Hays Stands Pat in Final Word About Arbuckle Better Films Committee of Atlanta Declines to Act on Matter—Public Relations Body Opposes Return of Actor

Will H. Hays, president of the M. P. P. D. A., is through talking about the Arbuckle affair.

Courtland Smith, his secretary, said as much in a note appended to the latest Hays statement which read, "This is the final word on this matter and no later statement will be issued by Mr. Hays.

Question Must Be Left to Judgment of Public

Furthermore, President Hays, in his latest and final communication, stands pat on his original decision relative to the return of the comedian to the screen. Protests from various individuals and organizations have not moved him to change the attitude assumed at the time of lifting the ban on the former Paramount star. Says Mr. Hays: "This is the kind of question that must be left finally to the judgment of the public on the one hand and on the other hand to those who have business associations with the individual and the individual himself."

Of particular interest in the Arbuckle situation is the decision of the Better Films Committee of Atlanta, Ga., a group organized in the South to take no definite action at this time relative to the comedian's pictures, should he resume production.

Bank Sways Meeting

Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, presented the arguments which crystallized the sentiment of the committee against hasty action on the Arbuckle matter. Other speakers concurred in his opinions.

The Committee on Public Relations, the recently appointed'three-man group appointed by Mr. Hays to cooperate with him in his movement to maintain a high moral and artistic standard in pictures, met last week at the M. P. P. D. A. headquarters in New York and adopted resolutions requesting the industry "to refrain from exhibiting pictures in which Mr. Arbuckle appears." "Any consideration shown him (Arbuckle)," the resolutions furthered, "would not be along lines not involving his appearance before the public as a motion picture actor."

Reaffirms Its Pledge

Further the committee reaffirmed its desire to assist Mr. Hays in every way possible in the improvement of motion pictures.

Opposition to the Hays decision was expressed in resolutions adopted by the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays and the Indianapolis Ministerial Association, the latter declaring that it "depletes and re- sights the attempt to place Mr. Arbuckle in the position of an instructor of the youth of the land."

Mrs. Edward Franklin White of Indiana, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, has sent a letter to Mr. Hays in which she says that she regrets "exceedingly" the war and "has been fit to give your permission to the motion picture producers to present Patty Arbuckle again on the screen.

Open Letter His Theatre

Open letter has been forwarded to the M. P. P. D. A. chief by W. W. Black, head of the education department of Indiana, in which he says that indiscriminate theatre going by children is one of the greatest evils of the industry and discusses at length the Arbuckle situation.

All suggestions, resolutions and the like "will be referred to the proper parties," says the producer president in his final note.

Protests Picture Exhibitors League of St. Louis and Eastern Missouri, Joseph Mogler, president, adopted resolutions at its last meeting declaring that no Arbuckle pictures would be exhibited on any screens controlled by members of the organization.

Perpetuates Censor Fight

The Arbuckle case has precipitated a censorship fight in Missouri, C. C. Petjohn, general counsel for the M. P. P. D. A., has been called upon to direct the defense of the industry and it is understood that he will be in Jefferson City shortly to discuss the nature of the campaign to be launched.

The final statement of Mr. Hays follows in full:

"All suggestions which have been received from all viewpoints, and they are many and varied, will be referred to the proper parties. This is the kind of question that must be left finally to the judgment of the public on the one hand and on the other hand to those who have business associations with the individual and the individual himself. I have removed the artificial situation of one man being on the floor appearing to direct the judge in such matters either for one hundred and ten million people, or for a great industry and art. Such a condition in the development of a business is absolutely unsound economically, and from every other standpoint, and permanently must not be. A temporary framework or scaffolding may be a very valuable tool for a period in the remodeling or construction of a great building, but it must be remembered as the building progresses that such structures are only temporary facilities."

Charts Are Granted
Seven Firms at Albany

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 9—During the first week of this year, a total of seven motion picture companies were incorporated in New York state, these having a capitalization which amounted to $392,000.

The first motion picture company to incorporate in the new year was Fascination Pictures, capitalized at $30,000 and having its principal office in New York City.
MONEY MAKING IDEAS Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By LARRY HAYES
(Dawn Theatre, Hilldale, Mich.)

The ladies of the D. A. R. came to me and said they wished to raise funds to furnish a memorial room in East Hall at the college in memory of Anne Gridley, whom the local chapter is named after.

I bought "My Wild Irish Rose" for them. We had three teams of girls selling tickets and I put up a season's pass to the girl selling the most tickets. Also awarded a three month's pass to the girls on the team selling the most tickets.

We took out our actual expenses plus cost of film first, then shared 65-35, the large share to them. They cleared better than $100 with no investment and would have done more if all the teams had plugged a little harder. Incidentally we have friends and had a pretty good night out of it ourselves. Try it with one of your local organizations.

(Ideal Theatre, Trade Rock Ark.)

I find quite a help to the business is to let the people know what's coming. A herald telling of the coming attractions, something like the one enclosed, is a great help to boost the picture and everybody will take them home and the family will plan to see the shows that appeal to them most.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Mr. Phillips enclosed a well-got herald illustrating coming attractions. His patrons are shopping for bigger pictures and he lets them know far enough ahead so they will make their plans so as to be able to get to his theatre.

North Carolina Will Erect Civic Building Plans Censor Fight—Condemns "Music Tax" and State Privilege Levy

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

GREENSBORO, N. C., Jan. 9.—A movement which is receiving widespread attention was launched at the midwinter convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North Carolina. It plans the formation of an organization which will wield an authority and present it either to Jackson Training School or the Orthopedic Hospital. This plan of action is to secure the support of state officials and many other prominent people of the commonwealth.

Would Give Day's Receipts

Under the plan each member would donate one day's gross receipts toward the fund, the theatre programs to be furnished gratis by the exchanges W. E. Stewart, Concord; James A. Estridge, Gastonia; R. C. Draver, Charlotte; E. E. Heller, Lexington; C. P. Hunter, Winston-Salem; J. W. Prevo, Thomasville; G. C. Gammon, Leesville, and P. L. McCabe, Tarboro, to comprises the committee in charge of the movement.

Resolutions adopted at the sessions condemned the "music tax" and the state privilege levy and praised the national organization for its efforts on behalf of an equitable contract. The league also pledged its support to the better films movement.

Many in Attendance

Screen Actors Plan No Strike, Declares Executive of Equity

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The move to give motion picture actors a forty-eight hour week by no means infers that a walkout is contemplated, according to the executive director of the Actors Equity Association, which is handling the negotiations for the proposed standard contract.

Gillmore states that Will H. Hays has given a sympathetic hearing to the proposal and that the producers' association has shown a disposition to cooperate.

Under the proposed contract a producer must not be allowed to rearrangement of a picture if changes in the scenario eliminate what part entirely and pay the actor one week's salary.

"The Flirt" Plays to Big Premiere House

Universal's Tarkington Story Ranks Among N. Y. Rialto's Best Drawing Cards

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Barreng "The Sheik" and "Blood and Sand" Universal's picturization of Booth Tarkington's popular "The Flirt" will make up one of the most successful records of the Rialto Theatre in its premiere presentation opening on Christmas eve, according to reports, and the excitement generated among persons who saw the picture during the week.

Exploitation Draws Attention

And there was plenty of competition on Broadway, with Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack" at the Strand, Tom Meighan in "Rack Home and Broke" at the Rivo and other big features playing.

Much interesting exploitation precedes the opening of "The Flirt." The campaign, engineered by Marc Lachman of the Universal exploitation staff, included an "anti-flirt" crusade, initiation, distribution of a leaflet characterized as a "book of proverbs for flirts" and other effective devices.

Called Universal's Best

A review in the New York Globe stated: "Additional proof that nothing and wrong with the 'movies' is found in the week at the Rialto. The Universal company has made pictures for more than a decade but 'The Flirt' is the best thing it has ever made."

Burr Price Is Named Advertising Head of Distinctive Picture

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Burr Price who has the distinction of having act as press officer for the Belgian roy family when King Albert of Belgium made his tour of the United States in 1919 has been named director of advertising and publicity of Distinctive Pictures Corporation by President Arthur S. Frenier. Mr. Price had an interesting career having served as correspondent of the press bureau of the Belgian Ministry of Economic Affairs in Brussels. Mr. Price was also war-time editor of the Europe edition of the New York Herald as an act as correspondent for the War Department paper at the Paris peace conference.

When King Albert's tour of the United States was arranged by the Belgian Ambassador at Washington, colonel de Charles, the French minister proposed that Mr. Price accompany the royal party not only to care for telegrams but to act as aid and interpreter to the Belgian correspondents. At the conclusion of the voyage, Mr. Price was decorated by King Albert with the Ord de Chevalier of Lcope I.

Press time reports, too late to illustrate, on exploitation of the new attractions.

"Brothers Under the Skin"

KANSAS CITY.— Frank L. Newman of the Royal theatre departed from custom for "Brothers Under the Skin," fostering a motor parade of ten cars which drew such good results that street lally-ho is regarded in a new light by the management.

"Blood and Sand"

GREENFIELD, Mass.— The Red cross used a full page in red in the newspaper edition which carried the first full page smash of the Lawler theatre for "Blood and Sand" and the color guaranteed the theatre ad also without additional charge. Results were so good that the theatre repeated in green for "Manslaughter," paying full rates.

"Oliver Twist"

LOUISVILLE.— The Louisville Theatre Guild, supported by the Louisville "University Players' Club and aided by the newspapers, conducted a contest for readers involving original 20-minute days taken from any episode in the Dickens' novel, "Oliver Twist." Stuart Walker and the local dramatic critics acted as judges. The Mary Anderson theatre will play the First National picture, "Oliver Twist."

"Pink Gods"

SALT LAKE CITY.— Boyd Park, adding jeweler, made up a $10,000 window display of diamonds to advertise the showing of "Pink Gods" at the "Paramount-Empress theatre.

"Silver Wings"

INDIANAPOLIS.— The Apollo theatre exhibited the first reel of "Silver Wings" in the window of the Indian-Post on an estimated pedestrian audience of 25,000. The newspaper had reviewed the picture as "Better than Over the Hill."

"Skin Deep"

PHILADELPHIA.— The Frankfort theatre and the Frankfort Post of the American Legion associated interests in "Skin Deep" and the magazine published by the latter organization carried excellent advance notices for the picture.

"Clarence"

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.— A newspaper ad 19 merchants co-operated with Ned Tobinbile and Harry Royster in putting up a "Raffles" stunt for "Clarence" involving a double spread with time schedule of the mysterious stranger's visits to town. A card reading, "Clarence Bids You Good Morning" was put in the mail box of all hotel guests.

"My Wild Irish Rose"

LOGANSPORT, Ind.— W. H. Lind-"y, Paramount, attached a phonograph playing "My Wild Irish Rose" to the amplifier of his radiophone, placed the whole upon the top of his theatre. The machine was slowed down and a weird effect produced.

Film Circus, Cleveland

Invention, Counteracts Periodical Depressions

"Film Circus," a motion picture performance including four feature length attractions and presented once each evening at a special admission price ranging from 50 cents to one dollar, is the invention of A. W. Kaufman of the Victory and Strand theatres, Cleveland. The stunt is an effective tonic for such periodical depressions as the best managed theatre is heir to.

As worked out in Cleveland, the programs are used three days in succession. The performance is started between six and seven o'clock and no part of the program is repeated. The original admission scale is maintained throughout the evening, but few tickets can be sold as the theatre is packed to capacity at or immediately after opening.

The Kaufman program is the nearest approach to the motion picture equivalent of the big top show that has been made, if special presentations of extra length features at stage prices are expected. The phrase, "Film Circus," may be used effectively in advertising.

Selection of features for such a program is a matter of considerable importance, as it is possible here to satisfy practically every element of the clientele. Obviously, quality must not be made secondary to quantity if the stunt is expected to prove of enduring value. Short subjects sprinkled through the program add the important virtue of variety.

The inventor uses the stunt monthly.

A Better Theater Platform

5. Advertising First

In the scheme of things theatrical exploitation figures most prominently in news headlines and trade discussion. Not in office results. Advertising has the obvious assets of assured newspaper circulation and authorial maleability. Its user goes to a waiting public, not one which he must interrupt and hold. To this public he presents his case in exactly the form in which he desires it to be presented. Generations of readers contribute assurance that his case will be weighed upon the merits with which he has endowed it. There is practically no risk of back-fire.

Exploitation, generally, must find its public, interrupt that public in other activities and enforce its message upon public consciousness in the briefest possible space of time. There is no dependable means of safeguarding the import of the appeal. There is always risk of back-fire.

In view of these, the more obvious comparisons, it is clear that a sound theatre policy must recognize the claim of advertising to first consideration. Second consideration due exploitation should be no less careful because of rank.

Good exploitation is a powerful instrument for box office stimulation. It will become a better one as it is developed and improved and as the public is trained to grasp its significance.

Yet exploitation never conflicts with advertising. Apparent, then, the folly of neglecting the latter for the former. Advertising is first.
IN TWO COLUMNS, which is the limit for calendar display in Chicago morning papers, McVickers theatre produced this striking effect for Paramount's "Back Home and Broke."

IN TWO COLUMNS, likewise, the Brooklyn Strand presented this inducement to see Pathé's "Dr. Jack." Note similarity of treatment in both.

ECONOMY, ARTISTRY AND TIMELINESS, strange bedfellows, marked the Yuletide greetings of the Sid Grauman advertising. Under this drawn head, which ran page wide midway down, were grouped the individual ads of the three Grauman theatres. None of these units contained anything of seasonable nature. The expedient is worthy of notation.

PICTORIAL INDEX TO PICTURE CONTENT is achieved variously in the three ads reproduced above. The California, Los Angeles, definitely informs readers that Warner Brothers' "Heroes of the Street" is from Lem Parker's novel; the Alhambra clearly identifies First National's "Brawn of the North" as a dog picture; the Miller, Wichita, stamps Fox's "The Fast Mail" unmistakably as a railroad thriller—and all through pictorial content. It pays.
CIVIC HISTORY was dramatized by Fred S. Meyer, Palace, Hamilton, O., for his New Year's Eve program and advertised as above in five columns. Read text for details of a sturdy worthwhile of universal adoption.

"BACK HOME AND BROKE" was a well advertised Palace holiday attraction.

READ THIS PAGE of A. L. Middleton's house organ for the Grand, DeQueen, Ark., to realize what good results can be obtained with effort and ability.

A NEW IDEA in co-operative page layouts, used for Goldwyn's "Remembrance," by the Strand theatre, Evansville, Ind.

A STUDY IN TECHNIC is presented by these four-column displays of the same text by Ascher's Merrill, Milwaukee, for Goldwyn's "Remembrance." A ballot in this office favored the straight type display by a slight majority.
A 100 PER CENT F. B. O. FRONT AND PROGRAM was used by the Tudor theatre, New Orleans, with the results shown above. “If I Were Queen” and “Merry Xmas” were the feature and comedy billed. The lobby display is composed entirely of stock matter provided with the product. This is service in the full sense of the word. The theatre requires more of the same.

“STICK THE LIZARD” was the slogan in an anti-flirt campaign launched by Marc Lachmann for Universal’s “The Flirt” and spreading radio-wise from New York via newspaper and syndicate dispatches. The long story of the publicity gained is best told in the photograph of results which is reproduced above.

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN, is not more than “45 minutes from Broadway” in the matter of theatre display if the photograph of a Stockholm lobby setting for Warner Brothers’ “School Days” reproduced above may be accepted as characteristic. Swedish photographers, it may be added, label their product distinctly.
UNACCUSTOMED AS IT IS to street exploitation, Chicago gave attention to Goldwyn's float for "Broken Chains," an item in a big campaign waged by the Chicago branch office for the run of the picture at the Chicago theatre. The float is composed along reserved and dignified lines.

NEW YORK AND BOSTON newspapers co-operated with theatres exhibiting "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," on charity drives during the Yuletide. The photo shows usherettes of the Park, Boston, who visited hotels. Voluminous publicity was gained from the main and various auxiliary stunts.

TO WINDOW DISPLAYS PAY? is a topic of interest among exhibitors at this time. The above window, containing 100,000 worth of diamonds, was used in connection with the showing of Paramount's "Pink Gods" at the Paramount-Empress, Salt Lake City. In this instance, at least, there seems to be no question about it. They do.
AN ORIGINAL 1-SHEET made up by the Missouri, St. Louis, for Paramount's "Singed Wings," reflecting managerial enterprise.

THE HOTTENTOT DRESS has been placed on the market and will advertise the First National-Thomas H. Ince film, "The Hottentot."

"NOTORIETY" HOT!: exploiting Weber & Nord feature at Clinton Square Albany.

IT EVEN LOOKED LIKE BROADWAY, the lobby of the Majestic theatre, Columbus, during the run of Metro's "Broadway Rose." Stock material was used for the most part, but skill in composition is the outstanding factor in the layout. The lattice in foreground frames an oil painting. Lights dotted the New York skyline in back. Stills were lavishly and expertly displayed.

WANTED: HEADLESS JOCKEY. APPLY IN PERSON. Imagine what an ad worded along those lines would do. The inspect the above photograph, from the Rialto theatre, Tulsa, showing how a headless (?) rider exploited Hodkinson's "The Headless Horseman." The picture of the front completes the story. Exhibitors report the picture going big. This tells an one how to get it off to a good start.
R. CUMMINGS, who produces lobby displays for the Fort Armstrong and Majestic theatres, Rock Island, made up this elaborate spread for the Paramount production, “Manslaughter.” Harry E. Nichols, Theatre Visitor, tells about it in the accompanying article.

The Theatre Visitor

By HARRY E. NICHOLS

Field Representative, EXHIBITORS HERALD

This is a hobby year. There is no doubt about it. My camera records and I report as tertium quid. And exhibitor says substantiates the testimony of the facts. I would say that, roughly, there has been an increase of 50 per cent in the number of theatres using lobby display seriously in the past year. Photographs presented this week show a type of work being done.

E. R. Cummings, whose endeavors I have noted previously in these articles, is representative of the type of man devoting his time to lobby exploitation. His experience on the West Coast, where he was identified with the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and elsewhere, has chipped him with the knowledge and shrewdly reflected in his display for the Paramount production, “Manslaughter,” during its Rock Island run.

The photograph gives the figure content of the front very clearly. No camera could register the color effects used, though the tones are evident. In color as in design, Mr. Cummings made the display echo the strength of the single word that is the title. He mixed the sickly green into original matter admirably, bringing out the best effects with which his type of work is distinguishing the showing theatres everywhere at this time. Similar ability is discerned in the display composed by Charles E. Curson, manager of the Alhambra at Shelbyville, Ill., for the Cosmopolitan-Paramount production, “When Knighthood Was in Flower.” Again the camera bears eloquent testimony.

Short time ago it would have been considered the natural thing for a showman advertising a costume picture, regardless of merit, to seek in every manual of the cardinal character of the story. Curson’s front identifies the picture as just the type of picture it is, using the important impression that just as a picture is very much worth seeing, the reformation of general theatre play in this matter is one of the most encouraging signs that I have observed in my journey about the country during the past year. It is evident that showmen have come to regard story value as the paramount thing and to acknowledge the public’s appreciation of that truisim. Whereas it was formerly held that every certain types of pictures would satisfy a given clientele, it is now almost universally conceded that one class of play is practically as good as another—if it is good.

This brings the theatre sale of motion picture entertainment to a merit basis and broadens the scope of screen appeal. Greater freedom in booking, greater variety in program, greater box office returns are results.

The natural outgrowth of this newly developed policy is exploitation that covers its subject thoroughly, intensively and coherently. Lost motion through timidity or indecision is eliminated. The advertiser sells his product for what it is and sells it with full confidence that his clientele includes the required number of theatregoers to justify his efforts.

A bigger theatre will come of this, naturally. A bigger public will support the theatre than ever before. And buyers of tickets will feel a new confidence in theatre merchants.

The outlook for 1923 is bright.

Delmonte Theatre Books Seventeen Goldwyn Films

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation announces the closing of a deal with the Delmonte theatre, St. Louis, one of the largest one-floor theatres in the world, seating 3,000, whereby all of the seventeen remaining Goldwyn pictures for the season have been purchased for the Delmonte. They will be played within a period of twenty-one weeks starting with “Hungry Hearts.”

The Delmonte, formerly operated by the Famous Players, is now controlled by P. L. Cornwell who built it and also the Missouri theatre. He is now erecting and will operate the new Le Clair theater in Moline, Illinois.

CHARLES E. CURSON, manager of the Alhambra theatre, Shelbyville, Ind., constructed this remarkable marquee piece for the run of the Cosmopolitan-Paramount feature, “When Knighthood Was in Flower.”
New Year's Ad Lists Program, “Sells” Price

Eugene Saunders, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill., combined purposes in the advertisement reproduced herewith, listing attractions for the early future as driving home in neat phraseology his 7-day admission scale.

To thoroughly sell an admission scale is to practically sell any attracive booked. Read the italic announcement at the top of Mr. Saunders' ad, and think. (Illustrated on Page 48)

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD,

Dear Sir,

I thought this a good advertisement and thought I would send it in to you. Any criticism will be accepted by me.

EUGENE SAUNDERS
Saunders theatre, Harvard, I

DEAR MR. SAUNDERS:
When directly asked for criticism we always strive to assume our most technically critical pose and pick flaws, but you embarrass us. Your idea is excellent, your writing skill is not too bad, your balance perfect. This reduces us to type face and a harsher critic might say you could be more uniform in that matter, but we would think much of the criticism.

In other words, it's a mighty good ad, timely a with a purpose, and we thank you for submitting it. — W. R. W.

Press Boosts
“Brawn of the North” Stunt

The really profitable stunts get in the papers. That's a goodly part of the reason why they are profitable.

Charles Lewis, Strand theatre, Altoona, Pa., staged a dog stunt for First National’s “Brawn of the North” which best described in Mr. Lewis' letter a the newspaper story the stunt prompted.

(Illustrated on Page 48)

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD,

Dear Sir:

Enclosed find clipping from local paper which will give you an idea of how aroused much enthusiasm on the opening day of our engagement of “Bra of the North.”

Despite a few unruly canines, this exploitation idea worked out wonderfully and I think it was a big item in establishing a record day for us during its showing.

F. K. O'KELLY
Strand theatre, Altoona.

DEAR MR. O'KELLY:
We thought the story so good that we reproduced it complete for illustration of your letter. If you didn't write it yourself, it is a record.

GEORGE A. REA, Colonial theatre, Washington C. H., O., contributes his exploitation for the Christmas exhibition of Paramount's "The Old Homestead" in chapters. Add the above furniture store window display to the items previously published in these pages. Few exploitation stories will bear serial narration.

"SLIM SHOULDERS," Hodkinson, gave Mr. Rea opportunity to indulge his well-known fondness for cutout lobby displays and yielded the results shown above. Mr. Rea's lobby is a 24-hour, 7-day worker for the Colonial box office, producing, he says, as much revenue in six days as he could get in a full week.
NOTHER ITEM in the Colonial exploitation for Paramount’s “The Old Homestead.”

portional enterprise in its sphere. If you did sit it, it is a no less great story and you should read of it. The idea is plainly a good one for use with the stage. As showmen are displaying willingness go to great lengths in the interests of the attraction it undoubtedly will be widely adopted.

W. R. W.

Eats Bulk of Exploitation Expense Bill

The bill for the exploitation of Paramount’s “The Old Homestead” at the Riviera theatre, Anderson, Ind., was considerable; but it didn’t daunt Harry Van Noy, manager.

He ate most of it.

While that procedure isn’t always practicable, Mr. Van Noy’s letter is no less interesting because of that fact.

THEATRE EDITOR. EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Under separate cover, photos of “The Old Homestead.” Note the turkeys on the stump on each side with hatchet head stump, also the cutout of Theodore Oblerto with lantern. Put electric light behind the lantern, shining through red glass, which made this show up fine. Observed with pumpkins and corn shocks in place of lights.

Am also enclosing the small house which was on the sidewalk in front of the theatre with cutout of Roberts with letters on top reading “The Old Homestead.” This made them stop and check. With the rail fence around the house and house, this front was not very expensive, the only part that cost being the fence and turkeys.

We will eat the turkeys, and then the daily cost will be the fence. We will place this fence later and so, all in all, we got by with a grand business. A wonderful picture to back up your exploitation. Everyone liked this one.

Harry Van Noy, Riviera theatre, Anderson, Ind.

HARRY VAN NOY, Riviera theatre, Anderson, Ind., went to great expense in the exploitation of “The Old Homestead,” as photographs show, but cut down the cost perceptibly by eating the most expensive items, the turkeys seen at either side of the lobby entrance. His letter gives details.

“THE OLD HOMESTEAD” in miniature was placed at the curb line and fittingly framed in good old fashioned rail fence. The fence is mentioned in Mr. Van Noy’s letter as the second most costly item, though he doesn’t give the origin of the log cabin. The picture, he states, is an excellent one to back up its exploitation.
Exploits Good Ones by Quotes
From "Herald"

The above heading, used last week for the letter from Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill., is repeated hereafter to denote the communication from Charles W. Lewis, Grand Gorge, N. Y., who attains the same results by different means.

An illustration hereewith shows the Lewis method.

His letter follows:

THEATRE EDITOR, EXHIBITORS HERALD,

Dear Sir:

When H. E. Nichols first came around with his trusty tin steed and surprised me in the act of dismembering a hiver I was first diamonized to subscribe to any paper that required a field man to sell it, particularly because of the feeling that probably was no different or better than the trade papers I was receiving. Evidently H. E. N. knew his business, for he opened a sample copy to the first page of exhibitor comments and "sold" me then and there for a subscription. Needless to say, when this subscription expired it was immediately renewed and if I don't continue to receive I invite someone to examine into my sanity.

I use the HERALD comments almost exclusively in selecting features. I also clip and display them on cards in conspicuous places, with the result that when I do have something real good it is not difficult to convey this idea to the public.

Charles W. Lewis
I. O. O. F. Picture Hall
Grand Gorge, N. Y.

DEAR MR. LEWIS:

Your use of the "What the Picture Did for Me" reports is unquestionably effective, and your card for their display is in keeping with the dignity of the purpose. We have reproduced the upper portion of your form for the convenience of other showmen who wish to adopt the practice. Thank you for submitting it.

Glad you and H. E. N. got along so well together. This mission, you know, is to investigate theatre business conditions and to do all in the power to spread the doctrine of practical showmanship. Certainly your method of quoting other exhibitors comes under that heading.—W. R. W.

CANINE CROWD
MOBS THEATRE

Free Admission Offer Brings Out Four Hundred Boys and Dogs

Dogs! Ye gawds, the dogs! The wildest dream of a hope-loving Wiener manufacturer paled in comparison with the little dogs and BIG DOGS attached to hundreds of the proverbial small boys yesterday morning seeking free admission tickets at the Strand theatre to see the epic canine film, "Strongheart, Brown of the North." Purse, pocket, pugs and pointers, mongrels and mahogany mastiffs, fighting, fee-beaten, footing and famished, yowling, yawning and yellow—all as reasons why the young masters should have photos. They were all there except the Dogs of Venice...

It even got so bad at the ticket office that the seller was talking in dogseal as the regarding youngsters passed their charges to the window to get the coveted admissions.

The crowd of boys, drooping, leading, uniting or carrying dogs of all registered and countless noncript breeds began collecting at the Strand by 3 o'clock, although the distribution of glasses was not started until 11 O'clock. By that hour more than the had gathered and the fighting could be heard for a block.

Some visitors weren't satisfied with just one admission, but established a curb exchange in a nearby alley, where they rented for a cent or two a perfectly good used dog, with particular emphasis on the good running condition, to other boys to parade to the window.

The Strand phones were kept ringing with owners seeking lost, strayed, stolen or borrowed dogs. One man found a valuable bond that had been lost for days. A lad who had 'wandered' his pointer, who belongs to the Silvermans, the theatre owners, an nonconformist hound, successfully displayed a winner.

P. K. O'KELLY, Strand, Altoona, won this newspaper story by a dog matinee given for Forest National's "Browm of the North." His letter tells of results.

CHARLES W. LEWIS, I. O. O. F. Hall, Grand Gorge, N. Y., lists "Herald" exhibitor reports to "What the Picture Did for Me" upon cards 9 by 12 inches, of which the above is an abbreviated reproduction. His letter tells of satisfactory results gained.

EUGENE SAUNDERS, Saunders theatre, Harvard, Ill., scheduled coming attractions and "sold" his admission sale in his four-column New Year's advertisement, Read, especially, the light italic type at top.

Barley Tapped; Apathy General Among Showmen

"The Chicago Tribune" for January 8 carries 81 motion picture theatre advertisements.

One of these mentions the newspaper in a single line announcing: "News and Comedy."

"The Chicago Herald and Examiner" for the same day carries 63 advertisements.

The same theatre, the Harper, carries the same line.

It is doubtful if any of the theatres represented fail to include a newspaper in the program.

Why the secrecy?

The answer to that question is the explanation of the occasional monotony in the newscinema of the week. There is very little encouragement in these statistics for the manufacturer of newscinema. There is no indication that exhibitors care in the least whether the product is good, bad or indifferent.

Exhibitors know better than this.

News and merit is required by the booker, insisted upon by the patron; yet the exhibitor who pays for it and pays well, calmly ignores it in his advertising.

A dense apathy is accountable.

Chicago newspaper space, it might be argued, is expensive, yet the Harper theatre finds its newscinema worth a line of it. Several other theatres find their organsists worth one, two or three lines. It is not probable that the best organist in the city, and there are excellent ones, is worth as much in an advertisement as the mention of one good item in the newscinema of the week.

Several of the theatres advertise comedies, a few by title, and a few by title and star, others simply by the word: "Comedy." Certainly the comedy is worth this display, or more, but as certainly the newscinema is worth as much.

Clearly the newscinema is not omitted simply because it is not an exclusive attraction, for neither is the comedy or feature exclusive save in the minority of ads that represent the first runs.

Why the discrimination?

If there is a tenable exhibitor alibi it is obscure. It is not mentioned along Film Row. Chicago showmen do not reveal it upon interrogation.

In all probability the fault is mainly a matter of habit. In all probability its correction will follow only upon one leading showman’s successful exploitation of a newscinema item neglected by his competitors and the consequent packing of his theatre.

This can be done, and readily.

This week, for instance, many Chicago theatres will show International News No. 4. This edition shows the arrival in this country of Dr. Emilie Coue, whose writings have been published in two Chicago newspapers serially and whose curative ability has been the subject of countless stories and several editorials.

Chicago knows Dr. Coue. Further, a great many people are earnestly applying the principles he advocates. Clearly, many would like to see him in that striking semblance of life in which he is revealed by the newscinema.

Such a line as: "Arrival of Dr. Coue—In Newscinema," would cost very little, would bring returns paying for itself many times, would perform a real service to patrons. Yet there is practically no probability of the line being used.

The Chicago case is not exceptional. It is very nearly typical.

Rectification lies wholly in exhibitor hands.

ACCORDING to a recent statement of P. A. Powers, president of the Film Booking Offices of America, we have little to fear from a "foreign invasion" of our film circles. European picture producers cannot compete with American sales and exploitation methods and they are gradually being forced to the wall. Mr. Powers recently made a survey of conditions in England and upon the Continent and investigated the expansion possibilities for Film Booking offices.

"The ventures of American producers in European production have resulted in nothing but failures," says Mr. Powers. "They have gone there with the idea that it was necessary simply to make pictures abroad, where actors could be hired more cheaply, in order to supply the American market with productions at prices to compete with the foreign producers. They soon learned that the lack of proper facilities in Europe more than offset any advantages gained by low salaries."

Mr. Powers further sees no reason to become perturbed over the commercial future of European-made films, because of America's steady progress in the art, and points to the fact that at least one great director has come to America and is now actively engaged in picture making at Hollywood.—J. R. M.

"ALL THE BROTHERS WERE VALIANT" (Metro) is a seven-part sea story, adapted from Ben Ames Williams' story and directed by Irvin V. Willat. It is a stirring tale, with Lon Chaney, Billie Dove and Malcolm McGregor in the principal roles. An interesting feature is the hunt of whales.

"THE WORLD'S APPLAUSE" (Paramount) offers Bebe Daniels in a story of the stage, with Kathryn Williams, Lewis Stone and Adolphe Menjou rendering excellent assistance. There is a murder mystery—which is disclosed to the spectator and therefore holds little suspense—but which holds the interest by reason of its outcome.

"GARRISON’S FINISH" (Allied Producers—United Artists) marks the return of Jack Pickford to the screen after a two years’ absence. It is a racing story adapted from W. B. H. Ferguson’s novel and contains aside from two spectacular horse races, enough incident to hold the attention throughout the eight reels.

"MONEY, MONEY, MONEY" (First National) presents the happy combination of a beautiful star, a good story and excellent direction. It is a story of Main Street, of everyday folks, and has been produced with an eye to every detail. Tom Forman directed.

"THE STRANGERS’ BANQUET" (Goldwyn) with a special cast is Marshall Neilan’s first contribution to Goldwyn. It is a capital and labor theme and the well chosen cast gives a remarkable performance. It is well produced and will hold your attention, though some may find it a bit confusing at times.

"THE LAST HOUR" (Mastodon) is one of the season’s best crook plays. A special cast headed by Milton Sills, Jack Mower and Carmel Myers do excellent work in this adapted Frank P. Adams’ story. It originally appeared in Munsey’s magazine as "Blind Justice."

"THE FACE ON THE BAR ROOM FLOOR" (Fox) is real picture entertainment, so full of heart interest, pathos, stirring situations and good comedy, it should prove one of the season’s outstanding productions. It is an adaptation of the old poem, by Miss C. Marion Burton, directed by Jack Ford, with an excellent cast of players.

"THE NINETY AND NINE" (Vitagraph) is a good old-fashioned melodrama, with forest fires, plunging locomotive, stalwart hero and crooked villains. The fire scenes alone are worth the price of admission. Well directed and well acted it will satisfy the most blase seeker of excitement.

"KINDLED COURAGE" (Universal) with Ed Hoot Gibson starring, is a pleasing story of small town life that moves along briskly and will prove a good attraction. Hoot is cast as a youth who has rewards thrust upon him for capturing a couple of bandits and because of several well staged incidents it holds up well to the happy climax.
SPECIAL CAST IN THE FACE ON THE BARROOM FLOOR
(FOX)

This Fox special makes mighty interesting entertainment. There is action, suspense and a succession of thrills that will hold any audience. Adapted from the old melodrama this film is exceptional in many respects. It is well acted, well photographed and carefully directed. Six reels. Directed by Jack Ford.

Presented under the conventional title The Face on the Barroom Floor," which likes one back to pre-Volstead days, this story of the love of a great artist for a beautiful girl and his fall from grace, in an attempt to shield another, makes pleasing entertainment. It has many dramatic moments, is presented in human light and throughout the acting above the average.

The production is high class and director Jack Ford can be congratulated or his excellent work. It has the general appeal of fine melodrama, plus well chosen types of players who play their roles with finesse and understanding, the atmosphere of an American coast town is wonderfully well preserved in its and backgrounds.

There are several highly dramatic points to the story, notably the escape of the prisoner, the dive from the cliff, the path of the lighthouse keeper, the stormy sea and the rescue of the lost ship, these are but a few of the big thrills. The subtleties are well done and add much to the enjoyment of the picture.

Henry Walthall, as Robert Stevens the famous artist, heads the well balanced cast. Walthall is in his element in this sort of a role and does splendidly. Ruth Clifford renders him fine support as Marion Von Vleck-Trevor. After Emerson plays the brother, Dick on Vleck, Alma Bennett, a particularly pretty girl, is Lottie and Novel McGreg- or is Governor Rankin. Robert Stevens, famous artist, meets Marion Von Vleck, while in Paris and it is love at first sight. He follows her to America and they become engaged. While Stevens is painting a picture of a city village maiden posing on the rocks, Dick Von Vleck, Marion's brother, becomes infatuated with Lottie, the model. hen he returns to college Dick desert- s. Stevens is accused and Marion breaks her engagement. Lottie drowns herself in the sea and the artist is forced to return to America. When he arrives, he is accused of theft and served two years in jail. He escapes from other prisoners, after saving the town, but is forced to look after a little girl named Lottie. He gains her confidence and the two become friends. When he is accused of murder, he turns to prison but he continues to

BEBE DANIELS IN WORLD'S APPLAUSE
(PARAMOUNT)

A fascinating story of the life of an actress who unwittingly becomes involved in a murder mystery which almost brings about her downfall professionally. Lavishly presented, very well acted and directed in William deMille's best style. Length, 6,528 feet.

An original story by Clara Beranger provides Bebe Daniels, Lewis Stone, Kathleen Williams, Adolph Menjou and others with a suitable vehicle in which to display their talents. There is good story interest for the most part, with good surprise value and considerable dramatic suspense in the contest of wits between the detectives and John Elliott and his sister.

Lewis Stone plays the role of Elliott and gives an unusually convincing and consistent characterization. The director, author and producer are to be congratulated upon securing Mr. Stone's services for this part. Miss Daniels appears in the role of an actress who is a bound for publicity, and the moral of the story shows how ready the public is to condemn these children of the stage. Kathleen Williams has the role of Esa Townsend, wife of an artist in love with the little actress, who in a fit of jealousy kills her husband. A difficult role, but played with restraint and conviction. Adolph Menjou is the artist, Bernice Frank was the maid; Mayme Kelso, secretary to the actress, and George Kuwa, valet to Townsend. James Neil was Elliott's valet. While Brandon Hurst played James Crane, owner of a string of newspapers.

Corinne d'Alys, popular Broadway star, poses for Townsend while he paints her portrait. On the day he is to display the painting he gives a party at his studio. As the guests assemble, Mrs. Townsend comes to the studio, discovers a valuable pearl headress which her husband is to give Corinne, and the portrait of the actress. In a fit of jealousy she strikes him down and leaves the studio with her brother, John Elliott. The discovery of the dead artist throws suspicion upon the members of the party. Corinne telephones to her affianced husband Elliott and he succeeds in convincing the police that she is innocent. Crane takes a hand in the investigation, however, and dogs Elliott's footsteps. A confession from Mrs. Townsend finally clears Elliott and the little actress, and she no longer seeks the world's applause, but is content to settle down with John.

HOOFT GIBSON IN KINDLED COURAGE
(UNIVERSAL)

A Western story with rather a novel twist to the plot, pleasing love interest and good atmosphere. Its biggest asset is the work of the star, who is well suited to this type of story. Will make good entertainment for most audiences. Directed by William Worthington. Five parts.

In this story by L. R. Brown we have Hoot Gibson as a small town boy, down in his luck and intimidated by the town bully. Following a particularly trying day he jumps on a freight train and leaves Sand Junction flat. How he is credited with the capture of two bank robbers and given a deputy sheriff's badge and later really captures a desperate bandit and his gang, while assisting a little Eastern girl to find her errant brother, makes up the balance of the interesting tale. He then goes back and whips the bully, which puts plenty of punch in the final reel.

You'll like Gibson as Andy Walker. The story is well handled, there is considerable dramatic tension in the contest between the bandits in the "haunted house" and the deputy, and it is the type of picture that will appeal to the majority of picture-goers, regardless of whether Gibson is their favorite or not. It is not a Western in the strictest sense of the word, as it contains no hard riding, shoot- ings, etc., with which Hoot Gibson has been associated of late. Just a pleasing, interesting and mighty entertaining little story.
SPECIAL CAST IN THE STRANGERS' BANQUET
(GOLDWYN)
A pretentious and interesting Marshall Neilan production, from a story by Donn Byrne, with an elaborate cast, headed by Rock- liffe Fellows, Claire Windsor and Hobart Bosworth. A "Capital and Labon" theme, with a strong moral message, Frank Urson gives credit for direction. Scenario by Frances Marion. Seven reels.

THE CAST
Shane Keogh, Hobart Bosworth, Derith Keogh, Claire Windsor, Angus Campbell, Rockliffe Fellows, At His Nest, ForSomeDerith Keogh, Thomas Holding, McPherson, Eugenie Besserer, John Keogh, Nigel Barrie, Marian, Stuart Holmes, Uncle Sam, Claude Gillingwater, Bride, Margaret Loomis, Bride's Father, Tom Guise, Bride's Mother, Lillian Langdon. Seven reels.

This is not one of those somnolent photographs that will uniformly back in your seat, and not care whether someone passes between you and the screen occasionally. On the contrary, you have to keep both eyes on the screen and your mind constantly on the tale there being told. Judged if you want to know what it's all about, for it goes rapidly, with constant cut-backs to the secondary theme.

A remarkable cast gives an excellent performance. Honors go to Rockliffe Fellows in the role of "Angus Campbell" and to Claire Windsor as "Derith Keogh," with Hobart Bosworth, as Derith's father, old "Shane Keogh," head of the lumbering industry, and with whom they close for place. Teddy, the wonderful Keystone dog, as old Keogh's constant companion, refusing food and dying at his deathbed, needs a certain local pathos. Others of the impressive cast are Ford Sterling, Eleanor Boardman, Thomas Holding, Nigel Barrie, Stuart Holmes, Margaret Loomis, Arthur Hoyt, William Humphrey.

The story opens with the interrupted wedding of John Trevelyan, who, learning he has no right to the name, and that he is an outcast from society, turns on that society and in a few years becomes an agitator planning workmen against their employers, his real motive to be revenged on the society from which he himself is an outcast. His life mirrors that of the Keogh's when, after the death of old Shane Keogh, the vast industry falls into the hands of Derith. John Keogh is under the influence of the shadowy wife he has married in haste, and leaves the business to the girl. She has for some time been planning with her father to adopt the lad for whom his death has cleared the way. Derith is quick to come off with surprising facility when he tries to help Derith run the business.

Trevelyan finds a quartet of malcontents at the plant who spread his insidious propaganda. The men, really loyal to the Keogh interests, following like sheep. John Keogh finds the girl he has married is mercenary, faithless, shallow. She meets her fate dramatically, in an excellently staged automobile catastrophe. Angus tries to convince Derith both she must not give in to the absurd demands of her men, for Angus sees there is no real discontent, only that stirred up by a seemingly own interests at heart. At last, unable to get Derith to see her folly, leaves though secretly keeping in touch with the plant and managing its concerns, until last Derith realizes her mistake, but her refusal to listen to further demands brings on a strike. Anges locates Trevelyan as a real cause of all the discontent, and with Derith appeals to him. A man who has felt the weight of Angus's power goes to "set" Angus and shows Trevelyan.

Dying, the agitator makes public confession and urges the men to return to work. Derith is compelled to ask Angus to marry her, as his tongue is tied because of her wealth.

A well produced, and thoroughly interesting picture. It may be a bit confusing to those who are slow to get things, but demands attention. Beautiful scenic shots add to its attractiveness.

SPECIAL CAST IN THE LAST HOUR
(MASTODON FILMS)
One of the season's best crook stories made into a film production so cleverly as to add much to the charm and interest of the narrative. The cast is exceptional and with the elimination of most of the gruesome gallows scene, should prove a good attraction.

"The Last Hour," made by Edward Solman and C. Burr's company, is a crook picture which proves by its excellence that this class of fiction provides a prolific field for picturization. Mr. Solman has taken Frank R. Adams' popular stage story, "Blind Justice," and transformed it into a picture, which from many viewpoints is one of the best he has yet produced.

What would be otherwise an almost perfect film entertainment is greatly marred by the use of scenes showing a gallow's is and the execution of a prisoner—execution to the point of where, after the trap has been sprung, the mechanism balks and an innocent man's life is saved. Just why a director of Mr. Solman's ability and experience should inject this gruesome and the film's provoking feature, is a mystery. Less of the gallow's stuff would greatly help the picture.

The story, which originally appears in (MASTODON FILMS) which dramatizes and the misadventures and misadventures of Steve Cline, a reformed crook who has made good. This part is given to Milton Sils, and is excellent.

Cline returns from South America to learn that his brother Tom (Jack Mower) has robbed a bank. Sam meets his brother at the home of Saidee McCall (Carmel Myers) and her father and while planning Tom's escape the police appear. In the trap. Tom is sold but Steve succeeds in aiding Saidee and her father to escape. Several years later the world is a Red Cross nurse and meets Philip Logan (Pat O'Malley) whose life has been saved by the man. The scene shifts to America after the adventure and was tried and convicted for the murder of a political boss who has been killed by Saidee's father while protecting her.

Philip Logan's father is governor of the state and through him Saidee tries in vain for a pardon. The day set for Steve's execution arrives and by a subterfuge Steve is released but reaches the prison too late. Steve is led to the gallows, the trap sprung, the mechanism balks and an innocent man's life is saved. The picture is filled with exciting incidents and presents many good opportunities for exploitation. It is in six reels.

KATHERINE MacDONALD IN MONEY, MONEY, MONEY
(FIRST NATIONAL)
The happy combination of a good story, beautiful staging, and capable direction make for the success of "Money, Money, Money." It is beautifully produced, very well acted and should appeal to every lover of good, clean screen entertainment. Advertise it as a story with a Main Street setting. Tom Forman directed. Six parts.

Larry Evans wrote "Money, Money, Money" especially for B. P. Schulberg's beautiful star, Katherine MacDonald, and she has given her one of the most entertaining and novel stories in which she has ever appeared.

Miss MacDonald is cast as Priscilla Hobbs, the daughter of a poor manufacturer, George Hobbs. The family suddenly acquires wealth, through the death of a mysterious relative, not knowing it is the trick of the local banker to involve them in debt that he may acquire the small Hobbs factory. It is only the fault of the daughter that he becomes so entangled but the girl takes a desperate chance to save her father and undoubtedly succeeds in finding happiness with her poor beloved brother.

There is a thrilling ride through a storm, with Miss MacDonald driving a high-power car and the smaller Hobbs are especially well produced. Careful attention has been paid to this detail of the picture. The comedy is good and the snappy subtitles fit in with the logical and carefully planned action.

Miss MacDonald plays the role of Priscilla Hobbs, and the work of the stars and this grace and praise must be given her acting which is worthy of the rest of the cast. In this flaming young lady, Miss MacDonald is in most capable hands also, Carl Stockdale playing this part with conviction. Frances Raymond is Mrs. Hobbs. Paul Willis the brother, Leonie Howard. Charles Clary appears as J. J. Grey, a promoter and Jack Dougherty as Reggie, her constant companion. Ethel Mavall is the villain of the piece, the banker Carter, and Brenda Fowler plays Mrs. Carter. Margaret Loomis renders good service as Caroline Carter, a society belle.

There are many unusual catch lines throughout the picture as "Does money bring happiness—Set Money, Money, Money" and "What would you do if you given a million dollars.

The title suggests a number of other advertising angles as well.

ALL THE BROTHERS WERE VALIANT

(METRO)

An exceptionally interesting story of the sea, one that is well told and full of unusual detail. The sea stuff is particularly well handled and a splendid cast enacts the various roles. It was adapted from Wendell Willkie’s story; Julian Josephson prepared the scenario and Irvin W. Willat directed. It is in seven parts.

Here’s a corking story of the sea. It has as the tang of the salt sea, is a simple, virile tale and rouses one’s interest at the very start and holds it throughout. The plot revolves around two brothers, he one a sea captain, the other a clerk on a steamer. The trend is toward good character drawing, a pretty heroine, and it is the type of story that should appeal to all who care for a wholesome story with no over-sentimentality about it.

Len Chase has the role of Mark Shore, rough sea captain, who deserts his ship to search for pearls. Malcolm McGregor is the younger brother, Joel Shore, while Jillie Dove appears as Friscilla Holt, who becomes the chartering wife of Joel and salls with him on his first whaling expedition. Others in the well chosen cast are Robert McKim, as first mate; William Morgan, as the comedy cook; Bob Conness, as the noble of Varese; Edith Frazier, as Morrell; Kurt Rehfeld, as looper, and Shannon Day, as the Brown girl.

There are many unusual talking points about this picture and its exploitation possibilities should not be overlooked. Attractive lobby displays of ship’s equipment and fishing nets suggest themselves and the excellent cast should be advertisedensively.

An outstanding feature of the production is the thrilling and intensely interesting scenes of a whale hunt. The realistic costumes and their1035 tightly and their bodies fought alongside and later scenes are shown of trying out the fat. The realistic music of the loyal sailors and those who start a mutiny among the men is a well staged bit of excitement.

The plot concerns Mark Shore, sea captain, who is lost while his ship is anchored near an island. His brother Joel is made captain of the same ship and-when the treasure with his bride finds his husband, who has found a siren and some pearls while marooned on lonely isle, finds Mark at once deterrines to return to the island for the Pearl. Joel refuses to go and will not permit his men to join Mark. A fight follows and in the melee Mark is knocked on board. Joel saves him and the story ads with the entry on the log of “All the brothers were valiant.”

SPECIAL CAST IN

NINETY AND NINE

(VITAGRAPH)

A good old-fashioned melodrama with enough exciting situations to satisfy the most blasé fan. It has one of the most realistic forest fires ever screened and the sentimental race of the locomotive through a veritable furnace of blazing trees with its human freight leaves a lasting impression.

Directed by David Smith, from Rassdy Norris’ stage drama, 6,860 feet in length.

They tell us this is the season of melodrama and screen. If so “The Ninety and Nine” is sure of a popular welcome. It has about it in the showman wants to make it appeal to those who like genuine melodrama.

There’s the unjustly accused hero, the treacherous wife, the stern, typical parents, village gossip, half wit lover and the stolen mortgage money, all more or less familiar to devotees of screen melodrama, but deftly handled in this case and the story interest is never allowed to lag.

The fire sequence is particularly well done and the love story supplies extra interest and has been very well handled.

Warner Baxter makes a particularly pleasing hero and acts naturally and well a role that calls for much restraint. Colleen Moore is excellent as the small town girl in love with the wayward city youth, Lloyd Whitlock plays the moustached villain; Gertrude Astor is the city girl and Beryl Hawley is a natural and very aberrant Abner Blake.

The picture has many good talking points and exploitation angles, such as the raging forest fire through which the hero drives the locomotive to safety, the escape of Phil Bradbury on a locomotive, the contrast of city and country life and the stampede of the inhabitants of Cleves, surrounded by a burning forest.

The story concerns Phil Bradbury, who is so completely involved with his horse that he loses his wife and their children. Then he has an accident on the road and the woman is killed. He is then released from the fire and goes to the east for help. The story is excellent and the acting is first rate. It should make a fine feature and will probably appeal to all classes.

The picture is adapted from a stage play by Charles Bradbury and is directed by Sarah Farrow, assisted by Kate Pendleton. The story is by Phil Bradbury and the acting is excellent. The story is well adapted and the dialogue is first rate. It should make a fine feature and will probably appeal to all classes.

FARM FOLLIES

(UNIVERSAL)

Produced and directed by a man of the land, this bit of nonsense is a series of chases, of broken down wagons, and a pretty group of farmettes. About the funniest thing in it is a put and take game, in the color of which the colored innumerable swallows the top to avoid being caught. It continues to spin in his funny little ring and in it a top is employed as the result. Not much new stuff in this merrily and the labored subtitles do not Up it much.

Madge Bellamy is now at work on her first starring vehicle for Associated. It will be adaptation of Harold Shumate's "The Tinsel Touch" with William A. Seiter directing. John Bowers has been assigned the leading male role.

+++ +

"The Tents of Allah," Edward A. MacManus' new production for Associated, will be published on February 25. Charles A. Logue was the author and the director of the piece. The picture is said to unfold a colorful and dashing romance with most of the action laid in Morocco. It was filmed in the MacManus studio in Porto Rico. Monte Blue and Mary Allen have the featured roles.

Noted Costume Designer Is Engaged by Paramount

Howard Greer, well known New York fashion designer, who created the costumes for the last edition of the Greenwich Village Follies, has been engaged by Paramount to create costumes for Paramount pictures, and left yesterday for Hollywood, where he will join the costume department in the Lasky studios under the direction of Mrs. Ethel Chaffin.

Mr. Greer, who has become well known to the public through his fashion articles in Vanity Fair, Vogue and Harper's Bazaar, studied designing in Paris for five years, was with Lady Duff-Gordon (Lucile) for two years and also was with Poiret and Molyneux for some time. He has created the costumes of leading French artists.

Independent Pictures Offers Varied Program of Subjects

A long list of subjects is offered the state right market by Independent Pictures Corporation, 1340 Broadway, New York, of which Jesse J. Goldberg is president. For the past twelve months Mr. Goldberg has been perfecting his organization and acquiring productions and contracting for other productions to be made for publication through independent exchanges.

The company is offering a series of twelve two-reel Biograph subjects released under the name of "Favorite Star Pictures." These attractions feature such stars as Lilian Gish, Harry Carey, Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lionel Barrymore, and others.

Independent Pictures has also acquired world distribution rights to the series of new Nick Carter subjects, the first four of which have already been completed by Murray W. Garsson, Inc., producer, Edmund Love, Anders Randolph, Harry Sedley, Vincent Coleman and Diana Allen are feature players in the first four.

The company has also contracted with Iroquois Productions for six features for 1923. The first two of these, "The Devil's Partner," starring Norma Shearer, Edward S. Rossome, Charles E. Deane, Henry Sedley and Stanley Walpole, and "The Valley of Lost Souls," starring Muriel Kingston, Victor Sutherland, Anne Hamilton and Edward Roseman, have been completed. They are Canadian north woods melodramas.

In addition to this Mr. Goldberg has arranged with Premium Picture Productions of Oregon for the entire product of that organization, which will include twelve five-reel subjects, six of which are completed. George Larkin features in four and Jack Livingston in two of the six now ready. Four of the six have been edited and titled as follows: "Flames of Passion," "The Way of the Transgressor," "The Clean-Up" and "Timber Bride." Three special productions will be made in addition to this series of twelve.

An extensive advertising campaign to the trade will be launched on the series with an independent campaign for the specials.

Goldburg leaves for West Coast January 12 to supervise making of the remaining features, while later in the year Benjamin W. Rosenblum will go to Europe to provide and direct foreign representation.

In stating that the terms of franchise to be negotiated with state right buyers will be a decided departure from ordinary methods, Mr. Goldberg declared that it does not seem to be generally recognized that with the improvement in the methods employed by independent exchanges that new and different terms must be employed and improved or more extended co-operation must exist between the independent producer and national distributors on the one hand and the state right exchange on the other.

"As an instance—herefore—we advertised in the national trade publications for the purpose of reaching state right buyers and to effect sale of our product. We advertise primarily now to acquaint the exhibitor with our product leaving it to personal contact to effect or consummate the sale or placing of independent productions with the state right exchanges. In other words, the national independent distributors follow the course of national producers operating their own exchanges by directing their advertising to the exhibitor.

"We have laid out a thorough plan of releases—we have substantial product that we believe possess merit, and who do not apprehend any difficulty in placing our productions with exchanges operating in every State of the Union—at a commercial purpose and procedure."
Lupino Lane Is Starred in Feature Length Comedy

Hailed as one of the most popular comedians of two continents, Lupino Lane, pantomimist and famous tumble is seen in "A Friendly Husband," a five-reel special comedy in the Fox series—the first which the company has issued as a special in two years.

For some twenty years Lupino Lane has been on the stage, playing the London Hippodrome and Drury Lane with his father, and his comic ability is not a recent discovery.

In "A Friendly Husband" Lane takes his wife with him for a camping trip on the hottest day of the year equipped with all the comforts of home folded up in an enormous truck which is hitched on to the car. By simply working a lever stoves, dishes, tables, chairs, washing machine and many other things are forthcoming and throughout, the mishaps and adventures prove decidedly mirth-provoking Fox officials declare.

One twenty-four sheet, one six sheet, two three sheets and three one sheets, as well as window cards, slides, circus heralds and a sixteen-page press book are available on Lupino Lane's comedy, it is announced.

"If Winter Comes" Will Make Screen History Fox Declares

Screen history will be made, Fox Film Corporation predicts, when the screen version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's widely read novel, "If Winter Comes," is published to exhibitors. As a book it has surpassed the million mark in circulation, and the announcement of its adaptation to the screen created great public interest, it is pointed out.

Harry Millarde directed the entire production; some of the bigger outdoor scenes being taken on the English sites described by the author. The remainder of the scenes requiring interiors were taken at the Fox studios in New York and Los Angeles.

At the present time the film is being cut and edited. It will be issued soon.

An extensive and elaborate advertising campaign will be started before the publication date is set for the photoplay, the story of which, it is believed, holds the world's record for a fiction publication. Most of the newspapers in the larger cities have already run the story in serial form.

"THE TOWN THAT FORGOT GOD" is another Fox special production that comes to exhibitors fresh from a ten week run on Broadway and is soon to be issued. All the New York newspaper critics dwelt at length on the power and intensity of the storm scene, which has been acclaimed by the reviewers as one of the most realistic ever created Fox reports. The acting of Bunny Grauer, who portrays the boy, is given a special amount of praise in these reviews. Harry Millarde, who directed "Over the Hill," created this screen production.

A musical score has been prepared for "The Town That Forgot God" by Erno Raxe.

Legion to Use Film in Americanism Campaign

The American Legion, through its Film Service Division, has acquired from S. H. Boynton, of Chicago, all rights to picture "The Man Without a Country," based on the original story by Dr. Edward Everett Hale.

The film will be shown throughout the country in connection with the Legion's Americanism campaign. Distribution will be under direction of Earle A. Meyer, Director of the Film Service at Legion National Headquarters, Indianapolis.

New Series Will Be Issued Immediately

Producer Announces

"The Village Blacksmith," "A Friendly Husband," "The Net," "The Face on the Barroom Floor," "Does It Pay?" and "The Custard Cup"; these are the six new specials offered by William Fox which the company has scheduled for immediate publication.

These new productions are vastly different in scope and material from those issued early in the season but their box office appeal is equally certain, Fox Film Corporation declares.

Interesting facts about the new series is revealed in the following digest:

"THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH" brings Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's famous poem to the screen. It was heartily applauded by reviewers at its New York premiere. Distinguished players, including William Dearing, Full of Marshall, Virginia Valli and Bessie Love, are featured under the direction of Jack Ford.

"A FRIENDLY HUSBAND" is a five-reel comedy starring Lupino Lane, well-known comedian of two continents.

"THE NET," a 1923 melodrama of thrills and mystery directed by J. Gordon Edwards, is a drama of women's conventions and men's intentions. A brilliant romance of Bohemian life in the artists' studios of the Latin Quarter is said to be vividly and faithfully portrayed by an all-star cast. Mr. Gordon and Maravene Thompson wrote the story.

"THE FACE ON THE BARROOM FLOOR" brings to the screen Henry B. Walthall in a story of sensations, thrills, prison escapes, storms at sea and a charming romance directing this. Ruth Clifford is in the cast.

"DOES IT PAY?" is an engrossing picture of life featuring Hope Hampton, supported by a notable cast and directed by Charles Horan.

"THE CUSTARD CUP," with Mary Carr, is adapted from the popular story of that name by Florence Bingham Livingston, a story of every-day life with a surprise climax following a series of humorous developments. The direction of this special was in Herbert Brenon's hands.

Coming soon will be "The Town That Forgot God," which ended a successful ten-week Broadway run on January 7, and "If Winter Comes" by A. S. M. Hutchinson, directed by Harry Millarde, with a cast of brilliant players.

Announcement is now made that arrangements have been made for the Thomas Dixon production, "The Beast," have been made with Producers Security Corporation.
Big Sea Film Obtained by Hodkinson

"DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS"
Pictures the Thrills, the Romance and the Hardships Experienced by New Bedford Whalemens

W. W. HODKINSON CORPORATION has obtained the distribution rights on "Down to the Sea in Ships," a picture depicting the thrills, romance and hardships experienced by New England whalemen and described by those who have seen it as a super-special.

The attraction was produced by Whaling Film Corporation, a group of New Bedford, Mass., business men whose purpose in making the picture was to perpetuate for all time the wealth of tradition that surrounds the whaling industry in New England.

Elmer Clifton, former assistant to David Wark Griffith, directed the production which, its sponsors say, will be a monument to his genius.

The outstanding fact in conjunction with the filming of this picture is that it is one of the few productions that has for its locale the tempestuous waters of the high seas, and the principal character in this drama of the Atlantic, is a ninety-ton whale.

The great moment in "Down to the Sea in Ships," comes when the whale, realizing the futility of escape, turns on his captors, sweeps one side of the boat, leaving but the stumps of broken oars in the hands of the fear-stricken crew. The harpoon is still imbeded deeply in the back of the whale and in one last effort to rid itself of the life-taking iron, the giant mammal of the deep swims off to a distance of several hundred feet, turns, hesitates an instant, then charges the boat with the speed and force of the fastest express. It is only a matter of seconds until the whale has hit the boat square in the middle, smashing it to bits and tossing its crew into the air. Sharks are plainly seen ready to strike the instant any of the crew touch the water.

But of all this action, however, is an appealing love story. Raymond McKee in the part of a young engineer, returns to the scene of his childhood and finds Marguerite Courrot, his playmate of earlier days, grown to charming womanhood. The decree of a stern father, owner of a whaling fleet, forbids his daughter's marriage to anyone but a whaler who has sunk his harpoon into a whale. To answer this requirement from which there was no appeal, McKee sets out to sign up as a whalerman, but before he has put his name to the articles, he is shanghaied and carried to sea against his will, under as cruel a mate as ever walked the deck.

A mutiny gives the greenhand his chance and McKee, in the bow of a long boat, amid a school of whales plainly discernible on the screen, sinks his iron to the shank into his prey.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" would not have been possible to produce in its present state had it not been for the cooperation accorded the producer by the townsfolk of New Bedford. Mr. Clifton had at the very outset the wholehearted cooperation of the old Dartmouth Historical Society and as a consequence he was able to count upon the efforts of every man, woman and child in New Bedford in his endeavor to present a true picture of the whaling city and its curious customs.
Century Buys Many Stories

New Johnny Hines Feature Is Sold in South

"Sure Fire Flint," the latest feature offered by C. G. Burr, in which Johnny Hines is starred, has been disposed of in two territories—the south and southwest by Leavens F. Crover, general representative of Mr. Burr, who has just returned to New York. R. D. Crover, head of the First National Exhibitors Circuit of Virginia, which includes the first six southern states, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Florida, has acquired the Hines feature for his territory.

True T. Thompson of True Film Corporation, Dallas, has acquired the rights for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The feature has also been sold to William D. Hurlbut of Michigan, and contracts for other territories are pending, it is announced.

ALL-STAR COMEDIES produced by C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., are finding their way into the foremost run houses in the country, according to a list of bookings on these comedies, given out by the W. W. Hoge School Corporation through whom they are issued. Raymond McKee, Charlie Murray, Mary Anderson and Flora Finch are featured players in this film.

Included in the houses which have booked All-Star comedies are the Rialto theatre, New York; Gifts, Cincinnati; Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo; Victoria, Rochester; Bellevue, Niagara Falls; Savoy, Syracuse; American, Troy, N. Y.; Albany, Schenectady, N. Y.; Capitol, Superior, Wis.; Post, Battle Creek, Mich.; Gladmer, Lansing, Mich.; Majestic, Jackson, Mich.; Garden, Muskegon, Mich.; Washington, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Palm, Rockford, Ill.; Rialto, Aurora, Ill.; Fort Armstrong, Rock Island, Ill.

Wanda Hawley to Appear in New Vitagraph Story of Sea

For its production of Morgan Robertson's sea novel, "Masters of Men," Vitagraph has signed Wanda Hawley, former Paramount star, for one of the leading roles. This is to be a special and will feature an all-star cast.

"Masters of Men," is considered Robertson's most colorful sea tale. It tells of two young men who become pals while they are "gobs" in the U. S. Navy and of their adventures when they are shanghaied on board a schooner adrift in the Spanish Main. With their sweetheart, the quartette are the outstanding characters in the narrative.

EDWARD HORTON, star under the direction of Jess Robbins in "Too Much Business" and "The Ladder Jinx," will be seen in "A Front Page Story," his third production, which Vitagraph announces will be published soon. Horton is well known as a stock actor and "Too Much Business" marked his initial appearance before the camera. He has attained considerable popularity in his offerings to date, his stories being comedies of American life embracing heart appeal and romance.

"HUNTING GROUND OF HIA-WATHA" is the current issue by Vitagraph of the Urban Popular Classic. It is a beautiful scene and shows the long trail of the Indian as described in Longfellow's poem, and children will find this Urban attractive not only because of the wealth of Nature studies in it, but because its title, gossipy lines from the poem which nearly all youngsters have memorized.

LARRY SEMON'S next comedy will be called "No Wedding Bells." The comedy is now being produced at the Vitagraph Hollywood studios. Lucille Carlson plays the beautiful young girl whom the heroic Larry saves from the toils of a wicked Chinaman.

Issue Five in January

Special Material Is Purchased for Stars As 1923 Productions

Nineteen twenty-three Century comedies will be better and funnier than ever as indicated by the list of stories acquired for its various stars, Sig Neufeld, production manager of the company declares.

For Baby Peggy, the following will be adapted to the screen: "Tilly Jones," by Marc Rex; "Little Trouble Mender," by Zackery Miles; "Smile Maker," by Rae Blumer; "Kissable Tess," by David Brown; and "Sweetheart of the Mounted," by Bert Sterling.

For Brownie, the Century "Wonder Dogs," the following have been accepted: "Dogdom," by Charles Gould; "A Dog's Day," by Charles Gould; "Dog Tracks," by T. W. O'Neill; and "His Master's Breath," by James Wyler.

For Buddy Messenger two stories have been purchased, although an option on six others has been taken. The two are "Slim Saunders, Detective" and "Amateur Gangsters," both of them by Harold McBride.

All of these stories are being transferred into continuity by writers who are likewise interesting "gags" suited to the different actors.

BABY PEGGY'S latest Century comedy special, "Too Many Lovers," has been completed. This is the picture which Herman Raymaker directed instead of Alf Goulding. The story centers around a little tot, played by Peggy, who makes too many dates to be taken to her dancing school. As each of her escorts shows up he trouble to these parts of the house. One is placed in the closet, one in the ante room, one under the bath, one under the chimney, and one under the table. Of course comedy follows when the boys discover each other. The boys Marshall Nelan used in "Pony" played in this comedy. They are Winston Radom, Newton Hall, Kenneth Green, Bill Condon and Verne Winter. Grow-ups in the cast include: Joe Moore, brother of the famous Moore boys, Edna Gregory, Billy Franey, and Harry Archer.

THAT THE all-animal comedies now being made by Century, in which an animal takes the leading part, are proving popular among exhibitors is pointed out by the company in the following bookings:

The Leland theatre, Albany, is showing "Just Dogs:" the Columbia, Seattle, "Wedding Pumps," a comedy starring Brownie the Wonder Dog; Loew's Bijou, Birmingham, Alabama, "Just Dogs:" the Strand is Buffalo, "True Blue," featuring Onech the Horse; the Garden theatre, Des Moines, "Hello, Judge:" the Standard, Cleveland, "True Blue"; Kinema, Los Angeles, "Just Dogs:" New Olympiad Buffalo, "Just Dogs," and "Hello, Judge," Olympic Buffalo, "Rookie," with Brownie; the Rivoli, St. Louis, "Women First:" the Melba, Dallas, "Hello, Judge," Odeon theatre, Indianapolis, "Hello, Judge:" and the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Oregon, "Hello, Judge."

ALLEN HOLUBAR and Dorothy Phillips have finished their production of 'The White Frontier' for Associated First National. The story, which is virile and gripping, is produced on an elaborate scale and will doubtless be the most costly and lavish outdoor picture to be filmed in many a day. The cast supporting Miss Phillips is a notable one.

LYNTE WASHBURN and HORATI BOW-WORTH are being busy these days trying to work in two pictures at the same time without missing a trick. Both stars are now playing in two big Selznick productions, 'Rupert of Hentzau' and 'The Common Law,' and it keeps them on the jump answering the demands of Directors Victor Heerman and George Archainbaud simultaneously.

Announcement has been made by Goldwyn that CLARENCE BAKER is back at the "old stand" in Culver City. He is under contract to direct a big production of Edward E. Rose's mystery melodrama, 'The Rear Car,' which will be filmed under the title, "Red Lights." Badger, who directed Will Rogers' Goldwyn pictures, more recently made "Quincy Adams Sawyer" for S.L. Productions and this special is now being given publication through Metro. 'The Rear Car' was first produced on the stage at the Majestic theatre, here, with Richard Bennett in the leading role.

WILLIAM DUNCAN, who for the past two years has been making Western features at Vitagraph, together with his wife, professionally known as Edith Johnson, have left the local film colony for New York to confer with film officials with reference to a big serial contract. Several companies have been after the services of the popular star for the past few weeks but Duncan was not tempted until he received the Eastern offer. An interesting announcement pertaining to his future screen activities will undoubtedly be forthcoming upon Bill's return to Hollywood in the near future.

EMER STEVENS, noted actor of stage and screen, died at his home here last week, following an attack of pleurisy. Mr. Stevens was associated with the American stage for over thirty years. He has played with most of the drama celebrities of his day including Ethel Barrymore, and many others. He has been in picture work for the past two years.

BOYD COAN, Chicago producer, who is spending a few days here selecting a cast to re-make the production, "The Little Girl Next Door," has assigned Pauline Starke to enact the leading role in the picture. Others who will have a part in the new version of the special that broke many house records throughout the country seven years ago, are Creighton Hale, Carmel Myers and Mitchell Lewis. They will leave for Chicago, where the filming will be done, some time this week. W. Van Dyke will direct under the supervision of Coan.

DR. A. P. GIANNINI, prominent banker of San Francisco and New York, who has been visiting here for the past few days, was the house guest at a dinner given by Miss Bennett at his attractive home in Westmoreland the other night. About thirty guests, including Mrs. Giannini, J. D. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schenck, Mrs. Bennett, mother of the host, and other celebrities were entertained. The banker is a great friend of the motion picture industry and he is decidedly popular with the movie folk of Hollywood.

A few of the more daring of the Hollywood screen colony have gone in for aviation as a diversion. DICK GRACE, well known pilot and stunt man, has started the fad and he has no more faithful disciple than Al St. John, comedy star of the Fox film forces. The popular comedian asserts that he would rather fly than eat and in proof of this statement he often spends his noonday lunch hour soaring over the green hills of the city. Young Grace, who enlisted in the air force as the outbreak of the war, is being besieged by members of the profession who are desirous of learning the art of high-flying.

ROY H. KLAFFER has resigned as laboratory superintendent of the Metro studios to take up similar work with Goldwyn. Starting as a projectionist over twenty years ago, Klaffer has risen to his present important position in the industry after having made a deep study of things photographic. He has been associated with many of the leading directors and stars in recent years and has supervised the laboratory work on several of the big special productions turned out in the city.

Tourists who journeyed out to Hollywood on New Year's Eve in anticipation of witnessing wild revels among members of the movie colony, departed from the attractive little foothill suburb barber shop. The most devilish orgies participated in by the film folk on the streets of the film capital during the celebration was horse tooting and promenading. A few prominent stars, it was said, indulged in naggy soda pop at the corner drug store while still others gave their tongues a sleigh ride on "Esquimo Pie." So this is Hollywood.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., has booked the Cosmopolitan production, "When Nightしました Was in Flowers," for their entire chain of houses owned or controlled by Messrs. Gore, Ramish and Lesser. Contracts were closed following a showing of the picture at which all members of the executive staff of the theatre company were present.

Universal studio executives entertained press representatives and others one night last week when thrilling night scenes for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" were being filmed. Luncheon was served and the visitors, under the guidance of Mique Boslan, P.A., were shown about the lot.

Two hundred invited guests of Charles Ray and Stanley Anderson, manager of the Beverly Hills hotel, witnessed a preview of a seven-reel production of the United Artists production titled, "The Girl I Loved." Preceding the showing, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson entertained their dinner in honor of the star and his picture. The picture, which is based on the personal love story of the late James Whitcomb Riley, author of the verse, was well received.

Here's an Idea

W. P. Cuff, W. P. Cuff Enterprises, Chillicothe, Mo., believes in the theory that persistence wins. He doesn't believe in fighting the reform element today and laying down tomorrow. Right for 268 days a year is his motto. Think of the results if the thousands of exhibitors in the country adopted that policy.

Note I have a telephone hook-up with mine that adds to the value of it as an advertising medium. I thought my phone idea was original until just a few days ago a film salesman told me he had seen the same thing in Fort Smith, Ark., a few years ago.

Now the real big idea in my calendar as I see it is the opportunity it affords me to send telling messages to the public that never hear or read the exhibitor's side of the blue law or censorship question, and of course are misled by the articles they read in the average papers. It is not a complete solution of the problem of all types of censorship, but it is a step in the right direction.

You may be kind enough in the "Herald" to mention me as one who, like Mr. Fred S. Mayer, of Hamilton, O., believes the screen itself is the most powerful weapon controlled by the exhibitors, but we cannot always reach the people we would like to reach by the screen alone. But I have found that the calendar I use, owing to the prospect of securing a free ticket, not only reaches all the people, but they keep the calendar and always near the phone where they can see it no longer.R.

Harry F. Cuff, Chillicothe, Mo., believes in the theory that persistence wins. He doesn't believe in fighting the reform element today and laying down tomorrow. Right for 268 days a year is his motto. Think of the results if the thousands of exhibitors in the country adopted that policy.

Screen Message No. 90

Think this over: Why pay salaries to political workers to censor pictures when you, as patrons of this theatre and the only logical censors, have the privilege of requesting the type of screen entertainment you desire? This theatre is always mindful of its duty to the community.

REPRODUCED HEREWITH are two of Mr. Cuff's monthly calendars. In December calendar note free screen message in upper left-hand portion of card. In the October calendar the anti-censorship talk is published in the lower right-hand corner. Read article for details.

They Take It and Read It

Cleveland, Ohio—To the Editor: I consider your holiday number of the Herald a work of real art and can assure you that I read every edition from cover to cover. I find, however, that the only one interested in the Herald for I find it on the desk or in the hands of the exhibitor in every theater in every city in every state where I go. I really did not think it was read so much by the exhibitor or know it had such a wide circulation.

With kindest regards and hoping that the coming year may be a successful one for you, I am, Yours truly, Edwards Amusement Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

We Sent Him Another One

Hay Springs, Neb.—To the Editor: Our copy of the Holiday number was not complete. If it is at all possible for you to send us another copy, please do as we have very definite plans of completing copies in the files.

We enjoy the other parts of the holiday number very much and don’t like to take and throw out any of the articles which might have been in these missing pages. Wishing you success and the compliments of the season, I am—Paul C. Morgan, manager, Star theatre, Hay Springs, Neb.

They’re Hard to Get In

Corpus Christi, Tex.—To the Editor: Do you know where I can get “The Lord’s Supper” with the original cast? I have heard a lot of remarks about this and want to try it and see if it will bring results. I have done everything else that I know of and just won’t jar loose—and I thought maybe they would like to see it. Eh! what?—George H. Zinsz, manager, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.

Too Late for Holiday Issue

What was the greatest picture of 1927? and why?

Theodore Anton, manager of the Lowell theatre, St. Louis, was seriously injured in an accident in a high-rise building in St. Louis. The man stopped Anton a short distance from the theatre and ordered him to throw up his hands. When he had done so, he tore the $121 receipts of the show, resisted, knocking the robber’s gun to one side. In flight Anton fell and told and was overtaken by the footpad, who beat him on the head with a revolver. At the City Hospital it was stated Anton probably sustained a fractured skull. The highwayman fled without taking the money.

John F. Stowe, who has had wide experience as manager of theatres in Cincinnati, and other cities, has been made manager of the Oliver theatre, Niles, Michigan, controlled by Palace Theatre Corporation.

C. E. Stillwell, Casino theatre, Spokane. “Wash. is rebuilding the stage of his theatre and is planning to present prologues in connection with his picture programs.”

F. C. Yelverton, Ballston Spa, N. Y., wanted a “Fox on New Year’s Day” but found that the only way he could get a print was to drive to Cobleskill, 30 miles away, and on the roads partially blocked with snow. Sir, Yelverton made the trip, however, and showed the feature to big crowds on Monday.

Oscar Cantnor, who recently joined the Paramount organization in St. Louis, has undergone an operation for a throat infection. He was removed from the hospital to his home on Christmas Day, and is rapidly recovering.

William Truog, district manager for Goldwyn, spent the early part of last week in St. Louis. The local office expects a guest from James Grainger about the middle of January.

Robert “Dusty” Rhodes has leased his Gillham theatre to the Amusement Company and will go to California for a rest. “Dusty” has been connected with the Gillham for nine years, formerly having been booker for the booking staff of the Kansas City American Association baseball club.

D. M. Major, former city salesmen and assistant manager of the Kansas City Vitagraph office, has resigned and will join the Crescent Film Exchange in Kansas City as special representative.

J. O. Buckles and Brother Peck, members of the I. T. D. AMAM, have opened a theatre supply house in Wichita, Kan., in the Peck building and opened a branch house in Kansas City, Mo., handling a complete line of theatre supplies.

Ralph N. Jones of Jones & Stewart, owners of the Majestic theatre, Sturgis, South Dakota, has sold his interest to the business.

Mrs. J. J. Dougherty is playing the organ at the National theatre, Breckenridge, Texas.

W. C. Bachmeyer, central eastern division manager for Metro, was a recent visitor in Cleveland, which was in charge of the State Lake theatre, Chicago, for several years.

Eugene Kennedy, formerly manager of the Palace at Tyler, Texas, has taken over management of the Jewel theatre, Rusk, Tex.

L. Brent is now managing the American theatre, Enid, Okla., showing first-run pictures to good business.

C. D. Hill, Hodkinson manager at S. Louis, was called “at” on December 22 to attend the funeral of December 29 of his father-in-law, Charles Burks, who died following an attack of appendicitis.

Bernard C. Cook, manager of Standar Film Company, Kansas City, says that the firm has obtained another series of western pictures starring J. B. Warner for distribution in Kansas and Western Missouri.

George Herbert Bell, baritone since 1923 at the Stradland, Wichita Falls, Tex., singing solos during the holiday period.

C. W. McKeen, of the St. Louis office, attended the convention of the Illinois Teachers’ Association at Springfield, Dec. 28 and 29, where he explained the Fox educational project and arranged a special showing of "The Village Blacksmith" and short subjects.

American Releasing

My Old Kentucky Home, with Monte Blue.—Good. Made money on it. Not priced so high. Every one liked it. Can't go wrong if you book it.—E. E. Cox, Lyceum theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

Bluebeard, Jr., with Mary Anderson.—Would have made a good two-reel domestic comedy. As a five-reeler, story too slight. Nothing offensive, however.—P. G. Esteé, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. Dak.—Neighborhood patronage.

Associated Exhibitors

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Played three days to fair audience and all pleased. Not a record breaker by any means here. However, made a little money. Lloyd not a drawing card here.—C. B. Davis, Norwood theatre, Norwood, Ohio.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—A comedy that will bring 'em in the second time. For concentrated fun this is a snipper. Good house booster but rental too high. Exchange got everything. Lost money, but enjoyed doing it. Buy it right.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Jacksonville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Doubt Your Wife, with Leah Baird.—Boys, here is a real program picture. Good story, full of pep and a good storm scene. Book it. It will please.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

F. B. O.

The Snowshoe Trail, with Jane Novak.—Mighty good Northern story—well made and consistent all through. Bought at a reasonable price, too.—P. G. Esteé, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. Dak.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Understudy, with Doris May.—Very clever picture, light, wholesome and laugh producing.—Giacomma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Up and At 'Em, with Doris May.—Fine comedy. If you want comedy book his one.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

My Dad, with Johnnie Walker.—Good picture. Poor business.—G. Strasser Bros., Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Boy Crazy, with Doris May.—These later type productions are safe bets for me and this one is no exception. Doris day is well liked here.—J. C. McKeé, Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo.—Neighbor hood patronage.

Son of the Wolf, with a special cast.—A good picture. My patrons like all Northemns.—T. Bouldin, Lyric theatre, St. Charles, Mich.—Small town patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Very good. Satisfied them all.—Nelson theatre, Pascagoula, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Laying very big business. Advertising possibilities great, especially cuts of policemen. Picture fair.—F. Atkins, Jr., Atkins theatre, Marysville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—This is a very good and clean-cut picture. Everyone who saw it commented favorably on it.—M. J. Babin, Fairlyand theatre, White Castle, La.—General patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Interesting, but overdrawn and a very improbable story. It would not happen once in a thousand years in real life.—Giacomma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Seven Years Bad Luck, with Maxu Lin-der.—Nothing to it. I should call it a bloomer.—Lyric theatre, Earlville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fatal Marriage, with a special cast.—Good, picture. Patrons disgusted and walked out. Fell flat.—G. Strasser Bros., Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

At the Stage Door, with a special cast.—Clean picture. Didn't hear a knock.—E. L. Franck, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sting of the Lash, with Pauline Frederick.—Good, but would rather have had Pauline Frederick in some other picture. Too much Western.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

First National

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—A fine picture. Please all who saw it. Very entertaining from every angle. Better house second day than on the first. Used with an Educational comedy at twenty and forty cents.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—Good picture that gave satisfaction.—C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.—General patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—A very fine picture. Please all who saw it. Did not draw for me as good as Smillin' Through.—J. C. Hester, Augusta theatre, Shaw, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

COURAGE, with a special cast.—This one pleased good houses for two days with the temperature at 38 below Zero. As good as a sermon and easy to take. All good comments.

No simp censor could take a wallop at this picture.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.

The Maskerader, with Guy Bates Post. —Played Christmas day and day following. Played holiday market managed to about break even at big price paid for same. Heavy exploitation. Not worth the money.—C. B. Davis, Norwood theatre,
TWO AMUSING SCENES from the new Johnny Jones comedy for Pathe, “Stung,” which will be published on January 14.

In the center is Jobyna Ralston, new leading woman for Harold Lloyd.

The Girl in the Taxi, with Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Havilland. Very funny and very naughty. It’s a wonder the censors let this slide by. It sure made them roar and is a fine evening’s entertainment. — Ralph R. Grisbie, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada. — Neighborhood patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. type production. A fine entertainment. The audience could not contain their laughter. — H. G. Serrajend, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla. — General patronage.

Serenade, with a special cast. — No good for small town. — Gem theatre, Waterville, Maine. — General patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart. — An extra good picture. Lots of my patrons told me it was fine. — P. L. Burford, Princess theatre, Doniphan, Mo. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart. — Sure a very fine production. It is pleasingly taught. — H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb. — Small town patronage.

The Silent Call, with Strongheart. — Have heard many favorable comment on this, and it lived up to all it. — C. McKe Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Barnstormer, with Charles Ray. — Fell flat one day. Poorest Ray picture ever shown. Patrick walked out after seeing two or three reels. Disgusted. Should be taken out of service. — G. Sira, Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. — Neighborhood patronage.

Pilgrims of the Night, with a special cast. — An excellent program picture its kind. Interesting and pleased audience. — H. A. Larson, Majestic theatre, Oakland, Neb. — Small town patronage.

Peaceful Valley, with Charles Ray. —

New Hampshire is entered in the Poet Laureate contest and Ohio and Illinois gain additional representatives in the contributions of the week.

Fred S. Meyer, challenged early in the contest, is indicating early completion of competing for the title, but Ohioans are notoriously modest.

The candidates entered to date are apportioned as follows:

Ohio (2) Kentucky
Illinois (2) Idaho
Nebraska (2) Montana
Iowa (2) Oklahoma
Kansas (2) Missouri
Canada (2) Wisconsin
S. Dakota (1) Michigan

“Peacock Alley”

O Mine, she is a bonnie lass.
A bonnie lass, a bonnie lass
O Mine, she is a bonnie lass.
She fills me with delight.
She dances so charmingly.
And smiles so disarmingly.
Our hearts beat quite alarmingly.
It thrilled us.

Her plays are all spectacular.
Spectacular, spectacular;
Her plays are all spectacular;
“Peacock Alley.”

Replete with much variety, Patronage.

And action all entwine.
Throughout the night they’re pouring in.
Peacock Alley.
Throughout the night they’re pouring in.
Peacock Alley.

For Mae is so symmetrical.
Herself, electrical,
Her dance is such a spectacle.
Her clothes, O Lordy me!

This book now plays, before its late.
Before its late.
Now book this play, before its late.
And Mae is such a bonnie lass;
You can not let the moment pass.
Peacock Alley.

For Mae is so symmetrical.
Herself, electrical,
Her dance is such a spectacle.
Her clothes, O Lordy me!

The Truth About Garham
Greet New Hampshire's Candidate

Tell us not in joyous verses
This "bi" is just one long sweet dream;
He who daily discusses
And at night -- well, I seem.

Salemen's glib talk oft reminds us
We should choose our films with care.
Fine the houses in which we are Left with many a vacant chair.

But praise be, they're not all rotten,
Some return us many a dime,
While the perfumes are forgotten
As receipts keep on the climb.

And if you'll give me attention,
Just as briefly as can be,
I should dearly like to mention
"What the world's in for me."

Thomas Ince's "Hail the Woman"
Stronger than "The Silent Call," (Wonder dog, that, almost human!)"
Gad, tested them again 'gainst the wall.
And poor Rodolph Valentino
In the well remembered "Shenk"
Proved a worthy result of love
Of a hat, dry summer week.

"Pencock Alley," "Fascination."
"Where's My Windin'Boy Tonight?"
Those three sure brought home the bacon;
Likewise, too, "Turn to the Right."

"School Days," with young Wesley Barry
Brought you the laughs, as joy and small.
Meghan in "A Bachelor Daddy."—
Couldn't find room for them all.

"Trible David" proved a winner,
Filled the grouch bag to the rim run.
And as sure as I'm a sinner,
Dick's in the lead, ahead of them in.

There were many more worth showing,
Though results made us feel blue,
For unlooked-for in "Thunderclap" During nineteen-twenty-two.

But that year is now behind us,
And we're surely filled with glees
As we seek to work and plan
Of what's due in "twenty-three."

Pettime theatre, Tilton, N. H.

Just a good program picture, not a special in any sense. Not worth a raise — admission. — L. R. Creason, Palace theatre, East Longmeadow, Mass.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Star Ranger, with William Farren. — Get this one and then get after the audience, then get a trunk to haul your cash to the theatre. — Pardon my nerve, but a good picture. — Sky High, with Tom Mix. — Good, as usual. Mix draws like mustard plaster. — Grand theatre, Shawntown, Ill.— Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Star Ranger, with William Farren. — Get this one and then get after the audience, then get a trunk to haul your cash to the theatre. — Pardon my nerve, but a good picture. — Sky High, with Tom Mix. — Good, as usual. Mix draws like mustard plaster. — Grand theatre, Shawntown, Ill.— Neighborhood patronage.
Goldwyn
Brothers Under the Skin, with a special cast.—Absolutely fine comedy-drama, Well done in every particular. My particular patrons liked it fine and if they can be pleased anyone can.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

The Sin Flood, with a special cast.—Brother exhibitors in small towns, lay off this one. Very poor plot and very improbable. If you have too much for this one and promised a Christmas eve show, a good show, but it flopped miserably.—Martin W. Opperle, Armory theatre, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Remembrance, with a special cast.—Great picture, true to life. You will not make any mistake in getting this and advertising big.—Charles Morton, Family theatre, Mt. Carroll, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Remembrance, with a special cast.—This picture was sold to us for a special, but it was nothing more than a program picture, and don't let them deceive you.—A. R. Workman, Coliseum theatre, Mar- selles, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Yellow Men and Gold, with a special cast.—Pleased Saturday night crowd.—J. Winninghe, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Bunty Pulls the Strings, with a special cast.—My patrons don't care for this kind of stuff. Had several tell me it was poorest picture they ever saw and I thought they were right.—S. G. Ihs, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Made in Heaven, with Tom Moore.—Fair picture. Business poor. Would not advise this one for a box office attraction.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

His Back Against the Wall, with Ray mond Hatton.—Very good picture. A story of a coward who goes out West and does humorous things but never cracks a smile.—H. C. Ruth, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Tale of Two Worlds, with a special cast.—A dandy picture and one that will please. Price right, prints in good condition and service right. What more can an exhibitor ask? Goldwyn has proved themselves always ready to adjust all difficulties.—Miller & Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—Best picture for small town of year. Broke attendance record of last two years and not one kick at advanced price. If we could only get one like this a week.—K. P. Davidson, Dreamland theatre, Seneca, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Old Nest, with a special cast.—Played two nights to big business. Wonderful picture of home life and mother's devotion to her family.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Come On Over, with Colleen Moore.—You can be assured will please any audience. Just a dandy light program picture that will make your patrons like feel like they have been entertained. Play theatre, Hamilton, O.—Not very good. Too slow action. Would not advise this one. Too much picture for what it had to tell.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Invisible Power, with a special cast.—A very good picture, but too heavy for general motion picture audience. I would not recommend it.—Charles Morris ton, Family theatre, Mt. Carroll, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Highest Bidder, with Madame Kennedy.—Fair. Not enough action to it and very dragy at times. My last Kennedy and am glad of it.—S. G. Ihs, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Poverty of Riches, with a special cast.—This picture pleased much better than many so-called specials. It is good.—Russell Arnez, Theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

The Poverty of Riches, with a special cast.—Fine picture. Everybody pleased. Boost for this one is good.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

From the Ground Up, with Tom Moore.—A thoroughly presented musical comedy. Very good business.—Giacomo Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

From the Ground Up, with Tom Moore.—Good picture. Pleased 100 per cent. Played to good crowds.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, III.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Poor Relation, with Will Rogers.— Good picture, but too much of the same thing. Show pleased about 75 per cent.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Concert, with a special cast.—Patrons not pleased. Some walked out before play was over. Business poor.—V. Machek, Jr., Liberty theatre, De Pue, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beating the Game, with Tom Moore.—only Fair picture. Business poor.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Watch Your Step, with a special cast.—Excellent picture. So much in it to keep interest.-Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Dangerous Curve Ahead, with a special cast.—Fine picture. Ran two nights to big business. Get this one.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Grim Comedian, with Jack Holt.—Good show. Get this one. You can't go wrong.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Doubling for Romeo, with Will Rogers.—Good show. A Poor Relation advertised. Doubling for Romeo in its place. Made a big hit. No patrons disappointed. Get this one.—Maroa Theatre Co., Maroa theatre, Maroa, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man From Lost River, with House
Harkin, Free Air, with a special cast. —The stars, which were practically unknown, were better than two-thirds of the well-known stars and story was full of good comedy and thrilling action at times. —S. M. Southworth, the American theatre, Canton, N. Y. — Neighborhood patronage.

Married People, with a special cast. —Good production and seemed to please every patron. Title seemed to be the main drawing card. —H. E. Swan, Empress theatre, Kearney, Neb. — Neighborhood patronage.

Married People, with a special cast. —An average program production. Possibly above the average. —J. C. McKeen, Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo. —Neighborhood patronage.

No Trespassing, with Irene Castle. —They mistook the name of this play for the sign, “Keep Off the Grass” or “Keep Out,” for surely nobody trespassed around our theatre when this was shown. Forty-one people came the first night and thirty-four the second. Funny thing about this box office tragedy was that few who saw it enjoyed it very much. Hodkinson pictures are neither “flesh, fowl nor good red herring,” just pictures.

Metro

Quincy Adams Sawyer, with a special cast. —It’s the real goods. Personally believe it to be one of the best we have ever seen. I promise anything to get them in. They will thank you when they come out. Business ordinary on account of Christmas shopping. —Geo. K. Zins, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex. — Small town patronage.

The Prisoner of Zenda, a Rex Ingram production. —One of the best. Had both Men and women in large audience. —J. J. Cameron, Strand theatre, Crystal, Iowa. — Neighborhood patronage.

Broadway Rose, with Mac Murray.—Sure to please. Will stand for a room in admission for small towns. Don’t be afraid to tell your patrons it’s a 100 per cent picture. —A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky. — General patronage.

Broadway Rose, with Mac Murray.—If you have played Peacock Alley, Fascination, this is another of star’s along the same lines. Very pleasing hero. —Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb. — General patronage.

PEG O’ MY HEART, with Laurette Taylor. —A production that is a joy and pleasure. Picture full of dramatic situations, irresistible humor and just enough pathos now and then to touch the softer emotions. In story, cast and treatment, you’ll have to go a long way to find a subject that will please your patrons more than this number. It was my Christmas Day offering and was well received. A real audience picture. —John N. Stewart, Wonderland theatre, Kaufman, Tex. — Youth to Youth, with a special cast. — Good picture, but hard to explain, and please. Ran with Mud and Sand and program satisfied everybody. —Geo. K. Zins, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex. — Small town patronage.

The Five Dollar Baby, with Viola Dana.—A good program picture, but cannot sell well. —J. C. McKeen, Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo. — Neighborhood patronage.

Turn to the Right, Peacock Alley and Pecos Junction.—A hit picture with much favorable comments from the patrons. — W. F. Lohl, Chime theatre, Cedarsburg, Wis. — Neighborhood patronage.

The Hole in the Wall, with Alice Lake.—Good program picture. — J. C. McKeen, Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo. — Small town patronage.

A Woman’s Husbands, with Alice Lake.—Here is a mighty good program picture. — D. E. Pfitz, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Mo. — Small town patronage.

Sherlock Brown, with Gilbert Lytell.—Very enjoyable picture. Average drawing card for us. A few did not like it at all but the majority thought it was a first-rate picture. — E. L. Frank, Empress theatre, Ariz. — Neighborhood patronage.

Glass Houses, with Viola Dana.—Fall up to standard. The last three or four pictures of this star have made the future similar with my patrons. — E. L. Franck, Oasi theatre, Ajo, Ariz. — Neighborhood patronage.

Glass Houses, with Viola Dana.—Viola Dana is a dandy little star for my patrons and they liked this production. — J. C. McKeen, Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo. — Neighborhood patronage.

Glass Houses, with Viola Dana.— good clean comedy-drama with pep. An ideal picture for small town patronage. Your patrons will go home feeling they were entertained.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

A Message From Mars, with Bert Lytell.—Very good picture with a fine moral to it. Although reports on this were not encouraging, picture found it very satisfactory.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Had a good business and picture pleased. In fact, it is much above the regular productions.—J. C. Mc Kee, Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Excellent picture from every angle. You can give your admission some and get by O. K. We were promised good print. Got one in mighty poor shape. Was to play a return on this in two weeks, but cancelled on poor condition of print.—D. E. Fitton, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Peacock Alley, with Mae Murray.—Did a wonderful business at this price at thirty cents admission. Personally I didn't like the picture, but as I have had no luck with the patrons I guess it is O. K.—H. J. Trautner, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Paramount

The Old Homestead, with Theodore Roberts.—A great story. Splendid cast. Set in the heart of the word.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—A really wonderful picture from every standpoint. Will appeal to any house in show. Pleased all classes. Our business was only fair because of local conditions, but it is a picture that should draw and will please. Book it and boost it.—David Hess, Iris theatre. Monte Vista, Colo.—General patronage.

ONE GLORIOUS DAY, with Will Rogers.—This is the kind our people like and it's a dandy. Don't pass up. Only one kick, and this was from an one-eyed man who could only see half of it.—Roy Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.

The Young Rajah, with Rodolph Valentino.—Better than anything he has yet done, but does or did not draw so well.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

Blood and Sand, with Rodolph Valentino.—People seem to be about the same the country over for this picture. Was received about the same with us as reported by other exhibitors. There are some features about this one that the fans will not soon forget. Would advise booking it if the film rental is not too high.—J. F. Hileman, Broadway theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Mich.—General patronage.

The Dictator, with Wallace Reid.—A frivolous sort of a picture that will amuse and entertain anyone who doesn't take himself too seriously. Drew fair business in all the different varieties of small town opposition.—E. L. Franke, Oasis theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

Over the Border, with Tom Moore and Betty Compson.—What could be better than two good stars, a good plot, and some fine snow scenes.—Roy Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Exit the Vamp, with Ethel Clayton.—A splendid picture that failed to draw. Lot of nice compliments. People don't seem to take it as far here. As a rule, her pictures are always good.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Impossible Mrs. Bellows, with Gloria Swanson.—Something a little different for Gloria and considered by my patrons her best.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

The Cowboy and the Lady, with a special cast.—An extra good program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

North of the Rio Grande, with Bebe Daniels.—A jim dandy good picture that's hard to beat. Bebe always pleases. She's the most popular star in this town.—Roy Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Husband's Trademark, with Gloria Swanson.—Absolutely one of the most satisfactory pictures we ever did run. Has the high class appeal as well as comedy and ends, with a Western punch that sends them out in a good humor. Play it.—M. D. Fair, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

Three Live Ghosts, with Anna Q. Nilsson.—Very, very good. Lots of good comedy and will hold them in their seats. Everybody seems to enjoy it.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Clarence, with Wallace Reid.—A clever little comedy. A good program picture, but not a special.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

While Satan Sleeps, with Jack Holt.—Just a fair value. Had a few kicks and a few good comments. Title misleading, story weak, but acting and direction save the picture. Not a special.—L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Around the Corner, a Co-mo-nopolitan production.—A well made picture that seemed to please those who saw it. But it failed to draw them away from their Christmas shopping.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Enchantment, with Marion Davies.—Fine. Pleased 100 per cent. Advertise it with a special.—E. Lyric theatre, Waterloo, Ind.—Small town patronage.

To Have and to Hold, with a special cast.—A little too much pirate and costumes for my patrons. One of the forty two offenders.—J. C. Mc Kee, Electric theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

WHITE OAK, with William S. Hart.—You notice I have written Black's middle initial with a dollar sign, 'cause he always brings the dough. I am afraid Bill was a little too reckless with his $3,000 irons in this one to please most of my people, though. He kills thirteen Indians, three whites and captures all by himself, too, and that can't be done. Outside of that little thing, it's O. K.—C. E. Sullivan, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. DeMille production.—Very good at regular admission. Hardy, strong enough for advance in price.—K. P. Davidson, Dreamland theatre, Seneca, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Forever, with Wallace Reid and Ethel Ferguson.—From the box office standpoint this was the biggest failure I've played in several months. Bought it for a special, but the cheapest program picture I would have crossed more.—C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quincy, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World's Champion, with Wallace Reid.—Just an ordinary picture. Ran it on Christmas day and raised the prices to twenty and thirty-five cents, and everybody kicked on the admission.—Roy Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

The World's Champion, with Wallace Reid.—All right for one a day showing. Just an ordinary program feature sold a s a special.—J. C. Rothe, Orpheum theatre, Quentin, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas Meighan.—Just a picture. Might get by where Meighan is popular.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A Prince There Was, with Thomas

A BIT OF HUMOR that gets a laugh in the new Thomas H. Ince attraction for First National, "A Man of Action."

Meighan.—A mighty good picture that will please the majority of the people. It certainly drew a lot of good comment from our people.—M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

The Top of New York, with May McAvo.—A heart interest Xmas story that will hold the attention of most audiences.—T. C. Goodnight, Star theatre, Warrensburg, Mo.—General patronage.

The Top of New York, with May McAvo.—A very satisfactory little program picture well suited for Christmas time. Average holiday business, which means no profit.—J. F. Hileman, Broadway theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Mich.—General patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—Patrons did not care for this Dorothy is too much woman to fill a man's place.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

The Crimson Challenge, with Dorothy Dalton.—A good western feature. Fair business at ten and twenty-five cents.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—A good picture. Every one liked it fine.—E. E. Cox, Lyceum theatre, Wyoming, Ill.—General patronage.

A Bachelor Daddy, with Thomas Meighan.—100 per cent. All program picture.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton.—Nice Alaskan picture that pleased nearly all of my patrons. A good Western or Northern picture is the only kind that keeps us out of the red. The heralds will help put this picture over that Paramount have.—H. M. Swann, Maynard, Movies, Maynard, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Woman Who Walked Alone, with Dorothy Dalton.—Here is an old one, but a good one. My patrons don't usually like Miss Dalton, but this pleased them 100 per cent. If you have not played it book it. It's good.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

The Face in the Fog, with Lionel Barrymore.—The best mystery and crook picture of the season.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, McCook, Neb.—General patronage.

The Bride's Play, with Marion Davies.—Please about 25 per cent. Could have been in five reels and made a better picture. Rental too high. Paramount still asks war price, but their pictures are not as good as formerly.—L. R. Creason, Palace theatre, Eufaula, Okla.

White and Unmarried, with Thomas Meighan.—A first-class attraction in every respect. Should go over in any town. Settings, photography and direction are excellent.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Great Impersonation, with James Kirkwood.—O. K. Please.—Grand theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Get-Rick-Quick Wallingford, a Cosmopolitan Motion Picture.—Geo. C. Starkey, Opera House, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—Did good business. Picture pleases.—J. Warming, Fine Art theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Sheik, with Rudolph Valentino.—Was late running this owing to high price. As a drawing card it was all that has been sold in the town some time.—Geo. Vaughn, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont., Canada.—General patronage.

The Easy Road, with Thomas Meighan.—A very good drama. Attendance fair.—A. A. Acri, Acri's theatre, Marietta, Pa.—Small town patronage.

The Home Stretch, with a special cast.—An excellent story done in Paramount's usual unimportant fair, ever, but pleased. Advertising—one six, one sixes.—S. Pace, Jette theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

O'Malley of the Mounted, with William S. Hart.—A fine Hart picture of a slightly different theme. Pleased nearly 100 per cent of last week's attendance.—Hart is well liked here and this boosted him.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Young Diana, with Marion Davies.—My patrons do not care much about these dream pictures, but this is one of the best of its kind. It has many woodsy type scenes.—Russell Armbrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

The Young Diana, with Marion Davies.—Lavish production, acting good. Story so improbable, and being a dream, flops. Will be all right for one night at regular admission.—D. E. Fitzon, Lyric theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

O'Malley of the Mounted, with William S. Hart.—Best Hart I have seen. Can't groan with any criticism.—Tues Cranford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Woman God Changed, with Scena Owen.—Doesn't please. The producer will please it will please. I think it ranks among the best.—F. E. Sabin, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

An Amateur Devil, with Bryan Washburn.—Poor. Price is all right, but this print, like most that we have received from the New Orleans office, was terrible. They are "big advertisings" but "it doesn't do anything." No more Paramounts for us.—Miller & Carroll, Gayety theatre, Amory, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond the Rocks, with Rodolph Valentino and Gloria Swanson.—So many exhibitors panned this picture that I was afraid of it and did not advertise it much, but I consider it a fine picture. Will be a better profit maker. The audience that star-drew well together. Rental double what it is worth.—L. R. Creason, Palace theatre, Eufaula, Okla.—General patronage.

The Kentuckians, with Monte Blue.—Good funny pictures.—Jack Tiller, Temple theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

White Oak, with William S. Hart.—It will do, but it is sure old. Even the women will like this one. A good moral to it.—Roy Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Spanish Jade, with David Powell.—A very poor production. My patrons said they liked it. Rental too high. Business poor.—L. R. Creason, Palace theatre, Eufaula, Okla.—General patronage.

Too Much Speed, with Wallace Reid.—Everyone well pleased. Wallace is well liked here.—V. Macheck, Jr., Liberty theatre, De Pue, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Let's Be Fashionable, with a special cast.—Of all the funny ones we played, this about took the cake. It drew a lot of mighty fine comments and ought to please any audience.—M. D. Foster, Gen theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

The City of Silent Men, with Thomas Meighan.—Will please because of Meighan.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Idaho.—General patronage.

The Lane That Had No Turning, with Agnes Ayres.—Just a picture. Did not see any big crowd.—J. Warming Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Green Temptation, with Bert Compton.—Good for one or two nights at regular admission. Well produce from every angle. Not a big picture like I was looking for.—D. E. Fitzon, Lyric

Film from Poem

Has Wide Appeal

Longfellow's poem "The Village Blacksmith," Fox Film Corporation, has a universal appeal with comedy and heart interest that is absolutely censor proof, the Fox Company declares. It is said to be a truly American story that applies to every village in the land, as it is described as doing for father what "Over the Hill" did for mother.

The part of the smity is played by William Meighan and with him in the cast are Bessie Love, Virginia Valli, Tully Marshall, George Hackathorne, and others. Pat Moore has the part of the smity's son.

Theatre, Harrison, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Idols of Clay, with Mae Murray.—Pleased possibly 10 per cent, no more.

Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Witching Hour, with Elliott Dexter.—This picture did not please a large Sunday crowd. Rent too slow and uninteresting, also too long.—H. J. Trainer. Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Whistle, with William S. Hart.—An impossible story and did not please Hart patrons.—J. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Cradle of Courage, with William S. Hart.—Bill makes just as good a policeman as he does a cowboy, and this is a good picture, but when Hart came back from France he brought his rifle right off the ship with him and went right home without being mustered out. How did he do that, ye ex-service men?—R. Reid. Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Travel’ On, with William S. Hart.—Plenty of action and gun play that should please the average audience. Fairly good fair.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Always Audacious, with Wallace Reid.—This is a fair program picture but did not register at box office. Poor title kept many away. Reid used to fill my house but not any more.—H. M. Swain. Maynard Movies, Maynard, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Bronze Bell, with a special cast.—This picture misses the mark considerably; in fact, a number of patrons said it was poor. The cast is good, but that is all out of it.—H. J. Trainer. Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Rent Free, with Wallace Reid.—Another good Reid picture and will please as Reid always does make a good picture. We played it. —M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

Rent Free, with Wallace Reid.—A comedy-drama that will please your crowd and make them want to come back again. It is not a special, but a No. 1 program picture. Glad we played it.—M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

The Inside of the Cup, a Cosmopolitan production. This picture should be shown in every theatre in the U. S. A.—R. Workman, Coliseum theatre, Marcellus, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Bump My Wife, with a special cast.—A feature that pleased.—Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn.—General patronage.

Appearances, with David Powell.—The strategy of the picture is a bit thin on the other side of the pond. Those English actors are simply impossible.—H. J. Trapper. Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

The Great Day, with a special cast.—We were agreeably surprised in viewing this picture. It is the best English made we ever saw, and it pleased too. Advertising—one six and one.—S. Pace. Jette house, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

A Lady in Love, with Ethel Clayton.—An old picture, but much better than average program picture.—Will please the average audience.—Charles Morton, Family theatre, Mt. Carroll, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—This is the first Meighan I have played since Maie and Female that made me money. This one is a "Wow" and I think it pleased everyone. Advertise it and hang out the S. R. O. sign.—S. G. Jhde. Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Experience, with Richard Barthelmess.—Very, very good and pleased practically every one. One preacher said it was exceptionally good and every young man in town should see it. I think this would be fine for Sunday show.—H. G. Scott, Jr. Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Back Pay, with Seena Owen.—About two reels too long.—too druggy in places. Personally I thought this a fair picture, but some of my patrons said it was fine. Others said the girl got her money too easy and too quick so that spoiled the whole thing.—S. G. Jhde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Testing Block, with William S. Hart.—This is the kind of picture my patrons like and, while it is only a fair program picture, made money for me, but to get these Hart pictures had to buy ten others. Let us pray.—Maynard Movies, Maynard, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Teeth of the Tiger, with David Powell.—One of the best mystery pictures I have ever played. It was well acted and the story is expertly handled. I find that these old successful pictures are O. K.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Nice People, with a special cast.—A picture that pleased because it certainly hit the present age. This may not please a few old maids, as they do not think such things happen.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

Humoresque, a Cosmopolitan production.—A wonderful picture. You owe it to your patrons to show it if you have not already done so. A good box office attraction.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Pathé

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—This picture is just a story of Eskimo Life. It has no plot and if advertised to that effect it will please as it is an exceptional picture of Eskimo life and if you will get the kids the first day, it will go over fine.—B. W. Merrill, The Lyric theatre, Edgar, Nebr.—Small town patronage.

The Killer, with a special cast.—Good. Only drawback is the title.—Thos. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Power Within, with a special cast.—An A-1 production with a mighty good moral, as well as being a true to life story. Action a trifle slow, but nevertheless it holds interest to the end. Played as Christmas program at regular prices.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Isle of Zorda, with a special cast.—A good picture. Any exhibitor should get money with this one.—H. L. McDon- ald, Royal theatre, Malvern, Ark.—General patronage.

Selznick

One Week of Love, with Elaine Hammond and Conway Tearle.—One of the best that Selznick, as well as anyone.

The Way of a Maid, with Elaine Hammerstein. —With Nile Welch in the cast this makes a very fair picture. Where this pair is well liked this picture will please—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Evidence, with Elaine Hammerstein.—One of the best of its kind I ever saw. This is convincing. Not the kind they were used to working with. It should please—J. W. Botwright, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore.—One of those freak pictures full of entertainment, action, comedy, thrills galore. Not much to the story, but it pleases—J. W. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Reported Missing, with Owen Moore. —Proved to be a record breaker for us. Played on Thanksgiving day to the biggest house we ever had. Charged fifteen and thirty cents. Picture pleased $3 per cent.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

A Woman of No Importance, with a special cast.—Good story—a little plain talk in subtitles—not a good picture for children. Would go twice as well if it had been done by American cast—J. W. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Clay Dollars, with Eugene O’Brien.—Comedy drama of very light material.—J. W. Winninger, Davison theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Clay Dollars, with Eugene O’Brien.—A picture of small town life that will please. Has plenty of comedy and a good star.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Handcuffs or Kisses, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Very nice program picture which will please your people—Geo. Starkey, Opera house, Montour Falls, N. Y.—General patronage.

Handcuffs or Kisses, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Patrons chin too many things started and not finished. Fair business—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Referee, with Conway Tearle.—Will please the men, but did not please the women. Lots of action and should be booked on nights you play this type of picture.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Morden, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Referee, with Conway Tearle.—Good picture of the prize ring and it carries with it a good lesson. If your patrons like fight pictures, book it.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

After Midnight, with Conway Tearle.—Did not see this one, but patrons declare that picture wasn’t finished. It seemed to please otherwise. Played Leather Pushers with this one.—H. J. Trainer, Pastime theatre, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Shadows of the Sea, with Conway Tearle.—Fair picture.—Fair business.—G. Strasser Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Girl from Nowhere, with Elaine Hammerstein.—A good program picture. Have paid three times the rental of this for pictures that were not as good—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quin- ton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under Oath, with Elaine Hammerstein.—Good program picture. Pleased a good Thanksgiving crowd.—J. W. Winninger, Davis-on theatre, Waupun, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION, a D. W. Griffith production. —Have never shown this, as my theatre is in the ultra reform State of Kansas. However, as I read the ad of United Artists in the “Herald” I must boost it along on its revival. If you think your town centre Ever freedom of the press is not trampled upon by narrow reformers, by all means show it. It is wonderful.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.

The Three Musketeers, with Douglas Fairbanks. —Great! Everybody was pleased. Run it by all means. Business poor due to Christmas week.—A. A. Ace’s theatre, Marietta, Pa.—Small town patronage.

Little Lord Fauntleroy, with Mary Pickford.—Absolutely Miss Pickford’s best. Went good for two days. Third day dropped off due to bad weather. Buy it right and run it. Pleases every one from nine to ninety.—R. L. Behler, Royal theatre, Garrett, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Way Down East, a D. W. Griffith production.—Without doubt or competition the greatest and finest picture ever shown here. Pleased 100 per cent. Every small town exhibitor should get this one.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—General patronage.

Universal

The Loaded Door, with Hoot Gibson.
—For us Gibson is the best star Universal has. He certainly makes westerns that are different. Nothing impossible that only a super man could do.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean.
—A good box office bet. Pleased all who saw it. Some real action in this with pleasing story. Rental a little high, but picture should make good if exploited properly.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Her Night of Nights, with Marie Prevost.
—D Stories of 1923—As good a picture as L. B. Greenhaw, Strand theatre, Leslie, Ark.—Small town patronage.

Paid Back, with a special cast.
—First of "Winning Nine" and if the rest is not better I got hooked. Not as good as their regular program pictures. Very good picture just the same, and you had to get the start of it or you were lost all the way.—J. W. Boatwright, Radio theatre, Ozark, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Galloping Kid, with Hoot Gibson.
—Excellent program feature with good comedy injected—Gen theatre, Waterville, Minn.—Small town patronage.

Another Man's Shoes, with Herbert Rawlinson.
—A fine program picture. This will go good if your patrons like Rawlinson.—J. W. Andersen, Kobo theatre, Cozad, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wolf Law, with Frank Mayo.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson.
—An interesting crook story that pleased our patrons.—H. G. Stettmum, Jr., Deone theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Don't Shoot, with Herbert Rawlinson.
—One of Rawlinson's best. Much better than most Jewels.—Thos. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.
—I personally consider this a splendid picture and it played the highest 100 per cent. Business only fair. Ran it Friday and Saturday before Christmas.—George Vaughn, Grand theatre, Dunville, Ont.—Excellent-Good—Excellent-Good—Excellent.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.
—A very good program picture, but not a super special by any means. If you can buy it at a reasonable rental it offers good entertainment.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Human Hearts, with House Peters.
—A 100 per cent picture. People came to me with pleasing remarks for a week after.—F. A. Snauderhof, Rex theatre, Scooby, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Fire Eater, with Hoot Gibson.
—This is second Gibson picture I have ever seen and I think it pleased everybody. Better than the average Western picture.—S. G. Hude, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.
—Can only add one more O. K. to chorus of approval. Virginia Valli should come in for credit with Peters and Moore, however.—P. G. Fastie, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.
—Greatest business in ten years and that with raise in admission from ten and thirty to twenty and forty cents. Used window cards and circus heralds in country roads.—W. F. Loibl, Chimes theatre, Cedarsburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.
—Wonderful picture. You can give this one plenty of push and not have to wonder if you went too far.—F. A. Snauderhof, Rex theatre, Scooby, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.
—Did better business on The Storm than Way Down East, Little Lord Fauntleroy or The Three Musketeers.—V. Machek, Jr., Liberty theatre, De Pue, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.
—The type of picture that always pleases here. Good story, good acting with the best forest fire scene I have ever seen. I did not hear one adverse comment, which is unusual. rental was high, but I made some profit also.—Howard K. Allen, Rialto theatre, Harlingen, Tex.—Small town patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.
—A picture that lost good chance when it opened. No action except what you imagine only. Only program picture.—J. W. English, Seminole theatre, Mcateese, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Married His Own Wife, with Frank Mayo.
—Poor picture. No plot. Had good any kicks on this one. First time he failed here.—Herzog Bros., Select theatre, Hainesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

Tracked to Earth, with Frank Mayo.
—Pretty fair program picture. Played to empty seats. 22 below zero. The best stories were more attractive than Mayo.—G. F. Rediske, Star theatre, Yegate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Aired to Fight, with Frank Mayo.
—One of the best Mayo pictures I ever saw. Plenty of action in this. Don't be afraid to boost it, as it will make good.—K. A. Bechhold, Opera House, Martinsville, Ill.

Aired to Fight, with Frank Mayo.
—Five reels of action coupled with good acting and pleasing story. At the rental it costs you will prove a winner.—S. M. Southworth. The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

HEADIN' WEST, with Hoot Gibson.
—He drops 2,000 feet from an airplane via parachute, as he bucking broncho for a bone-breaking fall, rescues the girl on a mad run-away at the very edge of the precipice, (and the girl can ride), and rescues her again under fire. His flying mounts are a pleasure to the eye.

More knockouts than in the record of John L.—all rolled on five coils. The photography is sharp and clear, with the "art" whiskers cleaned off, and that's the best of all.—Dan Conners, Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, Nev.

The Bear Cat, with Hoot Gibson.
—Good Western but not as good as a lot of others. Did not draw very well.—Herzog Bros., Select theatre, Hainesville, Ky.—Small town patronage.

The Bear Cat, with Hoot Gibson.
—Another winner from Hoot. Extreme cold is knocking the waves out of business way off.—F. E. Sabih, Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont.—Small town patronage.

A Delicious Little Devil, with Mae Hannon.
Murray.—This reissue sells, but did not make good for me.—J. W. English, Seminole theatre, Homestead, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Wonderful Wife, with Miss duPont.—About the best thing that she has done so far. Not an exceptional program picture but a good average one, and it will attract neighborhood audience. S. Allen, Casino theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stroheim.—Good picture, but did not get the business for me to pay the price.—J. W. English, Seminole theatre, Homestead, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

Foolish Wives, with Eric Von Stroheim.—This picture is a big disappointment. I may get a few tickets for it, but I gave two days to very poor business. Had one call for it so we booked it. Five bucks would have been too much for it.—C. C. Walraven, Roche- ter, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Best picture ever in this town. You cannot go wrong on it. It ran for two weeks in 250 seat house. Good business at ten and twenty-five cents.—Sigma theatre, Johnstown, Ohio.—Transient patronage.

Red Courage, with Hoot Gibson.—(Carlo, May) Will please all of this type of picture.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Once to Every Woman, with Dorothy Phillips.—Very good offering. Some good acting by Miss Phillips, good settings, good photography, and will please 90 per cent.—Crosby Swierske, Rex theatre, Colby, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Sure Fire, with Hoot Gibson.—Good entertainment. One patron remarked that "Hoot's smile is contagious and you just couldn't keep from liking the son-of-a-gun."—H. G. Stettmud, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.—General patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—This would be a good program picture, but not a special. By the way, just what is a "special"?—Miss Riley, Willow theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—Big picture in a big town. How funny how Honey could spend hours on the veldt without a tear or wrinkle in her skirt and hoe. Honey could not retrace her steps in the sand. Her "lost" stunt was a scream.—Giacomo Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—Fine picture. While this picture is mostly Chaney alone, he certainly does fine acting. The scenery and photography wonderful. You won't go wrong on it.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gen theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Delicious Little Devil, with Mae Murray.—A very good picture presented by one of the best programs I have ever seen. Presented 90 per cent. Several good comments. With Mae Murray and Valentino, it makes a good drawing card. Can make a little money on this as should be able to buy it right.—Crosby & Swierske, Rex theatre, Colby, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Man Who Married His Own Wife, with Frank Mayo.—Good action picture with some wonderful shots taken on the ocean during the ship-wreck scenes. It will please 100 per cent.—H. E. Swan, Empress theatre, Kearney, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trimmed, with Hoot Gibson.—A dandy program picture. Please fair business at twenty and forty cents.—E. L. Whar-

ORIENTAL SPLENDOR of settings adds to the interest in the Universal chapterplay of travel and adventure, "Around the World in Eighteen Days," by Van Beal, if you can get them in it will please 100 per cent. Paper we got on this picture was poor. Film was in fine condition.—H. M. Swan, Maynard Movies, Maynard, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Old Oaken Bucket, with a special cast.—Not liked by our patrons. —G. Strasser & Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

State Rights

Watch Him Step (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—We call this his best one. Dick gets better with each picture. This was our last one and we are sorry.—Anderson & Weatherly, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shadows (Lichtman), with Lon Chaney.—A very good picture, but a trifling drag, especially the last reel. Chaney is not a card in this town, therefore business was off, but we were able to write profit at the close of the week.

Just Dogs, Universal comedy, same bill. A really clever annual comedy. Newspapers and window cards only for advertising. Full week.—Frank L. Browne, Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Cal.—General patronage.

Silver Spurs (W. P. E. C.), with Les-
THREE PRINCIPALS, Stuart Holmes, Claire Windsor and Rockcliffe Fellowes, appearing in Marshall Neilan’s initial picture for Goldwyn distribution, “The Strangers’ Banquet.”

Serious

Winners of the West (Universal), with Art Acord.—A dandy serial. Holds interest all the way. If you are looking for a serial don’t pass this one.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—Now in episode fourteen and going good. Best serial since The Lost City in the good old days, when anything went. It has been a pleasure to exhibit this serial. Ruth: you ven.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—Every episode made us money.—Gem theatre, Waterville, Minn.—Small town patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathé), with Ruth Roland.—There is about the best serial Ruth Roland or anyone ever made.—M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre. Slater, Mo.—Small town patronage.

IN THE DAYS OF BUFFALO BILL (Universal), with Art Acord.—Now playing Number 14 and can say no other serial has ever created and sustained the same people at attendance like this has. The newness of the idea in building the story has never been shown in previous serials and the serial lover eats it up, yet the serial hater still continues to come just because of the clever story.

Don’t handle it like an old serial. Don’t cheapen other parts of your program, either. Place good, dependable subjects along with it, make the whole program better in educational and entertaining value, and you’ll be well repaid for it.

This I have done all through the serial and even now I am receiving questions that show they don’t care to have the end drawing so near. That means they like it. And it will make you money over any other attraction you could have placed in its position in the week.—R. E. Falkenberg, Majestic theatre, Lexington, Neb.

Go Get ‘Em Hutch (Pathé), with Charles Hutchison.—No good at all. Lots of action, but same old thing all the time. A failure for me.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Lincoln, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Short Subjects

Harold Lloyd Reissues (Pathé).—I find these reissues to be uniformly good and personally think they are the best buys on the market for the small town as they are better than some two reels.—M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE LEATHER PUSHERS (Universal) with Reginald Denny.—I looked — then booked — now played Number 7. And I’ll tell the world they are a real Christmas present from that wise old bird, Carl Laemmle. That’s more interest, more novelty, more “kick,” more sympathy, more fun, more satisfaction, in these ones than the old six altogether. And don’t make the mistake of putting any old program along with them. You’ll have to cut out a complete show for the whole program. That’s the way to keep folks coming. How do you like a scorched spuds, weak coffee, then have a most delicious piece of mince pie? Well, you enjoy your whole the dinner — just cooked right with that delightful dessert?

Sure. We all would, and believe me, a good value you can put with these LEATHER PUSHERS will give your folks a more satisfied expression as they leave than any special put out so far. I don’t believe in educating people to the habit of coming only when a certain star or billing comes. I don’t believe in these LEATHER PUSHERS is on. But building up complete shows of quality will keep them coming. One good show always helps the next good one. Folks never get filled up on good ones. And I sure watch the quality of my short subjects.

So that’s why I want to pass along the satisfaction I have found with my people in showing the new LEATHER PUSHERS. If you’ll do your part with these they’ll make you friends.—R. E. Falkenberg, Majestic theatre, Lexington, Neb.

The Leather Pushers (Universal) with Reginald Denny.—The same as well as the men like these pictures, but I bought them too high and ha’ent made a cent out of them.—H. J. Trainer, Blue Mound, Ill.—Small town patronage.

MUD AND SAND (Metro) with Stan Laurel.—Good burlesque. Sent out a ballyhoo cow and koodoo—and it brought them out and the picture pleased them. It’s sure good burlesque.—Geo. K. Zinn, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.

The Mirror No. 1 (Universal).—Good program filler. Very well arranged and attracted a few extra customers.—Geo. K. Zinsz, Harbor theatre, Corpus Christi, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Christmas (F. B. O.), with De Havens.—Certainly a fine piece of production and especially for Christmas. We played this Christmas day with Shirley of the C.B.S. series and P. S. S. Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Day Dreams (F. X.), with Buster Keaton.—Dane up good comedy, three reels long. It kept the audience laughing and I guess the whole thing was plenty.—S. M. Southworth, The American theatre, Canton, N. Y.—Neighborhood and college patronage.

HERE'S the made-to-order crowd-getter of the season—the picture with the showman's smash advertising angle that will attract and satisfy an eagerly waiting audience of MILLIONS—the millions who read the book and the further millions who saw the play.

FOR, sensational as was "THELMA" as a book, overwhelmingly successful as it was as a stage play, as a motion picture it is a Goliath of entertainment that dwarfs even its own gigantic ancestors.

PRODUCED with lavish splendor and supreme artistry, Marie Corelli's immortal love story of the beautiful Norwegian girl who left her leak, native hills to become the glorious idol of brilliant London society as been brought to life on the screen in a dazzling blaze of smashing drama, stirring spectacle and glittering color.

AND, just as nothing has been left undone in the making of the picture, nothing has been left undone by F. B. O. in furnishing you with a press sheet whose aids will help you sweep "THELMA" on a tidal wave of inundating profits. BOOK IT—PLUG IT!—AND SMILE AT THE RECEIVING TELLER.
MARRIAGE scene in Jane Novak's new F. B. O. picture, "Thelma," a Marie Corelli story.

Johnny Hines.—A mighty good comedy with the punch that gives them what they want. The prize fight in the end is a whale of a funny one. —E. L. Frank, Odeon theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

The Rubberneck (Universal), with Lee Moran.—We thought this two-reel comedy might come off, but... —M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

Cops (F. X.), with Buster Keaton.—Not as hilariously funny as some of his, but a good comedy nevertheless.—E. L. Frank, Odeon theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

By Heck (F. X.), a Mack Sennett comedy.—Fair comedy. Fair business. —G. Strasser & Sons, Emblem theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Day Love (Educational), with a special cast.—One of the funniest we have ever shown. The acting of the animals and the children as well as the entire cast were first-rate. —W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Fast and Furious (Fox), with Al St. John.—This comedy made the biggest hit of anything I have run this year. The best drawing card for me I can get. Don't fail to book this.—R. D. Troutman, Ethel theatre, Ethel, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

All Wet (Fox), with Al St. John.—Judging from the laughs, this comedy is there in every way.—J. C. Rowton, Orpheum theatre, Quinton, Okla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Tourist (Vitagraph), with Jimmie Aubrie.—A very good comedy. A good laugh in every foot. Plenty of good original stunts that put it over with a bang. The best we have ever had from Vitagraph.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Gymnasium Jim (F. X.), a Mack Sennett comedy.—Very good comedy. Some fine trick photography in this one.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry always gets the dough. He brings the crowds and laughs, too. Absolutely the best on the market.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Battling Torchy (Educational), with

Johnny Hines.—A mighty good comedy with the punch that gives them what they want. The prize fight in the end is a whale of a funny one. —E. L. Frank, Odeon theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

The Rubberneck (Universal), with Lee Moran.—We thought this two-reel comedy might come off, but... —M. D. Foster, Gem theatre, Williamsburg, Kan.—General patronage.

Cops (F. X.), with Buster Keaton.—Not as hilariously funny as some of his, but a good comedy nevertheless.—E. L. Frank, Odeon theatre, Ajo, Ariz.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Day Love (Educational), with a special cast.—One of the funniest we have ever shown. The acting of the animals and the children as well as the entire cast were first-rate. —W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bar Cross War (Pathé), with Leo Maloney.—This two reel Western subject pleased 160 per cent. We have run eight of the series and would advise any exhibitor to buy them out.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hello Mars (Universal), with a special cast.—Patrons commented on this subject as something different and hence pleasing.—W. F. Lobil, Chimes theatre, Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Never Weaken (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—A good comedy, but not in the same class as Among Those Present or New or Never, although in three reels.—Ralph R. Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont., Canada.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cheerful Credit (Universal), with a special cast.—Not at all bad. The smile and please kind—polite comedy.—Dan Connors, Pipers Opera House, Virginia, Nev.—General patronage.

Speed 'Em Up (Universal), with Harry Sweet.—Believe this is the best Harry Sweet comedy I have shown. It got the laughs.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Speed 'Em Up (Universal), with a special cast.—They laughed long and loud at this.—Dan Connors, Pipers Opera House, Virginia, Nev.—General patronage.

The Suitor (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry is the boy that gets 'em for us. Just as good as any two reel slapstick that you can buy.—Anderson & Weatherby, Gem theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Among Those Present (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—Could not ask for anything better in comedy. Played the Christmas night with an all comedy program consisting of a two reel Johnny Jones and one reel Gaylord. The only thing I did not like about it was that the Lloyd three reeler made the other comedy look like thirty cents.—J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Among Those Present (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd.—This is more than good and kept my audience in a scream. Lloyd pulls a few of Doc's stunts and then old Bill, the goat, gets in his work and the audience raises the roof another foot.—H. W. Merrill, The Lyric theatre, Edgar, Neb.—Small town patronage.

One Terrible Day (Pathe), with Our Gang.—Good clean fun. This will strengthen any program and don't cost a fortune either. Put this with one of the weak sisters and send 'em home smiling.—E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Spooks (Educational), with a special cast.—One of those good comedies that makes the patron feel he has received his money's worth. A little over the so-called.—W. F. Lobil, Chimes theatre.

STRIKING WILD ANIMAL scenes are being made at Universal City by Maj. Jack Allen for a series of one reels for the Universal short subject program.
Play it RIGHT NOW when the whole world is thinking and talking romance! Play it because it's a fine, roaring, whizzing show with Johnnie Walker as a swagger young patriot—a veritable D'Artagnan of ancient Spain—in spurs and sombrero—dancing to the music of castanets and guitars—fighting in the thick of revolution—wooing a bewitching senorita—risking his young head in duels and on the backs of plunging horses!

Another big one all dressed up with box-office exploitation in the usual thoroughgoing F. B. O. manner.

Cedarburg, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Paleface (F. X.), with Buster Keaton. Good comedy, but not near as good as those released by Metro. This is the first one we have run of the latest National series—J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, N. B.—Neighborhood patronage.

The News Maker (Universal), with a special cast. A slight lemon. The optics have been abstracted before it was made. Don’t buy it for a comedy. — Roy J. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Sawing a Lady in Half (C. B. C.), with a special cast. An expose of the vaudeville act, and it was a good thriller. Was really entertaining. — R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kan.—General patronage.

Our Gang (Pathé). — Not so good. A few laughs, a few stunts, two thousand feet of film. That’s all. — E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Small Town Stuff (Fox), with Al St. John. — A good comedy, liked by all. Book it and send them home laughing. — R. D. Troutman, Ethel theatre, Ethel, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Cold Feet (Educational), with a special cast. — Clever comedy. — Dan Conners, Piper Opera House, Virginia, Nev.—General patronage.

I Do (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd. — This is the best comedy we have run since The Boat by Keaton. Is an absolute knockout. They laugh every minute from start to finish. A perfect series of laugh producers. — E. L. Wharton, Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lazy Bones (Fox), with Clyde Cook. — “The funniest man on earth is right. Always registers.” — Dan Conners, Piper Opera House, Virginia, Nev.—General patronage.

Bow Wow (F. X.), a Mack Sennett comedy. — The best Sennett I have seen in a good while. It’s a real one. My advice is grab it. — Roy Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Battle of Jutland (Educational). — A remarkable historic production, and strange to say, very interesting. It will make a very good attraction if a strong short subject program is built around it. I made the mistake of raising admissions and didn’t draw. — M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

The Haunted House (Metro), with Buster Keaton. — Sure some comedy. Played with Gibson in Sure-Fire (Universal), Made fine program. — T. B. Crawford, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sportman (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. — Larry is the boy that gets the laughs out of our patrons. Ran this with our Sunday program. Everybody pleased. — Anderson & Weatherby (com) theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Shoulder Arms (F. X.), with Charles Chaplin. — This famous comedy is still as funny as ever, even and better to play it again. However, on account of the coming holidays when I played it, I did not even take in enough to pay running expenses. Present in excellent condition. — M. Hillyer, Pastime theatre, Reserve, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Carter De Haven Comedies

PRESENTED BY P. A. POWERS

Every new release adds hundreds of exhibitors to the already large list of shrewd showmen who recognize the Carter De Haven Comedies as the super de luxe comedy material of the entire motion picture industry. These marvelous laugh and money-getters are sweeping their way into the finest theatres in the land.

Grab This Latest Laughing Fest

It's a howling hurricane of hilarity—a towering typhoon of rib-tickling gags—a liltting landslide of honest-to-God LAUGHS. It's cram-jam packed to over-flowing with the sort of comedy surprises that start a laugh way down in the pit of your stomach and roll it out in a pealing sunburst of gloom-shattering shrieks.

Its atmosphere of "class" adds immeasurably to the power of its claim for a place on the program of the finest theatres in the world, and its general appeal makes it just as gigantic a bet on Main Street as it is on Broadway.

"A RINGER FOR DAD"

It's a Knockout
In America’s Foremost Theatres

The “Twin” Theatres, The Selwyn and The Harris of Chicago, are equipped with American Seating Company Theatre Chairs. Their design, arrangement and installation were the work of our Theatrical Engineering Seating Department.

These two theatres are accounted among the most beautiful and most perfectly equipped for their patrons’ comfort and pleasure. No money or pains were spared to make them so.
THEATRE CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT

ACTIVITIES IN REVIEW

The Equipment Distributor

Dealers and distributors of motion picture equipment are confronted with big possibilities this year. With the formation of their new organization last July they are in a position to make themselves an even more integral part of the industry and a closer ally of the theatre owner.

This latter phase of the equipment man's work is an all important one. The distributor, to more completely establish himself with the theatre owner in his territory must be more than a source of supply of various products. He must render efficient service and be able to give worth-while advice and suggestions in connection with the installation and operation of the product. This means, naturally, that it behooves him to thoroughly understand quality, limitations and effectiveness of the product he is marketing, enabling him to better serve both the exhibitor and manufacturer.

Directors of the equipment men's association will meet in Chicago next month to discuss future plans. With a firm determination to establish the business on a better basis, equipment men can face 1923 with a knowledge that it holds forth big opportunities for them.

Getting Ideas By Mail

Elsewhere in this department is published a letter from Dwight Baker of Circle Amusement Co. announcing a proposed theatre. Mr. Baker in forwarding this information realizes that its publication will bring in many suggestions and much valuable literature covering new equipment and other features in which he would naturally be interested.

This is a good practice for other exhibitors to emulate. This department is glad to receive and publish announcements of theatres which exhibitors propose to erect.

Canada Exhibitor Says Radio
Is Not Proving Satisfactory

Ralph Gribble, Who Has Conducting Experiments for Past Year and Is Now Using Big Set. Explains
Drawbacks as Public Entertainment

Exhibitors who have been bitten by the radio bug and are contemplating furnishing this service to the patrons will be interested in the following letter from Ralph Gribble, Grand theatre, New Hamburg, Ont. Mr. Gribble can be considered an authority in view of his past experience and his enlightening letter follows:

"I noticed another request for information on radio for the show, in a recent issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD and have seen no reply as yet so am taking it upon myself to further enlighten brother exhibitors on this subject.

"Radio is a coming attraction without a doubt, but as yet, for public entertainment, it is not there, and following I will give my reasons for believing this to be the case. I speak with some authority as I have spent about a year experimenting with most of the different 'hookups' and now have a set that is very sensitive and am receiving concerts a distance of 2,000 miles.

"First, if you have a broadcasting station nearby you can hand out concerts every night during the cold months but not in the summer as the static is so bad that it spoils music entirely about two nights out of three.

"Also, when you have a station near you every kid has a crystal outfit, and so it does not draw at the theatre.

"Secondly, if you have no station near you, you have to have a more powerful set to bring in the concerts and then you will find great difficulty in tuning out what you do not want. My set is very selective but I imagine there are over 100 stations that I get in regularly all sending on two wave lengths, namely 360 meters and 400 meters and these are all trying to come in at once.

"I can usually get one or two stations clearly when I sit with the phones on my ears and keep adjusting, but one can readily understand that would not do for professional work. Imagine what would happen in the audience if a fine orchestra like the W. W. J., Detroit was coming in with selections from 'The Tales of Hoffman' and some other station butted in with 'Up in the Air About Mary'.

"Third, the different loud speakers advertised are loud enough. You could have mine a city block away, but I have yet to hear one that is pleasing. They are worse than any gramophone.

"But with the phones the music and voice comes in so perfect and that as you can hope for, as well as speeches, sermons, etc. By all means get one.

"Radio is a very fascinating thing and I am still working at it in my spare time and getting a lot of enjoyment out of it. I shall keep trying and if I ever succeed in discovering a 'hookup' that will give satisfactory results for show purposes I shall most certainly let you know at once through our valuable magazine, EXHIBITORS HERALD."

Organizes Theatre Insurance Company

Frank L. Travis, retiring superintendent of insurance in Kansas, is one of the chief promoters in a mutual insurance company to be known as "The Theatre Mutual," which will write fire and explosion insurance for theatres, principally picture houses. Some of the Kansas exhibitors have complained that they cannot get the right sort of coverage for some of the business they want from the old line insurance companies, such as booth and films.

The new company will write insurance on everything in the theatre, charging the field rates on lines now covered by old line companies and special rates on the new lines.

New York, N. Y.—MacDougal Amusement Company has opened the new Fugazy theatre, erected at a cost of $600,000 and seating 1,800.

SEEKS IDEAS FOR THEATRE

Equipment Editor.
EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

"I know that you are always glad to announce new theatre construction, and in this case it is ourselves as we have purchased a plot of ground 67 by 152 feet adjoining the Circle Theatre Building on Main street, on which erection of a new theatre and office building will be started next year.

"Plans have not been drawn and if you will announce this in your regular columns it may bring in ideas by mail which we could not reach, prior to having plans drawn. You are the first paper and only one to be given this news unless it should drift back to the others through the film circle."

What $50,000 in Remodeling Will Do for An Old Playhouse

HOW would you like to get a virtually new theatre, seating capacity 1,000, with everything in ship-shape order, bright and modern, for $50,000? That is what F. W. Fischer of Fischer Brothers Theatres Company, Inc., Madison, Wis., is going to have on completion of a rejuvenating program about to be launched at the Grand theatre, Madison, one of the oldest playhouses in that city, which he recently acquired. Fifty thousand dollars will be spent in remodeling the Grand, which will then be renamed "The Madison.

Summarized following are some of the transformations and improvements to be made that will put the old house in a class with the finest.

* * *

An entire new front and canopy will be built, the construction to be of cream colored tile.

Glass doors will line the front of the theatre and stairways, to the right and left, guarded by cupids figures holding a shower of frosted lamps, will run up to the balcony.

The floor will be left as it is, but the auditorium will be widened considerably, and three feet will be added to its depth.

The seating capacity will be increased to 1,000, with new seats provided.

A new stage with polished floor and full electrical equipment will be installed.

A spacious rest room will be provided.

There will be a new ventilating system, the fresh air being washed and carried by ducts, coming into the house through grills.

A huge electrical sign will flash the words "The Madison" in front of the building.

The entire interior will be artistically decorated and a new Barton organ costing $18,000, will be installed.

* * *

A color scheme of rose and ivory will be carried out in the auditorium under the direction of Robert L. Bowen of the decorating department of Mandel Brothers, Chicago. For the stage the design of the decorations will be Moorish. A large curving arch will be flanked by two smaller pointed ones on each side, the latter supported by a cluster of pillars between which oriental silk lamps will be suspended.

For purposes of decoration, circular stairs will rise from the stage and a prismatic color effect will be used, obtained by having the top step transparent and lights playing underneath. Artistic bronze gates will open under the arch and on either side of the stage will be holders containing candles five feet high.

Endicott, N. Y. House To Install Big Organ;
Improvements Planned
Benjamin Dittrich, manager of the Lyric theatre, Endicott, N. Y., announces that arrangements have been completed for the installation of a new Link organ at the Lyric. Construction of the instrument is in progress and it will be completed and installed some time in January.

Other equipment, including a new screen, is also to be provided at the theatre. Next month construction on a marquee will begin which will extend to the edge of the sidewalk.

At present business men of Endicott are making an effort to break the zoning law of the city.

New Projects

Enid, Okla.—Work of rebuilding the Criterion theatre, destroyed by fire about six weeks ago, has been started. Full new equipment will be installed. L. Weil will operate the theatre.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Plans for the $850,000 theatre to be erected by Wisconsin Real Estate Development Company at Sixth street and Grand avenue have been completed by Martin Tellgren & Sons, architects, in association with Rapp & Rapp, Chicago architects.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Construction of a new theatre is contemplated by Circle City Construction Company of this city. It will cost about $25,000.

Brunswick, Md.—A theatre costing $8,000 will be erected by Brunswick Amusement Company. Plans for the structure have been prepared by Otto Simonson, Casualty Building, Baltimore.

Lometa, Texas.—It is reported that a new theatre will be erected in this city to replace the one recently damaged by fire.

Marshfield, Ore.—Many improvements are planned for the Xohle theatre, owned by Marsden, Jr., and John C. Noble.

Sheridan, Wyo.—A theatre to cost $65,000 is proposed for Sheridan.

Madison, Wis.—F. W. Fischer of Fischer Brothers Theatres will spend $50,000 in remodeling the Grand theatre which will be renamed the Madison. It is also reported that negotiations are under way for the construction of a new theatre in Spring by Fischer Brothers.

Oakland, Cal.—George Roos, San Francisco merchant who has interests in Oakland real estate, will erect a $100,000 motion picture theatre on his property on Grand avenue, between Broadway and Webster street. Plans are being completed and the house will be leased by Eugene L. Perry, at present manager of the Franklin theatre here.

Lincoln, Ill.—The new Lincoln theatre in this city is reaching a stage of completion which will enable decoration of the interior within a few days. The house seats 1,200 on the main floor.

Ownership Changes

Summer, Wash.—John Bruet has purchased the Summer theatre in this city from J. W. Sutton.

Harper, Kas.—The Gem theatre has been purchased by Thurman & Sons by Anthony Kas, from Mrs. H. Robinson. A new theatre at Cambridge, Kas., is scheduled to be opened soon.

Curryville, Tex.—C. Mason has purchased the theatre in this city for a presentation of motion pictures.
The Man Behind

The best equipped theatres—those having good orchestras, up-to-date lighting effects for stage and auditorium—draw the crowds.

Back of the scenes—unseen by the audience, the stage electrician and his Cutler-Hammer Dimmers play no small part in the general success.

With C-H Dimmers, he controls the various currents singly, in groups, or as a whole—producing harmonizing lighting effects, synchronizing the beautiful colors and brilliances with the orchestra and stage programs.

C-H Dimmers for the “continuous” theatre are actually continuous duty dimmers—designed expressly for this service. The construction and high grade of workmanship are well known to the veteran stage electricians, since C-H Dimmers have been in use since electric lights were first used for the “foots” more than a quarter of a century ago.

C-H sales engineers are ready to consult with you and your stage electrician.

Plan Exposition at National Convention Committee Named to Arrange For Biggest Event in Industry's History

The Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners have launched preliminary preparations for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which will be held in Chicago in May.

A feature of the convention will be an exposition, which, according to its sponsors, will be the biggest event of its kind in the history of the industry.

Producers will be approached with a view of having a number of the screen's most prominent stars in attendance. It is the plan of the committee in charge to present at the exposition a comprehensive display which will give the public a clearer conception of the industry and its workings.

The following committee has been appointed to make arrangements for the exposition:

George A. Hopkinson, L. M. Ruben, president of the state body, Joseph Hopp, Sam Abrahams, Louis Frank and Glenn Reynolds.

Well Known Exhibitor E. B. Rice Passes Away

The many friends of E. B. Rice, owner of the Seely and Hamlin theatres on the Northwest side, were shocked to learn of his sudden death last Wednesday, Jan. 3.

Mr. Rice was well known in Chicago film circles, having conducted theatres for a number of years. He was in business in 1911 with Ernie Grobe, the Fox salesman at the Lawndale theatre, and later purchased the Seely and Hamlin.

Death was due to blood poisoning caused by an infected carbuncle. He left a wife and one child. The funeral services were held at the church, 2151 N. Irving Park Blvd., Friday, Jan. 5. Many film salesmen and exchange managers attended the services to pay their respects. The burial was in Waldheim cemetery. Mr. Rice was 52 years of age.

"Broken Chains" Had Successful Week's Run

Walter De Nealond, the Goldwyn exploiter, is happy over the outcome of his campaign for "Broken Chains," which played a week's engagement at the Chicago Theatre. All the papers were good to him and the picture stood "em out all week, according to Walter. Nealond was in South Bend, Ind., for five days on the same picture where it is to play the Blackstone Theatre starting January 10.

New Theatre

Morgan Park is to have a new motion picture theatre. Work is now under way on a 1,000-seat building at Monterey and Homewood avenues, Morgan Park, designed by Burett H. Stephens. It will have a seating capacity of 1,000 and will have a 5x1000 lobby on Monterey avenue. The theatre will be completed by March 1 it is said.

Guts First Run

Ralph W. Crocker, of the Star Theatre, Elgin, Ill., says the Chicago theatres may boast of first runs in the Central west, but last week he gave the first showing in America of Gene Stratton Porter's seven red feature, "Michael O'Halloran." This picture was directed by J. Leo Meehan, former newspaper man of Elgin, now located at Hollywood. Mr. Meehan witnessed the special showing and left for New York with the print.

Rothacker Attends Meeting

Douglas D. Rothacker, of the Rothacker Film Company's practical pictures division, is in Washington, D. C., attending a meeting of the National Commission of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. On this mission Mr. Rothacker represents the Screen Advertisers' Association, of which he is president. He will spend a few days in New York following the convention.

Fox Sales Meeting

Clyde Eckhardt, assistant general manager of Fox Film Corp., called a meeting of all roadmen in this territory and managers from Kansas City and Minneapolis, last Thursday. E. F. Tardieu, of Minneapolis, and Pete Edwards of Kansas City attended. Mr. Eckhardt left for St. Louis on Friday.

Chicago Personalities

By J. R. M.

J. PALEY opened his new Imperial theatre, at Madison and Western aves. December 29.

Harry Burn, Fox News cameraman, is back on the job. So is Alie Kohn, publicity man.

Joe Campbell, the Goldwynner, who has been sick with a severe cold is up and around again.

Roberts almost made off with all the Saturday, Sunday and New Year's day receipts of the Harvard theatre, last week. They broke into a large safe and got $20 but the small round safe defied every effort according to manager James Coston.

D. O. K. Richardson, has enlarged his New Century theatre, Laporte, Ind., from 800 seats to 1,100, and added a few boxes for extra measure. The house now presents a cozy and inviting appearance.

Frank Mantke, American Releasing manager, announces he will hold regular theatre showings of American Releasing pictures in the Fulton-Schafer projection rooms on Thursday of each week at 1:30 p. m.

Bill Danziger, the Paramount exploiter, was busy last week showing Barrett Kiesling, Cecil DeMille's personal representative, around town. Mr. Kiesling is here to exploit "Adam's Rib" DeMille's new production.

Ralph T. Kettering, special representative of Jones, Linick & Schafer, and John J. Jones, who books all J. L. & S. attractions returned on Tuesday morning from French Lick Springs, Ind., where they spent four days rest from the holidays.

Norman Field, general manager of the J. L. & S. enterprises, is stopping at the Morrison Hotel, having been quarantined from his home by a case of diphtheria.

Exhibitor Chapman from Iowa City was a caller at the American Releasing exchange, last Thursday.

Jack Barry, salesmanager of American Releasing, has been given the title of the fighting Irishman, following a recent engagement on the north side.

Floyd Brockwell, general manager in charge of distribution of First National, is expected in Chicago this week.

Morris Helfman, president of Reelcraft Film Exchange, announces he has purchased "Reclaimed," "Wolves of the Range," "Judge Her No. 2," "Father, Why?" and "Sacred Flame," "Your Daughter and Mine," "Hatting King," and "Shadows of the Law" for Indiana and will release "Your Daughter and Mine" and "Reclaimed" in Illinois. The latter have Niles Welsh and Mabel Julian Scott as stars.

Ralph Bierhoff, the Hodkinson representative in Detroit, called at the local exchange last week.

Max Levy left on Friday for New York, where he will purchase some short subjects, for use in home projectors.

G. P. Smith, former Pathe salesman, is handling the South Side territory for Vitagraph.

Manager J. A. Steinhoff, Vitagraph, is enthusiastic over the bookings being received on "The Nineteen and Nine," the new Vitaphone special. More dates have been secured on this picture in a shorter period of time than any former special they have ever handled. District Manager Duncan adds that the same holds good in Omaha and Oklahoma City.

W. D. Burford, of Aurora, newly appointed Secretary of the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation, has just returned from a meeting of that body in New York City.

At the installation of officers of the Iliion Lodge, A. F. & A. M., at the Hotel Auditorium, Friday, Jan. 5, Edgar Hopp, son of Joseph Hopp, succeeded his father as Worthy Warden for 1923. The retiring officer was presented with a beautiful Elgin watch.

Al Hoffman, the peppy F. B. O. salesman, was surprised out of his boots last Friday upon receiving a communication from the K. K. K. (?) After preparing to spend the night in the exchange, he was upped off it that it was all a joke, and the drinks were on Al.

JACK STEIN, poster boy at the F. B. O., composed his latest letter to furnish anyone buying "The Third Alarm" with a flashy sign for the lobby that will surely attract attention. He has one on display at the exchange.

W. W. BRUMBERG, country sales manager
First National, is preparing to furnish a new system of routing his salesmen by means of route tickets. So far "Bill" says it is working out wonderfully well.

AL SOLBER, First Nation's publicity man, is "Oliver Twisting" these days. He made Pecora last week.

MORRIS HELLMAN, president Reelcraft Film Exchanges, left for New York on Wednesday. He will have an announcement of a picture a week beginning
February 1 upon his return, he says.

Did anybody see JOHN KEMPSON of the Linden theatre, last week. The boys around exchange want to know.

E. C. ROHR, of the Dixon Theatre,
Dixon, Ill., was a caller along Film Row
January 4.

We have to apologize to PERRY BARR, or leaving his name off the Christmas list of Educational salesmen. Mr. Barr is still selling Christies, etc., and you can meet him most any day on the 4th floor of 831 So. Walshave.

GEORGE WARE, the Vitagraph exchange manager, St. Louis, called upon J. A. Sten-on of the local exchange, last week.

GEO. W. TAIT, assistant manager, Vitagraph, "Bob" Lucas and a committee of other film men called on Harry Granmp, & DeCatur, Ill., one day last week. Just
New Year's call, we understand.

CARL LEISERMAN, Universal salesman, offering him to his foot Christmas night, hide crossing Washington Park and was hit up for several days.

S. J. GREGORY, of the Grand Theatre,
Gary, Ind., believes in advertising. Mr.
Gregory's latest stunt is to hire a trolley or five hours a day with a sheet mounted in each side, to boost the current attraction at his theatre. You just can't miss it you are in Gary.

There was an attempted robbery at the antheon theatre, Hammond, Ind., last Tuesday, but the arrival of the manager kicked out the day's receipts.

I. LEISERMAN, manager of country sales universal exchange, was down state tuesday and Thursday.

WALTER HYLAND's nifty Essex coupe offered a severe job shot from a Ford truck last Saturday week, and as a result Walter is driving a Lizzie until the Essex is required.

Mr. and Mrs. ROBERT DELACEY are at the Shubert studio, Chicago, doing the final schedules on "Edwin Drood" by the Great national production "Mighty Lak a Rose."

Oftentimes, while waiting on the phone, I read anything that happens to be handy, and it occurred to me that the months, especially the current month would be read several times in a month by people who never give our troubles a thought, and I think I am doing some good.

I also send you copy of advertisement I used in combating the misleading statements of a semi-religious organization that is opposed to me because I saw fit to open my theatre on Sunday, and after reading all the advice published by the leading advisors of the picture industry, both exhibitor and producer. I want someone to tell me just exactly what you can be bought, or cooperate with, people who, under the guise of religion, would stoop to defraud the

It can't be done. My experience with reformers convinces me they are only busy-bodies who don't really know what they do want.

'SECOND FIDDLE'

with MARY ASTOR

"There is no real excuse for poor motion pictures!"

--The Film Guild

"SECOND FIDDLE" is the first of a series of productions, sponsored by the Film Guild, designed to answer once and for all the demand of press and public alike that the screen resume the function originally planned for it -- the providing of clean, wholesome entertainment

Who hasn't played "Second Fiddle" in the family? All the pent up hopes of younger brothers, the shattered dreams of daughters, the side-tracked ambitions of their elder sisters are safely launched -- these tragedies of youth will find the medium of the screen a generously human tug at the heart.

You all remember Harry Leon Wilson's "Mirror of the Nation". Glenn Hunter is creating the success of his career in the stage version of this novel. He is also the star in "Second Fiddle", the new picture by Mary Astor and one of the most successful productions of the past two years.

Paramount
Has Completed
The Great Epic
Drama of America's Making

"THE COVERED WAGON" has been completed. Out in the Utah desert, eighty miles from a railroad, the Paramount company of three thousand people went through untold hardships for over three months. This week the final scenes were taken.

The filming of this story, which is from Emerson Hough's novel, has been the most stupendous undertaking in the history of motion pictures. The company of three thousand, together with one thousand Indians, six hundred oxen, a thousand horses, and a production staff of hundreds, endured floods, blizzards, zero temperatures and sometimes lack of food.

Some of the thrilling scenes are an Indian attack, in which a thousand Indians took part; a buffalo hunt, in which the only remaining herd of bison was used, numbering over five hundred; a prairie fire, covering miles of territory; the fording by three hundred wagons, of a mile-wide torrent; and the discovery of gold in California.

"The Covered Wagon" is not merely a spectacle, but a heart-moving, fascinating love story of the men and women who opened America up to civilization. The featured players are J. W. Kerrigan, Lois Wilson, Charles Ogle, Ernest Torrence, Alan Hale, Tully Marshall, Guy Oliver, Ethel Wales and John Fox.

It is a James Cruze Production, adapted by Jack Cunningham.

It is the picture the world has been waiting for.

HUNTING BIG GAME

IN AFRICA

WITH GUN AND CAMERA

By H. A. SNOW

SWEEPS INTO PHENOMENAL SUCCESS OVERNIGHT

What the Foremost Critics Say About It:

"In 'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera,' H. A. Snow poked his camera right up under the noses of the wildest animals of the African jungles and came away with pictures of the whites of the beasts' eyes. This is an extraordinary film."

—Quinn Martin, N. Y. World.

"A picture which thrilled, delighted and entertained us as much as anything in years. It is absolutely fascinating from the opening shots of a million penguins flying into the ocean to the close-up of a giant African elephant charging into the camera. All in all we consider this the best film entertainment in New York today."

—P. W. Gallico in Daily News.

"The most complete—which means the most instructive and the most thrilling—motion picture of wild animal life ever made. The beautiful, the ugly, the swift, the ungainly—they are there, singly and in herds, at water holes and darting across the plain or diving into the jungle undergrowth. Comedy is introduced to relieve the tense action."

"Most satisfying pictures of wild animal life yet taken."—Don Allen, Eve. World.

"By all means see this picture and take the children, for if you don't they'll never forgive you, if they ever find out about this show."—Daily News.

"All the excitement, thrills and chills of 'Hunting Big Game in Africa' are there. No one between the ages of seven and seventy should miss this picture."—N. Y. Eve. Post.

"A marvelous panorama of wild life."—Evening Mail.

"No Zoo in the world is able to produce as large a number of wild animals as these pictures show."—Louella O. Parsons, Morning Telegraph.

"A vivid record of the thrills and chills of the jungle."—Rose Pelswick in N. Y. American.

"In the midst of most exciting adventures one suddenly realizes that during all this hazard the camera man was there bravely cranking, cranking, cranking."—N. Y. Eve. Journal.

"'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera' has virtually swept the town off its feet. The press went wild over the picture and stated it was the biggest entertainment in New York."

—Variety of Jan. 12th.

"The most fascinating animal picture ever seen. It even exceeds in entertainment power Paul J. Rainey's classic. It is exciting and humorous. Crashes between the Fliver and wart hog are funnier than the antics of Lloyd or Chaplin."

—N. Y. Sun.

"An example of the cinema at its best. A more uniformly interesting and sensationally thrilling set of pictures has not been shown on Broadway in many a day. It crowds more real drama into its ten reels than 90 percent of so called super-specials."

—E. V. Durling in the Globe.

"The flat statement predicting a long showing for 'Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera' is based on a number of things foremost of which are these—Tense, thrilling moments, punctuated with mirth provoking scenes and great lessons from nature."

—Evening Telegram.

Marion Davies

When Knighthood was in Flower
When Knighthood Was in Flower, a Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies, stands as the supreme motion picture achievement of all time. Produced at a greater outlay than any other film, with the finest cast ever assembled and the most marvelously beautiful settings ever conceived, every dollar spent upon it is apparent on the screen. Coming at a time when great things were needed, it represents one of the outstanding epochs in picture-making. William Brandt summed up its importance, when, addressing the Theatre Owners’ Chamber of Commerce, he declared:

“The industry needed something to buoy it up—some big thing that would restore confidence. Right at this crucial moment comes William Randolph Hearst with a great picture, When Knighthood Was in Flower, one of the few really wonderful pictures ever made. Its effect has been magically beneficial. The entire industry owes a vote of thanks to Mr. Hearst.”

Beginning its pre-release engagement at the Criterion Theatre in New York on Sept. 14, and at the Scala Theatre in London with the Prince of Wales in attendance, “Knighthood” is still the sensation of Broadway, reflecting its glory along the famous street and actually bringing prosperity to other pictures because of its unprecedented success.

Not since “The Birth of a Nation” has a photoplay attracted such attention nor scored such a success. Never has there been such unanimous praise from the critics. Never such glowing approbation to a star’s work as has been heaped upon Marion Davies in the role of Mary Tudor. From city to city as other pre-releases followed, the peans of praise continue—praise for the cast, for Joseph Urban’s exquisite settings, for Robert G. Vignola’s direction, for the delightful love story of Charles Major, for its historical accuracy, for the sumptuousness of it all. There has not been one dissenting voice. All have acclaimed
When Knighthood Was in Flower has stirred the critics of the daily newspapers in leading cities to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Here are a few excerpts culled from scores of glowing tributes to this wonder picture:

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is dazzling to the eye, splendidly impressive and apparently true to the time and places of its settings. Marion Davies really outdoes her- self, while Lyn Harding is a joy. Such a King! Such a King!”—J. O. Speering, N.Y. Times.

“It seems to us that this picture is every bit as important to see as any play on Broadway. It marks a high point in the art of entertainment and in the art of the American motion picture studio. We whole-heartedly commend it to every man, woman and child to whom romance and beauty are not mere words in dictionaries.”—N.Y. Daily News.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is one of the greatest film epics ever made in America, in fact, the picture merits visit after visit to grasp all its glories.”—Robert G. Wright, N.Y. Evening Telegram.

“The most amazingly beautiful motion picture ever screened. Moves swiftly, never wearying, and leaving at the last a regret that it is over.”—N.Y. Mail.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is everything that a spectacular photoplay should be. It is beautiful, exciting, vivid and authentic. It is a great picture.”—R. E. Sherwood, Life.

“If the motion picture public fails to appreciate When Knighthood Was in Flower, then its plea for better films is all a sham.”—Boston Post.

“For gorgeousness and sheer beauty, there probably has never been another photoplay that can equal this one.”—Boston Globe.

“A gorgeous spectacle not to be missed.”—Boston Traveler.

“Neither time, thought nor expense has been spared to make When Knighthood Was in Flower what it is—a truly gorgeous spectacle.”—Mae Tonne, Chicago Tribune.

“One of the most glittering and magnificent screen plays ever produced. When Knighthood Was in Flower does not disappoint, but sends its audience from the theatre thrilled and enchanted.”—Detroit Free Press.

“It is the richest, most entertaining and by far the most spectacular photoplay that we have ever seen.”—Detroit Times.

“Marion Davies is a star of the first magnitude, and When Knighthood Was in Flower is one of the half dozen finest pictures ever screened.”—Milwaukee Journal.

“Even better than we were led to expect.”—Washington Star.

“Marvelously beautiful.”—Washington Herald.

“One of the most beautiful specimens of the film producers' arts that the world has ever seen.”—London Daily Telegraph.

“When Knighthood Was in Flower is indisputably the most brilliant photoplay of a season strikingly illuminated by brilliant photoplays.”—Gay Price, Los Angeles Eve. Herald.

The New York Mail declares When Knighthood Was in Flower sets a new standard in magnificence.
"MARION DAVIES gives a performance of the modern, stubborn, adorable Mary that is not only the best thing she has ever done, but one of the finest performances ever given by any actress."—Lonella O. Parsons, Morning Telegraph.

"MARION DAVIES as the merry little sister of bluff King Hal shows new artistic skill. She mingle comedy and pathos of the quality of Mary Pickford."—N. Y. Evening Telegram.

"This picture is all that has been claimed for it, and Marion Davies acts as well as she looks in the role of the spirited young queen. The people simply burst into applause again and again."—Harriette Underhill, N. Y. Tribune.
"Miss Davies is wonderfully clever. She is one of the most beautiful girls I have ever seen on the screen. What else has she appeared in? I would like to see them all."—Edward Albert, Prince of Wales.

"The scene showing Marion Davies in an attitude of prayer as her beloved goes to the axe, is one of the finest moments which we have seen in the cinema, and the underplaying, rather than the overdrawing of Princess Mary’s bedroom scene, is something to be thought about."—Quinn Martin, N. Y. World.
HEN Knighthood Was in Flower, which has justly earned the reputation of "the most beautiful picture ever made," is also the most costly. It was filmed in 1,211 working days at an expense of $31,224,921.20. This represents $24,634.32 a day or $954.29 an hour for an eight-hour working day.

More than three thousand actors, including fifty-five principals, appeared in one scene. For this the largest indoor set ever filmed was constructed. It covered 28,000 square feet of floor space and contained 32 separate buildings.

No picture has ever had such a great cast of splendid actors recruited from both stage and screen. Lyn Harding, who plays the role of King Henry VIII, was brought over from England especially for this picture.

Every object used in the magnificent court scenes is a genuine antique or an exact duplicate of one. Both Europe and America were scoured for art objects which would give the exact atmosphere of Tudor times.

The great hall of Hampton Court palace is reproduced exactly as it was in the time of King Henry VIII.

Genuine gothic tapestries valued at $230,000 were used.

Ancient armor came from some of the most famous collections of Europe.

Antique jewelry and silverware used are worth $1,000,000.

Three thousand costumes of the Tudor period represent an expenditure of $100,000.

The wedding dress alone worn by Miss Davies when, as Princess Mary Tudor, she became the bride of old King Louis XII of France, cost $1,500 and is so heavily laden with gems it weighs twenty-five pounds.

Twenty expert swordsmen engaged in the thrilling duel scenes.

One of the most spectacular feats ever filmed is where Princess Mary and Charles Brandon on horseback jump off a bridge thirty feet high into the river to escape the king's pursuers.

Thirty-three cavalry horses are used in this scene.

Director Robert G. Vignola and Assistant Director Phil Carle were aided by fifteen assistants, so stupendous were the demands of the production. In all the big sets a complete telephone system was installed through which the directing was done.

SETTINGS DESIGNED BY JOSEPH URBAN
NEVER have the trade papers been so unanimous in their endorsement of a picture as they have been of "Knighthood." Here is some of the comment:

"What a picture! What a production! What a cast! Everybody. In this industry. From executives. To errand boys. Should see it. And feel proud. That they are in the picture business. Lord knows. You don't get that chance. Too often."—Danny in The Film Daily.

"Cosmopolitan's stupendous picture When Knighthood Was in Flower has made screen history. It is not only Cosmopolitan's greatest achievement, it is one of the greatest achievements of the silver sheet. It stands as a monument for the industry. None have excelled it in its appeal to the eye, the heart and the imagination. Very few have equalled it."—William A. Johnson in The Motion Picture News.

"It is safe to say that never has a picture been produced of greater beauty. It will cause you to believe the advance statements of its huge costs, for it all shows in the film."—Moving Picture World.

"It is a picture of tremendous beauty. For sheer pictorial appeal, it sets an enviable standard. It is enacted by as competent and satisfying a cast as could be wished for. It is, on the whole, the sort of production that reflects glory upon everyone who has had a hand in achieving the final result."—Martin J. Quigley in The Exhibitors' Herald.

"Let us give our homage to When Knighthood Was in Flower. William Randolph Hearst has made a great picture—a picture that the entire motion picture industry can be proud to claim. If there were more like it, we should not now be fighting a set of paid reformers and a lot of fanatic legislators."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower far exceeds anything that was anticipated. It easily bears out all the things that have been said for it. The production is gorgeous, the direction excellent, the acting masterful, and it is real entertainment. Furthermore, the picture looks like the money that is claimed to have been spent on it. Put your order in and get ready to have it work for you."—Film Daily.

"GARRISON'S FINISH"

Based on W. B. M. Ferguson's novel of the same name Supervision and screen version by Elmer Harris
Direction by Arthur Rosson; Photography by Harold Rosson

Mother Love and Sweetheart Love,
The two great ruling factors in every person's life, form the golden threads that bind together one of the tenderest, most endearing, most compelling heart stories of the screen in

Jack Pickford's "Garrison's Finish"
A picture full of romance for all ages and both sexes; a film of rare pathos, thrills and smiles—and yet with plenty of action, adventure, mystery and magnificent scenes from the famous Kentucky Derby and the great Metropolitan Handicap.

A Wrong Righted
Through patient and long-suffering Mother love which braves poverty, ceaseless toil and hardship to find the son unjustly accused of crime.

A Young Girl's
Tender first love is put to harshest test while she struggles against big odds to clear the Boy she loves of charges that smirch name and character.

A Woman's Jealousy
Then sifts through a maze of mystery and intrigue. In seeking revenge she exposes the real villain and thus brings happiness to all.

Wyndham Standing's amusing characterization in "The Inner Man" is the most novel feature of a production that is interesting. It will be entertaining to many—

There is much action in the picture, especially when it gets under way in the mountain locale. The "bad men" of the district, in which the hero owns a mine, set out to frighten away the youth, but instead they set off the spark of manhood and there are some stirring fistic and gun bittles—

KATHERINE MacDONALD

The American Beauty in

"THE WOMAN CONQUERS"

ONE of the star's best, and a wondrous tale of a society girl's battle for life and love in the snow wastes of the far North. The story of a girl who told her aristocratic sweetheart, "You are a weakling," only to meet him again in the Arctics, where, in the fight against the raging elements, the wild beasts, and men worse than beasts, he proved himself superior to them all. This is the kind of picture every audience will thrill to. An artistic and entertaining photodrama by Violet Clark and directed by Tom Forman; produced by Preferred Pictures, Inc.

A First National Picture
Katherine Mac Donald

The American Beauty in the Lucky Four. Book them all now and announce them to play a month apart. Pictures that appeal especially to women. Fine for evenings, great for matinees. The last word in artistry and entertainment with the world's most beautiful woman starring.

"THE WOMAN'S SIDE"
Just a girl, forced to fight a woman's battle, against the man who would sully her father's honor and leave her nameless, for the sake of her father and every hope he had in the world, and for the love of a youth brought strangely into her life. A drama of a woman's instinct and a woman's motives. Story and direction by J. A. Barry.

"HER SOCIAL VALUE"
Here is drama with the ring of the human note—today a sales girl—tomorrow the wife of a society man. And after that the woman who learns the bitterness of the realization that she is "not good enough for her husband." From poor girl to rich wife—here's a theme that will interest everyone in your audience. And Katherine MacDonald makes both portrayals as magnetic as any she has ever done. From the original story by B. P. Fineman and J. A. Barry; scenario by Gerald Duffy and Jerome Storm; Directed by Jerome Storm.

"DOMESTIC RELATIONS"
This is the simple, but tensely dramatic story, of a man who drove a woman from his life but who could not drive her from his heart. A picture which will make both men and women wonder, because they have all seen some of it in their own lives. Gorgeous gowns, sumptuous settings, backing up a real drama that starts where others finish. Your patrons will love it. Story and scenario by Violet Clark; directed by Chet Withey.

"STRANGER THAN FICTION"
A society girl caught in the toils of a crook and how she escapes—with a fight on the wing of an aeroplane, 5,000 feet in the air. A take-off from the roof of a sky-scraper. A parachute jump from a burning plane—a man caught in mid-air in a leap from one airship to another and finally hauled to safety. The greatest air circus ever filmed. Story by Charles Richman and Albert Shelby LeVino; Directed by J. A. Barry.

An Exhibitor Opinion

Mr. Dwight B. Baker, head of an Iowa theatre circuit, has written to us a very thorough and well-poised analysis of the Arbuckle situation from the viewpoint of the theatreman.

Mr. Baker makes a strong case against the return of Arbuckle pictures to the screen and he does it with full charity and sympathy toward the unfortunate player, but also with full insistence that the theatre he so mad to suffer any further from the Arbuckle incident.

In his representative community of Ottumwa, Mr. Baker says that the predominant sentiment is against the return of Arbuckle pictures. His interpretation of the sentiment is that the people feel that the screen stars owe a debt to the public in so far as their public conduct is concerned and obligation is the penalty for failure to meet this debt.

Mr. Baker has suffered through the Arbuckle incident by the criticism that it has directed against his enterprises and by the loss through it of the goodwill of leading people of his community which he needs. Hence, his resentment is well taken.

He may find full relief, however, in the fact that even before the verdict of the public can be taken the exhibitors of the country will have their say.

The Lynch Deal

The important deal represented by the acquisition of the Lynch houses in the South by Famous Players has several interesting aspects for the trade generally.

Famous Players in making the big investment called for by the deal and also in assuming the heavy responsibilities which the deal entails, appear in a decidedly optimistic light. Being party to such an operation makes very plain that Famous Players is thoroughly confident about the future of the business.

Distributors may view the acquisition of the Lynch houses by Famous Players as a favorable development because while they may not encounter the smooth sailing they would like to have in placing their product in those houses, they may reasonably expect that conditions certainly will be no more difficult than they were under the Lynch regime.

New Recognition

A recent proposal of the "Chicago Tribune" that Mr. Will H. Hays endeavor to get produced a motion picture version of "Romeo and Juliet" with Mary Pickford as "Juliet," Douglas Fairbanks as "Romeo" and Adolph Valentino as "Mercutio" is particularly interesting.

This great newspaper seems sincere and genuinely interested in the proposal. It believes that a picture produced with these famous players as principals and otherwise done in a consistent manner would be a great attraction, appealing to millions of people the world over and making this play of Shakespeare a beautiful reality to millions of people who would never know of it in any other way.

The interest and enthusiasm displayed, rather than the suggestion itself, is the thing of much interest. Those familiar with the tastes and temperament of the motion picture public cannot permit themselves to get enthusiastic over the prospect of Shakespeare in pictures. The fate of Metro's "Romeo and Juliet," enacted principally by the then very popular team of Bushman and Bayne, is remembered.

But the "Chicago Tribune" in this suggestion reveals a changed attitude toward pictures. Only a short time ago particular pictures or pictures in the abstract could hope for nothing better from this newspaper than a sort of benign tolerance. If they escaped abuse and derision they were lucky, indeed. But with the "Tribune" now pointing the way to great possible accomplishments of pictures a new order seems to have commenced.
Coogan and Keaton Signed

By Metro; Navarro to Star

Company to Produce and Distribute Jackie's Films; Buster to Make Feature Length Comedies

Under Terms of New Contract

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, January 16.—Metro Pictures Corporation has emerged the victor from the most spirited and stubborn bidding contest the industry has ever known for the services of a star. Jackie Coogan has been signed by Metro and that organization will both make and distribute the pictures starring the "million dollar kid."

Official announcement of this and two other unusually important contracts was made last week at the Metro offices. The other contracts bring Buster Keaton and Ramon Navarro into the galaxy of Metro stars.

Buster Keaton returns to Metro banner. Will appear in feature length comedies.

Lynch Independent

Exchanges Sold to Jenkins and Quillian

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ATLANTA, GA., Jan. 16.—William K. Jenkins and John W. Quillian have purchased Enterprise Distributing Corporation from S. A. Lynch Enterprises. This deal, involving eight exchanges with territories covering fifteen states, was closed shortly after announcement was made that Mr. Lynch had surrendered control of Southern Enterprises to Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Jenkins and Quillian have been associated with the Lynch organization since 1919, and during the past few years have determined the policies of Enterprise Distributing Corporation.

Exchanges of the company are located at Atlanta, New Orleans, Charlotte, Dallas, St. Louis, Kansas City, Oklahoma City and Omaha.

Shamrock is Producing at San Antonio, Texas

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., Jan. 16.—Shamrock Photoplays, with studios at Terrell Wells, will begin producing here shortly, the first picture to be "The Germ," a story based upon a scientific realise on "germs." It was written by L. S. Warnock. P. S. McGeeeny will direct.

Arbuckle Films Are Shelved

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The board of directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has reaffirmed its decision of last April to shelf the three "Fatty" Arbuckle pictures which have never been published. In reaffirming its decision the board decided to write off the amount involved as a complete loss.

Published Reports Place Offer at Half Million

For some time within photoplay circles there have been constant reports of new affiliations for Jackie Coogan. When it was learned that his present contracts had expired practically every producing company of any standing presented unusually attractive offers. Recently newspapers published accounts to the effect that a prominent distributing concern had offered the young celebrity $500,000 a year in addition to percentage of profits. It is known that similar bids were presented to the child's guardians, but all had been refused.

No statement has been made concerning the financial arrangements which have been concluded between Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coogan, parents of Jackie and Metro. Of the many offers that were made Mr. and Mrs. Coogan selected Metro's because they stated that they preferred to be associated with a company making only big productions, and which had the facilities and experience to provide the young star with stories that would do justice to his genius.

Unlimited possibilities are presented to the child star through his affiliations with Metro. The company that at the present time distributes many of the importance of the Rex Ingram productions as well as those of Fred Niblo and Reginaid Barker, has ample resources to surround the talented star with a complete staff and equipment.

No Director Engaged

No director has yet been engaged to take charge of Coogan's forthcoming productions, although it is known that several of the most prominent men who are qualified by experience to assume responsibility for the unique actor's films are at the present time being considered.

Negotiations between Metro representatives and Jackie's guardians are known to have been pending for some time.

Marcus Loew, president of Metro, recently spent several weeks in Los Angeles and it is likely that the time he had under consideration details of the proposed arrangements for the production and distribution of the Jackie Coogan photoplays.

The contract whereby Buster Keaton again becomes a Metro star provides that his pictures will be of feature length and produced by Joseph M. Schenck.

Schenck Continues As Producer

Mr. Keaton's return to Metro is in the nature of a homecoming for his earliest comedies were published by this company. His reputation as a stellar screen comedian was established during his affiliation with this organization which has always taken pride in the fact that it helped to make the comedian the favorite that he is today.

No details were made known concerning the contract which has been signed by Mr. Schenck with the Metro representatives, but plans have been set in motion for the production of a series of full length feature comedies which are destined to place Keaton among the most successful of artists of his type.

Ramon Navarro signed a long term contract to appear in photoplays distributed by Metro. This young Spanish screen actor, discovered sometime ago by Mr. Haring and Mr. Schenck the Metro representatives, but plans have been set in motion for the production of a series of full length feature comedies which are destined to place Keaton among the most successful of artists of his type.

Blumenthal-Haring

Playhouses Reported Sold to Loew Chain

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Although no official statement is forthcoming, it is reported that negotiations have practically been completed by a part of the Haring and Blumenthal circuit will pass to the ownership of Marcus Loew.

The theatres included in the deal are the Monticello, Theatre de Paris and Lincoln, all located in Northern New Jersey.

Considerable interest in the matter has been attracted as these theatres are included in the "A. B. C.,” organized for the purpose of a booking war with Loew and other big chain owners. Officers of the A. B. C. declare that the theatres are bound to the A. B. C. for one year, even if sold.
Excessive Length in Features Detrimental, Says Hammons

President of Educational Lauds Publisher of "Herald" on His Editorial "Five Reels"

A newspaper editorial by Martin J. Quigley, under the title, "Five Reels," in the January 20 issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD, has precipitated a discussion in the industry which promises to bring forth a general expression of opinion on the question.

Mr. Quigley pointed out that "despite the suggestions, pleadings, and demands of exhibitors, whom the producers profess to serve, feature pictures have been getting longer and longer." After discussing the difficulty of exhibiting features of five reels, he states that "it is only the unusually big subject that cannot be most effectively done in five reels.

Among the first to send a thoughtful comment on the subject is E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. Mr. Hammons declares that the feature picture of excessive length is a great detriment to the business and predicts that when evil is corrected, you will see the attendance increase.

His letter follows:

I have read this editorial with a great deal of interest and must compliment Mr. Quigley on his business sagacity in being able to put his finger on a very vital issue for the Motion Picture Industry.

"Necessarily, I have studied the 8, 9 and 10-reel features very closely and I am sure if you will call a given number of people together who constantly see pictures, that the unanimous opinion will be that there are very few pictures which can hold or sustain interest from 8 to 10 reels in length. They further will tell you that there are a great many pictures that they have seen of 8 reels in length that tired them out, whereas if those pictures had been in 5 reels they would have left the showing shooting praise to the house-tops as to what a remarkable picture they had just seen.

"Of course, the 8 and 9-reel picture that is made today (where it should have been in 3 reels) is due to the ego of certain directors. They think because one director made a picture in 10 reels that they are as good as the aforesaid director and consequently must make their particular picture in 10 reels, regardless of whether or not the material justifies it. Of course, the first to suffer from this kind of picture is the exhibitor, who tires out his audiences, and necessarily they lengthen the interval between visits to the theatre. This means that the receipts must fall off. Then the exhibitor must ask for reductions from the distributor. The distributor, in turn, being compelled to grant these reductions, is unable to send the director the money for the next picture that the director desires. The cycle then repeats itself until the box comes right back to a direct loss to the director who today insists on making 7, 8 and 9 reels of a picture, the material of which will only support a 5-reel production.

"I feel quite confident that there are a number of showmen who are waking up to this fact. I recently received a letter on January 8 from a man who controls one of the largest circuits of theatres in the United States. He writes:

"We find that most all the productions we are getting at the present time can anywhere from seven to nine reels in length making it impossible for us to use a two-reel company and the show through on schedule time. Is there any way that these producers can be convinced that a six reel feature is far more acceptable to the exhibitor than one of a greater length?

"It is my opinion that the exhibitor is the only one who can correct this evil by protest and making his voice heard and if necessary, refusing to run pictures of this unjustified length. If this evil is corrected, you will see the theatre attendance increase because an exhibitor will then be able to build up a real show and give real entertainment to his patrons. When they get this real entertainment, they will come more frequently to the theatre.

Censor Bill Expected
By Washington Solons

SPOKANE, WASH., Jan. 13.—Introduction of a bill empowering a censor board maintained and empowered by the state at the present session of the legislature which opened at Olympia today. The bill is being framed at the instigation of Seattle and Spokane women's clubs, it is reported. A drastic bill was defeated at Olympia two years ago. The new bill, while it is more lenient, is not expected to pass.

Hanshaw Is Directing Branch Reorganization

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Dale Hanshaw has been assigned reorganization of the exchange system of Second National Pictures Corporation. Important changes in the system are planned at Cleveland, Indianapolis, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago, Milwaukee, Providence and San Francisco.

Following this work, Mr. Hanshaw will return to the New York office where he has been assigned an important post.

Millions Involved
In Lynch Transfer
Transaction Is Officially Confirmed in Statement Issued by Paramount

ATLANTA, GA., Jan. 16.—According to published reports here $5,700,000 is involved in the transfer of the holdings of S. A. Lynch and his associates to Famous Players-Lasky Corporation whereby the latter will assume management of approximately 200 theatres controlled by Lynch interests. It is also reported that Frederick G. Loew, the former president of the Irish Trust Company of New York, will be president of the new organization.

Paramount Office Confirms Deal

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Official confirmation was made at the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation office that negotiations were in progress between S. A. Lynch and his associates and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the purpose of terminating the managerial contract of S. A. Lynch and his associates of Southern Enterprises. If these negotiations are satisfactorily concluded, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will take over the direct management of Southern Enterprises, which company it has owned for over three years.

It was stated that this transaction had nothing to do with the acquisition by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of any additional theatres, but was simply the transferring to it of the direct management of theatres which it has owned for some time past.

Rousing Cheers for Hays at Universal's Annual Party in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—More than 500 employees of Universal, including the president of the company, were greeted Will H. Hays with rousing cheers at the annual supper-dance tendered him by the company for President Carl Laemmle. In a brief address, Mr. Hays paid a high tribute to Mr. Laemmle, as well as to the latter's employees.

The affair was held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, and was by far the most elaborate ever staged by Universal. Mr. Laemmle had reserved the entire roof garden of the hotel and by special arrangement the Waldorf Astoria orchestra was engaged to play.

E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of the company, was master of ceremonies. He was assisted by R. S. Biggert, Jack Gartman, Joe Ludwik, Paul Koliner, Sydney Singerman, Mrs. M. F. Todd and Harry H. Zinher.

Seanger and Richards To Tour Around World

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Jan. 16.—Julian H. Seanger, general manager of Picture Corporation and E. V. Richards, general manager, accompanied by Mrs. Richards will sail from New York on January 25 on the S. S. Samaria, on a cruise around the world.

The party will not return until May 25.
Goldman Quits Post

Other Business Demands Time of Secretary and Counsel—
Was Ardent Worker

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

KANSAS CITY, MO., Jan. 16.—The M. P. T. O. Missouri has lost one of its hardest workers in Lawrence E. Goldman, secretary and counsel, who has tendered his resignation. For the past several weeks Mr. Goldman has refrained from tendering his resignation, due to efforts of Missouri exhibitor of-officials to prevent his withdrawing as secretary of the association.
Is Prominent in Politics
A post as assistant county prosecutor attorney also was offered Mr. Goldman, and this was under consideration several weeks, the offer finally being declined. Mr. Goldman, who recently has become prominent as a Democratic leader in Kansas City, is being mentioned for the position as county counselor.
Since the organization of the Missouri body in 1906, Mr. Goldman has been one of the most conscientious workers in the association. His relation as counsel for the organization will not be entirely severed, as he has extended an offer to serve in any legal capacity whatsoever.

Offers Three Suggestions
Three constructive plans are outlined in
Mr. Goldman’s resignation; plans which in all probability will be adopted.
They consist of the appointment of a directorate, composed of seven members, the appointment of a business manager and the establishment of a semi-monthly confidential bulletin.

Boycott of Exchanges
Who Show Own Films,
Is Exhibitors Threat

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SPokane, WASH., Jan. 16.—The policy of the larger producers and distribuitors of renting a local house to show pictures which have been passed up by other first-run theatres who regularly buy from those interests, is irritating leading theatre managers of Spokane.
Boycott of the offending exchanges is being discussed with all seriousness by the exhibitors.
It is reported that “Knighthood,” as an example, was priced too high and had too high an admission price clause for the Clemmer, Liberty, Casino or others to buy the picture. Paramount, placed it in the Auditorium, a road show house, for Christmas week, and received less than what it was bid in at by the regular buyers of Paramount, it is claimed.
The fault, as the exhibitors see it, is not alone with Famous Players-Lasky.
Some exchanges are going to find it hard sledding if the police is pursued, the man-gees state.

warners to produce belasco successes noted theatrical manager to cooprate in filming stage plays
(special to exhibitors herald)

new york, jan. 16.—David belasco, one of the greatest theatrical producers in this country, has signed an agreement with Warner brothers whereby the latter company will film the belasco stage successes.

under the terms of the contract belasco will collaborate in the preparation of the plays for the screen and will supervise cutting and titling.

First three announced

The first three Warner-Belasco productions will be “The Gold Diggers” by Avery Hopwood, “Deburau” by Sascha Gryn, and “Daddies” by Lessing Hubbell.

Warners, under the arrangement, will have the use of the original manuscripts, costumes and settings.

Negotiating since fall

Negotiations for the Belasco product hit the skids under way since last fall. According to reports the deal involved something like a quarter of a million dollars in an arrangement whereby belasco will share in the profits from the pictures.

Bringing of Belasco to the motion picture industry is considered one of the achievements of the year. He has been approached from time to time by other producers and distributors but until now no offer has moved him.

Allan Dwan is engaged by paramount to make series under his name
(special to exhibitors herald)

new york, jan. 16.—Famous producer-lasky corporation has signed a contract with Allan Dwan for a series of Paramount productions to bear his name. Mr. Dwan, who directed Douglas Fairbanks in “Robin Hood,” has long been recognized as one of the leaders of his profession.

The first production to be made by Mr. Dwan under his new contract will be “Lawful Lascivious,” Samuel Shipman’s play which was produced by Al Jolson and ran the good part of a year at the Republic theatre in New York. Edmund Goulding has been engaged to write the screenplay.

The picture will be started shortly after the completion of “The Glimpses of the Moon,” which is well under way under Mr. Dwan’s direction.

j. d. williams, who recently formed ritz-carlton pictures, passed through Chicago on Saturday, January 13, en route to New York, from Los Angeles.

Principal pictures
 buys vidor studio company gets screen rights to plays produced by George M. Cohan
(special to exhibitors herald)

Los Angeles, Jan. 16.—Two deals of importance have just been closed by Principal Pictures Corporation.

One is the purchase of the King Vidor studios in Hollywood, and the other is the acquisition of the screen rights to all of George M. Cohan’s stage plays.

Quarter million involved

A quarter of a million dollars is involved in the purchase of and contemplated alterations to the Vidor plant. Productions scheduled to be made at this studio this year will involve an expenditure of $2,300,000, it is said.

The first of the Cohan plays to be produced will be “The Meanest Man in the World.” It also will be the initial picture filmed at the Vidor plant.

The deal for the Vidor studio was handled for Principal by Sol and Irving Lester and Michael Rosenberg. This plant covers an area of fifteen acres and adjoins the studios of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford.

Now under one banner

Although it was announced some time ago that Western Pictures exploitation Company would join forces with Principal Pictures, it is stated now that this affiliation has just been completed. This brings under one banner two large producing and distributing organizations.

Twelve features will be made by Principal during this year. Each of these, it is said, will cost in excess of $150,000. The first will be an adaptation of Harold Bell Wright’s “The Recreation of Brian Kent.”

New house makes no inroads on receipts
(special to exhibitors herald)

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Seemingly matters have adjusted themselves in the neighboring city of Schenectady, where the theatre owners were plunged into gloom with the opening of the new state, a 2,500 seat house of the Strand Circuit. All of the houses are now doing a good business, the owner of one house, located about four blocks from the new theatre, remarking this week that the only losing week which he had this winter was the one in which the State had opened, and that he was making as much money these days as before.

The same condition prevailed two or three years ago when the Mark Spencer opened in Albany. Apparently there are enough persons to go around, and that with good bills, every owner will make money, the amount depending a good deal on the attention the owner gives his business.

S. A. Lynch to make pleasure trip abroad
(special to exhibitors herald)

Atlanta, Ga.—January 16.—Stephen A. Lynch of Southern Enterprises has left here for New York, where on January 23 he will sail for Europe. By that time Mr. Lynch hopes to have business matters entirely consummated and the trip abroad will be for purposes of rest and recreation.
Walker to Sever All Active Affiliations With Exhibitors

Resignation Address Is Expected to Touch Upon Sydney S. Cohen's New Plan of Distribution by Theatre Owners Organization

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, January 16.—Senator James J. Walker, who has loomed up in the affairs of exhibitors for the past three years, will end soon all his motion picture affiliations. This action will be taken in the form of submitting his resignation as general counsel of the theatre owners concern.

In this it is said that Senator Walker will place that his business and political affairs require all his time and attention, and no matter how much his heart will be with the exhibitors he no longer can look after their legal matters.

Result of Recent Election Forces His Decision

Senator Walker has had this move under consideration for a long time, but the decision was not reported until after the recent election. In this the victory of Governor Smith and the fact that the Democratic party obtained a majority in the state senate forced the decision.

Senator Walker is now majority leader in the senate and the personal representative of Governor Smith in all legislative matters. This together with an extensive law practice, Senator Walker's friends assert, is about big enough job for one man, even as big a man as "Jimmy" has proved himself to be.

Work Causes Delay

It was expected that Senator Walker's resignation would be read at last week's meeting of the T. O. C. C. but the stress of work, it is said, incidental to getting the 1923 state legislature under way, prevented him from taking sufficient time to prepare all he wants to say in his resignation. It is now expected about February 1.

Just what will be the nature of Senator Walker's final message to the exhibitors cannot be stated definitely, but it can be said on good authority that it will be an intelligent document. It is not unlikely that he will pay considerable attention to Sydney S. Cohen's proposed exhibitor distributing organization. Said a prominent exhibitor who

South Is Solid On One Point

They called it the "Solid South" long before motion picture trade papers were published. Today the theatre men in the South are solid—solid for the HERALD.

Two letters from new subscribers illustrate the point:

"We failed to receive last week's issue of the HERALD," writes Miller and Carrall, owners of the Gayety theatre at Amory, Miss., "although we are a few weeks behind this city, we did not know how we missed it until it failed to come just one week. Please send one."

"In my estimation, the HERALD is the greatest magazine ever published for exhibitors," writes W. F. Gibson, manager of the Lilly theatre, Grand Saline, Tex., "I am enclosing a check for my subscription. I don't know how I have overlooked the HERALD as long as I have. Let's go and shoot straight for 52 weeks."

Hiers and Bride Reach
Atlanta on Honeymoon

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ATLANTA, GA., Jan. 16.—Walter Hiers, his famous smile broader than ever, arrived here today accompanied by Miss Hiers, his bride of several days, formerly Adah Williams of Syracuse. The couple was visiting Mr. Hiers' uncle and aunt.

They will only remain here for a short time, leaving for Savannah, after which they will visit Cordele, his home town, and other places in Georgia where Hiers has relatives and friends.

The star, who was recently promoted by Paramount, was married in Syracuse on January 12. The present honeymoon trip he is taking is in the nature of a ceding gift from the Famous Players-Lasky organization.

Receipts Drop When Storm Hits New York

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 16.—A snow storm that started in the early part of last week and which continued day after day, cost the motion picture theatre owners of this section thousands of dollars. The aggregate in one place attracted an audience of less than a handful. The one exception appears to have been Oscar Perrin, manager of the Roxy. He played his straight six days of "One Week of Love" to record-breaking crowds.

Chicago Scene of Production After Long Idleness

Players from West Coast in City Making Feature for Blair Coan at Essanay Studios

CAMERAS are grinding. The director is issuing orders. Chicago, which has been a place of motion picture production has been idle for many years, has arisen from the ashes of its past and is again the scene of picture making. At the Essanay studios on the north side Blair Coan productions, Inc., of which Blair Coan is president, has started filming of "The Little Girl Next Door" a six reel feature.

PLAYERS, technicians and property men arrived in Chicago from Los Angeles last week. The cast included Pauline Starke, James Morrison, Carole Myers, Mitchell Lewis, Ed Kennedy and others. W.S. Van Dyke is directing the story, which was originally produced about seven years ago by Mr. Coan and George K. Spoor. According to Mr. Coan, the early picture enjoyed an unusually successful run, netting approximately $400,000 at the low admission prices of those days.

In its new form "The Little Girl Next Door" will be based on the same theme—the stories told by Bishop Samuel Faltows. The treatment, however, will be radically different and instead of the series of incidents that were woven together in the first production, the new feature will evolve around only one event.

"It will be a big mystery story," says Mr. Coan. "No expense is being spared to give this production even greater box office value than its predecessor, which certainly was a winner from every angle.

With improved facilities in production at command I am confident it will prove a revelation when it is completed." Exterior scenes are being made at Morton Grove and Glen View, Illinois, a short distance from Chicago. The greater part of the story, however, calls for interior views and at the Essanay plant a corps of carpenters and electricians are at work preparing and building sets.

Benjamin F. Swift Is Buried at Dayton, O. (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DAYTON, O., Jan. 16.—Funeral services were held here for Benjamin F. Swift, 50 years old, of Rushville, Ind., who for the past year has been owner of the Mystic theatre in that city. Mr. Swift died following a week's illness of pneumonia at Rushville.

He is survived by his wife, mother and four sisters. He was a Mason and belonged to the Blue Lodge and Chapter Spring City, Tenn.

Visit New Branch At Expense of "U"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 16—Scores of exhibitors from all parts of the Washington territory were visitors at the new headquarters of the Universal exchange here at the invitation of Manager Harry S. Brown.

The affair was in the nature of a "house warming." Out-of-town visitors were reimbursed in cash for their railroad fare by the company.

Evans Resigns After He and Cohen Clash

Quits Manager's Board at Meeting and Tries to Withdraw from Unit (Special to Exhibitors Herald)

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Jan. 16—Following a crash with Sydney S. Cohen, John S. Evans, member of the board of managers of the Civic Theatre, Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania turned in his resignation at a meeting of the league here and sought to withdraw as a member of the exhibitor organization.

While his resignation from the board was accepted, and Boyd Chamberlain pledged to take his place, those present prevailed upon him to remain with the organization.

Officers Are Nominated

At the nomination of officers for the election which will take place Friday of this week the following men were named: President, Dr. H. J. Schad, Reading; vice-president, William C. Hunt, Philadelphia; second vice-president, Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg; secretary, George P. Arons, Philadelphia; treasurer, William J. Butler, Philadelphia; board of managers, three years each, George Klime Harry Stephenson, Dr. Morris.

Evans' resignation was the cause of much interesting discussion. He has been a leading figure in the activities of the organization and was president of the league until a year ago, and has also served as national committeeeman for this district.

Disagrees With Cohen

While he has been regarded as a Cohen supporter, it is said that recently the two have come to a parting of the ways in many matters.

Foy Increases Chain To Eight Playhouse

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 16.—Two theatres, the Ro-Nile and Haskell, have been acquired by Foy Neighborhood Theatre. This acquisition brings the Foy holding here to eight theatres, the others being the Colonial, Ideal, Parkway, Columbia, Bluebird and Rialto.

Hughes' Daughter Ill

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16.—Mrs. Rupert Hughes, wife of the author-director, is enroute to New York to be with her daughter, Mrs. John Monk Saunders, who is to undergo an operation for a pellagritis in the Eastern city.
One Fatality When Vandals Darken City, Bomb Theatres

Unidentified Gang Runs Riot in Council Bluffs, Iowa; Three Motion Picture Houses Targets for Stench Containers; No Cause Is Assigned

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

COUNCIL BLUFFS, I.A., January 16.—Vandalism ruled in this city a week ago when unidentified persons threw the city into darkness by pulling switches which controlled the electric system, bombed three theatres with stench containers and robbed scores of pedestrians. One man is dead as a result of these pernicious activities.

Any Suspects Arrested to Be Held on Murder Charge

No arrests have been made. Police officials are holding two stench bombs for identification purposes. Murder charges will be lodged against any suspects arrested. The theatres, doctors and the electric light company have offered $2,500 reward for information leading to the arrest of guilty persons.

The one fatality was caused by the flashing off of the light, just as an operation was being completed in Mercy hospital here. The operation had been performed successfully by officials of the hospital said, but delay in getting lights brought on death.

Order Is Maintained

Bombing of the motion picture houses apparently was a well-planned piece of strategy on the part of the vandals who hoped to create a state of disorder which would assist them in their thieving activities. At least, no other cause has been conjectured.

If this was the purpose of the bomb throwing the vandals were disappointed for the managers of the houses maintained order until their auditoriums had been cleared.

The bombs were made from electric light bulbs filled with a dark brown substance. They were thrown in the liberty, Garden and Strand theatres. It is believed that the presence of a police patrol in front of the Majestic kept the vandals from that house.

Exhibitor Is Arrested

A. C. Smed of the Strand and Liberty theatres was arrested on a charge of violating the parking ordinance when he drove his automobile to the front of the Strand to supply light during the exit of his patrons in order to avert a panic.

"I figured that the light for the forthcoming crowd was more important than the parking ordinance at that moment," he said following his arrest.

Both the city and electric company officials are convinced that the vandals are members of a well-organized gang. Ropes, used to pull the switches on the two main lines coming from Omaha which supplies this city with electricity, were found by workmen who were rushed to locate the trouble.

The city was darkened at 9 o'clock p.m.

Moral Censorship of Picture Folk Seen in Teachers' Resolution

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

PORTLAND, ORE., Jan. 16.—A suggestion to censor the moral behavior of screen players, directors, producers and others of the industry, was included in a resolution adopted at the convention of the Oregon State Teachers Association. The resolution reads in part:

"The time has come, in view of the rising tide of juvenile crime in America, which the educated world must denounce with alarm, the questionable moral life of those who are participating in the motion picture industry, and the continued exploitation upon the screen, which the immature, weak, of our land, of the most debasing exaggeration of sex relations and general crime achievements."

Another section of the resolution contained a protest against Arbuckle's pictures on the ground that they would constitute a "most pernicious influence for evil."

Martin J. Quigley on Visit to West Coast

Martin J. Quigley, publisher of the Herald, left Chicago on January 13, for Los Angeles, where he will remain for several weeks observing current producing conditions.

Following his stay in Los Angeles he will visit several of the important exchange centers in the West.
Arbuckle Begins Production in Face of Protests

First Comedy Will Be "Handy Andy"—Reported Pictures To Be Handled on State Right Market

LOS ANGELES, January 16.—After several weeks of preparation, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle last week commenced production in a comedy that will hold him back into public favor. The picture, "Handy Andy," a typical Arbuckle two-reel comedy, which will be produced at a cost of $7,500, it is said. Production will require about six weeks.

MOLLY MALONE, who played opposite "Fatty" in a number of productions prior to his enforced retirement from the screen several months ago, will support the comedian in his newest creation. The production is being financed by a group of San Francisco capitalists, headed by Gavin McNab, the attorney who defended Arbuckle during his trial in San Francisco. The concern is to be known as Technicolor Comedy Company of which Jo Paige Smith, prominent vaudeville booking agent, is manager. Space has been taken in the Buster Keaton studios in Hollywood.

"Handy Andy" was written by Arbuckle and Joseph A. Mitchell. It will be filmed under the direction of Herman C. Raymaker. No arrangements have been made as yet for the distribution of the initial Arbuckle picture but it is believed that it will be distributed on a state right basis.

Comedies Barred in Better Film Lists

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The National Committee for Better Films of the National Board of Review has issued a statement saying that it will "not recommend or place on its selected lists issued to committees, exhibitors and others for entertainment purposes any films with which Mr. Arbuckle is publicly identified.

The committee announced that this action was taken because of the "wave of public resentiment that has greeted the suggestion that Roscoe Arbuckle be allowed to resume his occupation as motion picture actor."

Spokane Cens to Pass Comedies

SPOKANE, WASH., Jan. 16.—Arbuckle pictures may be shown in Spokane if they pass the city censor on the same basis as other pictures, in which leniency is shown, Maurice Smith, commissioner of public safety, has announced. Technically there is no ordinance preventing the pictures to be booked here if they are clean pictures. The Ministerial Association is considering taking action on the affair but nothing has developed as yet. No local exhibitors have booked the pictures as yet.

D. A. R. Opposes Hays Decision

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 16—The Daughters of the American Revolution, chapter of Independence, Mo., a suburb of Kansas City, have adopted a resolution disapproving of the action of Will Hays in permitting pictures of "Fatty" Arbuckle to be redistributed. The members pledged themselves not to attend such pictures and to use their influence to prevent others from doing so.

Griffin Again Heads Northern California Theatre Owner Unit

S. C. Griffin has been returned for another year to the president's chair of the northern California division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. This will be Griffin's third term in the chair. Griffin's cabinet will be Allan E. King, first vice president; H. W. Jacobs, second vice president; Harry C. Seipel, third vice president; George Man, fourth vice president; H. Golbin, secretary-treasurer, and Maurice Klein, financial secretary.

On the executive board are: Joseph Baurer, Robert A. McNeil, Aaron Goldberg, Ellis Arkush, S. E. Levis, Sam Perlin, and M. Blumenfeld.

Approved Pictures to Be Boosted by Women

KANSAS CITY, MO., Jan. 16.—A new plan of supporting better pictures will be launched in Kansas City, the middle of this month by the motion picture committee of the Women's City Club. What is to be known as "approval nights" will be designated each week by the committee and exhibitors with whom the committee is working. On these nights the committee will review pictures and if approved the productions will be strongly advertised by the club and every effort made to obtain as large a patronage as possible. The committee is composed of the following women: Mrs. Eleanor Walton, chairman; Mrs. Ralph Swafford, president of Alphe Women's City Club; Mrs. Philip E. Elliott, chairman of the 6ives committee; Mrs. Susan H. Martin, secretary; Mrs. John T. Murding, Mrs. Edward Hubbell, Mrs. George Harvey Davis, Mrs. O. C. Mossman, Mrs. Kimbrough Stone, Mrs. Henry Sanborn, Mrs. Franklin Murphy, Miss Lucy Smoot and Miss Catherine Harvey.

President of Vitagraph Reaches West Coast to Supervise Big Picture

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16.—Production activity at the Vitagraph studios has taken on an added spurt with the arrival here of President Albert E. Smith who will personally supervise productions of the company's program this season. This is Mr. Smith's first trip to the West Coast since he returned from England.

Next on the Vitagraph list is "Massel of Men" from Morgan Robertson's story, direction of which has been signed to David Smith for this season.

Players chosen for this production include Earle Williams, Alice Clough, Cullen Landis and Wanda Hassel. Much of the story's action occurs in the harbor of Havana, Cuba.

First National Will Get Data on Rentals

Floyd Brockell Is Visiting Exhibitors to Discuss Receipts and Rentals

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—For the purpose of gathering data which will further cement First National and exhibitor harmony as well as to take up the question of better service from exhibitors and first run houses and other phases of rentals as compared with receipts, Floyd M. Brockell, manager of distribution of First National has started on a trip that will take in all the key cities of western United States and Canada.

Itinerary Is Given

Mr. Brockell has gone to Chicago, and from there will go to St. Louis, New Orleans, Mexico City, San Francisco, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, back to Chicago, returning to the New York office March 17.

He will seek, too, information on just what percentage of the cost of a first run theatre's program may be safely paid for the feature picture.

He begins his trip with the same feeling as recently made public in an official franchise announcement, by Robert Lieber, president of Associated First National who declared: "The motion picture industry requires, more than anything else, the spirit of good will and fair dealing between all engaged in it."

Facts Are Sought

Before leaving New York Mr. Brockell said: "Exhibitors are demanding big pictures and everyone knows it costs big money to make them. We want to learn the facts and square up with the rentals. I hope to have many heart to heart talks with picture showmen to learn facts on the subject of rentals and the type of pictures the exhibitors want First National to put out next season."

The WEEK in NEW YORK

THE Third Annual “Naked Truth” dinner of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., will be held at the Hotel Biltmore on the evening of April 28.

This is the one occasion all the year when the advertising and publicity men get away from their desks and their bosses to say what they think about their bosses during the other three hundred and sixty-four days of the year. The atmosphere of the dinner and the fact that the film magnates are the target for all the witicisms and near witicisms is explanatory of the method of getting even, or once in their checked career they tell the truth.

Committees are already at work and it is thought the dinner may well be one of the most successful as the previous truth telling dinners pale into insignificance when compared with the one that will go down in history as the big film event of 1923.

And if you will look up your calendar you will find that April 23 falls on a Saturday. Deep thought messages given the same day that week is if it is not several members of the committee tried to find a date where a holiday fell on a Saturday of last week. The idea was that it might be wise to give the bosses two days to forget what happened at the dinner.

NAT ROTHSTEIN, publicity and advertising manager of P. B. O., was the special “barker” at last week’s A. M. P. A. luncheon and his selection for speaker was Kenneth Webb, president of the Motion Picture Herald Association. Mr. Webb told the advertisers that he believed in and preferred to make the kind of pictures which lend themselves to box office success. The idea was that he made it very clear that he didn’t believe in extravagant expenditure on a basis of “art for art’s sake.” Mr. Webb said he thought the directors could learn a great deal from the men who handle advertising and publicity problems and said he would try to see that he develops more cooperation between them.

Many of the Ampas agreed with Mr. Webb’s dictum of “learn a great deal” stuff but their innate modesty prevented them from saying so.

FRED E. BAER has been appointed to handle the publicity of the A. M. P. A., which announcement is more important than appears upon the surface. The A. M. P. A. has always had a publicity person, but his identity has always kept a secret. And to further shroud his identity with mystery, this publicity person refrained from writing anything or otherwise allowing anyone who wasn’t at the meetings from learning what happened. With Fredy Baer on the job we can put away the jimmies and x-ray machines.

Bob Hage, who has been in First National’s publicity department man and boy for the past year, has resigned and gone back to his old home town. The Poster Advertising Association has been fortunate enough to secure his services for its Chicago office. It is believed the places that once knew Bob will know him some more. If they don’t he can blame a guy named Volstead.

And now they have hung another medal on S. L. Rothafel, who guides the destinies of the Capitol theatre. Last week he was made an honorary member of the local NO 2, of the American Federation of Musicians, being the only theatrical manager in New York to be so honored.

Harry Reichenbach says as soon as he gets his distribution plans for Sendaform, to say the world’s greatest emblems go at top speed, he expects to retire from the film industry and live forever after off the fat of the land.

Fred Myers, one of the important stars of the sales organization of Commonwealth Films, is the daddy of a brand new baby girl. At present writing he is undecided whether he will have heir grown as a famous beauty, or a motion picture star.

Who says this film business isn’t gathering to itself a lot of class? One day last week all the trade paper reviewers were invited to an informal tea given by Dr. Lilian Delger Powers, producer of Squirrelville Comedies. The scribes were olonged at the producer’s stately White Plains.

Edgar Lewis, who has just completed a picture for C. Burt, accompanied by Mrs. Edgar, is en route to the coast where he will at once begin work on a series of pictures. The first will be “Right of the Stronger” from a story by Charles Seymour Green.

Wonders never cease. Here the Schoolkopf five hundred dollar jewel robbery case has occupied first page position in the New York newspapers for the past ten days and now one newspaper has discovered a “beautiful moving picture actress” figuring in the investigation.

Now it is “Colonel” Messmore Kendall. The president of the corporation which owns the Capitol theatre was notified last week that he had been appointed an aide to the Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, with the rank of Colonel. And being a Kentucky Colonel is supposed to make it more binding.

MADGE KENNEDY, stage and screen star, sailed last week for a trip to Japan, via Panama. She was accompanied by her mother who will continue for a tour around the world. After completing “The Purple Highway,” Miss Kennedy returned to the stage in “Spite Corner” which engagement closed last week.

P. A. Powers, head of F. B. O., returned from the coast last week enthusiastic over the production schedule, there being eight units at work. A big crowd trying to jam its way into the Astor theatre to see “The Third Alarm,” didn’t appear to dampen Mr. Powers’ enthusiasm the least bit.

THOMAS J. Hamlin, for three years managing editor of Motion Picture Journal, has resigned to devote his time to Tom Hamlin Inc., advertising agency serving the eighteen regional film trade journals of the United States and Canada.

Lawrence A. Urbach, for many years associated with Mr. Hamlin on Motion Picture Journal, has resigned his editorship of that publication while Marion D. Weber, formerly associate editor of Motion Picture Journal is secretary-treasurer of Tom Hamlin Inc.

Honor President Zukor on Fiftieth Birthday.
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Executives and department heads of Famous Players-Lasky gave a dinner at Delmonico's in honor of President Zukor on the occasion of his fiftieth birthday.
John C. Flinn presided as toastmaster.

"We are here to do honor to Mr. Zukor, our friend. But in paying him tribute tonight we are really paying tribute and honor to something greater than he. We are paying honor to our country, the United States of America, which has made possible such a brilliant and useful career as he has achieved in the past fifty years. I venture seriously to doubt whether I am sure that every man in this room will sustain my point of view, that no other country in the world could produce a career to be called as that of Mr. Zukor."

They All Want Honor in N. Y.
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Apparently realizing the amount of political prestige which will come to the man who introduces the bill which will be the one eventually putting an end to motion picture censorship in this state, two assembliesmen introduced bills the past week, asking the repeal of the present law. The first of these bills, introduced by Assemblyman Louis Cuiviller of New York, known as a fighter for state, has already been quickly by another bill, almost identical, introduced by Assemblyman Frank A. Miller, a booking agent living in Brooklyn, and Mr. Cuiviller a Democrat. Both bills are now in the hands of one of the assembly committees.

It is expected that a bill calling for censorship repeal will be introduced in the senate at once by Senator James Walker of New York, the leader of the upper house, and a man who has consistently fought censorship in this state year after year. As soon as bills have been introduced in both houses, action may be expected in bringing the bills out of committees.

It is generally understood that the fight to prevent passage of any bill calling for censorship will be fought in the Assembly by Walter F. Clayton of Brooklyn, who introduced the bill creating the motion picture commission. At one time, however, Mr. Clayton was not over friendly with some of the Republican leaders, who were his hands for political purposes and shoved it through to passage.

Just what will be the feelings of some twenty-five or more persons who recently passed examinations for the position of reviewers and inspectors, can only be imagined these days. When Governor Smith made himself so plain, both during the campaign and in his annual message to the legislature of January 3, announcing that motion picture censorship would continue in this state, received the jail of his or her life.

Reform Lieutenant in Missouri Lobby
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Jan. 16.—The Rev. Howard P. Bailey, secretary of the Church Federation of St. Louis, is here lobbying in the interest of the censorship bill which that organization and the Committee of Fifty has framed for Missouri.

It contemplates a board of three members, two men and one woman. It will be authorized to review all films before they are shown in the state and to eliminate objectionable features or reject the film in its entirety.

Of course the bill proposes a footage tax sufficient to cover the cost of censorship. The expenses would include fat salaries for the commissioners and their travelling expenses as well, as for clerks hired.

"There is no fanaticism in this movement," Billman explained.

Motion Picture Is Institution of Service, Says Hays

"Review of Reviews" Commends Article to Members of Various Churches and Racial Groups

THAT the public may be rightly informed about the great motion picture industry, the "Review of Reviews" in its current issue publishes an instructive article by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Directors Association. Mr. Hays touches in an interesting manner upon the many phases of the industry, declaring that it should be thought of by the public as "a great institution of service, just as the postal establishment, the newspaper, the public school and the church."

ADDELING weight to the article is the editorial comment of the magazine which "strongly commends to adherents of different churches, or members of different racial groups, the remarkable article that Will H. Hays contributes."

In touching upon the mission of the industry President Hays writes: "Evil pictures have been produced—yes—but inestimable good has been accomplished. The motion picture has carried the silent call for virtue, honesty, ambition, patriotism and hope, love of country and of home to audiences speaking twenty different languages but understanding in common the universal language of pictures. "There may be fifty different languages spoken in this country but the picture of a mother is the same in every language. It has brought to narrow lives a knowledge of the wide wide world; it has clothed the empty existence of far off hamlets with joy; it has been the benefactor of uncounted millions."

"It is our earnest purpose to stimulate the development of the spirit of service among all branches of the industry."

He says that the operator, the exhibitor, the actor, the director, the cameraman and all others assisting in making, distributing and exhibiting pictures must know "that he is a partner in this industry without whose wholehearted cooperation we cannot succeed."

Speaking of the exhibitor, the producer chief says: "The motion picture theatre owner builds a structure in which to show pictures, but he also builds an institution to exert an influence for good. The motion picture theatre is an asset to a community."

In presenting his subject Mr. Hays calls attention to the public's attitude toward pictures in that the motion picture is an institution operating all around us, with which we are all familiar yet about which we know potentialities are recognized by few, and by many they are entirely misunderstood. "These are some of the statistics he quotes: Industry represents an investment of $500,000,000; annual salaried total $50,000,000; annual production expenditures, $200,000,000; annual admissions paid $600,000,000; there are 15,000 theatres in this country, employing 50,000 persons. In 1921, 14,057,545 linear feet of film was exported. This was valued at $6,513,567.

Reformers Will Talk Censorship on Jan. 18

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (Washington Bureau, Exhibitors Herald) — Robert Watson, president of the International Reform Bureau, announces that a conference of representatives of various churches will meet here on January 18 to discuss the Reform Bureau's measure which proposes a federal motion picture commission to license films for interstate commerce after they have been previewed.

Watson has urged members of congress to support the measure, declaring that the public must look to congress, not Will H. Hays, "for protection."

of the last censorship bill still fresh upon their memories, have little fear the censorship will be adopted in the state. The Missouri Sunday School Association is said to have sent out letters urging the support of the censorship bill. M. P. T. O. M. officials are inclined to discount this, as the Missouri school and M.P.T.O. are now on the verge of entering an agreement whereby all small town theatres of the state would become community centers on Sundays.

It's Becoming a Habit in Indiana

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 16—The legislative action against motion picture pictures was taken up in the general assembly Friday through a bill introduced by Senator Claude Steele, of Laporte and Starke counties. This bill is similar to one introduced in the lower house in 1921 by Mrs. Julia D. Nelson, representative for Muncie, which bill was defeated in the senate.

Senator Steele's bill would provide a license fee of $2 for the first 1,000 feet of film and $1 for each additional 1,000 feet. For duplicate films the license would be $1 for the first 1,000 feet at 50 cents for each additional 1,000 feet. This bill provides also for a commission to be appointed by the governor. This commission would have the right to a point advisory commissioners and defer to commissioners to inspect the films.

MONEY MAKING IDEAS
Which Have Been Used Successfully by Exhibitors to Build Up Their Patronage

By H. G. STETTMUND, JR.
(Odeon Theatre, Chandler, Okla.)

I do not remember if this form of advertising has appeared in your columns or not. We got some post card views of Oklahoma City and wrote on each "Dearest, I have just seen the best picture, 'Hail the Woman,' and I sure want you to see it," signing various girl names in order to create the impression the card was from a sweetheart. We sent these to the exchange and they mailed them. We did this in order to have the Oklahoma City cancelling stamp on them. These cards were addressed to various married men in town. The mail carrier delivered them to the residence so the wife would be sure to get hold of the card. The result was some near-domestic riots that in the course of time spread all over town.

When the participants understood it was an advertising stunt they told about what they thought and said when the cards were first received. We also carried newspaper ads and readers about the picture. Business first night was not quite as good as anticipated; second night was better than we expected. This stunt is excellent advertising and is inexpensive.

"What Have 'Exploiteers' Done for You?" Pertinent Question Asked Exhibitors

"I wonder," writes J. P. Lannon, Isis theatre, Cedar Rapids, in a Theatre Letter this week, "what experience the average exhibitor has had with exploitation men?" He then describes his experience with Charles Raymond, "Goldwynner," in detail.

Mr. Lannon’s implied question is a pertinent one and one that should be answered by exhibitors generally.

The company exploitation men ("exploiteer") is a term coined by Paramount and here employed in its broad, accepted sense) occupy a somewhat ill-defined position in the trade. To date attempts to definitely catalogue them, while there have been many, have been confined chiefly to private discussion among exhibitors. The topic has been accorded a secrecy for which no good explanation is apparent.

One type of showman argues that the exploitation man is a sort of barnacle, "wished onto" the exhibitor without his permission and drawing sustenance from the all-comprehensive item, film rental.

Another type declares that the exploitation expert is a valuable addition to the industrial personnel, giving his whole time to the matter of exploitation and discovering and perfecting new methods of selling theatre entertainment to the public.

Between these extremes range the mildly interested element which gives voice to no opinion.

Mr. Lannon’s letter is the first devoted solely to the question of the exploitation man’s value that has been received. The Theatre believes that many showmen have positive opinions in the matter and tends its Theatre Letters forum to these for the purpose of discussion.

If the exploiter is a barnacle he should be removed. If he is an asset he should be encouraged and his numbers multiplied. Certainly it is not good business to continue longer his present vague status.

What have the "exploiteers" done for you?

A Better Theatre Platform

6. Theatre Fidelity

Practically every theatre has one or more ready-made nights each week—nights when the business of filling the auditorium consists chiefly in lighting the lobby and offering tickets for sale.

A good many exhibitors mis-use these nights, usually Saturday or Sunday, to "work off" inferior attractions accumulated through loose booking or, worse, to exhibit bad product booked because cheap.

That isn’t business.

That is equivalent to feeding a Whiskaway bad oats; to housing a Cadillac in a cow shed; to training a ring champion on French pastry.

These things aren’t done.

Seemingly, a good many exhibitors regard that dependable ready-made night crowd as an indestructible machine donated for their specific aggrandizement and deem it devolvent upon themselves merely to collect its money outflow with tolerant indulgence.

That isn’t true.

Due to the great appeal of the motion picture and the social arrangement that produces such a night, a great deal of outrageous treatment has been borne by this clientele. By no process of logic can it be argued that this capacity for punishment is of necessity a promise of endurance. As a matter of fact it is purest folly to permit continuance of such a policy.

Viewed on a cash basis, the practice is a losing proposition. The real motion picture enthusiast doesn’t attend on these nights, having learned

THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD,
Dear Sir:
We submit herewith a display advertisement on "Smilin' Through," which might prove a bit of novelty in small towns where everybody knows everybody else's first names and calls them by them.

DEAR MR. HINDS:
We think it is more than a novelty, as you term it. If it is true that your staff is so well known as the advertisement indicates, it ought to be worth while to march them out, singly, in pairs and occasionally altogether in support of a picture that warrants it. Of course it wouldn't do to use any of them, even, on another kind.
The layout is exceptionally good, we think, and we invite further contributions. — W. R. W.

What Have the "Exploiteers" Done for You?

"Exploiteers," "Goldwynners," exploitation representatives of film companies generally, are employed for the specified purpose of inducing exhibitors in profitably exhibiting motion pictures.

In the following letter a new contributor states that at least one of them does.
What has been your experience?
THEATRE EDITOR,
EXHIBITORS HERALD,
Dear Sir:
I wonder what experience the average exhibitor has had with exploitation men.
Here's one I had:
I had a date on "The Sin Flood," a Goldwyn picture, and wrote the Omaha office to send out their man to outline the best things to be done with the subject. Charlie Raymond arrived and without any flourish went on the job. He didn't tell me what he was going to do; he did it. The one big thing in the campaign that was outstanding was the tie-up with the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company.
Raymond called the manager, Mr. J. M. Rider, on the phone and asked him to come to the theatre and see the trailer on "The Sin Flood" in which a telephone operator is seen sitting at the switchboard sending out the warning that the flood is coming. This was enough for the telephone operator and with a little persuasion he was induced to loan us anything he had in the telephone exchange that could be used. He also posted a notice reading to this effect:
"EVERY TELEPHONE OPERATOR SHOULD SEE THE SIN FLOOD. IT SHOWS THE IMPORTANCE OF THE WORK OF THE OPERATOR IN THE EVENT OF A GREAT CRISIS."
This is the first time any notice, except one regarding the telephone company, had been posted on this board and the response from the operators was unanimous. We decorated the lobby with the telephone apparatus, which attracted much attention, and the first op-

Creamer Topics

THEATRE EDITOR. EXHIBITORS HERALD.

Dear Sir:

Herewith is a description of a stage using Raymond. It will fit in very well with some of the Irish features now in circulation, namely "My Wild Irish Rose" and "Come on Over." Also it will come a handy for St. Patrick's Day. We used a soloist, working in front of conservatory drop in one. Green border and feet. Soloist enters from right stage singing "Mavourneen" in a shamrock spot from booth. (To get this effect see a stereo attachment on spot, with lide carrier. Cut a shamrock opening in piece of opaque paper, place between lide glasses with a piece of green gela ne.) This gives a green shamrock spot. At close of song, drop raised, showing set with a large window, with no lights except a candle on a table behind win dow. Woman made up to resemble an old mother sits on a chair knitting, soloist sings "Mavourneen" still appearing in the shamrock spot. This made a hit with our audiences when we put it on, and should go over specially well if you play it.

I was just wondering how many of the mall town theatres use a soloist? Nowadays I consider a soloist a very necessary and to a well-balanced program. What do you think? We are using a soloist, but also is house hostess, and we stage song novelty several times each week. Thanking you very sincerely for past favors and with best wishes for the New ear, I am

The Fable of
The Ad Hater
And His Doom

This is no place for fables—but this is no ordinary fable.

This is a fiction-yarn giving more good reasons for exploitation accessories than any dozen flamboyant press books ever printed.

Lou Marangella, assistant director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, wrote it, and we unreservedly recommend it as entertaining and profitable reading.

Do you know Henry Smith?

That's the hard boiled businessman who constantly walls to his family that he has no time to go to the "movies." Smith is the same guy that is a veritable walking twenty-four for the industry, and for every picture his family is anxious to see. In other words, Smith has been educated to talk about pictures. No matter where he goes—into a boot-black parlor, restaurant, haberdasher, etc.—some form of picture advertising strikes his gaze.

When he goes home, Mrs. Smith and the children talk about the wonderful picture at the Blank theatre. And why do they talk and rave about it?

Because—

1. They have seen door-knob hangers all over town.
2. They have seen cut-out cards in the most prominent windows.
3. They have been given a herald as they came out of the theatre the previous week.
4. They noticed an advance street hally-ho.
5. They read about the picture in the local newspaper.
6. The neighbors are all talking about the feature.

This concentrated effort on the part of the producer to secure the most striking accessories obtainable with each and every picture is of direct benefit to the theatre owner. Let us take a concrete example of how the public becomes sold on a picture through the use of advertising accessories.

Without undue exaggeration the Warner Brothers can rightfully claim the distinction of being the largest users of novelties in the industry. No production is released until the best obtainable novelties have been secured for the benefit of exhibitors, and the untold rewards that have been reaped at the box-office is convincing proof of the value of an advertising accessory.

With the release of "Heroes of the Street," featuring Wesley Barry, the Warner staff devised an exceptionally large number of exploitation aids—a set of window cutouts, door knob hanger, paper mache novelties, stickers, Wesley Barry folding puzzle novelty, herald, window card, police cap and a lithographed blotter.

Now let us revert back to Mr. Smith, and note the effect of the novelties on the millions of Smiths throughout the country, and the ultimate result at the box-office.

According to Smith all advertising is bunk and chatter. The world would be infinitely better if a lot of high priced highbrows could stop telling people how to be millionaires over night, how to reduce, and that Lydia's Carousels are the greatest nerve pacifiers in the world. Henry Smith steps into his car and he finds a "Heroes of the Street" hanger on his steering wheel. He gets mad, tears it off and throws it to the winds. A kid picks it up, hangs it on the button of his coat and considers himself the hero of heroes.

Of course, Henry must have his shoes shined, and as he steps into a shoe-shining parlor he sees a Wesley Barry cut-out in the window which tells him that Giovanni Bacigalupo gives the best shine in town. The enigma is following

Henry, and he can't get away from it. For at lunch time he steps into a restaurant, and Maggie, the waitress, tells him the reason they put the "Heroes of the Street" cut-out in the window is because it helps to bring in more customers—besides she heard it's a good picture and Mike, the chef, is going to take her to see it.

In the meantime, Mrs. Smith has run a smack into a 24-sheet advertising the picture. The butcher, the baker and the department store are telling the world with the use of the cut-outs that they've got the greatest line of their particular merchandise in the world.

Out in the street a gang of kids are wearing Wes Barry police caps, and Mrs. Smith is told by neighbor "Mary" of the wonderful herald she received at Blank's Theatre. It's about the unsuspended screen star—he's going to play there soon.

Mrs. Smith likes boys. She has a couple of her own. And she thinks it would be a good treat to take Henry and the family to the Blank theatre to see the freckled star in "Heroes of the Street."

But when Henry arrives home that evening, he bawls at his wife: "You're too easily affected and sold by advertising. Stay home and rest up." Suddenly Mickey, one of the boys, puts on a Wes Barry police cap. "Take it off, Think you're a clown?" hollers Smith. "I've seen so much of this Wesley Barry Livability around town that it’s driving me crazy. How does it affect you, Ma?”

And Ma Smith tells him about the undertaker, the baker, the drug store, the department store—“And say, dear, on’t you think Mickey looks very much like Wesley Barry?”

Whereupon Mickey waxes enthusiastic, reminds his Dad that he was once kid, and they had all better go and see the picture before he leaves town.

“All them advertisements about the picture didn’t influence me at all,” opines Terry. “Anyway, let’s take a chance on this picture. I know I’ll be a good one. How do I know? Intuition is a wonderful thing, Ma.”

To the skeptic who fails to weigh a proposition in order to ascertain its merits, this may read like a fairy tale, told to the thinking person, it will at once become apparent that there are millions of Smiths, millions with the same attitude, who cannot possibly dodge concentrated effort to lure them into theatre.

All of which tends to prove that an advertising accessory is an invaluable asset capable of filling the cash box 365 times year, and incidently creating and making an institution out of a cheap selling latter.

Lindy Putnam was a brazen piece, She tried to vamp Quincy but he wouldn’t fall; For he loved blind Alice, the Deacon’s niece, And he couldn’t see any other gal at all.

Slick up your galoshes and harness up the shay; “A wonderful show will come to town today!”

Then Lindy and the wicked Obadiah And the husky blacksmith, Abner Stiles, to boot
They got together, amin’ to conspire, But Quincy knew that there was dirty work afoot!

They set blind Alice adrift on the water; Did Quincy let her drown? By heck, not he! He jumped in the river and not he brought her And Gosh! how he begged her when he found she could see!

Then Lindy went right back to her mother; And promised she always would be good; And Obadiah was fixed so he couldn’t harm another, And everything ended just the way it should!

So slick up your galoshes And harness up the shay, A wonderful show Has come to town today! ...

Flirt Brigade Draws Chicago To “U” Picture

Attendance records were smashed and remarkable enthusiasm stirred up in the engagement of “The Flirt” at the Randolph theatre, Chicago, due to the extraordinary advertising in newspapers and on billboards, and the efforts of the Universal exploitation department.

At the jump-off the public’s attention was intrigued by unique line drawings in the newspapers. These advertisements, while occupying no more space than the heady type ads, attracted attention by the lavish use of what is known as the unusual sketches and the simple straightforward announcements.

A very complete billboard campaign was used to exploit the picture as well, the first showing being half of the words—“The Flirt.” and the line “you don’t know the half of it.” Later these were covered with the full announcement.

The stunt that created most of the talk, however, was the employing of six pretty blondes and a brunette in charge, through an advertisement placed in the want ad columns of the Chicago papers. Many applicants were present at the theatre following its appearance, and seven girls engaged to follow out a regular program of exploiting the picture.

Enlarged copies of the Book Tarking-ton book were given to each girl and they visited department stores, hotels and other public places throughout the week, where they would sit and read their copies of “The Flirt.”

An automobile company placed two cars at their disposal and with placards displayed on disk wheels and spare tires the “flirts” visited various manufacturing plants and hospitals.

At the soldiers’ hospital they entertained the boys by presenting them with copies of “The Flirt” and cigarettes. Two hundred books and about 300 packs of cigarettes were distributed in this manner.

As a coincidence of the “Flirt” campaign in Chicago the papers published a number of stories of male and feminine dirt being arrested and in one case the flirt was ordered to leave Chicago forever. Of course capital was made of these incidents wherever possible.

Another angle of the campaign was the excellent window displays given the book, with posters and stunts advertising the picture. All of the large department stores co-operated in this respect, and one store, through an arrangement with the Randolph theatre management, advertised that a sales check for a copy of the book would be honored as an admission ticket to the theatre.

The entire campaign was arranged and successfully carried out through the efforts of W. L. Hill, Universal’s Chicago exchange exploitation and advertising expert, J. D. McCurdy, manager of the Randolph theatre, assisted in handling the crew and in getting up the attractive ads.

the character of the entertainment offered. He would attend if good pictures were shown. The big night would be bigger. In addition, the exhibitor would maintain fidelity to his public. He would take the first step toward making all-week enthusiasts of his big night patrons.

Theatre fidelity is a very important thing. In this brief discussion the facts in a specific case are merely presented. A moment’s serious thought serves to show the desirability of an all-week good picture policy.
The Theatre Visitor

By HARRY E. NICHOLS
Field Representative, EXHIBITORS HERALD

Perhaps the most continuously interesting condition that I come upon in my journeyings about the country is the always present conflict between the small town and the big city showman. Perhaps jealousy is a better word, but that doesn’t quite fit either. Rivalry about covers it.

In the small town, as a rule, there is a definite idea that the big city showman is something of a bubble, a person with no great ability whose location renders profitable theatre operation practically automatic. It is held, in many communities at least, that the big city exhibitor merely opens his doors, having posted a few boards and run a newspaper announcement, and the public fights to buy tickets.

In the city, also as a rule, it seems to be a generally accepted belief that beyond the corporation limits stands a circle of “little exhibitors” with admiring, worshipful eyes centered upon their activities, eagerly snapping up the sparks that fly from their high powered theatre machines.

The situation seems to have existed since the beginning of the theatre, and both types of showmen seem willing to defend their stand to the extent of protracted debate. It is as though neither wished to see a termination of the condition.

The result of this rivalry, logically enough, is improvement for both contestants. A trade journal story of a small town man’s genius seldom fails to evoke a “rise” from a city man, and the reverse works as well. And as a result of these “rises” each man determines to do something that will make a better story.

In this way general theatre science is developed with sustained rapidity. The theatre and the motion picture become more popular, because better, as a result.

As a matter of fact there is little occasion for such rivalry. The big city problem is simply the small town problem expanded. The numbers are larger. There are a few minor differences. The aims of the two types of showmen are identical and the means of attaining them differ but slightly.

Photographs reproduced this week have bearing upon this topic only in that they show small town and big town endeavor. These examples are not selected as parallel, and are not offered for purposes of comparison, though they disclose the underlying motive common to all types of theatre administration.

At Indianapolis, the Palace theatre displayed an elaborate front for Goldwyn’s “Sherlock Holmes.” The display is clearly a big town product. It cost quite a sum and exercises a definite influence upon beholders. Undoubtedly it sold tickets.

At Hart, Mich., F. N. Harris, Amuse theatre, exercised an influence undoubtedly as powerful proportionately when he rigged up the family flower with a hobby horse and two banners to advertise Metro’s “The Four Horsemen.” Having but one hobby horse, he utilized the big figure 4 on the front of the car to get the proper effect. The photograph shows Mr. Harris beside the car.

In both these instances, while they are not directly parallel, the purpose was to sell tickets. The Palace spent more in its effort, but comparison of total receipts of the two houses in all probability would show that approximately the same proportion of intake was due to exploitation done.

I hope that no reader will interpret this discussion as an attempt to bring to an end the rivalry noted. It is, in fact, intended to increase that rivalry, to stimulate it and endow it with even more productive properties.

While such a healthy condition prevails the theatre will go forward.
Newspictures Contents of Week Include Events for Intensified Exploitation

The newswires of the week practically illustrate the headines of the current dailies.

"French Seize Ruhr" greets readers everywhere.

"Harding Recalls Troops on Rhine" is played in type as big. News bulletins followed by extended stories ensue.

The newswires of the week tell the same news in caption form and supply motion pictures of the scenes and troops concerned.

What will you do about it?

Some exhibitors, possibly, will mention it to a newspaper reporter in the hope that he will mention it in his newspaper.

That isn't enough.

Some exhibitors, less probably, will set out a lobby board denoting the act.

Neither is that enough.

Some exhibitors, very improbably, will give the fact a large portion of their advertising space, or run special ads on the newswires.

That is almost too much to expect—but that is the least that should be done.

There is very little excuse for the thetren who do not take advantage of the exploitation opportunity offered this week. It is impossible to "pass the buck" to the newswire companies, for these have extended themselves to provide adequate material. It is impossible to dismiss the matter with the statement that the daily papers had the story a number of days previously, for the public interest is in the record being so, profound as to make it practically self-sustaining, that the slight effort necessary to the annexation of several additional dollars will not be made.

Newspicture reporters have a long lead on their theatre contemporaries in the matter of picture interest. Every newspaper that has or can obtain pictures of theoughboys in Germany is using them to the fullest extent of their ability. The pictorial pages of the leading dailies are bristled with the helmets of marching men. Correspondents abroad are rushing negatives to shipping port by the speediest means available.

Newspicture reporters abroad are covering every detail of developments. Very shortly American newswires will present camera record of the French advance into Ruhr. Every exhibitor everywhere will, through no effort of their own, exhibit these scenes. Will they talk about it?

If precedent is followed they will not. They will continue to accept unmoved their patrons' commitments on the newswires shown. They will smile pleasantly, as though modestly accepting a bid, and feel satisfied—while dolrs that might as well be theirs drift from the public pocket into other channels.

It business is bad a demand for lower rentals will be heard. In so far as that demand pertains to the newswires of this and the next few weeks it will be without justification. No product yields returns unless it is sold.

Exhibitors do not sell their newswires. They give them away. Further, they do not even try to give them at wide circle—but are content to place them quietly in an accessible place and forget about them.

Everybody knows what happens when that policy is applied to a feature picture. A growing majority know what happens when that policy is applied to a short length comedy.

What has happened to the law of like quantities?

Maybe we are wrong. Maybe nobody cares to see the territory that the French army has occupied. If not, all the newspapers in the country are just as wrong as we are. Then the country is in a bad way.

Maybe newswires aren't worth running. Maybe they bore patrons to distraction. Maybe the best one ever made wouldn't draw an extra nickel to the box office. If that is the case exhibitors who continue to buy them and companies that continue to make them are even more in error than we, who simply devote this page to the topic weekly.

Maybe this is the case—but do you believe it?

You do not.

You know that newswires which give the life of motion to the black and white scrap-heads of the current press are worth real money at the box office.

Read the following index to the newswires of the week to find many newswires that do just that thing.

HOW often do you take your audience into your confidence and allow them to decide upon the class of entertainment they want? In small communities this is done quite often. In the large cities it occurs very rarely. As a novelty it is worth trying.

Last week the Balaban & Katz organization conceived the idea of letting audiences at the Chicago theatre, choose between popular and classical music, and the thing was a complete success, and incidentally, classical music won.

The immense orchestra at this 5,000 seat down-town house played excerpts from "Madam Butterfly," "Rigoletto," Southern airs, old-fashioned songs and the latest and most popular selections. After each number the audience was requested to applaud the ones they liked best and to the surprise of those who thought that jazz music would win by common consent, the loudest applause was accorded the classic numbers.

The experiment could be carried even farther allowing audiences to choose between comedies and cartoons, scenic and educational films and even between melodrama and comedy-drama, by the use of slides or announcements from the stage.—J. R. M.

"FURY" (First National) is a stirring tale of the sea with heart touches, sobs and laughter nicely intermingled. Richard Barthelmess is the star and Dorothy Gish, Tyrone Power, Pat Hartigan, Jesse May Arnold and others render excellent support. The sea scenes and the London Limehouse district are realistic and there is action every foot of the way.

"LOST IN A BIG CITY" (Arrow) is the latest of the old-time melodramas to reach the screen. John Lowell enacts the leading role and is supported by a very capable cast. The picture was made under the direction of George Irving and is in eight reels. It has been so carefully made as to lift it away out of the class of ordinary program pictures.

"THE SUPER SEX" (American Releasing), adapted from a story by Frank R. Adams, furnishes light entertainment, although at no time does it delve very deeply into human emotions. Robert Gordon plays the lead, and is given good assistance by Tully Marshall and Charlotte Pierce.

"OUTCAST" (Paramount) presents Elsie Ferguson in a screen version of Hubert Henry Davis' stage success, in which she also starred. The film was evidently made with an eye on the censors of the country and for that reason lacks the punch of the stage play. It concerns a poor girl who saves a wealthy youth from "going to the dogs."

"THE GHOST PATROL" (Universal) with an all-star cast makes good entertainment. It is well acted, well directed and should prove a good attraction wherever stories with sentiment, love interest and pathos are appreciated. George Nichols, Bessie Love and Ralph Graves have the principal roles.

"OMAR THE TEXTMAKER" (First National), adapted from Richard Walton Tully's stage success and with Guy Bates Post playing the role of Omar, is an artistic and entertaining picture of the Persian poet. It is too long, however, and much of the drama has been lost in transferring the stage play to the screen.

"THE WOMAN CONQUERS" (First National) tells the story of a society girl's adventures in the Hudson Bay country, where she is pitted against enemies practiced in the ways of deceit. Katherine MacDonald gives one of her best performances as the girl, while Bryan Washburn, June Elvidge, Mitchell Lewis, Clarissa Selwyn, Francis McDonald and Boris Karloff lend strong support. Some splendid snow stuff is presented, and the scenario writer has contributed admirable continuity. Tom Forman directed. The story was written by Violet Clark

"SALOME" (United Artists) is a fantastic screen adaptation of Oscar Wilde's play, which had a more or less tempestuous career upon the speaking stage. The picture is entirely Nazimova, and is presented, aside from two cut-backs, in one scene. Charles Bryant directed.

Three interesting scenes from "The Face on the Barroom Floor" the William Fox special directed by Jack Ford, with Hen B. Waithall, Ruth Clifford, Alma Bennett and Walter Emerson in the cast.
A great sea yarn with all the thrills, love and pathos usually associated with a Henry King production. It is a story that arouses the interest at the start and holds it throughout the 8,700 feet and will appeal to all who enjoy virile tales of the deep, with no false morals or over-sentimentality. Advertise the return of Dorothy Gish as Barthelmess’ leading woman. The story was written by Edmund Goulding and photographed by Roy Buerbaugh.

"FURY" is another tale of the sea and a good one. It has the virtue of a simple, well-told story, is well acted and produced. The entire cast is splendid as is the support. There is good character drawing and everyone contributes his best performance.

The fight in a sailors’ inn and another on board ship in the last reel are scenes you won’t forget for many moons. Every title has a punch, every scene advances the story, and the well-written continuity is a splendid example of photoplay writing.

Barthelmess, as "Boy" Leyton, the timid son of a domineering, hard-hearted sea captain, plays with that quiet restraint that was once won for him an enviable standing among America’s foremost screen stars. Tyrone Power, as "Dog" Leyton, scores a sudden change, however. He plays with spirit the poor little wait. Pat Hartigan has an important role, that of Morgan the first mate, and Barry MacCollum, an English actor, makes his debut in screen work as "Looney" Luke, the cook. Many other splendid character roles add to the picture’s value as entertainment, especially that of Jessie May Arnold as "Boy’s" mother.

"Boy" Leyton is the timid second mate of the "Lady Spray," whose rough old father, the captain, hates him for his docility. The whole nature of "Boy" underlies a sudden change, however. Old "Dog" Leyton, learning of his son’s contemplated elopement with a Limehouse boarding house slavey, casts aspersions upon Minnie. The enraged lad springs at his father and the captain, overjoyed at his son’s display of courage, eviscerates him to his breast. Captain Leyton suffers a heart stroke and, dying, exacts a promise from "Boy" to avenge his mother, who has been mistreated by the man she had run away with. This must be done before he marries Minnie.

Though the news breaks the heart of the girl, "Boy" is determined to carry out his father’s wish. He finds his mother in Glasgow, Scotland, then at sea comes the gripping climax with "Boy" and the man. The sea “shots” on the "Lady Spray" are the last word in striking marine photography and constitute some of the best features of this well-made motion picture.

Nazimova has transferred Oscar Wilde’s "Salome" to the screen, the result being somewhat that of an animated impressionistic picture, rather than what we have come to expect of a photoplay. The sets, by Natasha Rambova (Mrs. Rudolph Valentino) add to the illusion. There is a wierd, but immovable, moon partly obscured by wierd and motionless clouds. The story is produced as one scene, with the exception of one or two flash-backs.

It is entirely Nazimova, the play revolving around her altogether. Mitchell Lewis as "Herod" is gross and bestial and therefore satisfactory, and Rose Barton as "Herodias" her role, but honors, outside of the performance of the great Russian herself, go to Nigel de Brulier as the warrior "John," or, as we more familiarly know him, "John the Baptist," gives a remarkable performance. Earl Schnack, as a young Herod, does satisfactory work.

The story follows the play by Wilde. Salome, daughter of Herodias, attracts the attention of her sensual step-father, the Tetrach, Herod, causing her to become jealous. Her indifference only inflames Herod. John the Baptist is a prisoner of Herod’s. His wife urges him to give Jokanaan over to the Jews who clamor for his blood, as he constantly hurl insults at her, knowing she was the instigator of the death of Herod’s brother, her husband. But Herod fears to give the word for the slaying of this strange man who claims to be the emissary of God.

Salome discovers the ascetic in his dungeon, and at once falls in love with him. He repulses her. Salome, whose nature is passionate, impulsive, and inately cruel, is angered by Jokanaan’s refusal to act upon her advances. A fit of jealousy takes her. She rushes to the city of the Babylonians, and in the resulting clamor, Herod, who is engaged in the slaughter of the Nazarenes, is recalled from the stocks where he has been thrown at the last moment. When Herod finds the head of the man she loves on a silver charger and kisses the lips which refused her caresses, she becomes hateful even to Herod and he orders her death. Her last words are, "The mystery of love is greater than the mystery of Death." As a novelty, this version of "Salome" may find favor. As a perpetuation of Oscar Wilde's drama in celluloid, it deserves commendation, but as a motion picture—well, it is open to argument. Nazimova gives a satisfactory performance, although there are too many close-ups, and too little variety in her characterization. Undoubtedly the star's name has a box-office pull, and to those who demand something different in screen fare, this should appeal.

SPECIAL CAST IN THE SUPER-SEX

(AMERICAN RELEASING)

Light entertainment of a pleasing variety. The good direction and uniformly excellent acting help materially in getting it over. Adapted from a story by Frank R. Adams. Direction by Lambert Hillyer. Six reels.

There is moderate entertainment provided in this tale of a youth who has a falling out with his best girl, a scrap with his father who employs him in his lumber yard, and a general turning against him at home, who invests money in an oil well, increases his capital two hundred per cent and is taught a lesson by his fond old grandmother.

Robert Gordon plays the youth, Miles Brewster, Charlotte Pierce is Irene Hayes, the girl, and Tully Marshall gives his usual splendid performance as the father, Higgins. Gertrude Claire scores in the role of Grandma Brewster and Albert MacQuarrie is a good Cousin Ray. Mr. Gordon gives a Charlie Rayish interpretation of the principal role, and Miss Pierce was charming as the girl. It is light in story interest and appeal, but clean and wholesome in plot and will doubtless serve as a diverting hour's entertainment.

THE CAST

The latest of the old-time melodramas to be converted to the uses of the screen is "Lost in a Big City," made by Blazed Trail Productions for Arrow distribution. The screen adaptation is by L. Case Russell, the picture directed by George Irving, and the result is a production which stands out as one of unusual merit.

The cast is exceptionally well balanced. To John Lowell, whose work as Joe Morgan in "Lost in a Big City" has brought to the screen a new star who will long be remembered. In "Lost in a Big City" he fits into the character of the strong, virile, and at the same time lovable, Harry Farley perfectly.

Evangeline Russell, charming, young and in entire sympathy with her part as Blanche Maberly, is comparatively a newcomer in the bid for stellar honors, and her work stamps her as a girl with a future. Among the others in the cast are a number who were with John Lowell in his former big production, these being Baby Ivy Ward, Charles Beyer, James Watkins and Charles A. Robins. Others whose work is more than pleasing are Jane Thomas, Leatta Miller, Edgar Koller, Anne Brody, Edward Phillips, and last but by no means least, little Whitney Haley, a young star who is a real actor.

The action of the story is rapid, moving swiftly from scene to scene so smoothly and quickly as to keep the suspense close to fever heat at all times. The story abounds with heart interest and thrilling situations, all of which are handled by George Irving, who is a capable cast in a masterly manner.

No small part of the merit of the production is due to the photography, some of the effects being most strikingly beautiful and startlingly realistic. The night scenes in New York are especially clever, and by his handling of the camera in this production Joseph Settle establishes himself as an artist of first rank.

The story is an appealing one. Helen Farley, a country girl, marries a young city man who later deserts her and her blind baby. Her brother, Harry Farley, is a fine gentleman, and he makes a fortune. Returning, accompanied by his partner, "Raisin" Jackson, Farley searches for his sister. Learning that she has gone to the city to search for her husband, Farley follows and finds the sister just as she is dying. Swearing re- venge he seeks the man who deserted her, and after a series of thrilling adventures in the underworld he discovers that his blind niece is kidnapped, Farley finally overtake the man he is seeking in the mountains.

After deserting Helen and her baby the husband has taken another name and married the damsel-fisher of a wealthy man, his name now being Heaton. The latter, being blackmailing by a crook who knows his past, becomes mixed up with a band of bootleggers. Through Farley's efforts the band of bootleggers is broken up, Heaton is killed in an automobile accident and the girl marries the man she really loves, only to discover in the breaking up of the gang of crooks.

All in all, "Lost in a Big City" is so carefully and cleverly made, both as to story, direction and acting, as to lift it away from the class of ordinary program pictures and rightfully gain for itself the merit of "mystery man." It should prove a big money maker for any exhibitor.

ELSIE FERGUSON IN OUTCAST

(PARAMOUNT)

Picture-goers generally will find fairly pleasing entertainment in this story of the struggles of a poor girl to get up in the world. Adapted from the play by Hubert Henry Davis it presents Miss Ferguson in the same role in which she appeared upon the stage. Chet Withey directed. Six reels.

The principal talking point here is the work of Elsie Ferguson. It is one of those regeneration stories more or less familiar to film patrons and aside from a melodramatic finish which a seaplane is employed to rescue the heroine, who has determined to commit suicide from an ocean liner, it has no startling climaxes.

Miss Ferguson, as the outcast of society, gives a convincing interpretation of the role made familiar to many upon the stage. Second in interest is the work of David Powell, and that of David plays Tony Hewlitt and Mary MacLaren is the girl who marries wealth but fails to find happiness. William Powell does well as DeValle, the salesman from South America, and Teddy Sampson is equally well cast as Nellie Essex.

The dialogue is accurate, but not elaborate, sets are used and the piece is well directed and photographed.

This story concerns Miriam, deserter by her husband, who becomes a model. Because she can't pay her room rent she is evicted from her lodging room. She meets Sherwood, who has been jilted by Valentine Moreland, de- termines to drink himself to death. She becomes his partner, he establishes himself in a fashionable apartment and eventually they plan a trip to South America on business. Valentine, however, having grown wealthy and grown bitter, her ex-husband, attempts to win Geoffrey away from Miriam. Miriam sails for South America, but sends a note to Geoffrey that she will jump overboard and he hires a seaplane and rescues her and there follows the usual happy ending.

EXHIBITORS HERALD

KATHERINE MacDonald IN WOMAN CONQUERS
(First National)

Three well-written introductory scenes lead to a first part laid in ultra-society New York, where a reel or two is pleasantly and elegantly disposed of, then the action shifts to the fur country, transporting the major members of the cast, where heroine, villain and hero to play out. It is a good story, not exceptional but satisfying.

Bryan Washburn is prominent in support as a society man in love with the society girl portrayed by the star, Mitchell Lewis is his usual forceful North country character, and June Elvidge is a realistic society girl. Clarissa Selwynn haperones admirably. Francis McDonnell excels as a persecuted佛山.

Miss MacDonald portrays a society girl, tired of the social whirl, who goes to the Hudson Bay country to assume responsibility for a fur trading post, a business willed to her by her dying uncle. He role gives her many opportunities to appear in picturesque native habitations of the city and the picturesque costumes of the far north. She is steady to the center of interest and achieves distinction in her depiction of varying emotions.

As foreman in charge of the business she falls in love with a fisherman's son, and Miss MacDonald, a realistic Mitchell Lewis, is vividly realistic. Her action involves a blizzard which sweeps through the town, and the time is frozen to the arts.

The picture has many elements of popular appeal and the story never appears to better advantage or more competently. It should give adequate satisfaction to audiences.

SPECIAL CAST IN THE GHOST PATROL
(UNIVERSAL)

This story by Sinclair Lewis makes quite good entertainment and because it has well-acted situations and a sentimental and intriguing theme will prove a good drawing card. There is good character drawing and the plot moves along smoothly and pleasantly. Directed by Nat Ross. Five reels.

Sentiment, love interest and not a little drama are nicely combined in this well-directed Sinclair Lewis story, written around the pathetic figure of an old shepherd in East Side, New York. It is in addition to a surprise climax and all-staged scenes, an all-star cast including Ralph Graves, Bessie Love and George Nichols. Nichols repeats his recent successful interpretation of the "old man" in "The Flirt" in "The Ghost Patrol." He is a policeman, Don Dorgan, given to settling family difficulties in his own way, and when he is finally retired from the force, patrols his beat at night in his old grey uniform and ministers to his life-time friends. Bessie Love is Effie Kugler in the picture, a pathetic little character, in love with an ex-crook, Terry Rafferty, the role played by Ralph Graves.

The picture has a certain appeal that is irresistible and it should prove a good business getter in any house.

Don Dorgan is called into many a family circle to settle an argument and he watches over his neighbors like a good shepherd. When he is retired from the force he still clings to his old grey uniform and in the shadow of doorways and alleys patrols his former beat. He helps Terry Rafferty in his love affair with Effie Kugler, daughter of a pawn broker, and in the end sees them happily married. The old patrolman is made happy with a capstan which permits him to wear a new uniform and star in the final reel.

GUY BATES POST IN OMAR THE TENTMAKER
(First National)

As an adaptation of and by Richard Walton Tully's successful stage production, "Omar" is an artistic eyeful. As dramatic screen entertainment though it is too long and lacks the appeal of the stage play. In transferring the story to the screen much of the drama has been lost although photographically it is a gem. Directed by James Young. Length 8,090 feet.

Richard Walton Tully's colorful romance of Persia with Guy Bates Post in the role of Omar, in which he starred for four years on the stage, has been carefully reproduced as screen entertainment. It presents a series of beautiful scenes, the whole in sepia tone, has the appeal of a well told romance and the characters are well drawn. Apart from this there are spectacular scenes although the dramatic possibilities of the story seem to have been submerged for artistic effect. Little details, which are interesting in themselves, such as the potter at work, the arrival and departure of the Shah's emissaries and the love-making of Omar, tend to slow up the action and detract from the main theme. Then, too, there is a long lapse of time in the story and it digresses at one point to follow the trials of Shireen and her baby, the love of Hassan and of Nizam. Quotations from "The Rubaiyat" are sprinkled through the subtitles to establish the fact that Omar was a philosopher.

The story, briefly concerns Omar, a young philosopher who falls in love and hastily married the beautiful Shireen. He and his two friends, Nizam and Hassan, are studying under the Holy Iman and pledges lifelong friendship. Omar surrenders Shireen to Shah, who has heard of her great beauty, but she pleads with him to give her her freedom. A baby is born in prison where she has been cast and both are ordered executed. The maid escapes with the child and Shireen is sold into slavery, Nizam becomes the all-powerful Vizier on the death of the Shah and he makes Hassan governor of the city. He orders Hassan to find Omar but he does not do so, fearing Omar will expose him. Shireen by chance comes to the city and meets Omar. She tells him he is defending a Christian from the Mohammedan mob. Omar is arrested and ordered to be flogged to death. Nizam rushes to Omar's aid. Omar and Shireen are reunited and Little Shireen is restored to her mother. She then confesses her love for the Christian and Omar gives his consent.

Guy Bates Post's masterful interpretation of Omar, both as a young man, and later as the ill-treated old tent-maker, is the best thing he has ever done for the screen. The second half of the film was by far the best. Virginia Brown Faire was adequate as Shireen and Patry Ruth Miller a vivacious little Shireen. Noah Berry gave a comic opera tinge to the role of the Shah, while Nigel de Brulier was more convincing as Nizam. Douglas Gerrard was excellent as Hassan, Maurice Foster as the Christian and Edward B. Kimball, Omar's father. Practically an all-star cast.

Depression Is Over
Says Arrow Official
W. Ray Johnston Sees 1923 As Biggest Year in History for Independents
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The industry's period of depression is over.
This is the certain conviction of W. Ray Johnston, vice president of Arrow Film Corporation, who not only declares that 1923 will be the biggest year in the history of his company but the biggest year the independent market has ever seen as well.

Add to Office and Sales Units
Not only has the office force of Arrow been increased in anticipation of the growth of business during the year but the field force as well has been expanded by the addition of George Hamp and R. J. Robinson.

Schedules New Serial
- On its short subject program Arrow will issue a new two reel series of twelve called "Tom and Jerry"; twenty-six Lobby Dunn-Mirthquake comedies; thirteen Broadway comedies; Eddie Lyons in a new series of two-reel comedies and several features and a new serial titled "Adventures of the South Seas," starring Peggy O'Hay.

Davies to Appear in Costume Plays
What is called "the cream of the costume plays" has been purchased for Marion Davies by Cosmopolitan Productions. So tremendous was the success of Miss Davies as Princess Mary Tudor in "When Knighthood Was in Flower" that interest in costume plays was re-awakened all over the country, says Cosmopolitan, in declaring that costume plays are back to stay.

Miss Davies is now at work on the first of these forthcoming pictures, "Little Old New York," adapted to the screen by Luther Reed from the stage play by Rida Johnson Young. Other costume plays in which she will star are "Alice of Old Vincennes," a Revolutionary story; "The Forest Lowers," by Maurice Hewlett; "Yo-landa, Charles Major's story of 1476; "La Belle Marseillaise," by Pierre Berton, a story of Napoleon's period; another Revolutionary period story; "Hearts Courageous," by Hallie Erminie Rives.

Popular Players Engaged For Sacramento Feature
With the acquisition of Kenneth Harlan through the courtesy of B. P. Schulberg with whom this star is under a long term contract, and the signing of Miss Davis, Sacramento Pictures Corporation believes that it has made an auspicious beginning in its first production, "Temporary Marriage."

Players Get Stock As Salary in Cooperative Producing Organization
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Jan. 16.—When pay day rolls around for players and other workers of the Co-operative Motion Picture Production Company they will receive for their efforts certificates of stock instead of cash. This company, which acquired its charter last month, is the latest to try out a co-operative method of production. Ivor McFadden, producer and former actor, is head of the enterprise.

Stock in the company, which is not for sale, will be issued for salaries, to pay the rent and other expenses, in denominations of 50 cents a share. When the picture is marketed the stockholders will receive their salary and profit.

"With the actors, director, cameraman and others as shareholders, and having to wait for their money until the picture is sold, there is little wasted time in making a picture," says Mr. McFadden. The production to be made is called "The Curse of Protection." Ed Gammons, San Francisco man, also is interested in the venture. Seymour Zelliff will direct the feature.

Quits Film Post to Resume Law Practice
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16.—Hewings Mumper, who for the past three years has been associated with Benjamin B. Hampton, has discontinued his association with the latter to resume law practice in partnership with Judge Victor E. Shaw of Los Angeles.

In returning to his old calling again Mr. Mumper takes with him an intimate knowledge of the financial, executive and business side of the motion picture business, gained during his association with Mr. Hampton.

Louis B. Mayer Makes Wales Business Chief
(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16.—Welling- ton Wales, long a prominent figure in West Coast film production, has been made business manager of the Louis B. Mayer organization. Mr. Wales has held important positions with several of the big producers, most recent association being with Marshall Selden in the capacity of business manager.

CHARLES DE ROCHE supports the star in this film.

EXCEPTIONAL PHOTOPLAY COMMITTEE of the National Board of Review has selected the Al Lichtman-preferred picture, "The Hero," as one of the outstanding films of the year. This is a Gastner production and is based on the Gilbert Emery play. Gaston Glass, Barbara LaMarr, John Sainpolis, Frank Lee, Martha Mayo, David Butler and Doris Pown are in the cast.

SHADOWS, starring Lon Chaney, played to an entire week of capacity business at the Apollo theatre, Indianapolis, says advice received by Lichtman officials from the theatre management. Tom Forman directed the feature.

THE GIRL WHO CAME BACK. Tom Forman's next picture for Lichtman-preferred, is nearing completion at the B. P. Sloborg studios. Gaston Glass, Miriam Cooper, Kenneth Harlan, Joseph Dowling and Zasu Pitts comprise the cast. It is a spring publication.

THE THEATER, says Mae Tience writing in the Chicago Tribune, would be patronized more often by many who seldom go there if they made a practice of showing more films on a par with 'Shadows.'

THREE STORIES have been purchased for production by Universal Pictures Corporation. One is "Souls That Pass in the Night," an original by William J. Flynn, former chief of the United States secret service. This picture, Universal states, will be an expose of fake spiritualism. A second story is "The Self-Made Wife," a Saturday Evening Post yarn by Elizabeth Alexander. It will be an all-star special. The third story is "Blinkin," written by Gene Markey. It has a Boy Scout tieup which will be utilized by "U."

THE LOVE LETTER," Gladys Walton's first picture of the new year, has been completed and heralded by Universal officials as the star's most ambitious. It is an adaptation of Bradley King's "The Madam of Avenue A," King Baggott directed it. The picture will be published on February 12, Lincoln's birthday. It is described as a comedy-drama filled with human incidents, some pathos and "honest-to-goodness human beings."

GOSZIP has been selected as Gladys Walton's next Universal picture. This adaptation of Edith Barnard Delano's story, "When Carey Came to Town," will be made by King Baggott.

FIRST NATIONAL

A BIG CAST, including Jack Mulhall, Lew Cody, Eileen Percy, Joseph Kilgour, Helen Ferguson, Tom Ricketts, Ward Crane and DeWitt Jennings, will support Norma Talmadge in her production of "Within the Law." Frank Lloyd will direct the piece. This is a Bayard Veiller play in which Jane Cowl starred.

WHITE FANG, a Jack London story, has been selected as the next vehicle for Strongheart. This Jane Murfin and Lawrence Trumble production will be a First National attraction. Work on the feature has commenced at Bamff, Canada.

BIG EXPLOITATION plans have been announced for "Mighty Lak a Rose," the Edwin Carewe picture which First National will distribute. Music and photographe dealers will have an opportunity to tieup with the feature. Advertising will be carried in the Saturday Evening Post. One feature of the campaign has not been disclosed, but, according to First National, this feature undoubtedly will be used by every exhibitor who plays the picture.

The title of the story is not revealed but it is stated that it appeared several months ago in a national magazine.

“NOTORIETY,” Nigh’s initial feature for Weber & North, is being boosted by the clergy, press, welfare organizations and women’s clubs, according to the distributors. As a result of this interest the picture is being accorded much desirable publicity in cities where it is showing.

A SUCCESSFUL WEEK was enjoyed by “Notoriety” at the Rialto theatre, Passaic, N. J., which is the largest theatre on the Rosenthal circuit and the only one in the city playing full week programs.

AYWON

NATHAN HIRSH, president of Aywon Film Corporation, states that he has completed negotiations for the production of four pictures, the first, “The Purple Dawn,” now nearing completion. Bessie Love, featured in the production, is supported by Edward Peil and Bert Sprotti. This picture will be ready for the state right buyers shortly. The four will be published at intervals of one a month.

ALMA TELL, well known screen player; Louis Wolheim, star in “The Hairy Ape,” and Elizabeth Murray, vaudeville headliner, have been added to the east of Marion Davies next Cosmopolitan picture, “Little Old New York.” The picture will boast an imposing cast.

BAYARD VEILLER, distinguished author and playwright, has been engaged by Cosmopolitan, a new member of its scenario department. Other members of the department, of which Verne H. Porter is editor-in-chief, are Luther Reed, Frances Marion and John Lynch.

JOSEPH URBAN, noted scenic artist, has created a replica of the magnificent gardens of the Villa Maryland for Cosmopolitan’s production of the Vicente Blasco Ibáñez story, “The Enemies of Women.” Lionel Barrymore has a featured role in the opus. He is supported by Alma Rubens, Garrett Hughes, William “Buster” Collier, Jr., and others. Alan Crosland is director.

CHRISTIE

HAZEL DEANE has been engaged by Al Christie to play in his comedies beginning with the next which he personally will direct. Miss Deane, who hails from Vancouver, is one of the rising young leading women of the screen, although she has been in pictures only eleven months.

DUANE THOMPSON is another new leading woman under the Christie banner. She is now playing the lead with Neal Burns in a comedy under the direction of Harold Beaudine. Recently she finished work in another Christie comedy under Scott Sidney’s direction.

Hodkinson

CONSTRUCTION of a New England wood is under way at Biograph studios where Glenn Hunter’s next Film Guild production, “The Scarecrow,” distributed by A. W. Hodkinson is being filmed. A special lighting effect worked out by production manager Fred Walper reproduces the leaves and foliage shadows on the forest floor. It is said to be one of the first times that this combination of decorative, yet natural, designs in light and shadow, has been attained.

“ROD AND GUN” series, the sporting reel distributed by Hodkinson which is produced by Elting F. Warner, publisher of Field and Stream, is meeting with much success, Hodkinson reports. McVickers theatre, Chicago, and the Missouri, St. Louis, are among the many first run houses that have booked the series.

“BULL DOG DRUMMOND” enjoyed novel exploitation when the management of Elektra theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. pasted a sticker which read “Get Bull Dog Drummond Dead or Alive” on letters and post cards. This transfer is adapted from the stage play “Sapper,” and is one of the big attractions on the Hodkinson program.

CHRISTIE

AN ALL COMEDY bill is being presented by Interstate Amusement Company at its chain of houses in connection with the vaudeville program. The first show comprised the Bray comedy “Here’s Lia’s Treasure Island,” the Bray romance, “The Mystery Box,” and the All Star comedy, “Faint Hearts.”

Personnel Changes:

CHOICE PROMOTIONS to desirable employees — Carl Laemmle’s policy has brought the following changes in the sales organization of Universal Pictures Corporation: Harry Bernstein succeeds Maurice A. Chase as Buffalo manager. Chase has gone abroad as Laemmle’s continental general representative. Robert Epperson has been appointed sales manager for Lake City manager, succeeding F. McNamara, who has returned East.

G. R. AINSWORTH has been appointed branch sales manager for W. W. Hodkinson Corporation at Pittsburgh, replacing A. W. Carrick, who assumes his position in Buffalo.

HERE’S SOMETHING that speaks well for the popularity of “Peg O’ My Heart,” the J. Hartley Manners production of which Metro has filmed with Lauretta Taylor in the leading role. “Peg O’ My Heart” is a novel, an acted comedy, printed play and a photoplay. Now comes the announcement that Hugo Fritz is writing the music which will turn it into an operetta. And, by the way,

Producers Security

W. W. HODKINSON CORPORATION has acquired the distribution of Producers Security's "The Lion's Mouse," starring Wynn h a m Stirling and Marguerite Marsh. This melodrama was made in Holland under the direction of Oscar Yehezkiel.

THOMAS DIXON'S new picture, "The Beast," is now ready for distribution. Producers Security announces that the author of "The Birth of a Nation" directed the picture and wrote the story upon which it is based. Madeline Claire has the featured feminine role.

"THROUGH THE SKYLIGHT," the Hamilton Smith production for Producers Security, will be completed shortly. This is described as a fast-moving farce with Henry Hull and Mary Thurman in the leading roles. Syracuse Motion Picture Corporation produced the film.

Goldwyn

"THE MERRY WIDOW," Franz Lehár's comic opera has been purchased by Goldwyn as the second production for Eric von Stroheim. At present von Stroheim is completing the continuity on "McTeague" from Frank Norris' novel, his first film for the company. A big picture is predicted for "The Merry Widow," based on the success it has achieved on the stage.

TWO SUCCESSFUL stage plays are scheduled for production by Goldwyn. King Vidor will make "Three Wise Fools," the Austin Strong play which had a season's run on Broadway and is now on tour. Casting will soon be started. Edward G. Robinson's mystery play "Red Lights," now being presented in the East will be directed by Clarence Badger who has been engaged for this production. Carey Wilson is making the screen adaptation.

"BROKEN CHAINS," the Goldwyn picture from a story which won first prize in a scenario contest conducted by the Chicago Daily News played to some of the biggest houses in the history of Hابة and Katz' Chicago theatre. All the Chicago newspapers were lavish in their reviews of the picture.

RUPERT HUGHES' latest production for Goldwyn "Gimme!" is booked at the Capitol theatre, for the week of January 21. Mrs. Hughes collaborated with her husband in the continuity of the feature which he directed. Helene Chadwick and Gaston Glass have the leading roles.

Century

CENTURY FILM CORPORATION is reverting back to the program basis in its distribution of Baby Peggy comedies where Universal handles. This was announced following conferences in New York between John S. Stern and Carl Laemmle. These pictures will not be sold as specials, but must be booked by the theatres in blocks of six. They will be published one a month.

Following is the lineup of Baby Peggy comedies: "Peg o' the Movies," published on March 14; "Sweetie," April 11; "The Kid Reporter," May 16; "Carmen," June 6; "Taking Orders," July 18; and "Tips," August 15. Owing to a series of misfortunes—fire, sickness, and others—Century announces that "Little Red Riding Hood" has been taken definitely off the schedule.

(Figures from several of Baby Peggy's comedies published in the "Pictorial Section.")

Burr Nickle

The company, it is announced, is fast establishing its own exchange organizations throughout the country. Among the authors represented by the company's productions are: E. Phillips Oppenheim, A. S. M. Hutchinson, Thomas Cobb, George Dewhurst, Ticker Edward and F. Temple Thurston.

Vitagraph

EARLE WILLIAMS will have one of the most important roles in Vitagraph's all-star special, "Master of Men," the Morgan Robertson novel of the sea. Wanda Hawley, as announced previously, also will be a featured player.

"ONE STOLEN NIGHT," the new Vitagraph picture starring Alice Calhoun, has been completed. Throughout the picture is found the atmosphere of the desert, these scenes, according to Vitagraph officials, being finely colored.

VITAGRAPH is convinced that it has in "A Front Page Story" an accurate reflection of newspaper life. Because is confident of this the newspaper men of New York have been invited to a private showing which will be held at the Newspaper Club, New York. Edward H. Millarde, who directed this Jess Robbins production, with James Corrigan, Lloy Ingraham and Edith Roberts in supporting roles.

Fox

"THE TOWN THAT FORGOT GOD" will be special, will be published on February 15. It has just closed a run of ten weeks at the Astor Theatre, New York. This feature, directed by Har Millarde, was praised highly by New York press reviewers.

CLYDE COOK is in production on the forthcoming Fox comedy, "The A list." "Slim" Summerville is directing the picture.

FOX OFFICIALS announce that the version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, "If Winter Comes," will be presented a Broadway theatre shortly. Accord to the company "the public will have the first opportunity to see the picture where the story has not a single scene not described by the author of the story."
With the Procession in Los Angeles
By Harry Hammond Beall

RUMORS have it that Warner Baxter, former local stage favorite and one of the newest leading men of the screen, is soon to be starred in Robertson-Cole productions under the direction of Emil Haudart.

JEFF LAZARUS, recently arrived from the East, is in charge of publicity advertising and exploitation for the local Paramount-Romanian interests. That fine boy, Artie Venzel, Grauman press representative for number of years, is taking Jeff in tow and introducing him to the Los Angeles-Hollywood newspaper men.

First she entertained the public—now she feeds 'em! TRULY SHATTUCK, Orpheum leading lad for years, has broken into pictures through the avenue of the kitchen. She has opened the Studio Cafe on the fayer-Schulberg lot where she is serving tikes like "mother used to make." Miss Shattuck's chief aim is to give a new dignity to custard pies in pictures, she says, but queues double and nothing Thomasae to watch her smoke.

The ghosts of yearever are to invade your old Lunnion town. SOL LESSER is sending one of the prints of the original version "Oliver Twist," filmed many years ago by Mississippi, Nat Gonod. Bettman's latest extra release will be, "Hearts Aflame," a love affair of the ancient print which is an appeal to British sense of humor.

Metro is to release and distribute the nema production of Fred Niblo and Rosalind Birkett. We are told. Both director-producers are now working on the Mayer-Schulberg lot. "The Famous Mrs. Fair" to be Niblo's initial production under the "M.F." a card that originally cost well over a thousand dollars. Al is a nut on actors and flying machines and he says his next purchase is going to be a standard Pacific biplane from the government's air station in San Diego. The Fox star drives a bicycle, seven autos and a trick motorboat.

BLANCHE SWEET is spending a fortnight so on a much-needed vacation. She is also favoring to take on weight. Miss Sweet just staged a triumphant comeback to a screen in the Fox-Warner-Lubin production of "Metro. "Quincy Adams Ross," after the symbolic little star is not yet ready to announce its future plans as her chief aim at the present writing is to improve her health.

After Katherine MacDonald completes her contract, which will be ended at the end of her current picture, B. P. Schulberg will sign up no more stars, he declares. Featured players are all right, according to the producer, but so far it has been unwise to sign the star system out for good and all.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN is going to reissue his former great screen successes for the near future. The comedia's contract with First National, now terminated, permitted of this departure so we may have a nice print of "A Dog's Life" and "Boulder Arms" ere long.

By the terms of the agreement with the distributing organization, it is said, all the pictures made for that organization are leased for a term of five years, at the end of which time all rights revert to Chaplin.

"A Front Page Story," Jesse Robbins delightful comedy-drama featuring Edward Everett Horton, former leading man with a local stock company, was previewed one evening last week by a group of screen celebrities who were entertained at dinner at the Writer's Club by the producer and his wife. Covers were laid for forty and Horton was the guest of honor. The occasion was to celebrate the actor's advent into motion pictures, and was indeed a very enjoyable affair.

MACK BENNEDT has definitely decided to road show his spectacular production starring Mabel Normand, "Suzanna," throughout all Spanish speaking countries. A mammoth atmospheric prelude is to accompany the picture on its tour. Spanish and singers and dancers will present the prologue to Sennett's immortalization of Cashtill rule in California. Special music for the foreign showing is now being written and arranged by Bert Lewis, assistant organist at the Mission theatre, where the Normand picture is playing in the fourth week of its world premier. Mack Sennett is personally preparing the book for the big act.

That local newspapers fully appreciate the import of motion picture news as a circulation builder is evidenced by the fact that the two morning publications here have assigned representatives to cover the studios exclusively. This is a new departure in Los Angeles newspaperdom and the press agents of Hollywood are rejoicing in the move.

AGNES HOLLBAR and DOROTHY PHILLIPS, who are producing "The White Frontier" for Associated First National recently gave a North Pole party on Stage No. 2 at the United Studios, where an ice skating rink has been constructed for important scenes in the big picture. A large number of the film colony attended the affair and successfully demonstrated the fact that a Californian can shake a wicked ice shoe despite the fact that the Golden State has never seen a snowstorm. The ice rink built for the Hollbar production represented a cost of several thousands of dollars and is one of the very few plants of its kind constructed in Los Angeles.

DOUG FAIRBANKS' next picture is to be directed by Raoul Walsh it has been announced. The noted star-producer will announce today to direct himself in the forthcoming pirate production, it is said, because his role is too heavy a part to permit other involvement. The story, which is to be pictured, is a pretentious one of adventure, thrills and exploration.

Mrs. Adeline Burns, mother of Gloria Swanson, the Paramount star, will receive $75,000 by terms of a will settlement out of the estate. When Burns, a shoe dealer left his entire $100,000 estate to Mrs. Burns, his wife.

J. L. FROTHINGHAM, well known independent producer, will resume production activities in Hollywood after a year's absence from the studios. During the interim, Frothingham has been engaged in writing several stories and was otherwise active in anticipation of his present move. His first picture of the new series to be produced shortly is "The Dixie Woman," an original story by Harvey Gates.

Attention, ladies! BULL MONTANA is going to appear as Buster Brown for some weeks in his new comedy, "The Two Twins," which Hunt Stromberg is producing at the Metro studios. "The Boof" in knee pants and bobbed hair, promises to be as funny an Easterner's idea of "wild and woolly Hollywood." PHIL GOLDSBIKE, the well known independent producer of this city, has retained William K. Howard, who directed "Captain Fly by Night" and other screen successes, to direct the megaplay, "The Emperor," for another big special. Howard directed "Deserted at the Altar" for Goldstone.

Some admirer sent Larry Semon a new costume as a Yuletide gift. It was something of a deviation from the familiar outfit in which the comedian has been performing his antics for the past few years, so after regarding it fondly for a few moments he hung it in his studio wardrobe and donned his old familiar suit. It can't be done," says Larry.

SOL LESSER and his associates in Principal Pictures will handle the distribution of the product of the Sacramento Pictures Corporation, a recently formed producing company now working at the Fine Arts studio. William H. Jobleman, erstwhile press agent who heads the new producing unit, signed a contract with Lesser this week giving Principal Pictures the exclusive right to market the films of the Sacramento concern. With this announcement it is learned that the Lesser organization will not only produce cinema products that will release the finished pictures of other companies as well.

CHRIS WITHEY has recently returned from New York where he has been directing films for Famous Players-Lasky. He is now indulging in a well-earned rest between pictures and seems to be anywhere on one of the several attractive golf courses in and about this city. Withey says that he has no announcement to make at this time nor does he plan to talk shop until he has had his full vacation.

Actual filming of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Universal's million dollar production, marks the beginning of that company's most elaborate production program in years, according to Bert Holberg, general manager at Universal City. Lon Chaney is to star in the Victor Hugo classic.

CLAIMS "SALOME" HIT NEW MARK AT N. Y. CRITERION

Nazimova in "Salome," it is claimed by Manager Charles Bryant, broke all records at the Criterion theatre, N. Y., Sunday and Monday, New Year's Eve and New Year's Night. The midnight presentation of "Salome" given on New Year's Eve brought in $1,311.25, which established a new house record, but the very next night, New Year's night, extra standing room seats were sold, bringing the gross up to $1318.75—a new motion picture record for this house at $1.50 prices. Presentations of "Salome" are given twice daily, 2:30 and 8:30.

MARY CARR HAS NEW ROLE IN LATEST FOX FEATURE

In her newest Fox production "The Custard Cup," Mary Carr, famous mother in "Over the Hill" has a role radically different from the one she portrayed in that photoplay. As Mrs. Fenfield in her latest film she plays a cheery, self-sacrificing little woman who is always ready to help her friends and neighbors.

The picture is based on a story by Florence Bingham Livingston and was published in McCull's magazine. A steamboat explosion is one of its thrilling moments. The cast includes little Miriam Battista, Myrta Bonillas, Jerry Devine, Henry Sedley, Richard Collins and others.
The Honor Roll

If the editor of the "Fremont (Neb.) Evening Tribune" never wrote another editorial on the motion picture vs. reform situation, his message published on this page this week would place him in an enviable position among those who are doing, and have done, their utmost to counteract the abuse of the hypocrites.

Perversionists there while any hesitations! Less "another world" than a score have been involved in the so-called scandals of Hollywood. What other great industry or profession can show that good a percentage in favor of morality and decency?—FREMONT (Neb.) EVENING TRIBUNE.

Screen Message No. 91

"This practice of declaring an open season on the movies all the year round has become disgusting. There are thousands of people employed in this giant industry, less than a score have been involved in the so-called scandals of Hollywood. What other great industry or profession can show that good a percentage in favor of morality and decency? —FREMONT (Neb.) EVENING TRIBUNE.

PUBLIC RIGHTS LEAGUE

Here's Your Answer to the Reform Element: Read It and Use It

Here is a newspaper editor with a message. We don't know his name. We wish we did so that we might properly express our gratitude for the general and same manner in which he has presented his subject, which you will read presently.

It is not enough that every exhibitor should read the appended editorial which was published in the "Fremont (Neb.) Evening Tribune." The theatres who fail to bring its attention of his patrons through the various edicts he possesses is lax in his duty to the industry and to the public.

Here is the editorial, read it:

Open Season on the Movies

If the world applied the same standard of morals to itself as it is trying to apply to the members of the motion picture industry, particularly in the Hollywood "studio" where the industry is centered, there might be better reason for the storm of abuse that is sweeping from four corners of the earth upon that overgrown village. If there were no utter law violators or drug addicts or perversionists in New York or Chicago or Omaha or Fremont, we would more justified in turning our shocked eyes toward that beautiful colony which is become the world's amusement factory almost overnight.

This practice of declaring an open season on the movies all the year round has become disgusting. There are thousands of people employed in this giant industry. Less than a score have been involved in the so-called scandals of Hollywood. What other great industry or profession can show that good a percentage in favor of morality and decency?

Every time a film worker steps out of the straight and narrow path, the rest of the world tries to kick props from under thousands of people who happen to be making a living in the same channel as him. There have been plenty of instances in the current news where preachers, lawyers, newspaper men, doctors, etc., were implicated in criminal proceedings, but there has been no vituperative clamor from the multitude for the disintegration of any of these professions. What manner of reasoning is it that impels us to vent our righteous indignation upon the unfortunate who seek a livelihood on the screen?

There has been no scandal in the film colonies in the last five years that has not been duplicated a hundred times over in other parts of the country. The "party" that resulted in the death of Virginia Rappe and the banishment of Roscoe Arbuckle has had its counterpart, and many times with even more fatalities, in every city of any size in America, but this is the first time one of the participants was exiled from his profession.

Jury acquitted, evidence that he was a victim of blackmailers, none of these things could save Arbuckle, because he was a movie star.

There have been many divorces among the movie folk, but what in the world would happen to poor old Dodge county, Nebraska, if our long list of sensational divorces were blazoned to the gaping public as the divorces of Los Angeles county have been? There was a bank robbery at Piru, California, recently, in which a few "extras" of the film industry were implicated, and the event was immediately heralded as "another movie scandal." How, in the name of reason, can this insignificant little affair be set above the $200,000 mint robbery in Denver or any one of the thousands of sensational bank and messenger robberies of the past few months?

If we really feel that the criminal and moral conditions of this country need reforming, and God knows they do, let's lay off Hollywood for a while and start paying a little more attention to conditions at home. We are acting like the farmer who, when he discovered that his house was afire, rushed out into the back yard and started throwing water on the hen house.

We would just quit shouting about Hollywood for a while we would very probably hear a few very distinct whispers about a few thousand Main Streets throughout this indigent land. There appears to be no real desire for the public to have a once and for all instance, that bootleg whiskey should flow any freer along the Pacific seaboard than it does in the Rocky mountains or along the Atlantic Coast. As long as women have no greater appeal for impressionable members of the opposite sex in California than in any other state of the Union the "happy needle" does not work any faster in Los Angeles than it does in Brooklyn or Topeka.

A lot of glass houses are being smashed all to pieces in this throwing of stones in the direction of the motion picture industry, and there is a strong suspicion that a lot of us are shouting so lustily about the sins of Hollywood in the hope that some of our own indiscretions may be overlooked in the shuffle.

We shall all be better off if we would stay at home and wash up our own dirty dishes instead of leaning over the back fence all day blaspheining our neighbors. We can't use a dirty broom to sweep up the mud the cat drags in. If we clean our own individual lives, it is surprising what an altogether different view we get of the other fellow's character.

No man is better fitted to discern immorality in his comrade than the man who is immoral himself.

Since the writing of the above editorial has come the news of the reinstatement of Roscoe Arbuckle by Will H. Hays, commander-in-chief of the movies. No more fitting observance of the holiday period could ever have been devised by the leaders of the industry who are seeking to reestablish the film in their art in the confidence of the public.

There are many obvious reasons why the banishment of Arbuckle has been an injustice to him and his profession, but the most important reason of all is that a jury acquittal in a regularly constituted court has restored him all the constitutional rights of citizenship, and these should have included the right of resuming the professional activities that were (Continued on page 60)
The Arbuckle Case
OTTUMWA, IA.—To the Editor:

As you are one editor who due to date has not taken a definite stand on Fatty Arbuckle, I am writing you with the touch of people back of me in a city of 25,000, expressing a view that is country wide and this is it.

In my contact with people at the doors of my theatres and with association with the people, I know they will hold it against the industry if Fatty Arbuckle is returned to the screen. It isn’t that it is a point of local option as I know exhibitions would be stopped in this city, but it cannot be argued against the facts by the best minded people, the very people we must have back of us in our business, by the smallest amount or percentage of your box office money.

The box office has been a year recoverable and we could make it clear through the Arbuckle escape and now no editor will take a stand against this intent to recirculate Arbuckle film. No editor should be afraid to take a stand against an advertiser as all advertisers are keeping an ear to the ground to see which theatre is still in the ballas and extorsion circulation and when we are all saying “you,” believe me you will always get your money back in advertising.

It is not the idea that any exhibitor, any trade paper editor, any community should set themselves as judge of Fatty’s misdeavors, but this point sticks out like a sore thumb to the industry—that it was a vicious line of carousing but when you make pictures and ask the parents of our community to send their children to see Fatty—that is in it. We reformed one man now but had a misfortune one man.

The Chicago Tribune in a recent editorial said we should think more of the public, that the Fatty but the Chicago Tribune misses the point that the screen and the stars of the screen have no control, that the public, that they are competent and worthy and speak of the better things of life—and when the screen and its stars cease to function in that manner, it will be threatened by its enemies and the box office will suffer as it did in the fall of 1921.

I am certain my Fatty and as per enclosure, I gave my patrons my view early in December. Since then, there has been no evidences of pictures in the papers and I enclose one that has been written by the editor of the Lee Syndicate papers of this city. Pick up a newspaper and it is the same line and I contend that this is harmful.

I picked up a tank town Oklahoma paper which has the line on Fatty from McAlester. We must not get too sympathetic with Arbuckle and Schenck and Paramount and hurt our own business,—Dwight Charles, Circle Amusement Corporation, Ottumwa, Ia.

Advocates a Little Privacy
WICHITA FALLS, TEX.—To the Editor:

The Fattest thing of my 14 years papers and the mutiling about “clean—up” in pictures and admitting it to the public. Acknowledging the fact to the public, if it was or is necessary, was the worst thing they could have done to the industry. This is really not the “funniest” but the “meanest” experience.

This is the only industry that publishes everything wrong or right. Is it necessary for the neighbors to all know when you clean house? Confidence, we cleaned two and a half years ago.

We are now about where we were in the days when the theatre was a pretty bad place to go, in the eyes of the ministers. When things go wrong, why not a private house cleaning?

Let’s not make all the people “theatre—shy.” Too many of our poor devils to starve more million dollar kings to manage us. Jones pays the freight. Why not induce a little business and not give them the instead of many “made over night, know all” high salaried men? We have drifted from “The Amusement of the Masses” to the “Entertainment of the Classes.”

This word “cleanup” has above cleaned the industry financially. Too much noise. The world thinks we’re bad enough and the more we’re worse? There are bad ones in every trade. Let’s forget the cleanup and instead think to the masses. Too much noise. Let Fatty come back. If he hasn’t a right to a living, he should have been hung instead of acquitted—W. J. Wilke, Plaza theatre, Wichita Falls, Tex.

Must Work to Make Money
ENFIELD, N. H.—To the Editor:

I am enclosing some reports and more to come. I consider your trade paper by the best and “What the Picture Did for Me” about the best idea I have seen in my 19 years of exhibitor experience.

I am in a pretty small town—about 1,200 people and run three nights per week but want to say that I think the ordinary program picture is doomed as the whole trouble or mostly so today with exhibitors is “How cheap can I buy film.”

Now I claim that in order to keep the public interested in pictures and keep them coming, you must keep everlasting at that and that is to say that for every single picture and show you give there and give them their money’s worth. Don’t figure all the time how cheap a picture you can show but how great a profit you can give them and still make a fair profit. Use your head. Remember if you don’t make a fair profit, you are very bad business men. Some other fellow will come along some day and will.

Insure your own business by at all times treating your public absolutely square. Then you have nothing to fear from any outside element.

I run a 1,000 seat and market affords at all times. It’s always the only question with me “Can I afford to buy that picture, will I get a little profit?” I have run all the big pictures and with only a few, very few, exceptions, made a fair profit.

I claim to have a model theatre for a small town seating 400 people, with a Wuritzer $5,000 Model K organ and a single manual played playing and giving much better results on the average than six pictures to a little town; eight piece orchestra; two Simplex latest type motor driven machines, and claim to have the most modern and most up to date equipped theatres outside the very big cities. That’s what you have got to show today and any business.

The day has gone by when any old piano and one machine jumping pictures all over the screen, will do, gentleman. The picture business today is the healthiest in my opinion it has ever been but you have got to have a decent, clean orderly theatre first, good projection, good lighting and the new type of movie. The best picture will lose last, pick from the best pictures out. Then you will get them.—C. L. Brase, one of the finest, largest, can be and Enfield, N. H.

His Funniest Experience
OWOSSO, MICH.—To the Editor:

The funniest thing in the seven years as a theatre owner was when we were foolish enough to sign a contract with a film company. At this writing, their pictures are 50 per cent higher than anyone we use. At that time—L. D. Badger, Strand theatre, Owoos, Mich.

Disagrees With Editorial
WASHINGTON, IND.—To the Editor:

Amusements of the Masses?—I disagree with Mr. Hayes. The fact that he mustn’t have a good deal of a company, the best picture in the world, that doesn’t mean we have to agree with the word of utter nonsense, such as Mr. Hayes—L. H. Odenkirk, Ben Eaker Amusement Co., Washington, Ind.

He Holds the Sack
PEKIN, ILL.—To the Editor:

Mr. Arbuckle is the funniest experience in the movie business, as an exhibitor. Don’t remember anything funny happening in that time in regard to the business. Kept me awake 2 hours per day to keep head above water. It works. But most of the business from stars and others, down to the exhibitor is a magnificent steal. We get to the exhibitor, he holds the sack for all and what have you outside. No one looks for and expects to find more of a Yuletide spirit in the Christmas number of trade publications—L. H. Odenkirk, Ben Eaker Amusement Co., Washington, Ind.

It’s Hard to Please
BROKEN BOW, ARK.—To the Editor:

My funniest experience as a theatre owner is trying to please everyone and have them compliment the pictures that they come out when I pay a big price for the film. I don’t mend it personally to patrons and the pictures do not come up to expectation I have but not made the pictures they think the picture by the price you pay for it and per cent of the so-called specials should be zero when the exhibition is over. A picture may go well in the large cities but fail down in the small towns. The main thing is to read the comment in the trade papers and do what you can in towns your size and class. But you fail down on them get up and after the other one stranger hits you down—S. B. Callahan, Arrow theatre, Broke Bow, Okla.

Jaspers—My brother has been in Afs for the last year, and has just come home. He has been hunting tigers.

Bubbs—How exciting! Did he have a luck.

Jaspers—Rather—Rather! He never was any tigers.—“Topics of the Day” Films.
American Releasing
My Old Kentucky Home, with a special cast.—Fine. Liked by all patrons. Ran this as a special at ten and thirty cents.—G. Durbin, Majestic theatre, Perry, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Jan. of the Big Snows, with a special cast.—A poor offering. Not as good as a lot of other Curwoods.—Scenic theatre, Appleton, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—What showed this is a loss as far as money is concerned, but are not sorry, because we consider that we never had a more satisfied audience and it is a big advertisement for any theatre. Especially smaller towns.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Grandma's Boy, with Harold Lloyd.—Hardly average business for three days. A Lester Cuneo western in my Arcade theatre outside Grandma's Boy. The showing of this picture here was one of those mysteries of the show business. We expected, and had a right to expect, big business, as every kind of advertising used in the business, but failed as a box office attraction. But of course did not have to entertain from a business standpoint, as the story and production is 100 per cent.—W. H. Erenre, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

F. B. O.
In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Fine picture with a magnetic title. Everyone pleased. Four days to record—breaking business. I screened the next F. B. O., The Third Alarm. Oh, boy, what a picture—a knockout.—C. J. Scott, Beverly theatre, Janesville, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—A good program picture. Advertising possibilities will get them in. Don't pay too much.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Holtville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Name of the Law, with a special cast.—Ran three days after changing dates twice, which ran us into Christmas week with Christmas programs in opposition. Had small house. 100 per cent pleased. Best picture for a long time, but lost money.—I. J. Kendall, Victory theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Son of a Wolf, with a special cast.—Nothing to it. If you pay more than program price you get stung.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Holtville, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

March Issue Composition In Progress

Gentlemen: I wish to tell you that your "Box Office Record" has been very valuable to me in helping me to make a selection of pictures. You can talk to a salesman much better when you pull the "Record" on him.

J. W. BAUER, Willow Theatre.

Gentlemen: I received this morning the "Box Office Record," with which I am more than pleased. Am sorry I have not had it all the past year, my first year in the business.

L. A. BOYD, Rex Theatre.

Creston, B. C. Dec. 21, 1922.

Gentlemen: I wish to thank you for the copy of the "Box Office Record" and I want to say right here that it is the best out and the biggest help that an exhibitor could have. I certainly work mine overtime and find that it pays.

F. C. RODGERS, Grand Theatre.

Gentlemen: Kindly send me by return mail the latest copy of the "Box Office Record." I have the March, 1922, copy and have found it to be very "in sight" in weight to hold, as a box office and booker's hand book. Have looked most of my pictures with the aid of this record and have found it to be well worth twice its price.

Poet Laureate Ballot Complete; Cast Vote for Choice Next Week

With 19 entries representing 14 states and Canada, nomination of candidates for election to the chair of Poet Laureate to “What the Picture Did For Me” is brought to a close this week.

Next week, in this space, a ballot bearing the names of the 19 contributors, several of whom modestly declined intention of entering the contest, will be presented for your convenience in indicating your selection.

The following week or as soon thereafter as votes may be counted results will be recorded.

On account of space requirements it will be impossible to reprint any of the contributions. Your “Herald” file contains the complete works of all the claimants.

The ballot will appear but once.

Votes indicated in any other manner cannot be counted.

DON'T MISS NEXT WEEK’S ISSUE.

picture that is worth the price of admission alone. Fully of comedy and it will surely please them. Madge Bellamy very good in female role. Boost it big and it will back up your recommendations.—

Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre. Chicago, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart.

—Print supplied me somewhat dark in places, otherwise better than The Silent Call. Good business on both pictures. Harry Holand, Bishop theatre, Bishop, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart

—A very pleasing drama with a good story. Don’t be afraid. It will please any audience.—Ralph D. Kinrade, Mervo theatre, West Bend, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Brawn of the North, with Strongheart

—A good picture, but not as good as The Silent Call. Will please, though, at regular prices.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Hotville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Omar the Tent Maker, with Guy Bate Post.

—As a production, good; as entertainment, poor.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Kindred of the Dust, with Miriam Cooper.—This is an excellent production and drew good business. Advertise it strong and it will make you money as well as friends.—L. F. Stacy, Mascot theatre, Mobridge, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Hurracane’s Gal, with Dorothy Phillips. —One of that kind that makes you know you’ve seen a real picture. While it is melodrama, yet it contains the stuff that pleases, and that’s what we want to show. Good in every way.—Chas. W. Lewis, J. O. O. F. theatre, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Sonny, with Richard Barthelmess.—Good.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

The Masquerader, with Guy Bates Post.—Audience not entirely pleased with this picture. Supporting cast very poor.—J. E. Kirk, Grand theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge.—Lacked a great deal of being another Somin Through. Good business first two days of a three-days run.—R. V. Erk, Temple theatre, Ilion, N. Y.—General patronage.

The Eternal Flame, with Norma Talmadge. —As near 100 per cent perfect as a picture can be made. Lots and lots of nice compliments. Splendid business two days. Made some money with an advance in admission. Book it by all means.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sign on the Door, with Norma Talmadge.—A little old, but nevertheless a good picture and a good business bringer. Rental reasonable.—C. A. Riva, Patsime theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Fools First, a Marshall Neilan production. —Would class it fair.—Rex Theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Dinty, a Marshall Neilan production. —A good picture. Will please people generally. Would say 100% picture.—

Unique theatre, Bricelyn, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

What Women Love, with Annette Kellerman. —Good comedy-drama with splendid under-water scenes. It pleases all.—Auditorium theatre, Sugar Land, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Sky Pilot, with a special cast— This and Harold Lloyd in Get Out and Get Under made a fine Christmas program and drew good business. Neither films did in at small houses. Johnson Bros., Johnsonian theatre, Rupley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Molly O, with Mabel Normand.—Old picture, but good. Had a new print and made a favorable turn. Probably be afraid to boost it.—M. J. Babin, Fairlyand theatre, White Castle, La.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Question of Honor, with Anita Stewart.—This picture contains good story; action, comedy and pleased very well.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Married Life, a Mack Sennett production.—A good comedy. Starts off slow, but redeems itself in the next three reels. Will make them all laugh.—Auditorium theatre, Sugar Land, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ten Dollar Raise, with a special cast.—They don’t make them any better. It is good comedy and general entertainment.—H. L. Burrell, Pierce theatre, Hawley, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Repeated this on Christmas day to good business. Received many compliments. You can not go wrong on this boy: book it.—L. R. Stacy, Mascot theatre, Mobridge, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince production.—Good.—Rex theatre, Virden, Ill.—General patronage.

Hail the Woman, a Thomas H. Ince production.—This is some picture. Played on Christmas day and is a good one for the day. Received compliments on having a picture like this on Christmas day, good attendance and am sorry I did not play two days.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Lying Lips, a Thomas H. Ince production.—This picture sure has the punch. Could not get a better title. Shipwreck scene very good. Book it and push. It will please.—Rex theatre, Eternal patronage.

Salvation Nell, with Pauline Starke.—Played this for benefit of church and am glad we did. A very good picture, but one that will not appeal to the average audience. Good for church people.—Chas. W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. theatre, Grand Grange, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Bob Hampton of Place, a Marshall Neilan production.—Well liked by all but me. I got a bum print and that sure will take the joy out of a picture, but they charge just the same for a bad print as a good one.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Way of a Woman, a Marshall Neilan production.—An excellent mother picture that received many compliments.—Bert Norton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Playthings of Destiny, with Anita Stewart.—Fine picture. A little old, but you make no mistake in running it if you are not already in it. Will please.—R. V. Andresen, Riofio theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Midnight Bell, with Charles Ray—
Excellent picture.—Bert Benton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

Tol'able David, with Richard Barthelmess.—D. W. Boyd, Manager, said it was a picture that is splendid and one that they will discuss favorably for some time afterwards. Acting of principal characters extra fine.—Arthur Kern, Coogan theatre, Granville, N. Y.—General patronage.

Mamma's Affair, with Constance Tal-madge.—They said this was no good, and after they saw it they stayed away so I agree with them. It's the poorest of a lot of poor ones that Constance has made of late.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Golden Snare, with a special cast. Another Curwood Knockout. Ran this Sunday and Christmas and had packed houses at all shows.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Peck's Bad Boy, with Jackie Coogan.—Drew good business.—Rex theatre, Vir- ginia, Ill.—General patronage.

The Man from Montana, with Charles Ray.—Positively in a class by itself. The poor- est thing by way of entertainment we ever perpetrated on our unsuspecting public.—E. H. Boler, Temple, Steubenville, Ohio.—General patronage.

The Wonderful Thing, with Norma Talmadge.—We will please those who like Norma, but she has made several better pictures than this one.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harris- burg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Go and Get It, a Marshall Neilan produc- tion.—A picture with a punch. It holds the interest throughout.—Auditorium the- atre, Sugar Land, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

R. S. V. P., with Charles Ray.—Not so good and not so bad. If they like Ray real well, it will go over, but oh, how this boy is losing his popularity in this town. A few more bad ones and he is done.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harris- burg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge. Christmas and two following days. Grandy's the last of the week. Largest week's business in the history of the house. Full-page ad in one paper, quar- ter-page in two others, and six-inch lo- cal. Lots of Mesmerized posters and lobby, did the business. If you can't burn 'em up with these two programs then you have got an asbestos audience. The only fault of Smilin' Through is all that is claimed for it and leaves an impression that lingers. Norma is excellent. By George, he's fine. What's the matter with him? Grandma's Boy satisfies, but would have been just as well in three spoons. It fails to measure up to the press agent's description for the establishment, that is, that it's Never Weaken or A Sailor Made Man. If you buy it, buy it right. Don't pay a lot of money. It's worth just three reels of excellent comedy, that's all. In contract- ing for pictures now I have learned to figure the discount on press agent's statements and figure that it pays. Barnum wasn't in it.—J. C. Jenkins, Auditorium theatre, Neighn. Ill.—General patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—We are near Omaha. Many saw pic- ture there and saw it for the third time. A picture near the perfection point—clever and inspiring.—C. E. Byars, Opera House, Valley, Neb.—General patronage.

Smilin' Through, with Norma Talmadge.—It is the best picture ever shown in this house. The jolly pictures and best acted pic- ture I ever played. Also the greatest lemon at the box office. Good business first night, nothing the second, which is a sign the picture does not please. If you have a high class audience, play this. Made only for those who think.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tom Mix in Arabia, with Tom Mix.—Entirely good. Something different. Plenty of action. Fine settings. It will please most all kinds of audiences. Not to be taken seriously, but entertainment.—H. C. Bartle, Beebe's theatre, Enfield, New Hampshire.—Small town patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with William Farn- num.—This picture I class as good and pleased here.—Adolph Kohn, Pastime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Moonshine Valley, with Farnnum.—The best Farnnum in a long time, but nothing like the pictures that made him a box office attraction. Why don't they get some red-blooded stories for this guy? He is losing his market. He doesn't make the right kind of pictures.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

West of Chicago, with Charles Jones. As good as anything Jones has made. If they like "Buck" this one will please them. Plenty of action and gun play.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harris- burg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Tony, with Tom Mix.—This is some picture. Boost it, raise admission price, and it will make you money.—L. R. Stacy, Mascot theatre, Moberidge, S. Dak.—Small town patronage.

Mixed Faces, with William Russell.—A program picture. We have seen it over here, but Russell, with the right kind of story, such as The Crusader, is a very fine face for his house. Made only.—Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Glam' o' Dawn, with John Gilbert.—This is my second Gilbert. Both pictures good. This is a dandy, as they told me so.—Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

The Last Trail, with a special cast.—This is the kind of a picture that should pack any house. Good in every particular. Story, action, photography and direction all O. K. If you haven't as yet, by all means book it.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Self Made Man, with William Rus- sell.—This was practically a repeat show here, but Russell, with the right kind of story, he will like this one.—J. S. Roche, Empire theatre, Rainy River, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

To a Finish, with Charles Jones.—If you want action, you find it in this one. It's a dandy. Play it. Went big. Some new stuff. Good fights. Some good scenes. It's O. K.—Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

Trooper O'Neil, with Charles Jones,—I class this as a very good picture and one that will please all Jones admirers. The kid my people here want.—Adolph Kohn, Pastime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—General patronage.

Whatever She Wants, with Eileen Percy.—Good program picture. Percy liked here.—G. Durbin, Majestic theatre, Perry, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Perfect New Year's Resolution

The greatest aid to the small ex- hibitor is your "What the Picture Did For Me." You cannot get the benefit, espe- cially during these hard times when we can't get to the ex- changes and see some of the pic- tures we buy.

I have been careless about re- porting, but as a New Years reso- lution I will report more often. I may be the means of saving some Brother Exhibitor the humiliation of a bad show or helping him to do a good one.

I am not a poet, so can't verse my thoughts as some do, but I am with the exhibitors, one and all, for better pictures. Tell us of the good ones and the bad ones.

The "Exhibitors Herald" failed to show up Saturday, which is the usual day it arrives here, and has not to this date and we are wondering why. If the subscription has expired please advise us to that effect. We really have forgotten our previous subscription date.

We would appreciate it very much if you would send us the last issue, and let them come forward as usual, because we do not want to miss a single issue. I have been like a fish out of water this week, just because I haven't had the "Herald."

pire theatre, Rainy River, Ont. Canada.—Small town patronage.

Turn to the Right, a Rex Ingram production. Extra good show. Got the pep. Don’t it boost too hard. Got just the right amount of comedy in it to make a good one. It’s the best this year. Better than The Four Horsemen for me.—F. N. Harris, Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Fascination, with Mae Murray.—Excellent. Just what my patrons want. Give us more like this one.—Keeling Bros., Best theatre, Santa Anna, Texas.—Neighborhood patronage.

They Like ’Em Rough, with Viola Dana.—If your patrons like ’em rough this one will more than please them, for it’s a rough and tumble all the way. Starts with a football game, ends with a fight. A story of the big Northwoods. Please.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Stroke of Midnight, with a special cast.—It doesn’t pay to go opposite from what they say in the “What the Picture Did for Me” department. I played this one, and am sorry for it now. Keep away from the big burlesque.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Four Horsemen, with a special cast.—Wonderful. Play it and make money.—H. L. Burrill, Garreck theatre, Hayley, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Right that Failed, with Bert Lytell.—For me the best Lytell I have had. It’s a dandy prize fight picture. Your pugs will like it, and it will not offend your regular fans.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

When Knighthood Was In Flower, with Marion Davies.—I scraped up all the loose change I could get hold of and booked this picture for the first three days of 1923. I borrowed a few extra dollars from my wife for extra advertising matter. She kicked on letting me have it, and said I should have taken the money loaned for the picture and bought a new Ford. I had the picture pretty well advertised, and on New Years night I went down to the show “all set” for the usual costume hop. Like most of the small town exhibitors I had but very little faith in costume pictures. The show was scheduled to start at 7:45 p. m. About dark they started to come, the lame, the halt, the rich and the poor— in automobiles, vehicles and on foot. They seemed to come from every direction, and most all of them at once. At 7:15 the standing room was all sold and the box-office was closed. In my years as an exhibitor I have never shown a picture that gave the general satisfaction that this one did. I had nothing but praise from all who saw it. Mr. Exhibitor, if you want a picture that will give your house more prestige than it has ever had, I advise you to get this one. It’s worth every cent you pay for it, if you don’t make a dime on it. The attendance held up each night and for one week.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric theatre, Greenville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

When Knighthood Was In Flower, with, Marion Davies.—Big business at a dollar top. Not what we heard. Some said The Prisoner of Zenda or To Have and to Hold were just as good or better, but admitted that “Knighthood” was the greatest picture of the season. The best Marion Davies has ever done. Don’t let them ask too much for it.—A. S. Widman, Carnival theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Back Home and Broke, with Thomas Meighan.—Best Meighan picture this season. Everybody loved in his praise Warsaw.—The old and new patrons.—A. S. Widman, Carnival theatre, Warsaw, Ind.—General patronage.

Making A Man, with Jack Holt.—Good picture that will prove a nice evening’s entertainment. Story teaches a good moral. Equally as good as When Satan Sleeps.—Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, I1l.—General patronage.

Singed Wings, with special cast.—Holiday gave this extra package as whole not so pleasing.—Eulyn M. Simms, New Family theatre, Adrian, Mich.—General patronage.

The Old Homestead, with Theodoro Roberts.—Old and young will enjoy! Cyclone scene very realistic. Rober’s character which he portrays.—Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield theatre, Chicago, I1l.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ghost Breaker, with Wallace Reid.—Flawless program picture but paid too much money for it. I got stung the “Famous 41.”—J. A. Holmes, Arca theatre, Holtville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Daughter of Luxury, with Agn Ayres.—Clever semi-crook society play. Seemed to please, and fair business.—Eulyn M. Simms, New Family theatre, Adrian, Mich.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil De Mille production.—A real honest to goodness picture. Many favorable comments. Pleased everybody.—George S. Elks, Universal Van V. Erk, Temple theatre, Ilion, N. Y.—General patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil De Mille production.—This is a winner.—Get a copy.—W. Steige, Liberty theatre, General Film Co.—Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Manslaughter, a Cecil De Mille production.—One of the most timely and clever of the Hal Roach comedies ever made, but we have run most all of the big big. It’s a picture sure to appeal to all kids of people.—C. L. Beede, Beede’s Enchantment, with Marion Davies—very fine.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid—of all late Reid pictures, pleased far sizes crowds. Lots of pep action.—R. V. Erk, Temple theatre, fourtieth Avenue, general patronage.

Across the Continent, with Wallace Reid.—Drew full house and pleased.—J. A. Riva, Pastime theatre, Tilton, N.—Small town patronage.

Is Matrimony a Failure. (Paramount), this special cast of a good comedy—although with no moral or lesson.—A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Holtville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Rent Free, with Wallace Reid.—Here's another one of those high-cost-of-production pictures. It must have cost three or four hundred dollars to make this one. We half the picture was made on the set of the tenement house after which the cast of three gathered up a few traps and proceeded to finish the rest of the picture without leaving one room.—R. T. Silverman Family Theatre, Greenville, O.—Neighborhood patronage.

For the Defense, with Ethel Clayton.—Hurrah for Ethel. She's the bread winner. She doesn't fail to draw the crowds.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, la.—Neighborhood patronage.

For the Defense, with Ethel Clayton.—very good program picture.—Bertorton, Kozy theatre, Eureka, Ill.—General patronage.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton.—Booked The Sheik. They sent me The Idol of the North instead. Used a heavy mailing list advertising The Sheik. Imagine our disappointment. And yet they can pull stunts like this! Old barroom dances are ancient history here.—R. K. Lang, Lyric theatre, Cobb, Wis.—Small town patronage.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton.—A very fair picture of the North. Will please the average audience.—Unique theatre, Briceyln, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Idol of the North, with Dorothy Dalton.—A splendid picture, even though it is getting old.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Good Provider, a Cosmopolitan production.—Very good feature, but not as good as Humoresque. Cannot class as a special.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Very fine entertainment.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—It is too bad they did not give this picture a better title. Did not draw as it should on this account. A very good production.—P. R. Matson, Crystal theatre, Flandreau, S. Dak.—General patronage.

Saturday Night, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—Was a dandy. Push it. but don't pay too much.—F. N. Harris, Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich.—Small town patronage.

One Glorious Day, with Will Rogers.—This picture is nodrawing card. Consider it the poorest we have had for some time.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Tell Everything, with a special cast.—Very nice picture.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Don't Tell Everything, with a special cast.—Society comedy just to make it a good Sunday night picture. You can't go wrong on this for a small town if the rent isn't too much. I paid too much.—A. W. Sage, Masonic theatre, What Cheer, Iowa.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Ordeal, with Agnes Ayres.—This is a fine program picture, above the average, and Miss Ayres makes good with our patrons.—C. H. Thompson, Plattsburg Opera House, Plattsburg, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton—Some said it was good.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beyond, with Ethel Clayton.—Clayton always pleases. Patrons like this picture. Did not see it myself.—S. A. Berger, Star theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Moran of the Lady Letty, with Dorothy Dalton.—All Dorothy Dalton's pictures get them and even in stormy weather. This one no exception, and pleased.—A. R. Hart, Opera theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Moran of the Lady Letty, with Dorothy Dalton.—Good sea story. Cast also has Rodolph Valentino. This is not a special, but will get by as a good program show. Very good photography.—W. T. Biggs, Unique theatre, Anita, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Forbidden Fruit, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—It is a dandy. Fine acting. As good a picture as I have used. Gets the money, but do not pay fancy price.—F. N. Harris, Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Beauty's Worth, with Marion Davies.—Wonderful picture and should go over everywhere.—Liberty theatre, Kalispell, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

Beauty's Worth, with Marion Davies.—This is a real production. Fine and will appeal to all better class of patrons. Paramount, made an error in not making this one of their super-specials as it's much better than many of their so-called spectacles.—C. H. Thompson, Plattsburg Opera House, Plattsburg, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

O'Malley of the Mounted, with William S. Hart.—Good picture. An extra good one.—H. L. Burrill, Garrick theatre, Hawley, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

"ONLY A SHOP GIRL"
DAMATIC SCENE in the new George Fitzmaurice production for Paramount, "Kick In." Betty Compson, Bert Lytell and May McAvoy are featured.

Brieclyn, Minn.—Neighborhod patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—From an artistic standpoint this picture has few equals. Drew good business and gave splendid satisfaction.—P. R. Matson, Crystal theatre, Flandreau.

S. Dak.—General patronage.

Fool's Paradise, a Cecil B. De Mille production.—A little old, but another one of the real super-specials, and one of the very best of the big pictures, and will suit both the highbrow and the others.—C. L. Beede, Beede's theatre, Enfield, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Ladies Must Live, with Betty Compson.—Patrons didn't like it.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—General patronage.

Experience, with Richard Barthelmess.—Here is a picture that is as near 100 per cent as a picture can be. Every young man should see this picture as it carries a great lesson. A good matinee put the night show over and we actually made some money. Book it and boost it.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Pride of Palomar, a Cosmopolitan production.—Held up big for four days. People raved about it.—Eulyn M. Simms, New Family theatre, Adrian, Mich.—General patronage.

Sentimental Tommy, with a special cast.—Another long drawn out feature to Paramount's credit. Had two patrons say they liked it. Too long and tiresome.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Hell Diggers, with Wallace Reid.—Good. Better than most Reids.—J. W. Andresen, Rialto theatre, Cozad, Nebr.—Neighborhood patronage.

White and Unmarried, with Thomas Meighan.—Good program picture.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The False Road, with David Powell.

If I ever book another English or any foreign play, it will be because I do not know it at the time. While this is fair, we do not want them out here.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

King, Queen, Joker, with Sidney Chaplin.—Jokes of Johnny Neeve, no plot. Everyone disregarded and walked out on it. Leave it alone.—H. G. Schmidt, Palace theatre, Long Lake, Nebr.—General patronage.

Find the Woman, a Cosmopolitan production.—A good mystery picture. Pleased those that saw it, but failed to draw.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Conquest of Canaan, with Thomas Meighan.—Well liked by the few that saw it. Paramount made so many long draggy features in '21 that it is hard to get a good one any more. They used too much film for the features.—C. A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Law and the Woman, with Betty Compson.—A good picture with a good cast. Pleased those that saw it. Business only fair. Nothing unusual, however, as business is still off with us about 50 per cent.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Gilded Lily, with Mae Murray.—You get a kick out of this one for it does not end like you think it is going to. Mae can sure dance, and she wears her clothes, be they many or few, just like they grew on her. Fair business.—J. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

Cappy Ricks, with Thomas Meighan.—Did not draw as well as it should. It is a first class picture in our estimation.—Johnson Bros., Johannesburg theatre, Ripley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Always Audacious, with Wallace Reid.—A very fine picture. Reid is a real actor.—Scenic theatre, Appleton, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Under the Lash, with Gloria Swanson.

Pathé

Her Unwilling Husband, with Blanche Sweet.—Good program picture.—K. Lang, Lyric Theatre, Cobb, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Nanook of the North, with a special cast.—A remarkable picture, but a few patrons will enjoy it better in warmer weather than in winter. Had lots of good comments.—W. M. Ward, Starlight Theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Without Benefit of Clergy, with a special cast.—Nothing to it. Old as the hills. Played this with a Harold Lloyd comedy and got by financially.—R. K. Lang, Lyric Theatre, Cobb, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Playgoers

Through the Storm, with Edith Stockton.—A good clean entertaining pleasing picture. Better than average program picture.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade Theatre, Hotville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

One Night in Paris, with a special cast.—Patrons did not like this one. Very definite.—T. J. Hulsey, Unique Theatre, Peacock, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Hills of Missing Men, with J. P. McGowan.—A good western. If your trade likes Westerns get this one.—A. A. Holmes, Arcade Theatre, Hotville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Pasteboard Crown, with a special cast.—This is nothing but a poor one. Lay off.—T. J. Hulsey, Unique Theatre, Peacock, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Tracks, with a special cast.—A very good western program picture.—J. A. Holmes, Arcade Theatre, Hotville, Cal.—Neighborhood patronage.

Realart

Dawn of the East, with Alice Brady.—A very good program picture with an exceptionally good story, but that's about all. Not much outside appeal on this one.—H. D. Wightman, Pastime Theatre, Warren, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Room and Board, with Constance Binney.—Good.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's Theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Such a Little Queen, with Constance Binney.—Nothing to it.—C. A. Kelley Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Truthful Liar, with Wanda Hawley.—A fair program picture which shows Hawley off to advantage, but not up to her other productions.—Auditorium Theatre, Sugar Land, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Speed Girl, with Bebe Daniels.—Patrons liked this one.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's Theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

A Heart to Let, with Justine Johnston.—The best Johnstone picture we've ever shown. Lots of favorable comments.—J. Burford, Princess Theatre, Doniphan, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Love Is An Awful Thing, with Owe Moore.—A good comedy drama, providing clean entertainment, and it's almost as much as Reports Missing.—A. S. Widaman, Centennial.
Exhibitors Will is and thought and by Lyford, during age. Reported Missing, with Owen Moore. One of the best pictures of the year. One continuous laugh. By all means play it. —Auditorium Theatre, Sugar Land, Tex. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Ruling Passion, with George Arliss. —While this picture is not a big drawing card it is one that pleases and should be shown in every theatre owing to the good moral it teaches. —P. R. Mason, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. Dak. —General patronage.

Orphans of the Storm, a D. W. Griffith production. —Pretty good picture of its kind (costume), but rental too high. —Liberty Theatre, Kalsispell, Mont. —Neighborhood patronage.

Chivalrous Charlie, with Eugene O'Brien. —A good comedy that pleases old and young. —Auditorium Theatre, sugar Land, Tex. —Neighborhood patronage.

Up the Road with Sally, with Constance Talmadge. —Fair comedy picture. —J. W. Boatwright, Radio Theatre, Ozark, Mo. —Neighborhood patronage.

A Fool and His Money, with Eugene O'Brien. —A good picture. Film old, shot pieces, and could not show it all. —W. L. Lyford, Gem Theatre, West Helena, Ark. —Neighborhood patronage.

Conceit, with a special cast. —One good scene and several comments. Not one vapid. Lost money. Paid five bucks for picture. (Coupon). Sure is a card and worth the money you bet. —J. W. Boatright, Radio Theatre, Ozark, Mo. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Wolf, with a special cast. —nobody that doesn't know any better an to play such an old one ought to get un. I did and paid for it by having to kick. Photography so dark it couldn't see anything. —Harry Holoboll, Jaxine Theatre, Imlay City, Mich. —Small town patronage.

United Artists

Orphans of the Storm, a D. W. Griffith production. —Pretty good picture of its kind (costume), but rental too high. —Liberty Theatre, Kalsispell, Mont. —Neighborhood patronage.

A Tailor Made Man, with Charles Ray. —This is the best Ray picture I ever ran. Played to good business two days. Boost it and it will make you money. —L. R. Stacy, Mascot Theatre, Mobridge, S. D. —Small town patronage.

Dream Street, a D. W. Griffith production. —I have much about this picture in these columns so I thought I would tell you that it is very good and you should get it for program price as it is a little. It is one hard one. —J. S. Roche, Empire Theatre, Rainy River, Ont., Canada. —Small town patronage.

Universal

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny. —Fast action melodrama with story well worked together. Horse race very exciting, but good don't need to advertise it. —Chas. H. Ryan, Garfield Theatre, Chicago, Ill. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Kentucky Derby, with Reginald Denny. —Ran this two days. Lost money first day, but business nearly doubled second day. Pleased all who came. —C. A. Riva, Tilton, N. H. —Small town patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean. —Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean. —A very good picture, well done and scenery good. But like any other special high priced. —H. L. Burrill, Garrick Theatre, Hawley, Minn. —Neighborhood patronage.

Under Two Flags, with Priscilla Dean. —Very good picture. Please and drew good business. A special in every way. Can't go wrong on this one. —C. J. Goetz, Beverly Theatre, Janesville, Wis. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Lavender Bath Lady, with Gladys Walton. —Fair program picture. Walton pictures not as good as they used to be. —J. W. Andresen, Rialto Theatre, Cozad, Neb. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Lavender Bath Lady, with Gladys Walton. —The good picture. Walton pictures not as good as they used to be. —J. W. Andresen, Rialto Theatre, Cozad, Neb. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Lavender Bath Lady, with Gladys Walton. —A good entertaining program picture. Pleased the majority of our patrons. —W. C. Ward, Starlight Theatre, Corning, Ark. —Neighborhood patronage.

Forsaking All Others, with a special cast. —Cullen Landis, June Elvidge and Colleen Moore. Universal sure fooled us all on this one. Three good stars with no story to work on. Patrons walked out. Poor program picture. —Harry Holoboll, Liberty Theatre, Marlette, Mich. —Small town patronage.

Another Man's Shoes, with Herbert Rawlinson. —Rather familiar plot with citizens of the usual mythical kingdom over in the U. S. but so well put over by Rawlinson and Barbara Bedford and good directing that it was thoroughly pleasing. —P. G. Estee, Fad Theatre, Brookings, S. D. —Neighborhood patronage.

Broad Daylight, with Lois Wilson. —A real good program picture which pleased my patrons. All comments were favorable. —Adolph Kohn, Pastime Theatre, Granville, N. Y. —Small town patronage.

The Black Bag, with Herbert Rawlinson. —A very good program feature. Should please the majority. —A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla. —Small town patronage.

DUSTIN FARNUM gets the drop on his adversary in his William Fox production, "Three Who Paid," Colin Campbell directed.

One you can't go wrong on. Book and boost it—W. M. Ward, Starlight Theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Lone Chance, with Hoot Gibson—A good western and is 100 cent pictures. Book it. Hoot takes well here with the kids.—H. A. Felps, Comet Theatre, Shelton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney—I agree with the boys who call this merely a program picture. Chaney's work is good, but the wolf fight is a frost—simply someone chasing a team of lightning bugs around in the dark. The story is rather heavy and depressing and needs a good comedy to balance it up. No comments on it either way here.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime Theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—A very good north woods picture, but don't pay too much for it like I did.—J. S. Roche, Empire Theatre, Rainy River, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

The Married Flapper, with Marie Prevost.—A good one. All well pleased with it. My people like the Universal, Program mixed up just right.—F. N. Harris, Amuse Theatre, Hart, Mich.—Small town patronage.

R. G. Kisch, Scenic Theatre, Appleton, Wisc.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Storm, with House Peters.—One of the best pictures produced by any company. Will go over better the second day than the first.—W. M. Ward, Starlight Theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Bear Cat, with Hoot Gibson.—Just like all Gibsons—good, but failed to draw.

The Storm, with House Peters.—Very good, but rated too high. It will get the business, but are disappointed as they are led to look for something that never turns up. Do not pay too much.

Ward.—This is by far the poorest of Gibson we have had. Usually he is exceptionally good, but cannot see where this one got its title. Another thing, the photography is too dark. It is hard to see it on the screen. You are all wrong, Mr. Laemmle, in making so many dark pictures,—C. H. Powers, Strand Theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.—R. R. town patronage.

Ridin' Wild, with Hoot Gibson.—Has Hoot in the role of a Quaker youth. Good western and pleased. Edna Murphy was excellent support.—P. G. Estee, End Theatre, Brookings, S. D.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trimmed, with Gladys Walton.—This is a good one, in fact all of the Universal programs I have run have got me fair money as to cost.—F. N. Harris, Amuse Theatre, Hart, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Afraid to Fight, with Frank Mayo.—The kind of picture that pleases everybody.—W. T. Lyford, Gem Theatre, West Helena, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Man Who Married His Own Wife, with Frank Mayo.—Good story, good plot and good photography, plus the personality of the star, makes this a good subject to play.—Gibson—Theatre, Antwerp, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Opened Shutters, with Edith Roberts.—Played to a good house. Ninety per cent pleased. One of Miss Roberts' best Book it, brother.—I. J. Kendall, Victory Theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Second Hand Rose, with Gladys Walton.—A very good program picture.—W. M. Ward, Starlight Theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Out of the Silent North, with Frank Mayo.—Have played Mayo in far better features than this, while this is fair.—C. A. Kelley, Rex Theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Conflict, with Francis Dean.—A picture full of thrills, but ended too abruptly. Audience pleased if good attention is sign.—I. J. Kendall, Victory Theatre, Milledgeville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—They don't make them better. Action-chock full. If you want a picture full of pep book this one.—W. F. Strahl, Strand Theatre, Wiggins, Miss.—Small town patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—At other go one of his books all of they are good. Haven't found a bad one on. Pleased 95 per cent.—E. L. Golden, M. Vernon Theatre, Tallasser, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Headin' West, with Hoot Gibson.—Peppy western comedy drama that we well received. Fair business, and audience 90 per cent men.—E. L. Francis.

Rags to Riches (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Everything that goes to make good entertainment. An old-fashioned one. Please everyone who saw it, but it failed to draw.—R. Y. Erk, Temple Theatre, Ilion, N. Y.—General patronage.

Barbed Wire (Sunset), with Jack Hoxie. The first of a new series of Hoxie's which pleased all. Hoxie always takes good here.—H. C. Reinhardt, Victory Theatre, Bay City, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow) with John Lowell.—Drew the best crowd of the season at advanced prices and gave entire satisfaction.—G. E. Wendel, Oper House, Smithsonian, Iowa.—Small town patronage.

Ten Nights in a Bar Room (Arrow) with John Lowell.—One hundred per cent production. Pleased everybody. Big drawing card. Photography good.—G. Sharp, Princess Theatre, Oconto, Wis.—General patronage.

Putting It Over (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—As good as any Douglas Fairbanks picture that I ever saw, with possible exception of The Man of Zorro. That boy is sure there, and he made a hit here.—J. J. Kultsace, Swain Theatre, Swan, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

School Days (Warner Bros.), with Wesley Barry.—Went over with a bang. Ran special school matinee and play picture two days. Pleased all, young and old.—C. A. Riva, Pastime Theatre, Tilton, N. H.—Small town patronage.

Mid-Channel (Equity), with Clar Kick—Small Young.—Just fair. Not up to this star's standard. Miss Young's work as usual—good.—Adolph Kohn, Pastime Theatre, Granville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Why Girls Leave Home (Warn Bros.), with Anna Q. Nilsson.—Had played this picture without any paper all, but people came and they were happy. Don't play too much for it. Can't be classed as a special.—S. A. Berger, St Theatre, Jasper, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

Why Girls Leave Home (Warn Bros.), with Anna Q. Nilsson.—I cla this as a good picture with good exploi ation possibilities. Lady patrons are much pleased. Star did good work all of the characters were weak. Adolph Kohn, Pastime Theatre, Gra ville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Watch Him Step (Goldstone), with Richard Talmadge.—The kind of picture I don't think enough for any theater. The star is popular here.—E. L. Gold, Mt. Vernon Theatre, Tallassee, Ala.—Neighborhood patronage.

Three scenes from the new Cosmopolitan production, "The Enemies of Women," by Vincente Blasco Ibanez. The production was directed by Alan Crosland. Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens are featured in a distinguished cast of players.

Out of the Dust (McCarthy), with Robert McKim.—An unusual and artistic type of western picture with some of the most beautiful natural settings ever photographed. Story suggested by the paintings of the famous artist, Frederic Remington.—J. E. Kirk, Grand Theatre, Omaha, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Trapped in the Air (W. P. E. C.) with Lester Cuneo.—Once in a while we run in a cheap western in order to curb rentals, but we were fooled. Here is a picture well acted and with lots of pep. Far better than a good many we have paid twice the amount for.—W. E. Elkin, Temple Theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.—Neighbor- hood patronage.

Bubbles, (Pioneer), with Mary Anderson.—This is a bubble all right. It was represented as a second Mickey, and because it was priced cheap, I took a shot at it. I thought the price was cheap, but I see now I paid twice what it was worth.—J. J. Kudlacek, Swan Theatre, Swanton, Ohio.— Neighborhood patronage.

The County Fair (Tournier), with a special cast.—This old one is a good program picture. Drew fair business on the Saturday before Christmas.—Johnson Bros, Johnsonian Theatre, Ripley, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

Dangerous Paths (Associated Photos), with Neva Gerber.—Here is one of the finest and cleanest little program pictures we have had the pleasure to run. It has one of the best lessons in it a picture ever had. If you have any church element, be sure to give them this. It is no special, but better than some specials. It raps scandal mongers and is censor proof.—C. H. Powers, Strand Theatre, Dunsmuir, Calif.—R. T. town patronage.

Serials

Speed (Pathe), with Charles Hutchison.—Am on the third chapter, and if it holds out like it has started it will be a dandy.—New theatre, Manila, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Speed (Pathe), with Charles Hutchison.—Started first four episodes fine. Show two reel comedy and two reel Western. Makes a good program.—W. T. Lyford, Gem theatre, West Helena, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Perils of the Yukon (Universal), with William Desmond.—Just finished this serial to a good business. Went over good. Fine scenes and good action in this one. Can't see how you will go wrong on this.—Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Got a bad start, but is gaining on third episode. Looks good. This is one serial I have not seen a bad report on.—A. Kelley, Rex theatre, Custer, Okla.—Small town patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Ninth episode and going good. Run it with Aesop's Fables and Path Playlets.—R. Ross Riley, Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kans.—General patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—Personally I think this the best serial I have ever run, and this covers a period of about ten years. A swiftly moving story of adventure and thrill and one that will ring the bell on every episode. Book it, boost it, and profit.—John N. Stewart, Wonderland theatre, Kaufman, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Timber Queen (Pathe), with Ruth Roland.—As good a serial as I have run. On the ninth episode and going good.—F. N. Harris, Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich.—Small town patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—A good historical serial. If handled right should prove a money getter. Going good for us.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—Best serial ever made. Book it or you lose.—Liberty theatre, Great Falls, Mont.—Neighborhood patronage.

In the Days of Buffalo Bill (Universal), with Art Acord.—I gave this serial a poor send-off by starting it early in December when business always slumps. Just ran the sixth episode and it has proven so far a consistent drawing attraction. The Western stuff with Buf- falo Bill and the redskins biding the dust, etc., is fully up to the fans' expectations, and the historical events, such as Lee's surrender and the assassination of Lincoln are of real educational value. They are historically accurate and of absorb-ng interest even to those who care more for action than for instruction in a picture.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

Aesop's Fables (Pathe).—Each one of these short reel subjects are of extremely high-class nature and will fit into any program in need of something different. A truly wonderful single reel. A special without the slightest doubt and it has never been done before. Book it and give your patrons a treat they will long remember.—John N. Stewart, Wonderland theatre, Kaufman, Tex.—Neighborhood patronage.

Century Comedies (Universal), with Lee Moran.—Can't see this Moran. Did not please.—J. B. Laughlin, Bart's Mecca, Midland, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Keaton Comedies (F. N.).—These are what you want.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Leather Pushers (Universal), with Reginald Denny.—Just played Round Four of the first series, and business shows a gain with every round. I mad the mistake of booking them fortnightly but have just bought the second series to run weekly.—Roy W. Adams, Pastim theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Our Gang Comedies (Pathe).—Best comedies of the year for all, young as well as old.—H. L. Burrill, Garrick theat- tre, Hawley, Minn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pathé News.—My favorite news reel.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Pathé Review.—Good for a change to run with a program picture.—W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

Range Rider Series (Pathe), with L. Maloney.—Have run four of these Westerns. They are good, and Pathe make the price right. You can't go wrong if you if you want good clean two to Westerns.—Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

Christmas (F. B. O.), with Mr. at Mrs. Carter De Haven.—Very appropriate comedy for the holidays. Rather unusual and good all the way through a the only kick I have is that they charge me too much for it, for I am buying better comedies for much less. Bought account of the holiday spirit.—J. J. Kr- lacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

The profits of your house

The profits you take out of your house depend upon the highlights you put into your pictures. After all, you have but the one thing to sell—pictures in light. Inferior lighting degrades the best picture in the world to worse than mediocrity; an ordinary good reel, it reduces to a fizzle. The most you give your patrons for their money—what you provide to interest, to amuse, to educate, to thrill—they get through their eyes! And they won’t keep coming back to see dark pictures. Poor lighting makes every picture poor, and will work more to keep people out of a theater than any other factor in the industry. The direct road to bright, brilliantly highlighted pictures is—Columbia Projector Carbons.

On Direct Current: Columbia Silvertip Combination Carbons present richer color values; and the narrow diameter of the silvertip negative lower permits it to burn to a sharp point, holding the arc steady and also keeping the shadow off the lens and screen.

On Alternating Current: Columbia White Flame A.C. Special Carbons yield a sharp and pure-white light, steady, brilliant, absolutely silent.

Use Columbia Projector Carbons to double the enjoyment of what you are showing and keep the profits of your house up to where they belong.

Columbia Projector Carbons are the most satisfactory source of motion picture light in the world!

Jeff cartoons. If you have ever shown the Mutt and Jeff Fables in your house, then expect a big disappointment in the Mutt and Jeff cartoons, for they are not in the class with the fable. There is simply no comparison whatever. —With Mutt & Webb.

A Punctured Prince (Metro), with Bull Montana, is a very good comedy, but Bull's comedies are not what the salesmen claimed so far. Maybe they will get better.

The Pirate (Fox), with Lupino Lane, is a good two reels that brought forth much laughter. Lupino Lane is very clever. —Adolph Kohn, Fasttime theatre, Granville, N. Y.—General patronage.

Some Baby (Pathé), with Snub Pollard. —Some seem to think this one among Snub's best, but personally it seemed only fair. —Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Now or Never (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd. —A very good comedy. Lloyd's comedies are good here.

The Weak End Party (Metro), with Stan Laurel. —One of the best two reels I ever ran. Get Laurel's comedies and they will please. —J. A. Holmes, Arcade theatre, Holtsville, Calif.—Neighborhood patronage.

Among Those Present (A. E.), with Harold Lloyd. —After the first reel there is a laugh in every foot. A good comedy. —H. L. Burrill, Garrick theatre, Hawley, Minn. —Neighborhood patronage.

Wedding Pumps (Universal), with Browne. —This is a dandy two reel comedy. Browne, dog, fine in this one. Advertise Browne if you get this one. He does finely in this one. —Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans. —General patronage.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon. —If you need a good slapstick comedy, you cannot find a better. In fact, you can pick Semon comedies with your eyes closed; they are all good. Also Vitagraph is to be complimented on the way they sell them. —J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Torchy a la Carte (Educational), with Johnny Hines. —A splendid two reel comedy that will fill any bill. Lots of laughs and should go over well. —W. E. Ellen, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss. —Neighborhood patronage.

True Blue (Universal), with Queenie. —Queenie, horse, sure human. This horse is great. —Wm. Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kans.—General patronage.

Let's Go (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd. —If Lloyd wanted to please those who saw this one reel—he certainly bad his wish fulfilled with one, and your patrons will tell you so like ours did if you buy it. —Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Just Dogs (Universal), with Browne. —As a daisy, this is a good comedy featuring a cast of animals. —W. M. Ward, Starlight theatre, Corning, Ark.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Big Range (Universal), with Elmo Lincoln. —More comedy than rough stuff in this two reel Western. It held up a weak feature for two nights. —Roy W. Adams, Star theatre, Mason, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Derby Day (Federated), with Monte Banks. —Good clean comedy, with lots of laughs. First one of his new stuff. All like this "Mutt and Jeff" and there was not a single sound until the fable was flashed on the screen and then the fun started. This well known fable was well received. Don't try Mutt and Jeff if you have played the fable. —Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Hare and the Tortoise (Pathe). —We ran this with Mutt and Jeff and there was not a single sound until the fable was flashed on the screen and then the fun started. This well known fable was well received. Don't try Mutt and Jeff if you have played the fable. —Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss. —Neighborhood patronage.

High and Dizzy (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd. —Local Christmas program got the crowd, but the comedy was good. Can't go wrong on this one. —O. C. Rediske, Star theatre, Rye Gate, Mont.—Small town patronage.

Spring Fever (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd. —One of the best reeles we have had yet, although they are usually always good. —H. C. Reinhardt, Victory theatre, Baye, City, Mich. —Neighborhood patronage.

The Firty Slicker (Pathé), with Harold Lloyd. —They all laughed at this one. Lloyd's comedies are always different and never fail to get the laughs and that is what is wanted in a comedy. —Wood & Webb, Star theatre, Corinth, Miss.—Neighborhood patronage.

Suggestions for Building a Safe
Projection Room

Concerning projection booths, the National Board of Fire Underwriters in a booklet dealing with safety measures in the operator's room, makes the following recommendations:

Every picture machine using inflammable film shall be installed or operated within a booth, to be not less than 60 feet in size and 7 feet high. The booth shall be built of brick, tile, or plaster blocks or other fire resistant material.

The entrance door into the booth shall be at least 2 feet by 5 feet, of the same construction as the booth, and so arranged as to close automatically by metal ropes and weight attachments, or by a spring of sufficient strength and tension to keep the door securely closed.

Secondary opening or for the operator's view, or through which the picture is thrown, shall not be larger than 6 inches by 12 inches, and shall be provided with a gravity door of the same construction as the booth. Which door shall be held open by fusible links placed in series with fine cords, so arranged that one of the links is suspended directly over the film when in the side of the apparatus, or the door shall be so arranged as to be normally closed and held open by pressure of the operator's foot.

The theatre's furniture and fixtures within the booth shall be constructed of incombustible material, and no combustible material of any sort whatever shall be permitted or allowed to be within such booth, except the films used in the operation of the machine.

Each booth must have an opening not less than twelve inches in diameter, for ventilation, which must be flanged to carry standard conductor pipe for exhausting the hot air generated in operating the machine. Connection for ventilation should vent to chimney or outside of building, in order to carry off hot air or explosive gases.

W. H. Mueller Will Open
New Theatre Next Month

A new theatre costing $150,000 will be opened in Jefferson City, Missouri, some time in February by William H. Mueler. It will be known as the Miller theatre and is located on High between Mon-ce and Adams streets.

The house comprises a single large theatre, and when completed it will be among the finest in that section of the city. Arrangements are now being made for the installation of a large pipe organ.

Film Aquaints Audience With Intricacies of Organ Playing

Possibly it was not introduced with sufficient exploitatation at its inception. Its importance was not fully impressed upon your public. Neglect of continued mention in your program of the organ and newspaper advertising may be other contributing factors,

To properly introduce a new instrument at a theatre a novel method has been inaugurated at American Photo Player Company. A 300 foot film is to be provided by the company. This picture is run before the overture and ilustrates the various hand and foot operations of the organist.

The film was first used at the Strand theatre, San Francisco, where a new Robert Morton instrument, played by Eddie Sellen, was installed. So pronounced was the interest in the picture that American Photo Player Company has announced its intention of loaning a similar film to all theatres at the installation of a new instrument. Slides, which have been furnished in the past to serve a similar purpose, will be discarded.

The value of such a film in introducing an organ at a theatre is readily apparent. Not only does it serve to arouse immediate interest in the instrument but with equal effectiveness gives the audicence a better understanding of playing requirements that will be reflected in greater interest in organ music.

While such a film could not be used indelinitely it appears that as a novelty it can be advantageously run for a week or ten days. At a later date, if desirable, it could be recalled to again serve as a stimulant in the music entertainment.

The Strand theatre organ was widely advertised. Not only was the film mentioned used at the theatre, but the management featured it in bill board and extensive newspaper advertising space as well. As a result the playing of Organist Sellen is proving a big factor as a box office attraction.

Advertising theatre music is profitable showmanship many exhibitors are proving each day.

Power's Multiple Coil Rheostat

By WESLEY TROUT

_Projection Engineer_

The Power's multiple coil rheostat is so much superior to the old style grid rheostat that the Powers people have discontinued manufacturing the latter. The multiple coil rheostat weighs less than about one-third of the old style grid rheostat and can be very easily moved by one man. The multiple coil units are connected across the heavy brass bus bars, one coil carrying five amperes and the balance carrying ten amperes each. The current carried through the rheostat is very easily varied in five or ten amperes steps by the means of knife switches.

Loss of one coil does not effect the others, and if entire capacity of the rheostat is not being used, a new coil may be immediately switched in. Coils are of a special non-corrosive wire and may be replaced in a few minutes without difficulty. They are exceptionally strong and operate at an exceedingly low temperature. As each coil carries a low amperage (not more than ten amps.) a wire of very small cross-section is used which permits perfect connections to be made to the bus bars.

Following is a table of the sizes that these rheostat can be furnished by the Powers Company:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Amperes</th>
<th>Volts</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>30-55</td>
<td>110-115</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>40-73</td>
<td>100-110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>20-85</td>
<td>220-230</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>80-125</td>
<td>220-230</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

I advise every projectionist or exhibitor to purchase one of these rheostat if you are using the old style grid rheostat. The same guarantee goes with this rheostat as with all other Power’s products. They are well worth the money and in the end they will save the exhibitor a lot of money.

Ownership Changes

Fort Plain, N. Y.—W. C. Smalley of Cooperstown has acquired the lease of the Rialto theatre and property adjoining from Fort Plain Theatre Company.

* Petaluma, Calif.—Mrs. S. A. Poulsen and D. C. Poulsen, owners of the Poulsen show store, have purchased the Rose theatre from Mrs. Josephine Jacks. It is reported that the building may be remodeled at a future date.

* Alliance, Neb.—D. O’Bannon has purchased the Opera House in this city.

* Waco, Tex.—K. H. Ayensworth has purchased the Victory theatre building from H. Sulibert of Dallas.

Harmonious Effect Is Achieved in Redecoration of Pantheon Theatre

The Pantheon theatre, Chicago, one of the most important houses in the Lubliner & Trinz circuit, has undergone a process of redecorating in the main floor and balcony foyers involving an expenditure of $30,000 and making these two sections of the theatre among the most artistically executed, to be found in any of the finest playhouses throughout the country. Work completed thus far is but the beginning of many more improvements to be made at the Pantheon, which will be started later in the year, according to Manager Martin Saxe.

The redecoration of the foyers commands special attention because of the singularly harmonious effect obtained in colors, lighting fixtures and furniture. Walls and ceiling have been done in ornamental plaster of gray and dull gold wrought in artistic design of the Pompeian order. Along the walls are special wrought fixtures of the type known as the "old philosophers" lamps, each holding three lamps giving a canary color light.

Further harmonizing with the subdued and dignified tone of the decorations, yet unobtrusively conspicuous are new Glo-Let signs installed by the Frank E. Plowman Company, Chicago. These are placed at each aisle entrance leading to the auditorium and balcony and are of the kind which attracted considerable attention at the opening of the McVickers theatre recently.

Special furniture which is in keeping with the decorations has also been installed. Lobby doors and doors leading into the auditorium have been done in a bronze effect.

A huge medallion is to be painted in one of the larger panels of the ceiling.

“Fabiola” Opens at Auditorium Jan. 21

Anthony Matre Heads Firm Which Is Handling Picture

“Fabiola,” the story of Rome which was written by Nicholas Cardinal Wiseman, will have its premier American presentation as a photoplay on January 21 at the Auditorium, Chicago.

Plan Special Prologue

Special orchestration and prologue features will accompany the showing, which will be under the direction of Fabiola Photoplay Corporation, 78 West Lake Street. Mr. Anthony Matre is president of the company handling distribution.

Admission prices for the Chicago presentation will range from 50 cents to $1.65, the latter price entitling one to box or main floor seats.

Produced in Europe

“Fabiola” was produced abroad and includes the Settings of the Fountain of Trevre, the Thermes, Mameetine prison, reproductions of homes of wealthy patricians of the time and many other beautiful scenes. Roman actors portray the characters of the opus.

The story on which the picture is based depicts the life of a twenty-one year old pagan woman and Christian courier. In a letter to President Matre, Archbishop Mundelein gives his first endorsement to a motion picture, and urges that every Christian see it.

Goldwyn Introduces “Celluloid Salesman”

James R. Grainger, vice president and general manager of distribution, Goldwyn, spent a couple of days in Chicago with district supervisor George A. Hickey, last week. This was the first lap of Mr. Grainger’s tour of twenty-seven Goldwyn exchanges and while here he conferred with several prominent exhibitors.

As an aid to the salesmen the Goldwyn company now has what it calls “The Celluloid Salesman,” a 1,000-foot film showing the important scenes and punch of its forthcoming productions. The strip of film also shows the accessories and novelties available with each picture and besides avoiding a lot of sales talk, gives the exhibitor a graphic illustration of just what the picture contains.

These “Celluloid Salesmen” will be issued for each Goldwyn production commencing with “The Strangers’ Banquet.” Mr. Grainger announced.

M. P. T. O. Luncheon

The members of the Board of Directors of Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association have arranged a luncheon for Thursday, Jan. 18, at Eugene Madame’s restaurant, in honor of their president, L. M. Rubens. The luncheon, which is to be at 1 o’clock, will be followed by the first regular meeting of the Board for the new year.

Walter Hiers Comes To Town

Walter Hiers, Famous Players-Lasky’s new star, stopped off in Chicago last Wednesday, and made two personal appearances at the New McVickers theatre, before leaving for Syracuse, N. Y., where he was married on Friday.

The newcomer’s little talk was greatly enjoyed by the large crowds at the J. L. & S. house. He said among other things, that now that he was a star, he wanted the fans to write him, ask for his picture, and if they ever came to Hollywood, inquire for him at the Lasky studios,—and try to get in.

He said Chicago was one water front city without a light-house—it has the biggestRadio.

Hollywood, according to Hiers, has the advantage of Chicago because it is located near the Mexican border, only a four-hours ride, and going down the scenery is beautiful. He didn’t know so much about sight seeing back.

He has just completed “Mr. Billings Spends His Dime” and his next picture will be “Seventy-Five Cents an Hour.”

Asst. Manager Marries

Wedding bells rang out in Boston, Mass., on Wednesday, Jan. 17, for Matt Patrick Cavanaugh, assistant manager to Sid Meyers, Fox film exchange, Chicago, when he was married to Miss Ethel Kelleher at St. Anthony’s church.

Mr. Cavanaugh left last Friday for the Hub City and following a wedding trip through the East will return to Chicago in about two weeks. The employees of the exchange presented the newly-weds with a beautiful nine-piece silver set for the dressing table. The Herald extends to the happy couple its congratulations.

Smith in Town

Albert E. Smith, wife and three children, Viaograph president, passed through Chicago on Wednesday, Jan. 10, and during the few hours between trains visited the local exchange. Mr. Smith and family are on their way to California for the balance of the winter, where he will take over complete charge of production.

R. J. Delly Retires

The Edward theatre, 2419 Wentworth avenue, changed hands last week when R. J. Delly sold the house to S. Levin. Mr. Delly will leave in about ten days for California where he will take a long vacation.

Fox Official Here

Jack Leo, vice-president of Fox Film Corporation, was in Chicago on Monday. He left via the Santa Fe Monday night for Los Angeles.

Chicago Operators Get Wage Increase Under New Agreement Men Will Get $88 Weekly at Deluxe Houses

An agreement was reached on January 10 between the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners and representatives of the operators. The agreement increases the wages of the latter organization an increase in wages.

Avets Threatened Strike

Settlement of the controversy averted a threatened strike.

Under the new scale the operators will be put in a minimum weekly salary of $25.50 at outlying theatres, while operators working at the so-called deluxe houses will receive $85.

This is an increase of $3 a week. The new agreement extends to January 10, 1924.

Now Highest Paid

Thomas J. Reynolds, president of the Chicago operators’ union, states that the new agreement makes the Chicago operator the highest paid in the country.

In former years operators received from $16 to $18 a week and worked from ten to twelve hours. Under present conditions the hours have been cut in half and many theatres have to employ three or four operators to keep their show in continuous operation.

Benjamin Now F. B. O.

Special Representative

William Benjamin has been appointed Mid-West special representative of Film Booking Offices. His headquarters will be in New York City. For the first four weeks Mr. Benjamin will devote most of his time to the Kansas City territory.

Mr. Benjamin, because of his wide experience and standing, was chosen by a host of friends among the exhibitors of the Des Moines territory, who made him the F. B. O. office and it is with sincere regret that the exchange men and exhibitors lose him. Since the inception of the Des Moines office Mr. Benjamin has placed the F. B. O. product in every key city in his territory. Fred Youn, manager of the Kansas City branch F. B. O., succeeds Mr. Benjamin at Des Moines.

JOHN R. THOMPSON, Chicago restaurant manager, has taken over the LaRai theatre, at Hoopst, Ill. Manager Curtins is now in charge.

A rough-and-ready Westerner visit Paul Terry up at the studios of “Asso Film Fabulas.” Terry commented upon his visitor’s keen sense of observation of thin in general.

“What is your idea about the ethics modern business men?” asked Terry.

“Well, they remind me of a friend of mine who when out deer hunting—only fawns and does,—returns the visit of the California cabin,” replied the cowboy.

“Why,” chirped the hunter, “they’re ways passing the buck!”—“Topics of Day” Films.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES
By J. R. M.

FLOYD BROCKELL, general manager in charge of distribution, First National, at St. Louis, was at a three days' sales conference here. R. C. Seery, district manager, accompanied him and will call on other exchanges in the territory.

The Peerless theatre, Kewanee, Ill., suffered a loss of $1,000 on Sunday, Jan. 7, when burglars broke the safe.

L. ROSENFIELD, of the firm of Rosenfield, Topp & Co., Rock Island, was in town last week. He looked at "Fury," the new Richard Barthelmess-First National attraction — and booked it for Feb. 4.

Sid DECKER, who has just completed a fruit of the key cities for Universal, reports that the new Moline theatre will open between Feb. 12 and April 1. Sam Levin, formerly with Jones, Linick & Schaefer, will become resident manager. Business in Moline is picking up, according to Mr. Decker.

DeKalb's, new theatre will open about May 1. It is announced Mr. Leifheit, one of DeKalb's leading business men, will be manager.

CLARENCE WAGNER of the Bug theatre, is a strong believer in electric lights. His Spells, "The Spook" and "Mud and Sand" could be seen for blocks. Must be working for Commonwealth Edison Company on the side.

The Empire theatre, Aledo, Ill., is closed and will be dismantled.

The First National boys are becoming sure bowlers, if all the stories of scores told are true. Gradwell, Sears scored 170, at Wolf 147, and Eddie Brichetto 179, one by last week. Now bring on those Paramount boys.

The Paris theatre, Decatur, is closed, failure the Felsen theatre, Springfield, is re- opened, which everyone up.

ADAM DERNBACH, of the Grand theatre, Thomson, Ill., who was suffering from pox for about ten days, is up and around again.

I. MAYNARD SCHWARTZ, the Educational exchange manager, appearing on the Rialto at week end of those pole wing colors, a trick tie and colored shirt, that had the other beau brummelians gasping for breath.

JOHN DITMAN, of Freeport, Ill., a letter along Film Row during the week.

J. H. Holland and wife, the First National territory salesman, are touring together rough this territory and from the flood of letters he's hitting on all four cylinders. H. sent in a contract for every town he see. Bill Brumberger reports. But speaking of having, have you seen Holland's? You haven't, you ain't seen nothing yet. Extra lights, heaters, cigar lighters, win- dows, stereo directional signs, sirens, stop devices, etc., etc.

BABY PEGGY, the Universal baby grand is, to make a personal appearance at the new Tivoli theatre, Michigan City, when opens Feb. 1, and give an afternoon rec- itation to the kids.

JOHN G. HAHN, secretary of the Rosh tacker Film Mfg. Company, is back from California, where he has been installing a new service system for the Hollywood plant.

"HANK" GOLDESON, of the Julian theatre, is change all around to help the Kobo industry. He's giving away coupons that entitle patrons to bottles of the buckwheat cake dressing, and now the factory's working overtime.

The Edward theatre, 2417 Wentworth avenue, has changed hands. R. J. Delly has sold his interest in the house to S. Levin. Mr. Delly will leave in a week or ten days for a long vacation in California. It's a hard life, mates, this theatre biz.

The boys of the Ascher Bros. circuit pulled a little surprise on Harry Ascher last Thursday, the occasion being his birthday, and presented him with a large cake with 40 candles thereon. Sid Smith, the cartoonist, went thereon. Sid Smith, the cartoonist, presented Mr. Ascher with a nifty sketch showing Harry sapping with Jack Dempsey. Those who participated in wishing the West Eaglewood manager another blissful dozen were E. Alex Ascher, Max Ascher, Louis Newhafer, Bennie Cohen, and the Misses Shanaha, Quilly, Flaver and Crain.

"HAPPY" MEININGER, of the Frolic theatre, who has a serious attack of pneumonia, is back on the job.

FRANK SIEM is now booking the Ideal theatre, 60th street and Marshfield avenue, adding one more to his string of houses. Yes, getting to be a regular "magnet."

CHARLIE MILLER and A. G. SPENCER, F. B. O. boys, to settle a fierce argument, have posted $25, which is to go to the winner of the great mustache contest, now in progress. The two salesmen got off to a flying start last Monday and it is to run for 60 days, the holder of the largest mustache at the end of that time being declared the winner. The F. B. O. salesmen, stenographers and your humble servant are the judges.

MAX HERMAN, of the Photoplay advertising company, is on the still hunt for a stenog. Must be pretty and full o' pep.

HARRY PHILLIPS, special representative of "17," exchange is the handsomest guy seen with the "Flirt" models on another page, in case you don't know.

JOHN SILVA, of the Stadium theatre, is in Columbus, Ohio, attending the Ohio exhibitors' convention held Jan. 16-17.

MISS SOPHIE LOSTY, booker at the Fox exchange, is to be married Sunday, Jan. 31. The feminine members of the exchange gave her a shower of beautiful linen last week.

JACK WILLIS, the genial trailer man of Film row, who can "remember way back when," is advising his exhibitor friends to "get out of the magic lantern class" and "get the obsolete stuff.

Universal exchange manager, Herman Shain, is arranging a special trade showing of Priscilla Dean's latest feature, "The Flame of Life," and two of Baby Peggy's latest specials, on Thursday, Jan. 19, at 1:30. Everybody's invited.

versal, called on LaPorte, Ind., exhibitors and started things humming for "The Flirt."

JULIUS STEIN of the Century Comedies, paused at the Universal exchange last Tuesday, en route to the West Coast.

WALTER ALTMAN has invited Goldwyn to join the Hodkinson sales staff.

A. G. SPENCER, F. B. O. salesman, besides selling "The Third Alarm" in Dixon, Ill., got enough publicity over in the newspapers to make Harry Reichenbach, or any other exploitation man, green with envy.

R. C. WILLIAMS, of Streator, Ill., called at the First National exchange and spent the whole day with W. W. Brumberg, country sales manager.

FACTS—

About

“The Covered Wagon”

3,000 actors spent three months on location, eighty miles from a railroad.
Nine states were searched for locations.
1,000 Indians were brought from reservations hundreds of miles away, with their horses, tepees, and complete equipment.
Eight truckloads of supplies a day had to be taken over the rough desert roads.
Three hundred wagons were built. 40,000 square feet of canvas used to cover them.
100 oxen broken to the yoke.
3,000 costumes of the period made.
Water backed up three miles for river scene; dam broke and flooded camp, tearing down tents.
500 horses brought from Oregon for buffalo hunt scenes, which required particularly strong animals. 500 ordinary horses also used.
500 buffaloes used in the hunt; the only large herd in existence.
Nine square miles of territory burned up for prairie fire scene.
Seventy trees felled and transported eighty miles for building of ferries.
Sixty wagons hauled material daily for six weeks to build replica of Fort Bridger.
Mile-wide river forded by 300 wagons; men and animals had to swim; this was really dangerous, as bottom was quicksand.
Every department of studio represented on location: wardrobe, property, scenario, publicity, film laboratory, construction, bookkeeping, auditing, stenographic and doctor's office.
Electric light plant built and light supplied to all tents.
Complete commissary department employing several hundred fed the crowds. Mess tent held 1,000 at a time.

A Paramount Picture

The Super 39
There has been no fanfare of trumpets ushering in Vitagraph's very human picture of newspaper life in a small city, namely, "A Front Page Story," but we are of the opinion that the company should tout its horn in giving us such a pleasing slice of reality, the plot of which revolves around a conflict between the local editor and the mayor. Jess Robbins is the director who put over this neat little document. He is the man who produced "Too Much Business," and his latest opus indicates that he has a firm grasp upon what constitutes the intimate touch.

Most directors have erred in presenting an accurate portrayal of a newspaper office. We go on record in saying that many of them don't know what the inside of a newspaper office looks like. They will send their cub reporter out equipped with pads. And these fledglings take down their notes and are never seen writing up their stories. Jess Robbins gives us a small newspaper plant which is complete even to the composing room. And James Corrigan as the editor is a genuine type.

The picture also presents Edward Horton, who is as gifted a comedian as there is on the screen today. He puts over his comedy in all seriousness—as all comedy should be played. Ask Willie Collier, he knows. But because he doesn't dress himself up like a Christmas tree and play to the gallery he is not getting the recognition which he deserves. Horton is human and an everyday sort of fellow. There is nothing of the strutting actor about him. The feature has another rich character in the mayor, played with small town pomp by Lloyd Ingraham.

We would like to see Jess Robbins putting out all the stories of small town life which are flavored with comedy. His humor is subtle and novel and appealing. And he never exaggerates. If you don't think he knows his business look over "A Front Page Story." There's nothing picture about it—it is real.

Jess Robbins' Third a Fine, Clean-Cut Comedy That Is Real Entertainment

This is the third and best of the Jess Robbins productions for Vitagraph. They have all been comedies but there are more laughs and original comedy business in "A Front Page Story" than in the other two put together. Robbins and Edward Horton team up ideally in the making of humorous entertainment and after "Too Much Business" and "The Ladder Jinx" Horton has finally secured stellar prominence which his work in the first two certainly gained for him.

Horton has individuality and a different comedy talent that makes his work all the more interesting. He is very real and his characterizations so natural that they make the parts seem thoroughly convincing. Another bit of good fortune, as far as Horton is concerned, is the fact that he has been lucky enough to have roles particularly well fitted to his personality. As Rodney Marvin, Horton will surely gain many admirers. He certainly injects a lot of pep and entertainment into his performance.

Promises Are In Order For This One

You should be able to do fine business with "A Front Page Story" because it is a really delightful comedy offering that contains sure-fire humorous situations and plenty of laughs if they want to laugh. And it is wholesome. You can promise them the funniest and best newspaper story they have seen in a long time and in case you played Jess Robbins' two previous productions in which Horton appeared, recall the titles, and promise them a much better entertainment in his ne and you can be sure they'll laugh latest, "A Front Page Story." They're sure like Horton's work in this.

Where they like good wholesome comedies you won't want to miss this one. It has a lot of clever touches and original comedy gags that are going to send them out happy and unmindful of the time it takes to run off the six reels. You can safely make promises and feel sure of pleasing them. Let them know Edith Roberts is in the cast also.

Arthur Goodrich's story is one of the best newspaper yarns that has come to the screen. It is original and bright with novel situations and any number of clever comedy twists that make it an unusually wholesome and entertaining feature. They pull some more or less familiar stuff with a Ford but otherwise the gags are new and thoroughly amusing.

Jess Robbins proves that he has a keen sense of humor in the way he has handled the story. And he hasn't spent a lot of money to do it either. The picture is most unpretentious as far as production is concerned, but when it comes to laughs and sure-fire entertainment, "A Front Page Story" is there. Robbins has secured a fine supporting cast for Horton that includes Lloyd Ingraham, erstwhile director, in a mighty fine characterization as Mayor Gorham, Edith Roberts as daughter of the village editor and James Corrigan as the editor. The sub-titles are numerous but they are very good.
A Front Page Story

ViaGraph—Six Reels

A REGULAR slice of life is this little document from ViaGraph—a slice of small city politics which revolve around the glass town and the paper (and the printer) chair of the editor of the local paper. You all recognize this bit of ennui which puts color in our small world. Now Jess Robbins, the director of this picture has brought forth all its vitality—all its humanism and realism.
Then Robbins turns to the camera when he comes to incorporating life incident. He showed a sample of his skill with "Too Much Bustard," and in "A Front Page Story" he makes his picture so human—so interesting that it stands out a conspicuously fine, little document.

The comedy note is dominant because it is introduced by Edward Horton, a comedian with a sure grasp upon the qualities which create humor. He plays in a deadly serious manner the part of the lapsed, political youth determined to get into the town at the wheel of a flivver and put an ad in the local paper. There is some droll comedy introduced in this instance of the slapstick brand—even though the car is always a good prop for hokum. And by using his head achieves an advantage of opportunity when it known. Without itself into a partnership with the editor.

The rest of the picture is done to with patching up the feud between his elder partner and the mayor—and he does this by sheer bluff.

This picture is nothing but a screaming splash head scene around the fact that the mayor will be exposed. It precipitates a deal of anxiety for all concerned—even for the paper because it is the rules to follow this orthodox channels. The old man's daughter is a handy girl about the office. And aside from the action there is a red thread to her object to carry the romance.

Robbins has uncovered a real old time job printing plant. The place may be small but it looks like the real thing. In fact the atmosphere and background are genuine throughout. Horton gives a clever portrayal of the young youth who acts as peacemaker, while Lloyd Ingraham and James Corrigan as the mayor and publicist do a job which look real but d Manage to extract the utmost amount of color and humor from their characters.

The Story—Youth in search of work rides into small city at wheel of dilapidated flivver.

Puts ad in local paper and by using his wits becomes partner of editor. His object is to patch up the quarrel between the editor and the mayor which he does by blinding with a scare-head story on front page of paper. Wins the editor's daughter.

Classification—Comedy-drama of political life in small city—with humor rich and novel.

Production Highlights—The exceptional directing in situation and idea from story. The fine acting by Edward Horton, James Corrigan and Lloyd Ingraham.

The solid production. The human interest.
The convincing detail.

Exploitation Angle—This title suggests a story in the city, and can be used as a peak editor.

Put out teasers, briefs, etc. Play up Horton as a comic. Treat it lightly. Bill it as one of the most human and lifelike stories of the screen.

Drawing Power—Once seen will be advertised

(VIAGRAPH)

This is one of the best comedy-dramas of the season and should go over well in every locality. It is full of good laughs, has an entertaining story and pleasant love interest. Skillfully directed throughout its entire six reels.

Many pictures have been built around a newspaper office but seldom, if ever, does a director catch hold of the newspaper atmosphere as has Director Jess Robbins in the making of "A Front Page Story," the latest success of the season.

The picture moves along rapidly, is devoid of the thrills deemed so important by many others, but this steady pace is good, clean comedy in such a steady stream as to bring an almost constant succession of good laughs.

An excellent cast was gathered together for the making of this newspaper picture, among the stars are well-known comics
Edward Horton, Edith Roberts, James Corrigan, Lloyd Ingraham, Buddy Messember and Sophie. Mrs. Ingraham is the old newspaper editor and co-partner of the newspaper editor, Edith Roberts is especially well cast and gives an exquisite performance. The Romance is an endearing one and has a good ending to the story.

The story, which is Arthur Good-rich's, is built around the feud of long standing between the editor of a small town newspaper and the mayor, who is the political god of the district. James

Corrigan gives an excellent portrayal of the old and impertinent editor, and Lloyd

Ingraham is quite excellent as the deserted man. With the feud at its height Rodney

Marvin (Edward Horton) arrives in the town, being a reluctant newsboy and inserts an advertisement for a position. Receiving no answers he starts for the next town, being, according to his plan, in a ride in a truck to a farm house where he arrives just in time to intercept an agreement of the Editor of the local newspaper intending to secure an option on land that is wanted for a town park.

The farmer, an Italian, does not understand English so young Marvin acts as interpreter, finally having the option made out in his own name. With this he holds up the mayor for $5,000 and buys a note for that amount which is to be used by the mayor in forcing his old enemy, the editor, out of business. Unable to pay Marvin, the editor gives him a half interest in the paper.

Marvin starts out as a reporter but determines to bring to an end the feud between the mayor and the editor. This he accomplishes by a series of laugh-provoking adventures which, at times, get so complicated as to lead to wonderment of the audience.

This, however, is done through the medium of a much heralded "front page story" which is told by Marvin without any one being the wiser. The feuds is called off, everyone becomes friends, and the editor's daughter and partner, Miss Edith Roberts, is won by Marvin, and the picture ends up in a happy fashion and with a laugh.

All in all "A Front Page Story" looks like splendid entertainment and a good money maker for exhibitors.

An Impartial Verdict!

"Garrison's Finish" marks Jack Pickford's return to the screen in one of the best vehicles he has ever had," says the Exhibitor's Herald.

"There is an irresistible appeal about racing melodramas, and 'Garrison's Finish' is sure to meet popular favor. For it is one of the best that has ever been screened. It opens with an exciting and well-staged race and the concluding reel pictures another race with one of the most exciting finishes ever photographed on a track.

"There is a good, consistent plot to the tale and enough melodramatic situations to fairly raise an audience out of its seats. The escape of the jockey and the race horse from a burning barn. Then follows the race. And such a race! Never has a more complete or thrilling event been screened!

"Jack Pickford fits into the part of the little jockey as though it had been specially written for him. He is natural and effective in the big scenes. Opposite him appears the pleasing Madge Bellamy who has added another hit to her list.

"Photographically the picture is perfect.

"There are a great many unique stunts that can be staged to put this picture over."

"Sure to meet popular favor!"

GLENN HUNTER
as
Jim Bradley—Second Fiddle

He took his room—

he took his machine—and finally took his girl!

Herbert Bradley arrived from college, handsome, polished, and possessing all the social graces. His awkward brother, Jim, who had always been regarded as a "Second Fiddle," was relegated to the background.

Herbert immediately took possession of Jim's room and threw out all his belongings, to which Jim said nothing.

Jim permitted his automobile to be monopolized by the egotistical Herbert, who used it to take Jim's sweetheart driving.

Finally, Herbert tried to steal Jim's sweetheart.

BUT—the worm turned!

Just how Jim finally asserts himself and proves his manhood in a crucial test, and wins the girl of his dreams, is told in this enthralling and gripping film drama.
MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Second Fiddle" may be put down as a likely attraction.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: This is a feature that should please every class of patrons. It has heart interest, thrilling suspense, and Glenn Hunter in a most appealing role. It is a superior attraction that promises satisfaction to the box-office.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: There is no doubt in our minds that it will be well received wherever shown.

MORNING TELEGRAPH: Glenn Hunter does his usual splendid work as Jim Bradley, the "Second fiddle." He is an actor who possesses unusual charm, rare intelligence and an acute sense of comedy.

EXHIBITORS HERALD: "Second Fiddle" has the appeal of a well-told story, natural and picturesque New England scenery, and it will please the majority of picture-goers.

FILM DAILY: Has elements that will appeal to a good majority. Contains effective thrills, enough action, a first-rate atmosphere and a cast that does very good work.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: "Second Fiddle" is so well handled, and so appealing in its humanness, that it is a thoroughly pleasing offering. Glenn Hunter does good work; the same is true of Mary Astor.

LEGITIMATE THEATRES

GOLDWYN is in receipt of letters from legitimate theatres offering to book THE CHRISTIAN for extended runs at advanced prices.

It is not the intention of the Goldwyn Company to allow the cream of profit to be removed from this picture before it reaches the exhibitors of America.

We therefore advise legitimate theatre men that no contracts whatsoever have been made or will be made for legitimate showings.

We take this means of announcing that THE CHRISTIAN, already hailed as the big picture of the year, will be distributed by Goldwyn through its regular channels to exhibitors.

Mr. Exhibitor,

Listen what the Cincinnati Post says.

"Once again! Hats off to Marshall Neilan. He dared to be original. In "Bits of Life", "Fools First" and earlier pictures he did things that were different. He does the same thing in "Minnie." Leatrice Joy has the best role of her career and Matt Moore gains new laurels. There is a real love story and plenty of fun."

8709 feet of Tremendous drama—made before the mast. The utmost in the grip and grandeur of the surging sea.
A tale of tempestuous love in desert places—strong in them and tense dramatic appeal, and rich in oriental atmosphere.

Norma Talmadge, the screen's greatest emotional actress, in one of her finest dramatic roles.

Eugene O’Brien, one of the most popular screen idols, heading a supporting cast which includes such sterling players as Edwin Stevens, Winter Hall, Claire Du Brey and Lillian Lawrence.

A story known to millions through Robert Hichens' famous novel and stage success.

Produced with the touch and the finish of a master artist, Frank Lloyd, director of "Smilin' Through," who personally directed and supervised this picture.

Adapted by one of the most successful scenario writers, Frances Marion.

Photographed by Antonio Gaudio and Norbert Brodin.

You've got everything to bring them in, and the picture will send them out happy.
